And knowen be it vnto you, that ye shall haue no auctorite to requyre tares and custome and yerely rentes vpon anye of the Preestes, Leuites, syngers, porters, Nethinims, and ministers in the house of this God. But thou Esdras (after the wysdome of the God that is in thy hande) set thou Judges and presidentes to iudge all the people that is beyonde Jordan, euen all suche as knowe the lawe of thy God: and them that knowe it not, those se that ye teache. And who so euer wyll not dylygentlye fulfyll the lawe of thy God, and the kynges lawe, shal haue his iudgement for the dede, whether it be vnto death or to be banyshed or to be condemned in goodes, or to be put in prysou. iii. Esd. viij.c

✻ Praysed be the Lorde God of youre fathers, which so hath inspyred the kynges hert to garnysshe the house of God at Jerusalem: and hathe enclyned his mercye vnto me in the presence of the kyng and his counsellours, and before all the kynges lyke estates. And I was comforted (accordyng to the hand of the Lord my God ouer me) and so gathered I the heades of Israel togyther, that they myghte goo vp with me.

¶ The nombre of them that returned to Jerusalem with Esdras.

CAP. VIII.

These are the heades of them fathers that were named, whiche wente vp with me from Babilon, what tyme as kyng Artaxerxes raigned. Of the children of Phinees, Gersom: Of the chyldren of Ithamar, Daniel: of the children of Dauid, Hatus: of the children

chyldren of Zecanias, of the chyldren of Pharos, Zacharye, and with him were nombred an hundred and fyfty men: of the chyldren of Pahath, Moab, Elioenai, the sonne of Zara-hiah, and with him two hundred men: of the chyldren of Zechanias the sonne of Jahasiel, and with him thre hundred men: of the chyldren of Adin Abed, the sonne of Jonathan, & with him fyfty men: of the chyldren of Elam Esaias the sonne of Athaliah, and with hym seuentye men: of the chyldren of Saphatia, Zabadiah the sonne of Michael, and with
him. lxx. men.

Of the chyldren of Joab, Obadiah the son of Jehiel, and with him two hundred & eyght-tene men: of the chyldren of Selomith the son of Josphiah, and with hym an hundred & three men. Of the children of Bebai, Zacharye the sonne of Bebai, and with him eyght & twenty men. Of the children of Asgad, Johanan the sonne of Hakatan, and with hym an hundred and ten men. Of the last chyldre of Adonicam, and these were their names: Eliphelet, Jehiel
and Samaiah, and with them thre score men.
Of the chyldren of Begui, Uthai and Zabud, and with them seuentye men. And I gathered them togyther by the water that renneth to-warde Ahaua, and there abode we thre dayes.
And when I loked amonge the people and the preestes, I founde no Leuites there. Then sent I Eliezer, Ariel, Semetah, Elnathan, Jarib, El nathan, Nathã, Zachary and Mosollam the rulers, and Joiarib and Elnathã the teachers, and those sent I vnto Eu the chiefest at Calphia, that they sholde fetche vs ministers for house of our God, and I told them what they sholde saye vnto Eu, and to his brethren the Nethinims at Calphia.

And (accordynge to the good hande of our God vpon vs) they broughte vs a wyse man frome the chyldren of Moboli the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israell, I meane Sarabia with his sonnes and brethren eyghtene. And Hasabia, and with him Esaias of the children of Merari, with his brethren and their son-nes, twentye. And of the Nethinims, whome Dauid and the Princes gaue to minister vnto
the Leuites, two hundred and twenty, all named by name.

A fastynge proclaymed. And euen there at the water beside Ahaua, caused I a fastynge to be proclaymed, that we myght humble our selues before our God, to seke of him a right waye for vs, and oure chyldren, and all our substaunce. For I was ashamed to requyre of the kynge, souldiours and horsemen, and to helpe vs agaynst the ennemy
in the waye. For we had sayd vnto the kynge:
The hande of our God is vpon all them that seke him in goodnesse, and his vyolence and wrathe vpon all them that forsake him. So we fasted, and sought this at our God, and be herde vs. Then I rose out twelue of the chief preestes, Sarabia, and Hasabia, & ten of their brethren with them, and weied them there the syluer and golde, and vessells for the offeryng
vnto the house of our God, whiche the kynge and the lordes of his counsell and princes, and all Israel that were at hand, had gyuen to the offeryng: and there weyed I them vnder their hande, fyue hundred and fyfty talentes of syuer, and in syluer vessell an hundred talentes,
and in golde an hundred talentes, twenty cup-pes of golde of a thousand drammes, and two costly ornamentes of good brasse, as cleare as golde, and sayd vnto them: Ye are holye vnto
the Lorde, therfore are the vesselles holy also,
and so is the syluer and golde that is gyuen of a good wyll vnto the Lorde God of your fathers: Watche ye therfore and kepe it, tyll ye weye it downe before the chiefe Priestes and Leuites, and auncient fathers of Israel in Jerusalem in the Thesaurie of the house of the Lorde. Then toke the Preestes and Leuites the weyed syluer and golde and vessell, to bring it to Jerusalem vnto the house of oure God.
So we marched forwarde, from the water of Ahaua, on the twelueth daye of the fyrste mo-neth, to goo vnto Jerusalem: and the hande
of oure God was vpon vs, and delyuered vs frome the hande of the ennemye and lyers in awayte by the waye. And we came to Jerusalem, and abode there thre dayes. But on the fourth daye was the syluer and golde, and vessell weyed in the house of oure God vnder
the hande of Meremoth the sonne of Vrias the Preestes, and with him Eleazar the sonne of Phinees, and with him Josabad the sonne of Jesua, and Noadia the sonne of Benoi the Leui-tes, accordynge to the nombre and weyght of euery one. And the weyght was all written at the same tyme.

And the chyldren of the captiuytie, which were come oute of prison, offered burnte offerynges vnto the God of Israell: twelue bullockes for all Israell, nynetye and fyue rammes: seuentye and seuen lambes, and twelue gotes for a synneofferyng, all to the burnte offeryng of the Lorde. And thy delyuered the kynges commyssion vnto the kynges officers,
and to the capitaynes on this syde the water.
And they auaunced the people, and the house of God.

¶ Esdras complayneth on the people, that they maried them selues from God, and entermaryed with the gentyles.

CAPI. IX.

When all this was performed, there cam to me, and sayde: the people of Israell and the Preestes and Leuites are not seuered from the nations in the landes as touchyng their abhominations, namely of the Cananites, Hetytes, Pherezites, Jebusites, Ammonites, Moabites, Egyptians, and Amorites. * For they haue taken their doughters, and their sonnes, and haue myxte the holye seed with the nacions of the landes: and moreouer the hande of the princes and rulers hath ben peynefull in this trespace. * When I herde this, I tare my clothes and my rayment, and plucke of the heere of my heed and of my berde, and sat mournynge. Then assembled vnto me all suche as feared the worde of the Lorde God of Israel, bycause of the great transgression. And I sate mournynge tyll the euenynge sacrifice. And about the euenynge sacrifice, I rose vp fro my heuynesse, and rente my clothes and my rayment, and fell vpon my knees, and spred out my handes vnto the Lorde my God, and sayd. My God, I am asshamed, and dare not lyfte vp myne eyes vnto the my God: for our wyckednelles are growen ouer our heed, & our trespaces are waxen great vnto the heuen: Sythis the tyme our fathers, haue we ben in great trespace vnto this daye, * and bicause of oure wyckednelle haue we and oure kynges ben gyuen vp in to the hande of kynges of the nacions in to the swerde, in to bondage, in to spoyle, and in to confusion of face, as it is come to passe this daye.

But now a lytle and sodayne graciousnes is come from the Lord our God, so that some of vs are escaped, that he maye giue vs a nayle in his holy place, that our God maye lyght oure eyes, and gyue vs a lytle lyfe in oure bondage. For we are bondmen, and our God hathe not forsaken vs in our bondage, but hath enclyned mercy vnto vs in the syght of the kinges of Persia, that he sholde gyue vs lyfe, & auaunce the house of our God, and buylde vp the desolate places therof, and to gyue vs an hedge in Iude and Jerusalem.

And nowe, O our God: what shall we saye after this? for we haue forsaken thy commaundementes, whiche thou haste commaunded by thy seruauntes the Prophetes, and sayd: The lande vnto whiche ye go to possesse, is vncleane thrown the filthynesse of the people of the landes, by their abhominacions wherwith they haue filled it with vnclennes on euerye syde.

Therfore ye shall not gyue your doughters to their sonnes, and their doughters shall ye not take vnto your sonnes, and seke not their peax and welthe for euer, that ye maye be stronge and enioye the good in the lande, and that ye and your children may haue the inheritaunce of it for euermore.

And after all this that is come vpon vs, by-cause of our euyll dedes and great trespace thou our God hast spared oure wyckednelles, and hast gyuen vs a delyueraunce as it is come to passe this daye.

And neuertheles we haue tourned backe, and haue let goo thy commaundementes, to make contracte with the people of these abho-minacions. Wylte thou then be wrothe with vs, tyll we be vtterly consumed, so that no-thynge remayne, and tyll there be no delyueraunce? O Lorde God of Israel thou art righteous, for we remayne yet escaped, as it is this daye. Beholde in thy presence are we in oure trespace, for bycause of it there is no standyng before the.

¶ The people repente them, and put awaye theyr
straunge wyues.

CAPI. X.

While Esdras prayed after this maner, and knowleged, wepte, and laye before the house of God, there resorted vnto him out of Israel a very great nombre of men and women, & chyldren: for the people wepte verye sore. And Sechanias the sonne of Jehiel one of the chyldren of Elam, answered & sayd vnto Esdras: We haue trespaced agaynst the Lorde oure God, in & we haue taken straunge wyues of all the people of the lande. Nowe there is hope yet in Israell concernynge this, therfore let vs make a couenaunt nowe with our God, to put awaye all the wyues, & suche as are borne of them, accordynge to the counsell of the Lorde, and of them that feare the commaundement of oure God, that we maye doo accordynge to the lawe. Get the vp therfore, for the matter belongeth vnto the. We wyll be with the, be of good comforte and do it. * Then rose Esdras, and toke an othe of the rulers, Preestes and Leuites, and of all Israel, that they sholde doo accordynge to this worde: and they sware. And Esdras stode vp before the house of God, and wente in to the chambre of Johanan the sonne of Eliasib. And when he came thyther, he ate no breed, nor dranke water: for he mourned bycause of the transgression of them that hadde bene in captiuite.

And they caused a proclamacion be made throowe oute Juda and Jerusalem, vnto all the chyldre which had ben in captiuite, that they sholde resorte vnto Jerusalem: And that who so euer came not within thre dayes, accordyng to the determinacion of the rulers and elders, all his substaunce sholde be forfeyte, and he to be put out of the congregation of the captiue. Then all the men of Juda and Benjamin assembled vnto Jerusalem in thre dayes, that is on the twentye daye of the nynethe moneth: and all the people sate in the strete before the house of God, and trembled bycause of theyr synnes, and for the rayne. And Esdras & preest stode vp and sayd vnto them: * Ye haue transgressed, in that ye haue taken straunge wiues, to make the trespace of Israell yet more: con-fesse nowe therfore vnto the Lorde God of youre fathers, and do his pleasure, and seuer your selues frome the people of the lande, and frome the straunge wyues. Then answered all the assemble, and sayde with a loud voyce: Let it be vnto vs as thou hast sayde. But the people are many, and it is a rayny wether, and they can not stande here without, neyther is this a worke of one day or two, for we are many that haue offended in this transgression. Let vs ap-poynte oure rulers therfore in all the congregation, & all they which haue taken straunge wyues in oure cityes, maye come at the tyme appoynted, and the elders of euery cytye, and theyr Judges with them, tyll the wrathe of our God be tourned awaye frome vs for this offence.

Then were appoynted Jonathan the sonne of Asahel, and Jahasia, the sonne of Thekua ouer this matter: And Mosollam and Sabathai the Leuite holpe them. And the chyldren of the captyuite, dyd euen so. And Esdras the Preest, and the auncient heades throwe the house of theyr fathers, and all that were now rehersed by name, seuered them selues, and sat them ehem downe on the fiel daye of the tenth mo-neth to examyn this matter. And in the fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth they made an ende concernynge all the men ꝓ had taken straunge wyues.

And amonge the chyldren of the Preestes
there were men founde ꝓ hadde taken straunge
wyues, namely amonge the chyldren of Jesua
the sonne of Josedec and of his brethren, Mathias, Eliezer, Jarib and Godoliah. And they gaue their handes there vpon, that they wolde put awaye their wyues: and for their offering to giue a ramme for their trespace. Among the chyldren of Emer, Hanani, and Zabadiah. Among the children of Harim, Maasiah, Eliah, Semeiah, Jehiel. and Ozias. Amonge the children of Phathur, Elioenai, Maasia, Ismael, Nathanael, Jozabed and Elasa. Amonge the Le-uites, Jozabed, Semei and Kelaia, which same is Kalithah, Pathahiah, Juda and Eleazar. Amonge the singers: Eliasib. Amonge the porters: Sellum, Telem and Uri.

Of Israel. Amonge the chyldren of Pharos: Remiah, Jesiah, Melchia, Miamin, Eleazar, Melchia, and Banaiah. Amonge the children of Elam, Mathania, Zacharye, Jehiel, Abdi, Jerimoth and Elia. Amonge the chyldren of Zethua, Elioenai, Eliasib, Mathania, Jere-moth, Zabad and Aziza. Amonge the chyldren of Bebai, Johana, Hanania, Zabai and Ath-lai. Amonge the children of Bani: Mosollam, Maluch, Adaia, Jasub, Saal and Jerim.
Amonge the chyldren of Pahath Moab, Sena, Calai, Banaiah, Maasia, Mathaniah, Ez-zeiel, Bezui, and Manasses. Amonge the children of Harim, Eliezer, Isiah, Melchiah, Se-meiah, Simeon, Ben Jamin, Maluch and Sa-marias. Among the chyldren Hasem, Mathna, Mathatha, Zabed, Eliphelet, Jeremi, Ma-nasse and Semei. Amonge the children of Bani, Madai, Amram, Uuel, Baneay, Chelai, Badaia, Uania, Maremoth, Eliasib, Mada-
nia, Mathanai, Jaasan, Bani, Bennui, Semei, Salamia, Nathan, Adaia, Machnadebai, Sasai, Sarai, Asarael, Selemiah, Samaria, Sa-lum, Amariah, and Joseph. Amonge the chyldren of Nebo, Jaiel, Mathathiah, Zabed, Ze-bina, Jedai, Joel and Banaiah. All these had taken straunge wy-ues. And among ꝓ same wiues there were some that had borne children.

The ende of the fyrste boke
of Esdras.

THE BOKE OF NEHEMIAS, OTHERWYSE CALLED THE SECONDE BOKE OF ESDRAS.

Nehemy butler to kynge Artaxerxes, prayeth to God for the people.

CAP. I.

THese are the actes of Nehemie the sonne of Hachalia. It fortuned in the moneth Casleu, in the twenty yere, that I was in the castell at Susa: and Hanani one of my brethren came wt certayne men of Juda, and I asked them howe the Iewes dyd that were delyuered and escaped from the captiuitie, and how it went at Jerusalem. And they sayde vnto me: The remnaunt of the captiuitie are there in the lande in greate myschefe and vtbuke. ✳ The walles of Jerusalem are broken downe, and the gates therof are brent with fyre.

When I herde these wordes, I sate me downe and wepte, and mourned thre dayes, and fasted and prayed before the God of heauen, and sayd: O Lorde God of heuen, thou greate and terrible God, ✳ thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy for them that loue the, and obserue thy commaundementes: Lette thyne eares harken, and thyne eyes be open, that thou mayste heare the prayer of thy seruaunt, whiche I praye nowe before the, daye and nyght, for the chyldren of Israel thy seruauntes, and knowlege the synnes of the chil dren of Israell, whiche we haue committed agaynst the. And I and my fathers house haue synned also. We haue dene corrupte vnto the, in that we haue not kepte the commaundementes, statutes and lawes, whiche thou commaundedst thy seruaunte Moses. Yet call to remembraunce the worde that thou commaundedst thy seruaunt Moses, and saydest: Ye transgresse, I wyll scatter you abrode amonge the nacyons. But yf ye tourne vnto me, and kepe my commaundementes and do them: thoughe ye were caste out vnto the vttermost parte of heuen, yet wyll I gather you thence, and bringe you euen vnto the place that I haue chosen for my name, to dwelle there. They are thy seruauntes, and thy people, whome thou haste delyuered thorowe thy greate power, and stronge hande. O Lorde, lette thyne eares harken to the prayer of thy seruaunte, and the prayer of thy seruauntes, whose desyre is to feare thy name, and let thy seruaunt prosper this daye, and graunte hym mercye in the syghte of this man: for I was the kynges butler.

Nehemy had obteyned letters of Artaxerxes, he cometh to Jerusalem, and buylded the walles.

CAP. II.

IN the moneth of Nisan, in the .xx. yere of kynge Artaxerxes, when the wine stode before him, I toke vp the wine and gaue it vnto the kynge, and I was heuye in his presence. Then sayde the kynge vnto me: why lokest thou so sadly? Thou art not sycke, this is not without cause, but there is somwhat not well in thyne herte. And I was sore afrayde ꝓ sayde vnto the kynge: God saue the kynges lyfe for euer: sholde I not loke sadly? the cittye of my fathers burial lieth waste, and the gates therof are consumed with fyre. Then sayd the kyng vnto me: what is thy requeste? the made I my prayer to the God of heuen, and said vnto the kyng: yf it please the kyng, and if thy seruaunt be fauoured in thy syght: I beseche the sende me in to Juda, vnto the citty of my fathers buriall, that I may buylde it. And the kynge said vnto me, and also the quene that sate by him: how longe shall thy iourney continue, & when wilt thou come again? And it pleased the king to sende me, and I set him a tyme, and sayd vn to the kyng: yf it please the kyng, let him giue me letters to the capitaynes beyonde the water, that they may conueye me ouer, till I come in to Juda: and letters vnto Asaph keper of ꝓ kings wod, that he may gyue me wod for beames to the gates of the temple, for the towres of the house, for the walles of the city, and for the house that I shal entre in to. And the kyng gaue me accordyng to the good hande of God vpon me. And when I came to the capitaynes beyonde the water, I delyuered them the kynges letters. And the kynge had sent capitaynes and horsemen with me. But whē Sanaballat the Horonite, and Tobiah the seruaunt of the Ammonites herde this, it greued thē sore, that there was come a man which sought ꝓ welth of the chyldren of Israel. And when I came to Jerusalem, and had ben there thre dayes, I gat me vp in the nyght season, and a few men with me: for I tolde no man what God had gyue me in myne hert to do at Jerusalem, and there was not one beast with me, saue that I rode vpon. And I rode by night vnto valey gate before the dragon well, and to the donge gate, & consydered the walles of Jerusalem that were broken downe, and the gates therof consumed with the fyre. And I went ouer vnto the well gate, and to the kinges condite, and there was no rowme for my beast, that it could go vnder me. Then went I on in the night by the broke side, and consydered the wall, and turned backe and came home agayne to valeye gate.

And the rulers knewe not wyther I went, or what I dyd, for hither to had I not told ꝓ Jewes and the preestes, the counsellers and the rulers, & the other that laboured in the worke. And I sayd vnto them: ye se the mysery that we are in, how Jerusalem lyeth waste, & howe the gates therof are brent with fyre, come let vs buyld vp the walles of Jerusalem, that we be no more a reproche. And I tolde them of the hande of my God, whiche was vpon me: and the kynges wordes that he had spoken vn to me. And they sayd: then let vs arise & buylde: and their handes were strengthed to good. But when Sanadalat the Horonite, and Tobias the seruaunt of the Ammonites, and Gesem the Arabian herde this, they laughed vs to scorne, and despised vs and sayd: what is this that ye do? Wyll ye fal away agayne from the king? Then answered I them, and sayd: the God of heuen he is that caused vs to prospere: and we be his seruauntes Let vs arise and buylde. As for you, ye haue no porcion nor right nor remembraunce in Jerusalem.

CAPI. III.

A Nd Eliasib the high preest gat him vp with his brethren the preestes, and buylded the sheepegate. They repayred it, & sette vp the wies of it: euen vnto the tower Meah repayred they it, namely vnto the * tower of Hananeel. Nexte vnto him buylded the men of Jericho. And beside him buylded Zachur the sonne of Amri. But the fyshgate dyd the chyldren of Asanah buylde, they couered it, and set on the doores locked and barred it. Nexte vnto him buylded Marimoth the sonne of Vrias the sonne of Hakoz. Nexte vnto him buylded Mesolam the sonne of Barachias the sonne of Mesesabeel. Next vnto him buylded Sadoc the sonne of Baana. Next vnto him buylded they of Thekua. But their great men put not their neckes to the seruice of their Lorde.

The oldegate buylded Joiada the sonne of Paseah, and Mesolam the sonne of Besodiah they couered it, and sette on the doores, lockes, and barres. Nexte vnto them buylded Melatiah of Gabaon, and Jadon of Meranoth men of Gabaon, and of Maspha for the seate of the capitayne on this syde the water. Nexte vnto him buylded Vsiel the sonne of Harhaiah the goldsmyth. Nexte vnto hym buylded Hananiah the Apotecaries sonne, and they repayred Jerusalem vnto the broode wall. Nexte vnto him buylded Raphaiah the sonne of Hur the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jerusalem. Next vnto him buylded Jedaiah the sonne of Haremaph ouer agaynst his house. Next vnto him buylded Hatus the sonne of Hasabonias. But Melchia the sonne of Harim, and Hasub the son of Pahath Moab buylded the other peece, and the towre beside the fornace. Nexte vnto him buylded Sellum the sonne of Salohes the ruler of the halfe quarter of Jerusalem, and his daughters.

The valey gate buylded Hanun, and the citezens of Zanoah. They buylded it, and set on the doores, lockes and barres, and a thousande cubites on the walle, vnto dounge gate. But dongyate buylded Melchiah the sonne of Rechab the ruler of the fourth parte of the bynesteres: he buylded it, and set on the doores, lockes and barres therof. But the well gate buylded Sellum the sonne of Cholhosah, the ruler of the fourth part of Maspha. He buylded it, and couered it, and set on the doores, lockes, and barres, and the wall vnto the pole of Siloah by the kynges garden, vnto steppes goo downe from the cite of David. After him buylded Nehemias the sonne of Asbuk, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Bethsur, vntyll the other lyde ouer agaynst the sepulchres of David, and the pole Asuta, and vnto the house of the myghtye.

After him buylded the Leuites, Rehum the sonne of Bani. Next vnto him buylded Hesebiah the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ceila in his quarter. After him buylded their brethren, Bauai the sonne of Banadad, the ruler of the halfe quarter of Ceilah. After him buylded Ezer the sonne of Josua the ruler of Maspha, the other peece harde ouer agaynst the harnesse corner. After him buylded Baruch the sonne of Zabai the other peece worshypfully costly, from the corner vnto the dore of the house of Eliasib the hyghe preest. After him buylded Marimuth the sonne of Vrias the son of Hacos the other peece, from the dore of the house of Eliasib, euen as long as the house of Eliasib stretched. After him buylded the preestes, men of the countrey. After him buylded Benjamin and Hasub ouer against their house. After them Asariah the son of Maasiah the son of Ananiah nexte vnto his house. After him buylded Benui the sonne of Henadad, the other peace frome the house of Asariah, vnto the turnynge, and vnto the corner. After him buylded Phalel the sonne of Vsai ouer against the corner and the hye towre, whiche lyeth out ouer from the kynges house, beside the court of the prysen. After him Phadaiah the sonne of Pharos (as for the Nethinims they dwelte in Ophel, vnto the water gate, towarde the east where the towre lyeth out.) After him buylded they of Thekua the other peece ouer against the great towre that lyeth outwarde, and vnto the wall of * Ophel.

But from horse gate forth buylded the preestes, euerye one ouer against his house. After them buylded Zadok the sonne of Emer ouer against his house. After him buylded Semaiah the sonne of Sechaniah keper of Eastgate. After him buylded Hananiah son of Selemias, & Hanun son of Talaph the first, the other peece. After him buylded Mesolam the sonne of Berachiah ouer against his treasurie. After him buylded Melchiah the goldsmythes son, vnto the house of the Nethinims, and of the marchauntes ouer against the counsel gate, & to the parlour in the corner. And betwene the parlour of the corner vnto Sheepe gate buylded the goldsmythes and the marchauntes.

CAPI. IIII.

When Sanabalat herde that we buylded the wall, he was wroth, and toke great indignacion, and mocked the Jewes, and sayd before his brethren and the hoste of Samarie what do the weake Jewes? shall they be let alone? shall they offre? shall they performme it in one daye? shall they make the stones pole agayne that are brought to dust and drye? And Tobias the Ammonite beside him sayd: let them buylde on, yf a fore go vp he shall breake downe their stony wall. Heare O thou our God how we are despised, turne their blame vpon their owne heed, that thou mayst gyue them ouer in to despitynge in the lande of their captiuitie. Couer not their wickednesse, and put not oute their synne frome thy presence: for they haue prouoked the buylders. Yet buylded we the walle, and ioyned it hole together vnto the halfe heyghte. And the people were well mynded to laboure. But when Sanabalat and Tobias, and the Arabians, and Ammonites, and Asdodites herde that the walles of Jerusalem were made vp, and that they had begon to stoppe vp the gappes, they were very wrothe, and conspyred all together to come and fyght against Jerusalem, and to make an hynderaunce therin. Nerthelesse we made our prayer vnto our God and set watchemen vpon the walle daye and nyght ouer agaynst them. And Juda sayd: the strength of the bearers is so feble, and there is so moche rubbysh, we are not able to buylde vp the wall. And our aduersaryes thought: they shal not knowe neither se, tyll we come in the myddes amonge them, and slee them, and hinder the worke. But when the Jewes that dwelte beside them came out of all the places where they dwelte aboute vs, and tolde vs as good as ten tymes: then set I the people after their kynredes with their swordes, speres and bowes beneathe in the lowe places behynde the wall, and loked, and gat me vp, and sayde vnto the chiefe men and rulers, and to the other people: be not ye afrayde of them, * thynke vpon the greate Lorde, whiche ought to be feared, and fyght for your brethren, sonnes, doughters, wyues, and houses. Neuerthelesse when our enemyes herde that we had goten worde of it, God broughte their counsell to nought, and we turned all agayne to the wall euery one vnto his labour. And from that time forth it came to passe, that the halfe parte of the yonge men dyd the laboure, and the other halfe parte helde the speares, shyldes, bowes, and brestplates: and the rulers stode beehynde all the house of Juda, whiche buylded on the walle, and bare burthens frome those that laded them. With one hande dyd they the worke, and with the other helde they their weapen. And euerye one that buylded, had his swerde gyrde by his syde, and so buylded they: and the trompetters stode beside me. And I sayde vnto the principall men and rulers, and to the other people: the worke is greate and large, and we are diuided vpon the walle one farre from an other. Loke in what place ye heare the noyse of the trompet, resorte ye thither vnto vs. * Our God shal fight for vs, and we wyll be labouryng in the worke. And the halfe parte of them helde the speares from the morowe spryng, tyll the starres came forth. And at the same tyme sayd I vnto the people: euerye one abyde with his seruaunte at Jerusalem, that in the nyghte season, we maye gyue attendaunce to the watche, and to labour on the daye tyme. Hereby I and my brethren and my seruauntes, and the men of the watche behynde me, we put neuer of our clothes, so moch as to washe our selues.

¶ The people are vexed with vsury. Nehemias forbyddeth vsurye. He requyreth not the tythynge of a capitayne.

CAPI. V.

And there arose a great complaint of the people and of their wyues against their brethren the Jewes. And there were some that sayd: our sonnes and oure doughters are to many, let vs take corne for them and eate, that we maye lyue. Some sayd: let vs set our landes, vineyardes and houses to pledge, and take vp corne in the derth. But some sayd: let vs borowe moneye of the kynges tribute for our landes and vineyardes. Now are our brethrens bodyes as our owne bodyes, and their children as our children: elles shulde we subdue our sonnes and doughters vnto bondage, and some of oure doughters are subdued alredye, and no strength is there in our handes, and other men shall haue oure landes and vineyardes.

But when I herde their complaynte and suche wordes, it displeased me sore, and I remolued so in my mynde, that I rebuked the heades & rulers, and sayd vnto them: * wyll ye requyre vsurye one of an other? And I broughte a great congregacion agaynste them, and sayd vnto them: we (after our habilitie) haue bought our brethren the Jewes, whiche were solde vnto the Panunes. And wyll ye sell youre brethren, whome ye haue boughte vnto vs? Then helde they their peace, and coulde fynde nothynge to answere.

And I sayde: It is not good that ye worke. Oughte ye not to walke in the feare of God, because of the rebuke of the heythen our enemyes? I and my brethren, and my seruauntes haue lent them money and corne: but as for vsurye, let vs leaue it. Therfore this same daye, se ye restore them their landes agayne, their vineyardes, oyle gardens, and houses, yea, the hundred parte of the money, of the corne, wyne, and oyle, that ye haue wonne of them. Then sayd they: we wyll restore them agayne, and wyll require nothynge of them, and wyl we as thou hast spoken. And I called the preestes, & toke an othe of them, that they shulde do so. And I shoke my lappe and sayde: God shake out euery man after the same maner frome his house and laboure, that maynteyneth not this worde: euen thus be he shaken out, and voyde. And all the congregacion sayd, Amen: and praysed the Lorde. And the people dyd so. And frome the tyme that it was commytted vnto me to be a capitayne in the lande of Juda, namely frome the twentyeth yere vnto the two and thirtyeth yere of kynge

Artaxerxes (that is twelue yere) I and my brethren dyd not eate suche sustenaunce as was gyuen to a capitayne. For the olde capitaynes that were before me, had ben chargeable vn-
to the people, and dayly taken of them breed and wyne, and fourty sicles of syluer: yea and theyr seruauntes dayly oppressed the people.
But so dyd not I, and that because of the feare of God. I laboured also in the worke vpō the walle, and boughte no lande. And all my seruauntes came thyther together vnto the worke Moreouer there were at my table an hundred and fyfteye of the Iewes and rulers, whiche came vnto me from the Paynyms that are a-boute vs, and theyr was prepared me dayly an oxe, and syx chosen sheepe and byrdes, and euer ones in ten dayes a greate quantitie of wyne.
Yet required not I the lyuyng of a capitayne,
for the bondage was greuous vnto the people. ✠ Thynke vpon me God vnto the best, 1. Esdra. vi.d
accordynge to all that I haue done for this and xvii.b
people.

¶ The buyldinge is yet agayne hyndred and left.

CAPI. VI.

Nd when Sanabalat, Tobiah, and Ge-sem the Arabian, and the other of oure enemyes herd that I had buylded the wall, and that there were no moo breaches therin (how be it at the same tyme I had not hanged the wrtes vpon the gates) Sanabalat and Gesem wrote vnto me, sayinge: come and let vs mete togyther in the villages vpon the playne of the citye Ono. Neuertheles they ymoughte to do me euyll. Notwithstandynge
I sent messengers vnto them, sayinge: I haue
a great busynesse to do, I can not come downe.
The worke sholde stande styll yf I were slacke and came downe to you. How be it they sente vnto me as good as foure tymes after the same maner. And I gaue the same answere. Then sente Sanabalat his seruaunte vnto me the sixth tyme, with an open letter in his hande, wherin was wrytten: it was tolde the hey-then, and Gesem hathe sayde it, that thou and the Iewes thynke to rebell: for the whiche cause thou buyldest the walle, and wylte be their kyng in these matters, and hast ordeyned
the Prophetes to preache of the at Jerusalem, and to saye he is kyng of Juda. Now shal this come to the kinges eares: come now therfore, & let vs take our counsel togyther. Neuertheles I sent vnto him, sayinge: there is no suche thynge wonne as thou sayest: thou hast fay-ned it out of thyne owne herte. For they were all mynded to make vs afrayde, and thought:
they shall withdrawe their handes from the worke, that they shall not laboure. Now be it I strengthed my hande the more. And I came vnto the house of Semeiah the sonne of De-laiah the son of Mehetabeel, and he had shut him selfe within, and said: let vs come togy-ther in to the house of God, euen in to the midtes of the temple, and shut the wrts of the tem ple: for they wyll come to slee the, yea euen in the night will they come to put it to rebuke. But I said: sholde any suche man as I flee? Who that being as I am, that wil go in to the temple to saue his lyfe? I wyll not go in. For I perceyued & God had not sent him: Yet hath he prophecied vpon me, neuertheles Tobias Sanabalat had hyred him for money. Therefore tobe the mynde, that I thought that I sholde so do, and synne: that they might haue an euil reaporte of me, to blaspheme me. Remember God thynke thou vpon Tobias and Sanabalat, according vnto these their workes, & vpon
the prophet Noadiah, and of the other prophets, that wolde haue put me in feare. And thus was finyshed on the fyue and twentye day of the moneth Elul, in two and fyftye dayes.
And when all our enemyes herde therof, all the Heythen that were about vs, were sore and their courage fayled them: for they per-ceyued that this worke came of God. And the same tyme were there manye of the chefe of Juda, whose letters wente vnto Tobias, from Tobias vnto them (for there were many in Juda & were sworne vnto him: for he was the sonne in lawe of Sechaniah, the sonne of Arah, and his sonne Johanan had the daughter of Mosolam the sonne of Berechiah, and they spake good of him before me and tolde him my wordes) and Tobias sente letters, to put me in feare.

¶ After the wall ones buylded the watche is ap-poynted. They that returned from the captyuyte are nombred.

CAPI. VII.

When we hadde buylded the wall I set ged on the wrzes, and the porters, syngers, & Leuites were appoynted. And commaunded my brother Hanani and Haniah the ruler of the palace at Jerusalem (for he was a faythful man, and feared God aboue
then dyd many other,) And I sayd vnto them
let not the gates of Jerusalem be opened tyll
the sonne be hote. And whyle they are yet lyynge in the watche the doores shal be shut and barred. And there were certayne citizens of Jerusalem appoynted to be watchemen, euery one in his watche, and aboute his house. For the citye, was large of rowme and greate, but the people were few therin, & the houses were not buylded.

And my God dyd put in my herte that I gathered togyther the principall men, and the people to nombre them, and I founde a register of the nombre of them, whiche came vp afore oute of the captiuite: and founde wryten therin: ✠ these are the sonnes of the lande that wente vp from the captiuite of the cap-tiuge awaye (whom Nabuchodonozor the king of Babilon had broughte awaye) and came a-gayne to Jerusalem and Juda, euery man vnto his citye, whiche came with Zorobabel: Jesua, Nehemias, Asariah, Raamiah, Nahamani, Mardochee, Belsan, Mesparath, Begue-Nahum, and Baanah.

This is the nombre of the men of the people of Israel. The children of Phares were two nynetye.

The children of Hasom, thre hundred and eyghte and twentye: the children of Bezai, thre hundred and foure and twentye:
the children of Hariph, an hundred and twelue: the children of Gabaon, fyue and nynetye: the men of Bethlehem and Nethe-pha, an hundred foure score and eyghte: the men of Anathoth, an hundred and eyghte and twentye: the men of Beth Asmoth, two and fourtye: the men of Kariath Jarim, Cephirah and Beeroth, seuen hundred and thre and fourtye: the men of Rama and Gaba, syxe hundred and one and twentye: the men of Machmas, an hundred and two and twen-tye: the men of Bethel and Ai, an hundred and thre and twentye: the men of Nebo, an other and two and fyftye: the children of the other Elam, a thousande, two hundred and foure and fyftye: the children of Harim, thre hundred and twentye: the children of Jericho, thre hundred and fyue and fourtye:
the children of Lodhadid and Ono, seuen hundred and one and twentye: the children of Senaah, thre thousande, nyne hundred and thyrtye.

The preestes. The children of Jadaiah of the house of Jesua, nyne hundred seuentye
and thre: the children of Emer, a thousande
and two and fyftye: the children of Pashur
a thousande, two hundred and seuen and four-tye: the children of Harim, a thousande and Asaph, an hundred and eyghte and fourtye. The porters: The children of Salum, the children of Ater, the children of Talmon, the children of Accub, the children of Hatita, the children of Sobai, all togyther an hundred and nyne and thirtye.

The Nethinims. The children of Siha, the children of Hasupha, the children of Teba-both, the children of Keros, the children of Sia, the children of Phadon, the children of Lebana, the children of Hagaba, the children of Salmai, the children of Hanan, the children of Giddel, the children of Gahar, the children of Raaia, the children of Rasin, the children of Necoda, the children of Gesem, the children of Uza, the children of Phaseah, the children of Besai, the children of Meunim:
the children of Nephusesim, the children of Bachuc, the children of Hacupha, the children of Harhur, the children of Bazluth, the children of Mahida, the children of Harsa, the children of Bercos, the children of Sisera, the children of Thamah, the children of Nesiah, the children of Hatipha.

The children of Salomons seruauntes:
The children of Sotai, the children of Sophereth, the children of Pherida, the children of Jaala, the children of Darcon, the children of Giddel, the children of Saphatiah, the children of Hatil, the children of Pochereth of Zabaiim, the children of Amon. All the Nethinims & the children of Salomons seruauntes were thre hundred, nynetye and two.

And these wente vp also of Thel Mela, Thel Harsa, Cherub, Addon and Emer: but they coulde not shewe theyr fathers house,
nor theyr seed, whether they were of Israell.
The children of Dalaiah, the children of To-bia, and the children of Necoda, fyue hundred and two and fourtye. And of the preestes the children of Habaiah: the children of Hacos, the children of Berzilai, whiche toke one of the doughters of Berzilai the Galaadyte to wyfe, and was named after theyr name. These soughte the register of their pedigrue, & when they founde it not, they were put from the Preesthode. And Hathirsatha sayd vnto them, that they shoulde not eate of the moost holye, tyll there came vp a Preest with the light and perteynelle.

The hole congregacion as one man, was two and fourtye thousande, thre hundred and thre score, beside their seruauntes and mayds,
of whome there were seuen thousande, thre hundred and seuen and thirtye. And they had two hundred and seuen and fourtye syngynge men and women, seuen hundred and fyue and thirtye horses, two hundred and fyue and four-tye mules, foure hundred and fyue and thirtye camelles: fyue thousande, seuen hundred and twentye asses.

And certayne of the auncyent fathers gaue vnto the worke. Hathirsatha gaue to the treasure a thousande drammes, fyfye basins, fyue hundred and thirtye preestes garmentes. And some of the chefe fathers gaue vnto the treasure of the worke twentye thousande drammes,
two thousande and two hundred pound of syluer. And the other people gaue twentye thousande drammes, and two thousande pounde of syluer, and thre score and seuen Preestes garmentes. And the Preestes and Leuites, the porters, the syngers, and the other of the people and the Nethinims, and all Israell dwelte
in their cities.

¶ Esdras gathereth the people and readeth to them
gyue lawe. They kepe the feast of tabernacles.

CAPI. VIII.

II. Esdras 8. a
III. Esdras 8. c

AND when the seuen moneth drewe nye, and the childzen of Israel were in theyr cytyes, all the people gathered togyther, as one man, vpon the strete before the water gate, and spake vnto Esdras the scribe, that he sholde fetche the boke of the lawe of Moy-ses, whiche the Lorde commaunded to Israel.
Deute. xxxi. c iiii. Reg. xxiii. a
* And Esdras the Preste brought the lawe before the congregation, both of men and women, and of all that coulde vnderstande it,
vpon the fyrste daye of the seuenth moneth,
The boke of the lawe is red to the people.
and redde therin in the strete that is before water gate (frome the morninge vntyll the noone daye) before men and women, and suche as couldo vnderstande it: and the eares
of all the people were inclyned vnto the boke
of the lawe. And Esdras the scribe stode vpon an hyghe pulpyt of wode, whiche they hadde
made for the preachynge, and besyde him stode Mathathiah, Sema, Ananiah, Uriah, Helki-ah, and Maasciah on his ryghte hande: and on his lefte hande stode Phadaiah, Misael, Melchiah, Hasum, Hasbadanah, Zacharye
and Mosolam.
5 And Esdras opened the boke before all the people, for he stode aboue all the people. And when he opened it, all the people stode vp.
And Esdras praysed the Lorde the great God.
And all the people answered: Amen, Amen/
with theyr handes vp, and bowed them sel-ues, and worshipped the Lorde with theyr faces to the grounde. And Jesua, Baani, Serabiah, Jamin, Aruba, Hodiah, Maiana, Azarias, Jamin, Aruba, Hodiah, Hasabiah, Maasi-
ah, Celita, Azariah, Jozabed, Hanan, Phalai-ah, and the Leuites caused the people to giue
hede vnto the law, and the people stode in theyr place. And they redde in the boke of the lawe of God diligently and playnely, so that men vnderstoode the tyynge that was redde. And Nehemias (whiche is Hathirsatha) and Esdras
the preest and the scribe, and the Leuites that caused the people to take hede, sayde vnto all the people: this daye is holye vnto the Lorde your God: be not ye sorye therfore, and wepe
no: for all the people wepte when they herde
the wordes of the lawe.
10 Therfore sayde he vnto them: goo youre waye, and eate the fat, and dyynke the swete/and sende parte vnto them also that haue not prepared them selues, for this daye is holy vnto oure Lorde, be not you sorye therfore: for the ioye of the Lorde is youre strengthe. And the Leuites stylled the people, and sayde: hold youre peace, for the daye is holye, vexe not ye your selues. And al the people went their way to eate and dyynke, and sende parte vnto other,
and to make greate myrthe, because they hadde vnderstande the wordes that were declared vnto them.
13 And on the nexte daye assembled the chiefe fathers amonge all the people and the Preeftes and Leuites, vnto Esdras the scribe, that he shoulde teache them in the wordes of the lawe. And they founde wrytten in the lawe Leu. xxiii. d
* how the Lorde hadde commaunded by Moy-ses, that the childzen of Israel shoulde dwell
in boothes in the feast of the seuenth moneth.
And so they caused it be declared and proclaymed, in all theire cityes, and at Jerusalem, sayynge: goo vp vnto the mounte and fetche Olyue braunches, Pyne braunches, Myrte braunches, Palme braunches, and branches of thycke trees, to make boothes, as it is wrytten.
16 And the people went vp and set, and made them boothes, euerye one vpon the rofe of his house, and in theire courtes, and in the courts of the house of God, and in the strete by water gate, and in the strete by the gate Ephraim. And all the congregation of them that were come agayne oute of the captiuite made boothes, and dwelte therin: for sythens the tyme of Josua the sonne of Nun vnto this daye, had not the childzen of Israell vsed it, and there was verye greate gladnesse. Inde-uerye daye frome the fyrst daye vnto the laste, redde he in the boke of the lawe of God. And seuen dayes helde they the feaste, and on the eyghte daye they made a gatherynge, accordynge to the manner.

¶ The people repent and forsake their straunge ma-
nes. Esdras receyueth the benedyctyon of God and repentance of the people.

CAPI. IX.

IN the foure and twentye daye of this ma-neth, came the childzen of Israel togyther with * fastynge and sacke clothes, and earth
vpon them, and separated the seed of Israel from all the straunge childzen, and stode and knowleged their synnes, and the wyckednesses of their fathers, and stode vp in their place, and redde in the boke of the lawe of the Lord their God foure tymes on the daye, and they knowleged, and worshipped the Lorde their God foure tymes on the daye. And the Leui-tes stode on hygh, namelye Jesua, Banicabdmiel, Sabaniah, Bani, Sarebiah, Banias Chanani, and cryed loude vnto the Lorde their God. And the Leuites, Jesua, Cadmiel, Banai, Hasabniah, Serebiah, Hodiah, Sebaniah, Phathahiah, sayd: stande vp, prayse the Lorde your God for euer: and let thankes be gyuen
vnto the name of thy glorye, whiche exalteth all thankesgyuynge and prayse. Lorde, thou alone hast made heuen, and the heuen of the heuens, with all their hoste, the earthe and that is therin, the see and all that is therin:
thou gyuest life vnto all, and the hoste of he-uen bowe them selues vnto the. Thou arte Lorde God, that hast chosen Abram, and broughtest him out of * Ur in Chaldea, and calledst him Abraham, and foundest his hert faythfull before the, * and madest a couenaunt with him to gyue vnto his seed the lande of the Chananites, Hethites, Amorites, Pherezites, Jebusites, and Gergesites, and hast made good thy wordes: for thou arte righteous. * And hast considered the affliccyon of our fathers in Egypte, and hearde their playnt by the rede
see, and shewed tokens and wonders vpon Pharao, and vpon all his seruauntes, and vpon
the people of his lande: for thou knewest how they were presumptuous and cruell agaynste them, and so madest thou the name as it is this daye. And the redde see dyddest thou diryde in sonder before them, so that they wente

thorowe the myddes of the see dyye grounde:
and their persecuters threwest thou in to the depe as a stone, in the myghtye waters, and ledddest them on the daye tyme in a cloudye pyller, and on the nyghte season in a pyller of fyre, to shewe them lyghte in the waye that they went.
E * Thou camest downe also vpon mounte
Sinai, and spakest vnto them frome heuen, and gauest them eyghte iudgementes, true
lawes, good commaundementes and statutes, and declaredst vnto them thy holye Sa-bath, and commaundedst them precептes, or-dinaunces, and lawes, by Moses thy seruaūt:
and * gauest them breed frome heauen when they were hungrye, and * broughtest forthe water for them oute of the rocke when they were thyrstye: and promysedst them that they sholde go in and take possession of the lande, ouer which thou haddest lyfte vp thyne hande
for to gyue them.
But oure fathers were proude and hard-necked, so that they folowed not thy commaundementes, and refused to heare, and were not myndeful of thy wonders that thou dyddest for them: but became stordye and hardye, in so moche that they tourned backe in their bondage in their disobedience. But thou my God forgauest, and wast gracious, mercyfull, pacyent, and of greate goodnesse,
and forsookest them not. * And thoughe they made a moulten calfe, (and sayd: this is thy God that broughte the oute of the lande of Egypte, and dyd greate blasphemyes, yet for-sakest thou them not in the wyldernesse, ac-cordyng to thy greate mercy. * And the clou-dye pyller departed not from them on the day tyme to leade them the waye, neyther the pillar of fyre in the night season, to shewe them
lyght in the way that they went.
And thou gauest them thy good spiryte to informe them, * and withholdest not thy Manna frome their mouthe, * and gauest them water when they were thyrstye. Fourty yeres longe madest thou prouision for them in the wyldernesse, so that they lacked no-thynge * their clothes wared not olde, and their fete swelled not. And thou gauest them kyngdomes and nations, and partedst them accordynge to their portions, so that they possessed * the lande of Sehon kynge of Hesebon, and the lande of Og the kynge of Basan. And their childzen multiplyedst thou as the sterres of heauen, and broughtest them in to the lande wherof thou haddest spoken vnto their fathers, that they sholde go in to it, and haue
in possession.
And the childzen wente in, and possessed the lande, * and thou subduedst before them the inhabiters of the lande, euen the Cananites, and gauest them in to their hande, and their kynges and the people of the lande, that they myght do with them what they wolde. And they wanne their stronge cityes, and a fatte lande, and toke possession of houses that were full of all maner goodes, welles digged oute, vyneyardes, oyle gardens, and manye frutefull trees: and they ate and were fylled,
and became fat, and lyued in welthe thorowe thy greate goodnesse. Neuertheles they were disobedient, and rebelled agaynste the, and cast thy lawe behynde their backes, and slewe thy Prophetes (whiche exhorted them so earnestly that they sholde conuerte vnto the) and dyd

that hath happened vnto vs, and our kynges, Princes, Preestes, prophetes, fathers / and all thy people, frome the tyme of the kynges of Assur, vnto this daye. Thou arte ryghteous in all that thou hast broughte vpon vs: for thou hast wone tryghte. As for vs, we haue done vn-

is the encrease of it vnto the kynges, whome
thou hast set ouer vs because of oure synnes, and they haue dominion ouer our bodyes and catell, and we are in greate trouble. Upon all this therfore we make a sure couenaunt, and wryte it, and let our princes, Leuites and preestes seale it.

¶ The names of them that sealed the couenaun betweene God and the people.

CAPI. X.

THese sealers were: Nehemias (that is) Hachaliahs the sonne of Hachaliah and Zedekiah, Saraiah, Asariah, Jeremye, Phashur, Amariah, Malchiah, Hatus, Sebaniah, Maluch, Harim, Meremoth, Obadiah, Daniel, Ienthon, Baruch, Mosolam, Abiah, Miamin, Maasiah, Belgai, and Semeiah: these were preestes. The Leuites were: Jesua the sonne of Azaniah, Benui amonge the chyldren of Henadad, and Cadmiel. And their brethren: Sechaniah, Hodiah, Celita, Phalaiah, Hanan, Micha, Rohob, Hasabiah, Zachur, Sherebiah, Sabaniah, Hodiah, Bani and Baninu. The heedes of the people were: Phahes, Pahath Moab, Elam, Zathua, Bani, Bonni, Azgad, Bebai, Adonias, Begoai, Adin, Ater, Ezechias, Asur, Hodiah, Hasum, Bezai, Hariph Anathoth Nebai, Magphias, Mosolam, Hezir, Mesesabel, Zadoc, Jaddua, Phalatia, Hanan, Anaiah, Hosea, Hananiah, Hasub, Haloh es, Phalcha, Hobek, Rehum, Hasebnah, Maasiah, Ahiah, Hanan, Anan, Maluch, Harim and Baanah.

B And the other people, the Preestes, Leuites, porters, syngers, Nethinims, and all they that hadde seuered them selues frome the people in the landes vnto the lawe of God, with their wyues, sonnes, and doughters / as many as coulde vnderstande it, and their lordes that had rule of them, receyued it for their brethren,

Iosu. xxiiii. c. ii. Para. xv. c. * And they came to sweare, and to bynde them selues with an othe to walke in Gods lawe, whiche was geuen by Moses the seruaunt of God, that they wolde kepe and do accordynge vnto all the commaundementes, iudgementes and statutes of the Lorde oure God: * and that we wolde not geue oure doughters vnto the people in the lande, neyther take their doughters for oure sonnes. And

Deutr. viii. c. if the people of the land brought ware on the Saboth, * all maner of victayles to sell, that we wolde not take it of them on the Saboth

Leuit. xxv. c. Deutr. xv. c. and on the holye dayes. * And that we wolde let for seuenth yere be free concerning all maner of charge.

L And we decreed a statute vpon oure selues, to geue yerely the thyrde parte of a syele to the ministracion in the house of oure God, namely for the shewbreed, for the dayly meate offerynge, for the dayly burntoffrynge of the Sabothes, of the new mones and feall dayes, and for the thynges that were sanctified, and for the synne offrynges, to reconcyle Israel withall, and for all the busynesse in the house of our God.

And we caste the lot amonge the preestes, Leuites, and the people, for offrynge of the wod (to be brought in to the house of our God after the houses of oure fathers, yere to yere, after the dayes) there, that it myght be dyent at tymes appoynted, vpon the aulter of the Lorde oure God, as it is wrytten in the lawe: and yerely to bryng the firstborne of our land, and the firstborne of our frutes of all trees, yere by yere, vnto the house of the Lorde: and the firstborne of our sonnes, and of our cattell, as it is wrytten in the lawe: and the firstborne of oure stocke of our shepe, that we shulde bryng all thys to the house of oure God, vnto the preestes that ministre in the house of oure God: and that we shulde bryng the firstborne of our meates, and of oure drynkes, and the frutes of all maner trees, of wyne also and of oyle, vnto the preestes to the chestes of the house of oure God. And the tithes of our lande vnto the Leuites, that the Leuites might haue the tithes in all cities of our ministracion.

And the Preestes the sonne of Aaron shall with the Leuites haue also of the tythes of the Leuites, so that the Leuites shall bryng vp the tithes of their tithes vnto the house of oure God, to the chestes in the treasure house. For the chyldren of Israel and the children of Leui shall bryng vp the firste frutes of the corne, wyne and oyle vnto the chestes. And there shall be the vessellles of the sanctuarye, and the preestes that minister, and the porters and syngers, that we forsake not the house of our God.

¶ Who dwelled in Jerusalem after it was buylded, and with in the cytyes of Juda.

CAP. XI

AND the rulers of the people dwelte at Jerusalem. But the other people caste lottes therfore, so that among ten one parte went to Jerusalem in to the holy cyte to dwell, and nyne partes in the cities. And the people thanked all the men that were willing to dwell at Jerusalem.

These are the heades of the lande that dwelte in Jerusalem, and in the cities of Juda. And euerye one dwelt in his possession, and in theyr cytyes of Israell, the Preestes, Leuites, the Nethinims, and the chyldren of Salomons seruauntes. And at Jerusalem dwelt certayne of the chyldren of Juda and of Ben Jamin.

Of the chyldren of Juda: Athaiah the sonne of Usiah the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Amariah, the sonne of Saphatiah, the sonne of Mahalaleel, of the children of Phares. And Maasiah the sonne of Baruch, the sonne of Chol Hose, the sonne of Hazia, the sonne of Adaia, the sonne of Joiarib, the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Silonit. All the chyldren of Phares that dwelte at Jerusalem, were foure hundred thre score and eyght valiaunt men.

These are the chyldren of Ben Jamin: Sallu the sonne of Mesullam, the sonne of Joed, the sonne of Phadaia, the sonne of Colaia, the sonne of Maasiah, the sonne of Ithiel, the sonne of Isaiah. And after him Abai, Sellai, nyne hundred and eyghte and twentye. Ioel

Joel the sonne of Zechri had the ouersyghte of them: and Juda the sonne of Senuah ouer the seconde parte of the cytye.

Of the preestes there dwelte: Idaia the sonne of Joiarib, Jachin, Saraiah the sonne of Helkia the sonne of Mosolam, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Meraioth, the sonne of Ahitob, was prince in the house of God, and his brethren that perfourmed the worke in the house: of whom there were eyghte hundred and two and twentye. And Adaiah the sonne of Ieroham, the sonne of Phalaliel, the sonne of Amzi, the sonne of Zacharye, the sonne of Phashur, the sonne of Melchiah and his brethren, chiefe amonge the fathers: of whom there were two hundred and two and forty. And Amasai the son of Asarael the son of Ahasai the sonne of Mosolamoth, the son of Emer: and his brethren were valiaunt men of whome there were an hundred and. xxviij. And their ouerseer was Zabdiel the sonne of Haggedolim.

L Of the Leuites: Semeiah the sonne of Hasub, the sonne of Azrikam, the sonne of Hasabiah the sonne of Bani: and Sabathai and Jozabad of the chiefe of the Leuites, in the outward busynes of the house of God. And Mathaniah the sonne of Micha, the son of Zabdi, the sonne of Asaph, which was the prince to begyn the thankesgyuyng vnto prayer. And Bakbukiah the seconde amonge his brethren, and Abda the sonne of Hammua, the sonne of Galal, the sonne of Idithun. All the Leuites in the holy cyte were twoo hundred lxxxiij. And the porters Acub and Talmon, and their brethren that kept the portes, were an hundred seuenty and two. The rest of Israel, the preestes and Leuites, were in al the cytties of Juda, euery one in his inheritaunce. And the Nethinims dwelt in Ophel: and Ziha and Gaspha belonged vnto the Nethinims. The ouerseer of the Leuites at Jerusalē, was Usi the sonne of Bani, the sonne of Hasabia, the sonne of Mathania, the sonne of Micha.

Of the children of Asaph there were syngers chefe the ministrey in the house of God: for it was the kynges cōmaundement concerning them, that the syngers shulde walc faithfully euery daye as was accordynge.

And Pathaia the sonne of Mesesabel of the children of Zarah the sonne of Juda were the kynges in all matters concernynge the people and their villages, throwout all their regions. And the children of Juda that were without in the townes of their lande, dwelte some at Kariath Arbe, and in the villages therof, and at Dibon, and in the villages therof: and at Cabzeel, and in the villages therof: and at Jesua, Molada, Bethphalet, Hazersual, Bersabe and in their villages: and at Siklag and Mechonah, and in their villages: And at Enimmon, Zarah, Jermuth, Zanoah, Odullam and in their villages: At Lachis, and in the fyldes therof: At Azekah, and in the villages therof: and dwelt from Bersabe vnto the valley of Hennom

The children of Ben Jamin of Gaba, dwelt at Machmas, Aia, Bethel and in their villages. And at Anathoth, Nob, Ananiah, Hasor, Ramah, Gethaim, Hadid, Zeboim, Nabalath, Lod, Ono and in the carpenters valley. And certayne of the Leuites that had portions in Juda, dwelt in Ben Jamin.

¶ The preestes and Leuites which came with Zorobabel to Jerusalem are numbred: and the wall is dedycate.

CAPI. XII.

THese are the preestes and Leuites that went vp with Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and with Jesua: Saraiah, Jeremy, Esdras, Amariah, Melich, Hatus, Sechaniah, Rehum, Meremoth, Aw, Genthoi, Abiah, Miamin, Haadia, Belga, Semaiah, Joiarib, Idaia, Salu, Amok, Helkia, and Jadaiah. These were the heades among the preestes and their brethren in the tyme of Jesua. The Leuites were these: Jesua, Benui, Cadmiel, Sarabiah, Juda and Machemiah ouer the office of thankesgyuynge, they & their brethren: Bacbukiah and Unni and their brethren, were about them in the watches.

Jesua begat Joakim. Joakim begat Eliasib. Eliasib begat Joiada. Joiada begat Jonathan. Jonathan begat Jadua. And in the tyme of Joakim were these the chefe fathers amonge the Preestes: vnder Saraiah, Maraiah, vnder Jeremy, Hananiah: vnder Esdras Mosolam: vnder Amariah, Joanan: vnder Melico, Jonathan: vnder Sebaniah, Joseph vnder Harim, Edna: vnder Maraioth, Helcai: vnder Adia, Zachary, vnder Genthon, Mosolam: vnder Abia, Zechri: vnder Miniamin and Moadia, Peltai: vnder Belga, Samua: vnder Semeiah, Jonathan: vnder Joiarib, Mathuai: vnder Jadaiah, Uzi: vnder Selai, Kelai: vnder Amok, Eber: vnder Helkia, Hasabiah: vnder Jadaiah, Nathanael.

And in the tyme of Eliasib, Joiada, Jobanan and Jadua, were the chefe fathers amōg the Leuites, and the preestes written vnder the raygne of Darius the Persian. The children of Leui the principall fathers were written in the Chronycles, vntyll the tyme of Jonathā the sonne of Eliasib. And these were the chefe amonge the Leuites, Hasabiah, Sherebiah & Jesua the sonne of Cadmiel, and their brethrē ouer against them, to geue prayse and thākes according as Dauid the man of God had ordeyned it, one watche ouer against an other. Mathania, Bakbukiah, Obadiah, Mosolam Talmon and Akub were porters in the watche at the thresholdes of the gates. These were in the tyme of Joakim the sonne of Jesua the sonne of Josedec, and in the tyme of Nehemi as the Capitayne and of the prest Esdras the scribe.

D And in the dedication of the wall at Jerusalem, were the Leuites sought out of all their places, that they myght be brought to Jerusalem, to kepe the dedication and gladnesse, with thankesgyuynges, with singynge with Cymbales, Psalteries and Harpes. And the children of the syngers gathered them selues together frome the playne countrey about Jerusalē salem, and frome the villages of Nethophathi, and from the house of Galgal, and oute of the feldes of Geba and Asmaueth: for the singers had buylded them villages about Jerusalem. And the preistes and Leuites purified them selues, and clensed the people, the gates and the wall.

L And I caused the princes of Juda to goo vp vpon the wall, and appointed twoo greate queers of thankesgeuynge, whiche went on ꝑ ryght hande of the wall towarde the Donge gate, and after them went Hosaiah, and half of the princes of Juda, and Azaria, Esdras, Mosolom, Juda, Ben Jamin, Semeiah and Jeremy: and certayne of the preistes childre with trompettes, namely Zachary the sonne of Jonathan, the sonne of Semeiah, the son of Mathaniah, the sonne of Michaiah, ꝑ son of Zeeur, the sonne of Asaph, and his brethre Semeiah, Azaraei, Melalai, Galalai, Maai Nathanael and Juda and Hanani, with the musical instrumentes of David the man of God.

And Esdras the scribe before them, towarde the Welgate, and they went vp ouer against them vpon the steppes of the cyty of David at the goynge vp of the wall to the house of David, vnto the Watergate eastwarde.

The other queer of thankesgeuynge went ouer against them, and I after them, and the half part of the people vpon the wal, toward Fornacegate vpwarde, vntyll the brode wall, M and to the gate of Ephraim, and to Ologate, and to the Fyshgate, and to the tower of Hananeel, & to the tower of Meah, vntyl shepegate. And in the prysongate stode they still, and so stode the two queers of thankesgeuynge of the house of God, and I and the halfe of the rulers with me, and the preistes, namely Eliakim, Maasiah, Miniamin, Michaiah, Elioenai, Zachary, Hananiah, with trompettes and Maasiah, Semeiah, Eleasar, Vsi, Jehanan, Melchiah, Elam and Ezer. And the singers sange loude, and Jezraia was the ouersear.

And the same daye were there great sacrifices offred, and they reioyced: for God had geuen them great gladnes, so that both the wyues and children were ioyful, and the myrthe of Jerusalem was herde farre of.

At the same tyme were men appointed ouer the treasure chestes (wherin were the offerinnges, firstfrutes, & the tythes) that they shuld gather them out of the feldes about the cyties to make them vnto the preistes and Leuites, accordinge to the law: for Juda was glad of the preistes, and Leuites, that they stode and wayted vpon the office of their God, and the office of the clensinge. And the singers & porters stode after the commaundement of David and of Salomon his sonne: for in the tyme of David and Asaph, were the chiefe singers foũ- t.Par.xxiiii.a.
ded, and the songes of prayse and thankesgeuynge vnto God. In the tyme of Zorobabel and Nehemias, dyd all Israel, geue portions vnto the singers and porters, euery daye his portion, and they gaue thynges halowed vnto the Leuites, and the Leuites gaue thynges that were sanctified, vnto the children of Aaron.

CAPI. XIII.

AND what tyme as the booke of Moses was red in the eares of ꝑ people, there was founde written therin, * that the Ammonites and Moabites shulde neuer come into the congregacion of God, because they met not the children of Israel with breade & water, and hyred Balaam against them, that he shulde curse them: neuertheles our God turned the curse into a blessinge. Now whē they herde the Lawe, they seuered from Israel euery one that had myxte him self therin. And before this had the preiste Eliasib kepynge the chest of the house of our God vnto his kynsman Tobiah: for he had made him a great chest and there had they afore tyme layde the offrynges, frankincense, vessell, and the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle (accordynge to the commaundement gyuen to the Leuites, syngers and porters) and the firste frutes of the preistes.

But in all this was not I at Jerusalem: for in the two and thirteth yere of Artaxerses kynge of Babilon, came I vnto the kynge and after certayne dayes I got lycence of the kynge to come to Jerusalem. And I gat knowledge of the euyll that Eliasib dyd vnto Tobiah, in that he hadde made him a chest in the courte of the house of God, and it greued me sore, and I cast forth al the vessels of ꝑ house of Tobiah out of the chest, and commaunded them to clense the chestes. And thether brought I agayne the vessels of the house of God, the sacrifice and the incense.

And I perceyued, that the portions of the Leuites were not gyuen them, for which cause the Leuites and singers were fled, euery one to his lande for to worke. Then reproued I the rulers, & sayd: Why forsake we the house of God? But I gathered them togither, and set them in their place. Then brought all Juda the tythes of corne, wyne and oyle vnto ꝑ treasure. And we ordeyned to be treasurers ouer the treasure, euen Selemiah the preist, & Zawe the scribe, and of the Leuites Phadaiah and vnder their hande Hanan the sonne of Zacur the sonne of Mathaniah: for they were counted faithfull, and their office was to distribute vnto their brethren. Thinke vpō me O my God herein, and wype not out my mercye, that I haue shewed on the house of my God, and on the officers therof.

At the same tyme sawe I some treadynge wyne presses on the Sabboth and bringynge in clustres, and asses laden with wyne, grapes frygges, and bryngynge all maner of burthens vnto Jerusalem, vpon the Sabboth daye. And I rebuked them earnestly the same daye that they solde the victayles. There dwelt me of Tyre also therein, whiche brought fysshe and

and all maner of ware, and solde on the Sabboth vnto the children of Juda and Jerusalē. Then reproued I the rulers in Juda, & sayde vnto them: what euyll thynge is this ye do, & breake ꝑ Sabboth day? Dyd not our fathers euen so vs, & our God brought all this plage vpon vs and vpon this cyty? And ye make the wrathe more yet vpon Israell, in that ye breake the Sabboth.

And it fortuned, that when the gates of Jerusalem were touched wuy the euenynge shadowe on the Sabboth, I commaunded to shut the gates, and charged that they shulde not be opened tyll after the Sabboth: & some of my seruantes set I at the gates, that there shulde no burthen be brought in on the Sabboth daye. Then remayned the chapmen and marchauntes ones or twyse ouer nyght without Jerusalem, with all maner of wares. Then reproued I them sore, and sayde vnto them: why tarye ye all nyght about ꝑ wall? Yf ye do it ones agayne, I will laye handes vpon you. From that tyme forth came they no more on the Sabboth. And I sayd vnto the Leuites which were cleane, that they shulde come and kepe the gates, to halow the Sabboth daye. Thinke vpon me (O my God) concernynge this also, and spare me accordyng to thy great mercy.

And at the same tyme sawe I Jewes, that maryed wyues of Asdod, Ammon and of Moab, and their children spake halfe in the speche of Asdod, and coulde not speake in the Jewes language, but by the tonge might a man perceyue euery people. And I reproued them, and cursed them, and smote certayne men of them and plucke them by, and toke an othe of them by God: ye shall not gyue your doughters vnto their sonnes, nether shal ye take their doughters vnto your sonnes, or for your selues. Did not Salomon the kyng of Israel synne therin? & yet amonge many kaynynes was there no kynge lyke him, and he was deare vnto his God, and God made him kynge ouer al Israel, and yet neuertheles straunge wemen caused him to synne? And shall we then obey vn to you, to do all this great euyll, to halte before our God, and mary straunge wyues? 3.Reg.iii.b

And one of the children of Jotada the son of Eliasib the hyghe preast, hadde made a contract with Sanaballat the Horonite: but I chaced him frome me. O my God, thinke thou vpon them that defyle preasthode, and ꝑ lawe of the preasthode and of the Leuites. Thus clensed I them frome all suche as were straungers, and appointed the courses of the preastes and Leuites, euery one to his office, and to offre the wood at tymes appointed, and the firste frutes. Thinke thou vpon me (O my God) for the best.

THE BOKE OF ESTHER.

¶ Kynge Asuerus, whiche is called Artaxerxes maketh a royall feaste, whereunto the quene Vasthi will not come: for whiche cause she is diuorced,

CAPI. I.

A IN the tyme of Asuerus which raygned from Inde vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and seuen and twenty landes, what tyme as he sate on his seate royal in the castel of Susan in the thirde yere of his raygne, he made a feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes, namely vnto the myghty men of Perha and Media, to the capitaynes and rulers of his countreyes, that he myght shewe the noble ryches of his kyngdome, and the glorious worshippe of his power, many dayes longe, euen an hundred and foure score dayes.

And when these dayes were ended, the kynge made a feast vnto all the people that were in the castell of Susan, both vnto great & small, seuen dayes longe in the court of the garden by the kynges palace: where there hanged whyte, red and yelow clothes, fastened with cordes of lynnen and scarlet in siluer ryngs, vpon pylers of Marble stone.

The benches were of gold and siluer made vpon a panement of grene, white, yelow and blacke Marble. And the drinke was caryed in vessels of golde, and there was euer chaunge of vessel. And the kynges wyne was excedyng moche, accordinge to the great powre of the kynge. And no man was appoynted what he shulde drinke: for the kynge had commaunded all the officers of his house, that euery one shulde do as it lyked him. And the quene Vasthi made a feast also for the wemen in the palace of Asuerus. And on the .vij. daye when the kynge was pleasauntly mery of the wyne he commaunded Mehuman, Baztha, Harbona, Bagatha, Abagatha, Zathar and Carcas the .vij. chamberlaynes, that dyd seruice in the presence of kynge Asuerus, to fetche the quene Vasthi with the crowne regal, that he myght shew the people and princes her fairnesse: for she was bewtyfull. But the quene Vasthi wolde not come at the kynges worde by his chamberlaynes. Then was the kynge verye wrothe, and his indignacion kyndled in him, and he spake to the wyse men that had vnder standinge in the ordinaunces of the lande, for the kynges matters must be handled before al suche as haue knowledge of the lawe and iugement: and the next vnto him were, Carsena, Sethar, Admatha, Tharsis, Mares, Marsena and Mamucan, the seuen princes of the Persians, and Medes, whiche sawe the kynges face, and were wont to sit first next him, What lawe shulde be executed vpon the quene Vasthi, because she dyd not accordinge to the worde of the kynge by his chamberlaynes.

Then sayde Mamucan before the kynge and the princes: the quene Vasthi hath not onely hurt the kynge, but also all the princes and al the people in all the prouinces of kynge Asuerus, for this dede of the quene shall come abrode vnto all wemen, so that they shall despyse their husbandes before their eyen, and shall saye, kynge Asuerus commaunded Vasthi the quene to come before him, but she wolde not. And by this example shal all the princes wyues of Perhe and Media set at naught the commaundement of their husbandes, when they here of this dede of the quene, thus shall there ryse despyte inough and wrath ynought. If it please the kynge, let there go forth a Proclamacion from him, and let it be written accordinge to the lawe of the Persians and Medians (and not to be transgressed) that Vasthi come no more before kynge Asuerus, and let the kynge gyue the kyngdome vnto another that is better then she.

And that this writynge of the kynge whiche shalbe made, be published throwe out all his empyre which is great, that all wyues maye haue their husbandes in honoure, both great & smal. This pleased the kynge & the princes, & the kynge dyd accordyng to the word of Mamucan. Then were letters sent forth vnto all the kynges landes, into euery lande accordinge to the writynge therof, and to euery people after their language, that euery man shulde be Lorde and chefe in his owne house. And this caused he to be diuulged amonges all people.

¶ The quene put awaye, certayne goodly yonge damoselles are searched out amonges whome Esther pleaseth the kyng. Mardocheus discloseth to the kynge those that wolde betraye him.

CAP. II.

These thinges done whe the displeasure of kyng Asuere was alayed he thought vpon Vasthi, what she had done, & what was concluded concernynge her. Then sayde the kynges seruātes: Let there be fayre yonge virgins sought for the kynge, & let the kynge appoynt ouerseares in all the landes of his empyre, that they maye dyscynge together al fayre younge virgins vnto the castel of Susan, vnto wemens lodgynge, vnder the hande of Hegai the kynges chamberlayne, that keepeth the wemen, and let him gyue them their appoynted. And loke which damosell pleaseth the kynge, let her be quene in Vasthis stede. This pleased the kyng and he dyd so.

In the castel of Susan there was a Jewe, whose name was Mardocheus, the son of Jair, the son of Semei, the son of Cis, the man of Jemini, which was caryed away from Jerusalem, whan Jechonias the kynge of Jewry was led away, whom Nabuchodonozor kynge of Babylon caryed awaye) & he norysshed Hadasah, otherwyse called Esther, his vncles daughter: for she had neyther father nor mother, & she was a fayre and bewtyfull mayde. And when her father and mother were dead, Mardocheus receyued her, as his owne doughter.

Nowe when the kynges commaundement was publyshed, and accordynge to it many damsels were brought together vnto the castell of Susan vnder the hande of Hegai, Esther was taken also vnto the kinges house vnder the hande of Hegai the keper of the women, and the damsell pleased him, and she founde grace in his syght. And he caused her ointment to be gyuen her, and her gyftes, & gaue her seuen notable gentyl women of the kynges house, and arayed both her & her gentyll women in the best place of the house of the women. But Esther shewed not her people nor her kynred: for Mardocheus had charged her, that she shuld not tell it. And Mardocheus walked euery day before the court of the wemens dwellynge, that he myght know howe Esther dyd, and what shulde become of her. And when the appoynted tyme of euery damsel came that she shulde come to the kynge Asuerus, after that she had bene .xij. monethes in the keepynge of the women (for their purification must haue so moche tyme, namely .vj. monethes with Balme and Myrre, and .vj. monethes with good spices, so were the women dressed) then went there one damsel vnto the kynge, and what so euer she required that must be gyuen her to go with her out of the wemens dwellynge vnto the kynges palace. And when one came in the euenynge, for same went from him on the morowe vnto the seconde house of wemen, vnder the hande of Saazgas the kynges chamberlayne, whiche kept the concubynes. And she must come vnto the kynge nomore, excepte it pleased the kyng and that he called her by name.

Nowe when the tyme came of Esther the daughter of Abihail Mardocheus vncle (who he had receyued as his owne daughter) that she shulde come to the kynge, she desired nothinge but what Hegai the kynges chamberlayne the keper of the women sayde. And Esther founde fauoure in the syght of all them that loked vpon her. So Esther was take vnto kynge Asuerus into the house royall, in the tenth moneth whiche is called Tebeth, in the .vij. yere of his raygne.

And the kynge loued Esther aboue all the wemen, and she founde grace and mercy in his syght before all the virgines: and he set the crowne vpon her head, and made her quene in stede of Vasthi. And the kynge made a great feast vnto all his princes and seruauntes (which feast was because of Esther): & he gaue rest to all the landes, and gaue royal gyftes accordinge to a kynges magnificence.

And whan the virgins were gathered together the seconde tyme, Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate. And as yet had not Esther shewed her kynred and her people, accordinge as Mardocheus had bydden her: for Esther dyd after the worde of Mardocheus, lyke as whe he was her tutoure. At the same tyme whyle Mardocheus sat in the kynges gate, two of the kynges chamberlaynes Bagathan & Thares which kept the dore were wroth, & sought to laye handes on the kynge Asuerus: wherof Mardocheus gat knowledge, and tolde it vn to quene Esther, and Esther certyfyed the kyng therof in Mardocheus name. And when inquysyte was made, it was founde so. And they were both hanged on tree: and it was wryten in the Chronycles, before the kynge.

¶ Haman obtayned of the kynge that all Jewes shulde be put to death because Mardocheus had not gyuen hym worshyp, as other had.

CAPI. III.

After this the kynge promoted Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite, & set him hyghe, and set his seate aboue all the princes that were with him. And all the kynges seruauntes that were in the gate, bowed their knees, and dyd reuerence vnto Haman: for the kynge had so commaunded. But Mardocheus bowed not the knee, and worshipped him not. Then the kynges seruauntes whiche were in the kynges gate, sayde vnto Mardocheus: why breakest thou the kynges commaundement? And when they spake thus dayly vnto him, and he obeyed them not, they tolde Haman, that they myght se whether Mardocheus matters wolde endure: for he had told them that he was a Jewe. And whe Haman sawe that Mardocheus bowed not the knee vnto him, nor worshipped him, he was full of indignacion and thought it to lytel to laye handes onely on Mardocheus: for they had shewed him the nacion of Mardocheus, but he sought to destroy all the Jewes the nacion of Mardocheus, that were in the hole empyre of Asuerus.

In the .j. moneth (that is the moneth Nisan) in the .xij. yere of kyng Asuerus, they cast Pur (that is a lot) before Haman, on what daye and what moneth this shulde be done: and there came out the .xij. moneth that is the moneth Adar. And Haman sayde vnto kynge Asuerus: There is a people scattered abrode & dispersed from them selues amonge all people in the landes of thyne empire, & their law is contrary vnto all people, and they do not after the kynges lawes, neyther is it the kynges profyte to suffer them after this manner. If it please the kyng, let him write, that they be destroyed, and so will I weye downe ten thousande talentes of siluer, vnder the handes of the workmen, to be brought into the kynges chamber. Then toke the kynge his ryng from his hande, and gaue it vnto Haman the sonne of Amadatha the Agagite the Jewes enemy. And the kynge sayde vnto Haman: Let the siluer be gyuen the, and that people also, to do with all what pleaseth the.

Then were the kynges scribes called on the xiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, and there was written (accordyng as Haman commaunded) vnto the kynges princes and to the capteynes euery where in the landes, and to the rulers of euery people in the countreyes on euery syde, accordinge to the writynge of euery nation, & after their language in the name of kynge Asuerus, and sealed with the kynges ryng. And the writynges were sent by purseuauntes into all the kynges landes, to rote out: to kyl

& to destroy al Jewes, both yong & olde, chyldren and women in one daye, that is to wite vpon the thirteneth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar and to spoyle their goodes.

This was the summe of the letters, that there shulde be a commaundement gyuen in all landes, to be publysshed vnto all people, that they shulde be readye against the same daye. And the pursuauntes went in all the haste accordynge to the kynges commaundement. And in the castell of Susan was & commaundment dryuen. And the kynge and Haman sate and dranke. But the cytie of Susan was disquieted.

CAPI. IIII.

A Whē Mardocheus perceyued all that was done, he rent his clothes, & put on sackcloth, and asshes, and went out into & myddes of the cytie, and cried loude and lamētably, and came before the kynges gate: for there might no man entre within the kynges gate, that had sackcloth on. And in all landes and places, as farre as the kynges worde & commaundment extended, there was great lamentation amonge the Jewes and many fasted, wept, mourned, and laye in sackclothes and in asshes. So Esthers damoselles, & her chamberlaynes, came and tolde it her. Then was the quene exceedingly astonyed. And she sent rayment, that Mardocheus shulde put them on, and laye the sackcloth frome hym. But Mardocheus wolde not take them. Then called Esther Hathath one of the kynges chamberlaynes (whiche stode before her) and gaue him a commaundement vnto Mardocheus, & he myght knowe what it were, and wherefore he dyd so. So Hathath went forth to Mardocheus vnto the strete of the cytie, which was before the kynges gate.

And Mardocheus tolde him of all that had happened vnto him, and of the summe of syluer that Haman had promysed to weye down in the kynges chamber because of the Jewes for to destroye them, and he gaue him the copy of the commaundement, that was dryuen at Susan to destroy them, that he might shewe it vnto Esther, and to speke to her and charge her, that she shulde go in to the kynge, & make her prayer and supplication vnto him for her people.

And when Hathath came in, and tolde Esther the wordes of Mardocheus, Esther spake vnto Hathath, and commaunded him to saye vnto Mardocheus: all the kynges seruauntes, and the people in the landes of the kynge knowe, that who so euer commeth within the courte vnto the kynge, whether it be man or woman, which is not called, the commaundement is that the same shall dye immediatly onelesse the kynge holde out the golden scepter vnto him, in token of clemencie that he maye lyue. As for me, I haue not bene called to come in to the kynge now this thirty dayes.

And when Mardocheus was warned of Esthers wordes, Mardocheus bad saye agayne vnto Esther: thinke not to saue thyne owne lyfe, whyle thou art in the kynges house before all Jewes: for yf thou holdest thy peace at this tyme, then shal the Jewes haue helpe & deliuerance oute of an other place, and thou and thy fathers house shalbe destroyed. And who knoweth whether thou art comen to the kyngdome, for this tymes sake? Esther bad, gyue Mardocheus this answere: Go thy waye, and gather togither all the Jewes that are founde at Susan, and fast ye for me, that ye eate not and drinke not in three dayes, neyther daye nor nyght. I and my damoselles will fast lykewyse, and so will I go in vnto the kynge contrary to the commaundement: yf I perysshe, I perysshe. So Mardocheus went his waye, and dyd all that Esther had commaunded him.

¶ Esther entreth in to the kynge and bydeth him and Haman to a feaste. Haman prepareth a gallowe for Mardocheus.

CAPI. V.

ON the thirde day put Esther on her royall apparell, and stode in the court of & kynges palace within, ouer against the kynges lodgynge. And the kynge sate vpon his royal seate in his palace ouer against the gate of the house. And when the kynge sawe Esther the quene standinge in the courte, she founde grace in his sighte. And the kynge helde out & golden scepter in his hande toward Esther. So Esther stept forth, and touched the toppe of the scepter. Then sayd the kynge vnto her: What wilt thou quene Esther? and what requirest thou? aske euen the halfe of the empire, and it shalbe gyuen the. Esther sayde: If it please the kynge, let the kynge and Haman come this daye vnto the banket, that I haue prepared. The kynge sayd: Cause Haman to make haste: that he maye do as Esther hath sayde.

Now when the kynge and Haman came to the banket that Esther had prepared, & kynge sayde vnto Esther after he had largely dronke of the wyne: Esther, what is thy petition? it shalbe gyuen the. And what requirest thou? Yf it be euen the halfe of the empyre, it shalbe done.

Then answered Esther and sayde: my petition and desire is, yf I haue founde grace in the sight of the kynge, and yf it please & kynge to gyue me my petition, and to fulfill my requeste, then let the kynge and Haman come to the banket that I shall prepare for them, and so will I doo to morowe as the kynge hath sayde.

Then went Haman forthe the same day ioyfull and merry in his mynde. And when he sawe Mardocheus in the kynges gate, that he stode not vp and kneled before him, he was full of indignation at Mardocheus. Neuertheles he restrayned him selfe: and when he came home, he sent, and called for his frendes and Zares his wyfe, and tolde them of the glorye of his riches, and the multytude of his children all to gyther, howe the kynge hadde promoted him so greatly, and howe that he was taken aboue the princes and seruauntes of the kynge. Haman sayde moreouer: Yea & Esther the quene let no man come with the kynge vnto the banchet that she had prepared except me, and to morowe am I bidden vnto her also with the kynge. But in all this am I not satisfied as longe as I se Mardocheus the Jewe sittinge at the kynges gate. Then sayd Zares his wyfe and all his frendes vnto him: Let them make a galowes of fyftye cubites hyghe, and to morowe speake thou vnto the kynge, that Mardocheus may be hanged therein, and so thou shalt go merely with the kynge vnto the banket. Haman was well content herewith, and caused a gallowes to be made redy.

¶ The kynge turneth ouer the Chronycles and findeth the good deade of Mardocheus: and then to the confusion of Haman, he commaundeth Mardocheus to be had in honoure.

CAPI. VI.

THe same night could not & kynge slepe, and he commaunded to bringe the Chronicles and histories: whiche when they were redde before the kynge they happened on the place where it was written, how Mardocheus had tolde, that the kynges two chamberlaynes (which kept & thresholdes) sought to laye handes on kynge Asuerus. And & kynge sayde: what worshyp and good haue we done to Mardocheus therfore? Then sayde & kynges seruauntes that ministred vnto him. There was nothinge done for him. And the kyng sayde: Who is in the court? (for Haman was gone into the court without before & kynges house that he might speake vnto the kynge to hange Mardocheus on the tree, that he hadde prepared for him.) And the kynges seruauntes sayde vnto him: beholde, Haman standeth in the court. The kyng sayd: let him come in. And whē Haman came in, & kyng sayd vnto him: what shal be done vnto the man, whō the kynge wolde gladly honour? But Haman thought in his hert: Whome shulde the kyng els be glad to bringe vnto worshyp, but me? And Haman sayde vnto the kynge: Let the man vnto whome the kynge wolde be glad to worshyp, be brought hither, that he maye be araied with the royall garmentes whiche the kynge vseth to weare: and the horse that the kynge ryeth vpon, and that the crowne royall maye be set vpon his heed. And let this rayment and horse be deliuered vnder & hande of one of the kynges princes, that he maye araye the man withall, whō the kynge wolde honour) and carye him vpon the horse through the strete of the cytie, and cause it to be proclaymed before him: thus shal it be done to euery man, whome the kynge wolde fayne honoure.

The kynge sayde: make haste, and take as thou hast sayde, the rayment and the horse: & doo euen so with Mardocheus the Jewe that sitteth before the kynges gate, & let nothinge fayle of all that thou hast spoken. Then toke Haman the rayment and the horse, and araied him, and brought him on horsbacke thorow the strete of the cyte, and proclaymed before him: Euen thus shall it be done vnto euery man whome the kynge is disposed to honoure. And Mardocheus came agayne to the kynges gate, but Haman gat him home in al the haste mourninge with bare head, and tolde Zares his wyfe & all his frendes, euery thing that had happened him. Then sayde his wise men of his counsayle and Zares his wyfe vnto him: If it be Mardocheus of the seed of & Jewes, before whome thou hast begon to fal thou canst do nothinge vnto him, but shalt fall before him. Whyle they were yet talking with him, came the kynges chamberlaynes, & caused Haman to make haste to come vnto the banchet that Esther had prepared.

¶ The quene byddeth the kyng and Haman agayne, and prayeth for her selfe and her people. She accuseth Haman: and he is hanged on the galowes, whiche he had prepared for Mardocheus.

CAPI. VII.

AND when the kynge and Haman came to the banchet that quene Esther hadde prepared, the kynge sayde vnto Esther on the seconde daye at the banchet of wyne: what is thy petitiō quene Esther, that it may be gyuen the? And what requirest thou? Yea aske euen halfe of the empyre, and it shall be done. Esther the quene answered and sayde: If I haue founde grace in thy sight (O kyng) and yf it please the kynge then graunt me my lyfe at my desire and my people for my petitions sake: for we are solde both I and my people to be destroyed, to be slayne and to perysh. And wolde God we were solde to be bondmē and bondwemē, then wolde I holde my tōge so shoulde not the ennemy be so dyghe to the kynges harme. The kyng Asuerus spake and sayde vnto quene Esther: Who is this? Or where is he that darre presume in his mynde to do suche a thinge after that maner? Esther sayde: the ennemy and aduersary is this wycked Haman. Which thing when Haman herd he was exceadingly afrayed before the kynge and the quene. And the kynge arose frome the banchet and from the wyne in his displeasure and went in to the palace garden. And Haman stode vp, and besought quene Esther for his lyfe: for he sawe there was a mischefe prepared for him of the kynge alredy.

And when the kynge came agayne out of & palace garden into the parler where they had eaten, Haman hadde layde him vpon the bed that Esther sat vpon. Then sayde the kynge, will he force the quene also beside me in the house? As sone as that worde went out of the kynges mouth, they couered Hamans face. And Harbonah one of & chamberlaynes that stode before the kynge, sayde. Beholde, there standeth a galowes in Hamans house fyftye cubytes hyghe, which he had made for Mar-

dochæus, that spake good for the kynge. The kynge sayd: hange him thereon. So they hanged Hamã on the galowes that he had made for Mardocheus. So was the kynges wrath appeased.

¶ After the deth of Hamã Mardocheus is promoted: then are sorowfull letters sent vnto the Jewes.

CAPI. VIII.

A The same daye dyd kynge Asuerus geue the house of Haman the Jewes enemye vnto quene Esther. And Mardocheus came before the kyng: for Esther tolde how he belonged vnto her. And the kynge toke the ringe of his hãder, which he had taken frõ Haman, and gaue it Mardocheus. Moreouer Esther sette Mardocheus ouer the house of Haman. And she spake yet more before the kynge, and fell downe at his fete, & besought hym, that he wolde put awaye the malice of Haman the Agagite, and his moost vngracious deuises that he had ymagined agaynst the Jewes. And the kynge helde out the golden sceptre vnto Esther. Then rose Esther, & stode before the kynge, and sayde: yf it please the kynge, and if I haue founde grace in his syght, and yt be be conuenient for the kynge, and if it be accepted in his syghte then let it be written, that the letters of the deuyce of Haman the sonne of Hamadatha the Agagite, maye be called agayne: whiche letters he wrote, to destroye the Jewes in all the kynges landes. For howe can I se the cuyll that shall happen vnto my people? and howe can I loke vpon the destruction of my kynn?

Then sayde the kinge Asuerus vnto quene Esther, and to Mardocheus the Jewe: Beholde I haue geuen Esther the house of Haman, and hym haue they hanged vpon a tree, because he layed hande vpon the Jewes. C Wryte ye nowe therfore for the Jewes, as it lykely you in the kynges name, and seale it with the kynges ringe (for the writtynges that were written in the kinges name, & sealed with the kynges ringe, durst noman disanull.) Then were the kynges scrybes called at the same tyme in the thyrde moneth, that is the moneth Siuan, on the thre and twentyeth daye.

And it was wrytten accordinge as Mardocheus commaunded vnto the Jewes and to the pynces, to the deputyes and capitaynes in the landes frome Ind vnteyll Ethiopia, namely an hundred and seuen and twentye landes, vnto euerye one accordynge to the writtynge therof, vnto euerye people after their speche, and to the Jewes accordynge to their writtynge and language. And it was wrytten in the kynge Asuerus name and sealed with the kynges ringe. And by twyft messangers, sent he the writtynges, wherin the kynge graunted the Jewes (in what cytyes so euer they were) to gather them selues to gether, and to stande for their lyfe, and for to rote oute, to slaye, and to destroye all the power of the people and lande that wolde trouble them, with childzen and women, and to spoyle their good vpon one day in all the landes of kyng Asuerus namely vpon the xiij. tenth daye of the twelueth moneth, which is the moneth Adar.

The summe of the writtynge was, how there was a commaundement geuen in all landes to be publyshed vnto all the people, & the Jewes shulde be redye agaynst that daye to auenge them selues on their enemyes. And the messaungers that bare the tydinges rode forth with all spede, according to the kynges worde: and the commaundement was geuen in the castell of Susan.

And Mardocheus went out from ‖ kynge in royal apparel of yelowe & whyte & with a great crowne of golde, arayed with a garnet of lynnen and purple, and the cyte of Susan reioyced and was glad: but vnto the Jewes there was come lyght and gladnes ioye & worshyp. And in all landes and cytyes, into what places soeuer the kynges worde and commaundement reached, there was ioye & myrth, prosperite and good dayes amonge the Jewes: in so moche that many of the people in the lande became of the Jewes belefe, for the feare of the Jewes came vpon them.

¶ At commaundement of the kynge, the Jewes their foes to deth. The sonnes of Haman are hanged. The Jewes kepe a feastfull daye in remembraunce of their deliuerye.

CAPI. IX.

IN the twelfte moneth (that is the moneth Adar) the thirteenth daye, which the kynges worde and commaundement had appointed, that the enemyes shulde haue ouerco the Jewes, it turned contrarye wyse that the Jewes shulde subdue their enemyes. The Jewes assembled the Jewes together in their cytyes within all the landes of king Asuerus, to lay hand on suche as wold haue woe them: and no man coude withstande them: for the feare of them was come ouer all people. And all rulers in the landes, and princes and deputyes, and officers of the king promoted the Jewes: for the feare of Mardocheus came vpon them. For Mardocheus was great in ‖ kynges house, and the reporte of him was blased in all landes, how he encreased and grewe.

Thus the Jewes smote all their enemyes with a sore slaughter, and slew and destroyed, and did after their wyll vnto suche as were their aduersaries. And at the castell Suson the Jewes slewe and destroyed fyue hundreth men, and slewe Pharsendatha, Delphon, Phasga, Phoratha, Adalia, Aridatha, Parmasta, Arisai, Aridai, Vaizatha, the ten sonnes of Haman, the sonne of Amadathathe Agagite enemye of the Jewes: but on his goodes they wolde take no botyes. At the same tyme was the king certified of the nombre of them that were slayne at the castell Susan. And the kynge sayde vnto quene Esther: The Jewes haue slayne and destroyed fyue hundreth men at the castell of Susan, and the ten sonnes of Haman: What shall they we in the other landes of the kynge? What is thy requeste, that it maye be graunted the? and what requyrest thou more to be done? Esther sayde: If it please the kynge, let hym suffre the Jewes to worke also to do accordynge vnto this dayes commaundement, that they hange Hamans ten sonnes vpon the tre. And the kynge charged to do so, and the commaundement was declared at Susan, and Hamans ten sonnes were hanged. And the Jewes gathered them selues to gether at Susan, vpon the fourteenth daye of the moneth Adar, & slewe thre hundreth men at Susan, but they goodes they wolde not spoyle.

Moreouer the other Jewes in the kynges landes, dyd for their lyues, and gat rest from their enemyes: and slew of their enemyes lxxv. thousande, how be it they layd no hãdes on their goodes. This was done on the xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, and on the xiiij. daye of the same moneth rested they, whiche daye they ordeyned to be a daye of feastinge & gladnes. But the Jewes at Susan were come together both on the xiij. daye and on the xiiij. and on the xv. daye they rested, and the same daye ordeyned they to be a daye of feastinge & gladnes. Therfore the Jewes that dwelt in the villages and vnwalled townes, ordeyned the xiij. daye of the moneth Adar, to be a day of feastinge and gladnes, and one sent gyftes vnto another.

And Mardocheus wrote all these actes, and sent the writtynges vnto all the Jewes that were in al the landes of kynge Asuerus, both nyghe and farre, that they shulde precisely kepe and holde the, xiiij. and xv. daye of the moneth Adar, as the dayes wherin the Jewes came to reste frome their enemyes, and as a moneth wherein their payne was tourned to ioye, and their sorowe into prosperite: & they shulde obserue the same as dayes of welthe & gladnes, and one to sende gyftes vnto another, and to distribute vnto the poor.

And the Jewes receyued al that they hadde begonne to do, and that Mardocheus had wryte vnto them: how that Haman the son of Hamadatha enemye to all the Jewes, had deuised to destroye all the Jewes, & caused to cast pur (that is Lot) for to put them in feare, & to bringe them to naught: and howe Esther came and spake to the kynge, that thorowe letters his wycked deuyce, whiche he ymagyned against the Jewes, myght be turned vpõ his owne heed, & how he and his sonnes were hanged on the tree. For which cause they called this daye Phurim after the name of Pur accordinge to all the wordes of this writtynge: and what they them selues had sene, & what had happened vnto them. Phurim

And the Jewes set it vp, and toke it vpon them and their sede, and vpon all suche as ioyned them selues vnto them, that they wolde not misse to kepe these two dayes yerely, accordinge as they were written and appointed, how these dayes are not to be forgotten, but to be kept of euerye childe amonge al kynredes in all landes and cytyes. These are the dayes of Phurim ‖ is to saye of lottes, which are not to be ouerslipt among the Jewes, and the memorialll of them ought not to perysshe frome their sede. &

And quene Esther the doughter of Abihail and Mardocheus the Jewe wrote with all authorite, to confirme this seconde writtinge of Phurim, and sent the letters vnto all the Jewes in the. c. and xxvij. landes of the empire of Asuerus, with frendly and faithfull wordes to confirme these dayes of Phurim, in their tyme appointed, accordinge as Mardocheus ‖ Jewe and Esther the quene had ordeyned in that behalfe: lyke as they vpon their soule & vpon their sede had confirmed the actes of the * fastinges and of her complaynte. And Esther commaunded to stablyshe these actes of this Phurim, and to wryte them in a boke. Esther xiiij.

CAPI. X.

AND the kyng Asuerus layd tribute vpõ the lande, and vpon the Iles of the see. But as touchinge all the actes of his power and auctorite, and the great worshyp of Mardocheus, whiche the kynge gaue him, beholde, it is written in the Cronycles of ‖ kynges of Media and Persia. For Mardocheus the Jewe was the seconde next vnto kyng Asuerus, and great amonge the Jewes, and accepted amonge the multitude of his brethren, as one that seketh the welthe of his people, and speaketh the best for all his sede.

¶ The ende of the boke of Esther.

THE BOKE OF IOB.

¶ Iob is plagued of God by the losse of his goodes and children.

CAPI. I.

A THe land of Hus, was a man called Iob: a perfect and vpryght man, in the one as feared God, and eschewed euell. This man hadde seuen sonnes, and three daughters. His substaunce was seuen thousand sheepe, iij. thousand camels, fyue hundred yoke of oxen, fyue hundred asses, and a very greate housholde: so that he was one of the myghtyest men amonge all them of the east countrey. And his sonnes went and made feestes: one daye in one house, and an other daye in an other, and sent for their iij. sisters, to eate and drincke with them. Soo when they had passed ouer the tyme of their banketynge rounde about, Iob sent for them, and clensed them agayne, and gat vp early, and offred for euery one a sacrifice. For Iob thought thus: peraduenture my sonnes haue wrought some offence, & haue bin vnthankefull to God in their hertes. And thus dyd Iob euery daye. Now vpō a tyme, when the seruauntes of God came & stode before the Lorde, Satan came also amonge them. And the Lorde sayd vnto Satan: whence commest thou? Satan answered the Lorde, and sayde: I haue compased the lande and walked therow it. Then sayd the Lorde vnto Satan: hast thou not considered my seruaunt Iob, howe that he is a perfecte and vpryght man: suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? Satan answered, and sayde vnto the Lorde: Doth Iob nought? hast thou not preserued him, his house, and all his substaunce on euery syde? hast thou not blessed the workes of his handes? Is not his possession encreased in the lande? But lay thyne hande vpon him a lytle, and touche ones all y he hath, and yf he curse the not to thy face, I warrante. and the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: lo al that he hath, be in thy powre: onlye vpō him selfe se thou laye not thyne hande. Then went Satan forth from the Lorde.

So vpon a certayne daye when his sonnes and daughters were eatinge, and drinkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, there came a messenger vnto Iob, and sayde. While the oxen were plowynge, and the asses goynge in the pasture besyde them, the Sabees came in vnto them, and toke them away: ya they haue slayne the seruauntes with the swerde, & I only am escaped, to tell it.

And whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The fyre of God is fallen from heauen, and hath consumed & burnt vp all thy sheepe and seruauntes: and I only am escaped, to bryng the tydynges. In the meane season whyle he was yet speakynge, there came an other, and sayde: The Caldees made iij. partes, and ranne vpon thy camels, which they haue caryed away, and slayne thy seruauntes with the swerde: and I only am gotten awaye, to bryng tydynges. Whyle he was speakynge, there came yet an other, and sayde: Thy sonnes and daughters were eatynge and drynkynge wyne in their eldest brothers house, and sodenly there came a mighty great wynde out of the South, and smote the iiij. corners of the house: which fell vpon thy children, so that they are dead: and I am gotten awaye alone, to bryng tydynges.

Then Iob stode vp, and rente his clothes, shaued his head, fell downe vpon the ground, worshipped, and sayd: Naked came I out of my mothers wombe, and naked shall I turne thyther agayne. The Lorde gaue, & the Lorde hath taken awaye: now blessed be the name of the Lorde. In all these thinges, dyd Iob not offende, ne murmured folysshely against God.

¶ Iob is plaged with sore byles, and of his wife mocked of his wyfe. Iiij. frendes vysyte him, and haue compassion on hym.

CAPI. II.

IT happened also vpon a tyme, that whē the seruauntes of God came and stode before the Lorde, Satan came amonge them and stode before him. And the Lorde sayde vnto Satan: whence commest thou? Satan answered and sayde: I haue occupyed the lande and walked therow it. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: hast thou not considered my seruaunt Iob, howe that he is an innocent and vertuous man, suche one as feareth God, and eschueth euell, and that there is none lyke him in the lande? But thou mouedest me against him, to punysshe him: yet is it in vayne, for he contynueth still in his godlynesse. And as I sweared the Lorde, sayd: Stretche forth thyne hande and all that euer a man hath, he will geue for his lyfe. But lay thyne hand vpon him, and touche him ones vpon the bone and fleshe, and then thou shalt se he will curse the to thy face. Then sayde the Lorde vnto Satan: lo, he is in thy power, but spare his lyfe. So went Satan forth from the Lorde, and smote Iob with maruelous sore byles, frō the sole of the foote vnto his crowne: so that he sat vpon the dust in the asshes, and scraped of the fylthe of his sores with a potsherde. Then sayde his wife vnto him: Lorde thou continue in thy perfectnes? curse God and dye. But Iob answered her: Thou speakest lyke a folysh woman. Shall we receyue prosperite at the hāde of God, wherefore should we not be readye to suffer aduersite also? In all these thinges dyd not Iob synne with his lyppes. Now when Iobs frendes hearde of all the trouble that happened vnto him, there came thre of euery one from his owne place: Eliphas the Thamanite, Baldad the Suhite, and Zophar the Naamathite.

For they were agreed togyther to come to shewe their compassion vpon hym, and to cōfort hym. So when they lyft vp their eyes a farre of, they knewe hym not. Then they cryed, and wept: then euery one of them rente his clothes, & sprynkled dust vpon their headdes in the ayre. They sat them downe by hym also vpon the grounde seuen dayes and seuen nyghtes. Neyther was there any of them that spake one worde vnto him, for they sawe that his payne was very great.

¶ The wordes of Iob, wherin he declareth that his pacient lyfe is vnsupportable: and the deth of the vngracious wyfe and fortunable.

CAPI. III.

AFter this Iob opened his mouth, and cursed his daye, and sayde: lost be that daye, wherin I was borne: and the nyght in whiche it was sayde, there is a man chyld conceyued. The same daye be turned to darknesse, and not regarded of God aboue, nether be shyned vpon with lyght: but be couered with darknesse, and the shawme of death. Let the dymme cloude fall vpon it, and let it be wrapped in sorowe. Let the darcke storme ouercome that nyght, let it not be reckened amonge the dayes of the yere, ne counted in the monethes. Desprysed be that nyght, and discommended: let the that curse the daye, those I sayde be redy to rayse vp Leuiathan grue some vnto them curse. Let the starres be dymme therow darknesse of it. Let it loke for lyght, but se none, nether the sprynge vp of the morowe: because it shut not vp the wombe that bare me, ne hyd these sorowes from myne eyen.

Alas, why dyed I not in the matrice? why hyd not I perysh, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe? Why set they me vpon their knees? Why gaue they me suck with their brestes? For now I shuld haue lyen still I shuld haue slept, and bene at rest: lyke as the kynges and lordes of the earthe, whiche buylde them selues solytary places: or as the princes that haue great substaunce of golde, & their houses full of syluer. O that I vtterly had no beynge, or were as a thyng borne out of tyme (that is put aside) eyther as younge children, which neuer sawe the lyght. There the wycked wo cease from their tyrānny, there suche as are ouertraboured be at rest: there are fre captyues out fere, whiche haue bene in prison, so that they heare no more the voyce of the oppressour: There are small and great: the bōd man, is free from his master.

Wherfore is the lyght geuen him that is in wretchednes? and lyfe them that haue heuy sowles? Which longe for death, yf it come not: and searche for it more then for treasure and wold be rerejoyce gladde, and reioyce yf they founde their graue. That shulde be hyd from a man whose waye is hyd, whiche God hath kepte backe from hym. For my syghes come before I eate, and my roaringe fall out lyke the rayne water. For the vntage I feared, is come vpon me: and the thynge that I was afeared of, is happened vnto me. Was I not happye? had I not quyetnesse? Was I not in rest? And nowe commeth indignacion vpon me.

¶ Iob is by Eliphas reproued of impacience and iniustice, and of the presumption of his owne righteousnes.

CAPI. IIII.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanyte and sayde vnto hym: If we begynne to commen with the, peraduenture thou wilt be displeased, but who canne withholde hym selfe frome speakynge? Beholde, thou hast bene a teacher of many, and hast comforted the weye handes.

Thy wordes haue set vp those that were fallen, thou hast refreshed the weake knees. But now that the plage is come vpon the, thou shrynkest awaye: now that it hathe touched thy selfe, thou art sayne barred. Where is thy awe, thy stedfastnesse, thy patience, and the perfectnesse of thy wayes? Consyder (I pray the) who euer perysshed beynge an innocent? Or, when were the godly destroyed? As I haue sene them that plowe wyckednesse, and sowe malyce reape the same. With the blast of God dyd they perysshe, and with the breth of his anger consumed they awaye. The roaringe of the Lyon, the voyce of the Lyonesse, and the teeth of the Lyons whelpes are broken. The Lyon perysheth, for lacke of pray, and the Lyons whelpes are scattered abrode.

And vnto me was the worde hyd, & myne eare hath receyued a spreil therof. In the dyf tasties and thoughtes of the visions of the nyghte, when slepe commeth on men: feare came vpon me and drede, and made my bones to shake. And when the wynde passed by before my presence, it made the heares of my fleshe stande vp. He stode there and I knewe not his face, an ymage there was before me, & there was stylnes, so that I herde this voyce. Shall man be more iust than God? Or shall man be purer than his maker? Beholde there is no trust to his seruauntes, and in his aungelles dothe he founde crokednesse. Howe moche more in them that dwell in houses of clay, whose foundacion is but earthe: whiche shal be consumed by the moth. They shal be smytten frome the morowtyde vnto the euentyde: they shall perysshe euerlastyngly, and no man thynke theron. Is not their dignyte taken away with them, they shall dye & that er they be ware.

¶ The end of a fole. The ryghtousnes of God. The Lorde chastneth his, and deliuereth them agayne.

CAPI. V.

CAll me one (is, yf thou canst fynde anye pre loke about the, vpon any of the holy men. As for the folysh man, displeasure kylleth him, and anger slayeth the ignorāunte. I haue sene my selfe, when the folysshe was wyl rooted, that his dwelyge was sodenly destroyed, that his chyldre were with out prosperite or helth: that they were slayne in the dongeon: no mā to helpe them: that his substaūce was taken vp of the hungry: that the wrapped man had spoyled it, and that straūge folke had dronke vp his riches. Is it not the earth that bringeth forthe trauayle, neyther commeth forowe out of the grounde: but it is mans, that is borne vnto mysery, lyke as the byrde to flyghe.

The power of God.

But nowe wyll I speake of the Lorde, & talke of God: whyche doth thynges, that are vnsercheable, and maruelles without nombre: which giueth rayne vpon the earth, and powreth water vpon all thinges: whyche setteth vp them of lowe degre, and sendeth prosperite, to those that are in heuynesse: Whyche destroyeth the thoughtes of the wycked, so þ they are not able to perfourme the thinges þ they take in hande: whych compaseth the wyse in their owne craftynesse, and ouerthroweth the counsell of the wycked. In so moche that they run into darcknesse by rayse daye, and grope about them at the none daye, lyke as in the nyght.

And so he delyuereth the poore frome the swearde, frome the mouth, and frō the hand of the cruel, that the poore maye haue hope, & that the mouthe of the oppressoure maye be stopped.

Beholde, happy is the man, whom God punysheth: therfore, despyse not thou the chastenyng of the almyghty. For though he make a wounde, he gyueth a medicine agayn: though he smyte, his handes maketh hole agayne.

He delyuereth the out of fyre troubles, so þ in the seuenth there can no harme touche the. In the myddest of honger he sauyth the frome death: and when it is warre, from the power of the swerde.

He shall kepe the frome the scourge of the tongue, so that when trouble commeth, thou shalt not nede to feare. In vanotie and derth thou shalte be mery, and shalte not be afrayed of the beastes of the earth: But the stones in the lande shall be confederate with the, & the beastes of the felde shall gyue the peax.

Yea thou shalt know, that thy dwellynge place shalbe in rest: thou shalt beholde thy substaunce, and be no more punyshed for synne. Thou shalt se also, that thy sede shal encrease and that thy progenye shalbe as þ grasse vpon the earth. Thou shalt come to thy graue in a fayre age, lyke as þ corne wheues are brought in to the barne in due season. Loo, this is the thynge that we our selues haue proued by experience. Therfore now that thou hearest it, take better hede to thy selfe.

¶ Iob answereth, that his payne is more greuous then his frute, yet not withstanding he cleaueth vnto God.

CAP. VI

1 Iob answered, and sayde. O that my mysery were weyed, and my punishment layde in the balaunce: for then shuld it be heuyer then the sande. Therfore is it that my that my wordes are so sorowfull.

For the arowes of the almyghty are in me, whose indignation hath dronke vp my spirite, and the terrible feares of God fyghte against me. Doth the wylde asse roare when he hath gresse? Or cryeth the ore, when he hath fodder ynoughe? That which is vnsauery, shall it be eaten without sale, or is there any taste in the whyte of an egge? The thinges þ some tyme I myght not awaye with, are now my meate for very sorow. O that I myght haue my desyre: O that God wolde graunte me þ thinge, that I longe for: That he wolde begyn and smyte me: that he wolde let his hād go, and hewe me downe. Then shulde I haue some comforte: yea I wolde desire him in my payne, that he shulde not spare, for I will not be against the wordes of the holy one.

What power haue I to endure? Or, what is myne ende, that my soule myght be paciēt? Is my strength the strength of stones? Or, is my flesh made of brasse? Is it not so that there is in me no helpe: and that my substaunce is taken frome me? He that is in tribulacion ought to be comforted of his neyghbour: but the feare of the Lorde is cleane away: My owne brethren passe ouer by me as the water broke, that swiftly runneth ouerowe the bankes. But they that feare the hoye frost, the snowe shall fall vpon them.

When their tyme commeth, they shalbe destroyed and perysshe: and when they be set on fire, they shalbe remoued out of their place for the pathes that they go in, are troden by haste after vayne thinges, and shall perysshe. Consyder the pathes of Theman, & the troupes of Saba, wherin they haue put their trust. Confounded are they, that put any confidence in them: for when they came to obteyne the thinges they loked for, they were brought to confusion.

Euen so are ye also come vnto me but now that ye se my mysery, ye are afrayde. Do I desire you, to come hyther? Or, to gyue me any of your substaunce? To deliuer me from the ennemyes hande, or to saue me frome the power of the myghty? Teache me and I will holde my tongue: and yf I were erre, shewe me wherin.

Wherefore blame ye then the wordes, that are well and truely spoken? what of your reproue them? Saynge only that ye are ryll to check mens sayenges, and can spende many wordes in the wynde. Ye fall vpon your fatherlesse, and go about to ouerthrowe your owne frende. Wherfore loke not onely vpon me, but vpon your selues: whether I lye, or no. Turne into your own selues (I pray you) be indifferēt iudges, and consyder myne vnryghteousnesse: whether there be any vnryghteousnesse in my tongue, or payne wordes in my mouth.

¶ Iob sheweth that this life is but a battayle, or warfare.

1 A warfare is the lyfe of man vpon earthe, and his dayes are like the dayes of an hyred seruaunte: For lyke as a bonde seruaunt desyreth the shadowe, and as an hyreling wolde fayne haue an ende of his worke: euen so haue I laboured hole monethes longe (but in vayne) and many a carefull nyght haue I tolde. When I layd me downe to slepe, I sayde: O when shall I aryse? Agayne, I longed fore for the nyghte. Thus am I replete with sorowes, tyll it be darke. My flesshe is clothed with wormes, filthinesse and dust: my skynne is withered and crompled together: my dayes passe ouer more swyftly, then a weauer can weaue oute his webbe: and are gone or I am ware. O remembre, that my lyfe is but a wynde, and that myne eye shall no more se the pleasures therof, and that none other mannes eye shall se me any more. For yf thou takest thyne eyes vpon me, I come to nought, lyke as a cloude is consumed and vanished awaye: euen so he that goeth downe to hell, commeth no more vp, ne turneth again in to his house, neither shall his place knowe him any more.

Therfore I will not spare my mouthe, but will speake in the trouble of my spirite, in the bytternesse of my mynde will I talke. Am I a see or a Whale fysshe, that thou kepest me so in prysō? When I saye: my bed shall comfort me: I shall haue some refreshynge by talkynge by my selfe vpon my couche: Then troublest thou me with dreames, and makest me so afrayde therowe visyons, that my lyfe wysheth rather to be strangled, and my bones to be dead.

I can se no remedye, I shall lyue no more: O spare me then, for my dayes are but vayne. What is man, that thou haste him in suche estymacion, and settest so moche by him? Thou takest diligente care for him, and sodenly doest thou trye him.

Why gyuest thou not me, ne lettest me alone, so longe tyll I swalowe downe my spettle? I haue offended, what shall I do vnto the, O thou preseruer of men? Why haste thou made me to stande in thy waye, and am so heuye a burthen vnto my selfe? Why doest thou not forgyue me my synne? Wherfore takest thou not awaye my wyckednesse? Beholde, nowe muste I slepe in the dust: and yf thou seketh me to morowe in the morynge, I shall be gone.

¶ Iob is reprehended and noted to haue deserued the payne. A description of hypocrysye.

CAPI. VIII.

1 Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: Howe longe wylte thou talke of suche thynges? howe longe shall thy mouth speake so proude wordes? Dothe God peruerte the thynge that is iustfull? Or dothe the almyghty destroy the thyng that is right? When thy sonnes sinned agaynst him, did not he punysshe them for their wyckednesse? Yf thou wouldest nowe resorte vnto God by prayer and make thyne humble prayer to the almyghtye: yf thou wouldest lyue a pure and a godlye lyfe: sholde he not walke vp vnto the rest-wyth, and gyue the, the beautye of ryghteousnesse agayne? In so moche, that wherin so euer thou haddest a lytle atore, thou sholdest nowe haue a greate aboundaunce. Enquyre of them that haue bene before the, searche dylygentlye amonge thy forefathers. (For we are but of yester daye, and we knowe not, that our dayes vpon earthe are but a derke shadowe.) They shall shewe the, they shall tell the, yea they shall gladlye counsell the same. Psal. cxliiij.

Shall a rushe be grene without moysture? maye the grasse growe without water? No, (but or euer it be shot forthe, and or euer it be gathered) it withereth, before any other herbe. Euen so goeth it with all them that forget God, and euen thus also shall the hypocrites hope come to nought. His confidence shall be destroyed, for he trusteth in a spyders webbe. He leaneth him vpon his house, but he shal not stand: he holdeth him fast by it, yet shal he not endure. Ofte tyme a thyng doth flourysshe, and men thynke that it maye abyde the sunne shyning: it shooteth forthe braunches in his garden, it taketh many rootes, in so moche that it is lyke an house of stones. Hypocrysye

But yf it be taken oute of his place, euery man denyeth it, sayenge: I knowe the not: Lo, thus is it with him that reioyseth in his owne doinges: and agayne other growe oute of the earthe.

Beholde, God wyll not caste awaye an vpryghte man, neyther wyll he helpe the vngodlye. Thy mouthe shall he fylle with laughynge, and thy lyppes with gladnesse. They that hate the, shall be confounded, and the dwellynges of the vngodlye shall come to nought.

¶ Iob declareth the benefytes of God, and howe manyfest ryghtoulnes is nothynge.

CAP. IX.

1 Iob answered and sayd: Certes I knowe it is so of a truthe, that a man compared vnto God, can not be iustifyed. Yf he will argue with him, he shall not be able to answere him, one amonge a thousande. He is wyse of herte, and mighty in strength. Who euer prospered, that toke parte agaynste him? He translateth the mountaynes, or euer they be aware, and ouerthroweth them in his wrathe. He remoueth the erth out of her place, and her pylers, be all to shaketh. He commaundeth the sonne, and it ryseth not: he closeth vp the starres, as it were vnder a signet. He him selfe alone spreadeth oute the heauens, and goeth vpon the wawes of the see. He maketh the dayres of heuen, the Ouens, the seuen starres, and the secrete places of the southe. He doth great thinges, suche as are vnsercheable, yea and wonders without nombre.

Yf he came by me, I myghte not loke vpon him: yf he went his waye, I shoulde not perceyue ceyue it. Yf he be hastye to take any thynge awaye, who shall make him restozest agayne? Who shall saye vnto him: what doest thou? He is God, whose wzathe no man can withstande: but the stoudest of al must stoupe vnder him? Howe shoulde I then answere him? oz what wozdes shoulde I fynde out agaynst him? Yea, thoughe I be zyghtous, yet wyll I not gyue him one wozde agayne, but meekly submyt my selfe to my iudge. All be it that I call vpon him, and he heare me, yet am I not sure that he hathe heede my voyce: he shall trouble me so with the tempest, and wounde me out of measure without cause. He shal not let my spirite be in reste, but spllleth me with bitternesse.

Yf men wyll speake of strengthe, he is the stougest of all. Yf men wyll speake of zyghtousnesse, who dare be my recoyse? Yf I wyll iustifye my selfe, my owne mouthe shall condemne me: Yf I wyll put foz the my selfe foz a perfecte man, he shall proue me a wycked doer: Foz that I shoulde be an innocent, my conscience knoweth it not / yea I my selfe am weary of my lyfe.

This one thyng wyll I saye: he destroyeth both the zyghtous and vngodly. And thoughe he slee sodeynly with the scourge, yet laugheth he at the punishment of the innocent. As foz the world, he giueth it ouer in to the power of the wycked, suche as the rulers be, wherof all landes are ful. Is it not so? where is there any but he is suche one?

My dayes haue ben more swift then a pursuant: they are gone sodeynly, and haue sene no good thynge. They are passed awaye, as the shyppes that are good vnder saple, and as the Egle that hasteth to her praye. When I am purposed to forget my complaynynges, to chaunge my countenaunce, and to comfort my selfe: then am I afrayde of all my workes, foz I knowe thou fauourest not an vpright wer. Yf I be then a wicked one, why haue I laboured in vayne? Thoughe I washed my self with snowe water, and made myne handes neuer so clene, yet shoulest thou dyppe me in the myer, and myne owne clothes shoulde detyle me. Foz he that I must geue answere vnto, and with whome I go to lawe, is not a man as I am. Neither is there any daysman to reproue both the partes, oz to laye his hand betwene vs. Let him take his rod away fro me, yea let him make me no more afrayde of him, and then shall I answere him without feare. Foz as longe as I am in suche fearfulnesse, I can make no answere. And why? it greueth my soule to lyue.

¶ Iob is wery of his lyfe, and setteth out his frayltye before God. He desyreth time to repent. A description of dethe.

CAPI. X.

NEuertheleste, nowe wyll I put forth my wordes: I wyll speake out of the bytternesse of my soule, and wyl saye vnto God: Ay doo not condemne me, but shewe me the cause why thou iudgest me on this maner? Thynkest thou it well done to oppresse me, to cast me of (beinge a worke of thy handes) and to mayntayne the counsell of the vngodlye? Hast thou fleshly eyen, oz doest thou loke as man loketh? Are thy dayes as ye dayes of man, and thy yeres as mannes yeres, that thou makest suche inquiry foz my wickednesse, and searchest oute my synne? where as thou knowest I am no wycked person / and that there is no mā able to rescue me out of thyne handes? Thyne handes haue made me, and facyoned me all togyther rounde about, wilt thou then destroye me sodeynly? O remembre (I beseche the) that thou madest me of the moulde of earthe, and shalte bryng me to earthe agayne. Hast thou not mylked me like mylke, and pressed lyke cheese? Thou hast endued me with synnes and flesshe, and ioyned me togyther with bones and sinowes. Thou hast graunted me life, and done me good: and the ouersight hath preserued my spirite.

Though thou hyddest theyse thynges in thyne herte: yet am I sure that thou remembrest them all. Wherfore diddest thou kepe me, whē I synned, and hast not cleansed me fro myne offence? Yf I be wickedly, woe is me therfore: Yf I be zyghtous, yet dare I not lyfte vp my heed: so full am I of confusion, and se myne owne miserie.

Thou huntest me oute, oppressed with vprores, as it were a Lyon, and troublest me beyonde all measure. Thou bryngest fresshe witnesses agaynst me, thy wrathe increaseth vpon me: full many are the plages that I am in. Wherfore hast thou brought me out of my mothers wombe? O that I had perished, and no eye had sene me. Yf they had caried me to my graue, as sone as I was born, then shoulde I be nowe, as thoughe I had neuer ben.

Shall not my shorte lyfe come soone to an ende? O holde the fro me, let me alone, that I maye take my selfe a lytle afore I go thether, whence I shall not retourne. Namely to that lande of darkenesse and shadowe of deathe, yea in to the darke clowdye lande and deadly shadow, where as is no order, but terrible feare continually abydeth.

¶ Iob is vniustly reproued of Sophar. God iust reproueable. He is merciefull to the repentaunt.

CAPI. XI.

THen answered Sophar the Naamathite and said: Shoulde not he that maketh mo wordes be answered? Shoulde he that babbleth moche be commended therin? Shulde men giue eare vnto the onely? Shall no body make the agayne? Wilt thou saye vnto God the thyng that I take in hande is perfect, and I am clene in thy syghte? O that God wolde speake, and open his lyppes agaynst the, that he might shewe the out of his secret wisdome, how manyfolde his lawe is; then shoulest thou knowe that God had forgotten the, by-cause of thy synnes.

Wylte thou fynde oute God with thy reason? wylt thou attayne to the perfectnesse of the almyghtye? He is hygher then heauen, what wylte thou do? Deper then the hell, how wylte thou eyen knowe him? His length exceedeth the lengthe of the earthe, and his breadth the breadth of the see. Thoughe he turne all topynges vp set downe, close them in, oz shut them togyther, who dare checke him therfore?

For it is he that knoweth the vanitie of men: he seeth their wyckednesse also, shoulde he not then consider it? A vayne voyde vaunteth him selfe, and the ionne of man is lyke a wylde asses foole. Yf thou haddest nowe a zyghte herte, and lyftedst vp thyne handes towarde him: yf thou woldest put awaye the wyckednesse whiche thou hast in hande, so that no vngodlynesse dwelte in thy house: then mightest thou lyfte vp thy face without shame, then shouldest thou be sure, and haue no nede to feare.

Then woldest thou forget thy miserie, and thynke no more of it then of the waters that ronne by. Then shoulde thy lyfe be as clere as the noone daye, and sparynge foz the as the morning. Then myghtest thou haue comforte in the hope that thou hast: and slepe quietly when thou arte layed in. Then shouldest thou take thy rest, and no man to make the afrayde, yea many one shulde set mothe by the. But the eyes of the vngodlye shall be consumed, and not escape: their hope shall be mistrey and sorowe of mynde.

CAPI. XII.

SO Iob answered and sayde: Nowe vndoubtedly I se ye are onely men, and shall wyssoom dye with you: But I haue vnderstanding as wel as ye, and am no lesse then ye. Yea who knoweth not these thynges? Thus he calleth vpon God, and whome God heareth, is mocked of his neyghbour: the godlye and gyltles man is laughed to scorne. Godlynesse is set lyght by in the herres of the riche, and is set foz them to stomble vpon. The houses of robbers are in welthe and prosperitie, and they that malicyously medle agaynst God, dwell without care: yea God gyueth al thynges wholy with his hande. Foz aske the catel, and they shall conforme the: the foules of the ayre, and they shall tell the: Speake to the earthe, and it shall shewe the: Oz to the fyshes of the see, and they shall certifye the.

Who is he that knoweth not that the hande of the Lorde made all these? In whose hande is the soule of euery lyuynge thynge, and the breth of all men? Haue not the eares pleasure in hearynge, and the mouthe in tastynge the thyng that it eateth? Among olde personnes there is wysdome, and amonge the aged is vnderstandynge. Yea with God is wysdome and strength, it is he that hathe counsell and vnderstandynge. Yf he breake downe a thyng, who can set it vp agayne? Yf he shutte a thynge, who wyll open it? yf he withholde the waters they dyze vp: Yf he let them go, they destroye the earthe. With him is strengthe and wysdome: he knoweth bothe the disceyuer and him that is disceyued.

He carieth awaye the wyse men, as it were a spoyle and bryngeth the iudges out of their wyttes: he looseth the bandes of kynges, and gyrdeth their loynes with a bande. He leadeth away the preestes in to captiuitie, and turneth the mighty vp set downe. He taketh the trouth out of the mouth, and disappointeth the aged of their wysdome. He powreth out confusion vpon princes, and comforteth them that haue ben oppressed. Loke what lyeth hyd in darknesse, he declareth it openly: and the depe shadowe of deathe bryngeth he to lyghte. He bothe increaseth the people, and destroyeth them: he maketh them to multiplye, and driueth them awaye. He chaungeth the herte of the princes and kynges of the earthe, and disappointeth them: so that they goo wandryng out of the waye, and grope in the darke without lyghte, staggeryng to and fro lyke dronken men.

CAPI. XIII.

LO, all this haue I sene with myne eye, herd with myne eare, and vnderstande it. Loke what ye know, that same I knowe also, neyther am I inferiour vnto you. Neuertheleste I am purposed to talke with the almyghtye, and my delyte is to commen with God. As foz you, ye are workemasters of lies, & vnprofitable physicians all togither. Wolde God ye kepte youre tonge, that ye mygote be taken foz wyse men. Therfore heare my wordes, and ponder the sentence of my lyppes. Wyll ye make answere foz God with lyes, and mayntayne him with disceyte? Wyll ye accepte the person of God, & intreate foz him? Shall that helpe you, when he calleth you to accompte? Thynke ye to begyle him, as a mā is begyled? He shal punyshe you, and reproue you, yf ye wo secretly accepte anye person. Shall he not make you afrayde, when he sheweth him selfe? Shall not his terrybls feare fall vpon you? youre remembraunce shall be lyke dust, and pryde shall be tourned to claye. Holde your tonges nowe, and let me speake, foz there is some thynge come in to my mynde. Wherfore wo I beare my flesshe in my teethe, and my soule in myne handes? Loe, there is neither comforte oz hope foz me, yf he wyll slee me. But yf I vtter & reproue myne owne wayes in his syghte, he is euen the same that maketh me hole: and why? there maye no dissembler come before him. Heare my wordes, and ponder my sayinges with youre eares. Beholde, nowe haue I prepared my iudgement, and knowe that I shall be founde ryghtous. What is be, that wyll goo to lawe with me? For yf I holde my tonge, I shall dye. Neuertheleße graunte me two thynges, and then wyll I not hyde my selfe from the.

D Withdrawe thyne hande from me, and let not the fearefull dreade of the, make me afeayde. And then lende for me to the law, that I maye aunswere for my selfe: or els, let me speake, and gyue thou the aunswere. Howe greate are my mysdedes and synnes? Let me knowe my transgressions and offences. Wherfore hydest thou thy face, and holdest me for thyne enemye? Wylte thou be so cruell and extreme vnto a fyenge leafe, and folow vpon dyse fluddie, that thou layest so harply to my charge, and wylte vtterly vndo me for the synnes of my youthe? Thou hast put my foote in the stockes, thou lokest narowly vnto all my pathes, & markest the steppes of my fete: where I must consume lyke a foule caryon, and as a clothe that is motthe eaten.

¶ Iob discrybeth the lyfe of man, and prophesieth of the resurrection. Hope sustayneth the godly, tyll they haue that they loke for.

CAPI. XIIII.

A MAn that is borne of a woman, hath but a shorte tyme to lyue, and is full of dyuers myseryes. He commeth vp, and falleth awaye lyke a floure. He fleeth as it were a shadowe, and neuer continueth in one state. Dyuinest thou it nowe well doone, to open thyne eyes vpon suche one, and to bringe me before the in iudgemente? Who can make that cleane, that commeth of an vncleane sede? No body. The dayes of man are shorte, the nombre of his monethes are knowen onely vnto the. Thou hast appoynted hym his bounds, he can not goo beyonde them. Goo fromme him, that he maye reste a lyttle: vntyll his day come wherin he lokerly for, lyke as an hyrelynge doothe.

B For a tree be cut downe, there is some hope yet that it wyll sproute and shote forthe the braunches agayne: For thoughe a roote be waxen olde and dead in the grounde, yet when the moyste getteth the sente of water, it wyll budde and bringe forth bowes, lyke as when it was first planted. But man when he is ded, perissheth and consumed awaye, what becommeth of him? The floudes when they be dryed vp, and the ryuers when they be empyre, are filled agayne therowe the flowyng waters of the see: but when man slepeth, he ryseth not agayne, vntyll the heuen perysshe: he shal not wake vp, ne ryse out of his slepe. O that thou wouldest kepe me, and hyde me in the hell, vntil thy wrathe were stylled: and to appoynt me a tyme, wherin thou myghtest remembre me. May a dead man lyue agayne? All the dayes of this my warfare maye, am I lokinge when my chaunging shall come. Yf thou wouldest but call me, I shoulde obeye the: only despise not the worke of thyne owne handes.

D For thou hast nombred all my goinges, yet be not thou extreme vpon my synnes. Thou hast sealed vp myne offences, as it were in a bagge: but be mercyful vnto my wickednesse. The mountaynes fall awaye at the laste, the rockes are remoued out of their place, the waters pearse thorowe the deepe stones by lytle and lytell, the floudes washe awaye the grauell and earthe: Euen so destroyest thou the hope of man. Thou preuaylest agaynste him, so that he passeth awaye: thou chaungest his state, and puttest him frome the. Whether his chyldren come to worshyp or no, he cannot tell: And yf they be men of lowe degree, he knoweth not. Whyle he lyueth, his flesh must haue trauayle: and whyle the soule is in him the must be in sorowe.

¶ Eliphas reproueth Iob because he ascribeth wysdome and puritie to hym selfe. He discryeth the curse that tarieth on the wycked, reckenynge Iob to be one of that nombre.

CAP. XV.

THen answered Eliphas the Themanite, and sayd: Wolde a wyse man answere as the ignoraunt of the wynde, and fyll his belye with the wynde of the East? Thou reprouest with wordes that are nothyng worth, and speakest thynges wherin can be no good. As for shame thou hast set aside, els wolde thou not make so manye wordes before God: but thy wyckednesse teacheth thy mouth, and so thou hast chosen the a craftie tonge. Thyne owne mouthe condemneth the, & not I: yea thyne owne lyppes shape the an answere. Art thou the fyrste man that euer was borne? Or wast thou made before the hylles? Hast thou herd the secrete counsel of God, that al wysdome is to lyele for the? What knowest thou that we knowe not? What vnderstandest thou but we can the same? With vs are olde and aged men, yea suche as haue lyued longer then thy fore fathers.

Thynkest thou it a smalle thynge of the consolacions of God? and are they with the a lyenge worde? why dooth thyne hert make the so proude? Why standest thou so greatly in thyne owne conceyte? Wherfore lokest thyne eyes, that thy mynde is so pulte vp against God, and lettest suche wordes goo out of thy mouth? What is man, that he shulde be clene? what hath he (whiche is borne of a woman) wherby he myght be knowen to be ryghtous? Beholde there is no trust to his sayntes: yea the very heuens are not clene in his sight. How mooche more then an abhominable & vile man, which drynketh wickednesse lyke water? I wil tell the, heare me: I wyl shewe a thing that I knowe, which wise men haue tolde, and hathe not ben hyd frome their fathers: vnto whom only the land was geuen, that no straunger sholde come among them.

The vngodly dispayreth al the dayes of his lyfe, and the nombre of a tyrauntes yeres is vnknowen. A fearefull sounde is euer in his eares, and when it is peace, yet feareth he destruction: He discreth neuer to be delyuered out of darkenesse, the swerde is alway before his eyen. When he goeth forthe to get his lyuynge, he thynketh playnely that the daye of darkenesse is at hande. Horowe and careful cares make him afeayde, and compasse hym rounde about, lyke as it were a kynge with his hoste redye to the battayle. For he hathe stretched out his hande against God, and armed him selfe against the almyghty. He runneth proudly vpō him, and with a fyne necke fyghteth he against him: where as he couereth his face with fatnesse, and maketh his bely well lykynge. Therfore shall his dwellynge be in desolate cities, and in houses, whiche no man inhabiteth, but are become heapes of stones.

He shall not be eyche, neither shall his substaunce continue, nor encrease vpon earthe. He shall neuer come oute of darkenesse, the flame shall drye vp his braunches, with the blaste of the mouth of God shall he be taken away. He wyll neyther applye hym selfe to fayth-fulnesse ne trouthe, so fore is he deceyued with vanite.

He shall perisshe afore his tyme be worne out, and his hande shall not be grene. He shall be plucke of as an vnripe grape from the vine, and shall let his floure fall as the olyue doothe. For the congregation of hypocrites is vnfruitfull, and the fyre shall consume the houses of suche as are greedy to receyue giftes. He conceyueth trauayle, he bereeth mischefe, and his body bringeth forth deceyte.

CAPI. XVI.

IOb answered and sayd: I haue ofte times herde suche thynges. Miserable gyuers of comforte are ye, all the sorte of you. Shall not thy vayne wordes come yet to an ende? Or hast thou yet anye more to saye? I coulde speake as ye doo also. But wolde God that your soule were in my soules steade: then shulde I heape vp wordes agaynste you, and shake my heed at you. I sholde comforte you with my mouth, and releale your payne with the talkynge of my lyppes. But what shall I do? For all my wordes, my sorowe wyll not cease: and thoughe I holde my tonge, yet wyll it not departe fro me. And nowe that I am full of payne, and all that I haue destroyed (whereof my wyttnes beare witnesse) there standeth vp a dissembler to make me answere with lyes to my face. He is angeye at me, he gnasheth me, and gnasheth vpon me with his teth. Myne enemye scoureth vpon me with his eyen.

They haue opened their mouthes wide vpō me, and smytten me vpon the cheke despytefully, they haue eased thē selues thorow myne aduersitie. God hath giuen me ouer to the vngodly, and deliuered me in to the handes of the wicked. I was somtyme in welthe, but sodeynly he hath brought me to nought. He hath taken me by the necke, he hath rent me, and set me as it were a marke for him to shote at: he hath compassed me rounde about with his dartes, he hath wounded my loynes, and not spared. My bowels hath he poured vpon the grounde. He hath gruen me one wounde vpon an other and is fallen vpon me like a giaunt. I haue sowed a sacke clothe vpon my skynne, and lye in my strength in the dust.

My face is swollen with weping, and mine eyes are waxen dymme. Howbe it there is no wyckednesse in my handes, and my prayer is cleane. O erth couer not my bloud, and let my cryinge synde no rowme. For loo, my witnesse is in heauen / and he that knoweth me, is aboue in the heygthe. My frendes laughe me to scorne, but myne eye poureth oute teares vnto God. Thoughe a body myght pleat with God as one man doothe with an other, yet the nombre of my yeres are come, and I muste goo the waye, from whence I shall not turne agayne.

CAPI. XVII.

MY breth is spent, my dayes are shortened. I am harde at deathes doze. I haue disceyued no man, yet muste myne eye continue in heuinesse. O deliuer me and set me by the: who shall then be able to thruste my handes togither? Thou hast withholden their hertes frome vnderstandynge, therfore shall they not be sette vp on hye. He promyseth his frendes parte of his good, but his owne chyldren spende it. He hathe made me as it were a by worde of the common people. I am his gestynge flocke amonge them. My countenaunce is broke for verye anger, and the membres of my body are become lyke a shadowe. Vertuous men therfore shal wel consider this, and the innocent shall take parte agaynste the hypocrite.

The ryghtous wyll kepe his waye, and he that hathe cleane handes, wyll euer be stronger and stronger. As for you, tourne you and get you hence, for I can not se one wyse man amonge you. My dayes are past, my thoughtes are vanysshed awaye, whiche haue vexed myne herte chaungynge the nyght in to daye, and the lyghte in to darkenesse. Thoughe I tary neuer so mooche, yet y graue is my house, and I muste make my bedde in the darcke. I call to rotruption my father, and the wormes call I my mother and my syster. What helpeth then my longe tarynge? Or who wyll fulfyll the thynge that I loke for? All that I haue shall goo downe in to the pit, and lye with me in the dust.

¶ Baldad reherseth the paynes of the vnsaythfull and wycked.

CAPI. XVIII.

Then

Then answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: when will ye make an end of your wordes? Marcke well and consider, we wyll speake also. Wherfore are we counted as beestes, and reputed so vyle in youre syghte
Why destroyest thou thy selfe with anger?
Shall the earthe be forsaken, or the stones remoued oute of their place bycause of the?
Shall not the syghte of the ungodlye be put out? yea the flame of his fyre shall not burne.
The lyght shall be darke in his dwellyng e, & his candle shall be put oute with him. His presumptuous goynges shall be kepte in, and his owne counsell shall caste him downe. For his fete shall be taken in the net, and he shall walke in the snare. His sote shall be holden in the trap, and the thyrsty shal catche him. The snare is layd for him in the ground, and a pitfall in the waye.

Fearefulnesse shall make him afrayde on every syde, that he shall not knowe, where to get out. Hunger shall be his subsidaunce, & misfortune shall hange vpon him. He shall eate the strengthe of his skynne, the fyrste borne of death shall eate his membres. All his comforte and hope shall be rotted out of his dwelling,
wery fearefulnesse shal bryng him to the king.
Other men shall dwell in his house (whiche nowes none of his) and brymstone shal be scattered vpon his habitation. His rootes shall be dryed vp beneth, and above shal his harueste be cut downe. His remembraunce shall perysshe from the erth, and his name shall not be prays-sed in the streetes: he shal be dryue from ly ght en to darkenesse, and be caste clene oute of the worlde, he shal neyther haue children nor kyns-folkes amonge his people, no, ne any posterite
in his countrey: young and olde shall be astonished at his dede. Suche are now the dwel-lynges of the wicked, and this the place of him that knoweth not God.

¶ Job complayneth his myseryes and grenouse paynes. The Prophesyeth of the generall resurrection.

CAPI. XIX.

Job answered and sayde: howe longe wyll
ye vexe my myndy, and trouble me with wor des? Loo, ten tymes haue ye reproued me:
are ye not ashamed to layene me to scorne? yf
I go wronge, I go wronge to my selfe. But yf ye wyll exhaunce youre selues agaynste me,
and accuse me to be a wycked person bycause
of the shame that is come vpon me: knowe
this then, that it is God which hath handled me so violently, and hath compassed me about with his scourges. Beholde, though I crye, yet violence is done vnto me, I can not be herde:
Though I complayne, there is none to gyue sentence with me. He hathe hedged vp my pathe, I can not get awaye, he hathe set darke-nesse in my gate. He hath spoyled me of myne honoure, and taken the crowne awaye fro
my herd. He hath destroyed me on euerye syde, and I am vndone: my hope hathe he taken awaye from me, as it were a tree plucke vp by the roote. His wrathe is kyndled a-gaynst me, he taketh me as though I were his enemye.

His men of warre came togyther, wyth-made theyr waye ouer me, and besyeged my dwellynge rounde about. He hathe put my brethren farre awaye fro me, and suche as were of myne acquayntaunce, are vtterly straungers vnto me. Myne owne kynsfolkes haue forsaken me, and my frendes haue pu-me out of remembraunce. The seruauntes and maydens of myne owne house, take me for a straunger, and I am become as an alyaunt in their syght.

When I call vpon my seruaunt, he geuyth me no answere: no though I praye him with my mouth. Myne owne wyfe maye not abyde my breth, I am fayne to speake fayre vnto the children of myne owne bodye. Yea the very fooles despyse me, and when I am gone from them, they speake euyll vpon me. All suche as were my moost familiars abhorre me: & they whome I loued beste, are tourned agaynst me. My bone hangeth to my skynne, and my flesshe is away, onely there is left me the lyps about my teth, haue pitye vpon me, haue pi-tye vpon me (O ye my frendes) for the hande of the Lorde hathe touched me. Why do ye persecute me as God, and are not satisfyed with my flesshe?

O that my wordes were wrytten, O that they were put in a booke: would God they were grauen with an yron penne in leed or in stone. For I am sure that my redemer lyueth, and that I shall ryse out of the earthe in the latter daye: that I shall be clothed agayne
with this skynne, and se God in my flesshe.
Yea I my selfe shall beholde him, not with other, but with these same eyes. My reynes are consumed within me, when ye saye: How wo not we persecute him? we haue founde occasion agaynste him. But beware of the swerde, for the swerde wyll be auenged of wyckednesse, and be sure that there is a iudgment.

¶ Sophar sayeth, that the vnhappyfull, the mar-rouse, and the wycked, shall haue a shorte ende.

CAPI. XX.

Then answered Sophar the Naamathite, and sayde: For the same cause do my thoughtes compell me to answere.
And why? my mynde is tossed here and there.
I haue sufficiently heede thy checkynge and reproffe, therfore am I purposed to make ansswere after myne vnderstandynge. Knowest thou not this, namely that fro the begynninge (euer sithens the creation of man vpon erth) the prayse of the vngodly hath ben shor and that the ioye of hypocrites continued but the twynklynge of an eye? Though he be ma-gnified vp to the heuen, so that his heed reacheth vnto the cloudes: yet he perysshyth at the last like dong: in so moche that they whiche haue sene him, saye: Where is he? He behaue himself as a dreame, so that he can no more be found, and passeth awaye as a vision in the night.

nyght. So that the eye whiche sawe him before, getteth now no syght of him, & his place shall knowyth him no more. His children goo
a begging, their handes bryng them to sorowe and beggerye.

From his youth his bones are full of vice,
which shall lye downe with him in the earth.
Were wickednesse is sweete in his mouth, he hydeth it vnder his tonge. That he fauoureth that will he not forsake, but keepeth it close in his throte. The meate that he eateth shall be turned to the poyson of serpentes within his body. The ryches that he deuoureth, shall he perforce agayn, for God shal draw them out of his belly, he shall sucke the serpentes deed, &
the adders tong shall slee him: so that he shal
no more se the ryuers and brookes of hony and butter: But labour shall he, and yet haue no-thynge to eate. Greate trauayle shall he make for ryches, but he shall not enioye them. And why? he hath oppressed the poore, and not helped them: houses hath he spoyled, & not builded them. His belly could neuer be filled, therfore shall he perysshe in his couetyse. He deuored so gredyly that he left not lyng behynde:
therfore his goodes shal not prosperc. Though he had foyson of euerye thynge, yet was he poore, and therfore he was but a wretche on euery syde.

For though the wycked haue neuer so moche to fyll his belye, yet God shall sende
his wrathe vpon him, and cause his harnaye
to renne ouer him: so that yf he flee the yron weapons, he shall be slotte with the stele bowe. The arowe shall be taken forthe, and go out at his backe, and a gly sterynge sweorde comme the gall out of him, feare shall come vpon him. There shall no darckenesse be hyde to hyde him. And vnhyndred fyre shall consume him, and leke what remayneth in his house, it shall be destroyed. The heauen shall declare his wyckednesse, and the earthe shall take parte agaynste him. The substaunce that he hathe in his house, shall be taken awaye
and perisshe, in the daye of the Lordes wrath.
This is the portion that the wicked shal haue
of God, and the heritage that he maye loke for of the Lorde.

¶ Job reproueth the prosperite of the wicked, and declareth by theyr behauour theyr destruction.

CAPI. XXI.

Job answered and said: O heare my wordes
and amende youre selues. Suffre me a litle, &
I may speake also, and then laugh my wor-des to scorne yf ye will. Is it vnto a man that I make this disputation? Which if it were so,
Holde not my spirite be then in sore trouble.
Marke me well, be abashed, & laye youre hand
vpon youre mouth. For when I ponder and cosyder this, I am afrayde, and my flesh is smitten with feare. Wherfore do wycked men liue in healthe and prosperitie come to their olde age, and increase in ryches? Their children dyspayre in their syghte and their generac-tion before their eyes. Their houses are safe from all feare, for the rod of God dothe not smyte them. Their bullocke gendreth, & that not oute of tyme: they cowe calueth, and is not vnfrutefull.

They sende forth their children by flockes,
and their sonnes leape the daunce. They beare with them tabrettes and harpes, and haue instrumentes of musyke at their pleasure. They spende their dayes in welefare: but sodenlye
they goo downe to hell. They saye vnto God:
goo fro me, we despyse not the knowlege of thy wayes. What maner felowe is the almightye, that we shoulde serue him? What profyte shoulde we haue to submyt our selues vnto him? Lo, there is vtterly no goodnesse in them, therfore will not I haue to do with the counsel of the vngodly. How oft shal the candle of the wicked be put out? how oft cometh their destruction vpon them? O what sorowe shall God gyue them for their parte in his wrathe? Yea they shall be as chaffe before the wynde, and as dustie that the storme carryeth awaye.

And though God saue their children from suche sorow, yet wil he so rewarde them selues that they shall knowe it. Their owne destruction and miserye shal they se with their eyes, and drinke of the fearful wrath of the almigh-
tye. For what careth he what becommeth of his household after his deth? whose moneth es passe away swifter then an arow. In as moch then as God hath the hyeth power of al, who can teache him any knowlege? One dieth now when he is mightye, and at his best, riche, and in prosperitie: euen when his bowelles are ful of the fatteste, & his bones full of mary. An other dyeth in sorowe and bytternesse, and neuer had good dayes: Nowe slepe they bothe alyke in the earthe, and the wormes couer them. But I know what ye thynke, yea & what ye ymaggin agaynste me vnryghteously. For ye saye:
where is the Princes palace? Where is the dwellyng of the vngodly? Aske any man that goeth by the waye, and (yf ye will not regarde their tokens and dedes) he shall tell you, that the wicked is kepte vnto the daye of destruc-on, and that the vngodly shalbe brought forth in the daye of wrathe. Who dare reproue him for his wayes to his face? who rewardeth him for the vngracyousnesse that he dothe? Yet shall he be brought to his graue, and watche among the heape of the dead. Then shall it be sayne to be buryed amonge the stones by the brooke lyde. All men muste folowe hym, and there are innumerable gone before him. O howe vayne is the comforte that ye gyue me?
Are not youre answeres cleane contrarye to ryght and trouthe?

¶ Eliphas reproueth Job of wonderfull [illegible]

CAPI. XXII.

Then Eliphas the Themanite gaue answere
and sayd: Can a man be profytable vnto
God? Though he be wyse [illegible]

him selfe for to be lyke hym? What pleasure hath God in that thou art righteous? Or what dothe it profyte him, that thy wayes are perfect? Is he afrayde to reproue the, and to stey forthe with the in to iudgement? Commeth not this for that greate wyckednesse, and for thyne vngracious dedes, whiche are innumerable? Thou hast taken the pledge frome thy brethren for nought, and robbed the naked of their clothynge: To suche as were wery, hast thou gruen no water to drynke, thou haste withdrawen breed from the hungrye: Sholde suche one then as vseth violence, wronge, and oppression (dornge all thynge of partialitie, and haurnge respecte of personnes) dwell in the lande? Thou haste sente wydowes awaye empty, and oppressed the poore fatherlesse.

Therfore arte thou compassed about with snares on euery syde, and sodeynly vexed with feare. Shouldest thou then se no darckenesse? Sholde not the water floude runne ouer the? Nowe bycause that God is hyer then the heuens, and bycause thou seest that the starres are so hye, wylte thou therefore saye: Tushe how shoulde God knowe? Dothe his dompnion reache beyonde the cloudes? Tusche the cloudes couer him that he may not se, for he dwelleth in heuen. Well, thou wylte kepe the olde waye that all wycked men haue gone: bothe olde and younge, whose foundacion is a runnynge water, which saye vnto God: go from vs, and after this maner: Tush, what will the almightye do vnto vs? where as he notwithstandynge, filleth their houses with all good. Whiche meaninge of the vngodly be farre frome me. For with hope shal the godly, s with gladnesse shall the innocente se, that their increase shal be hewen downe, and their posterite consumed with fyre.

Therfore reconcyle the vnto God, and be content, so shal all thynges prosper with the ryght well. Receyue the lawe at his mouthe, and laye vp his wordes in thyne heere. For yf thou wylt tourne to the almyghty, thou shalt stand faste, and all vnrighteousnesse shall be farre from thy dwellynge: he shall geue the an harueste, whiche in plenty and aboundaunce shall excede the duste of the earthe, and the golde of Ophir lyke ryuer stones. Yea the almyghtye his owne selfe shall be thyne harnest, and the heape of thy monere. Then shalte thou haue thy delyte in the almyghtye, and lyfte vp thy face vnto God. Then shalte thou make thy prayer vnto him, and he shall heare the, and thou shalte kepe thy promyses. Then, loke what thou takest in hande, he shall make it to prospere with the, and the lyghte shall shyne in thy wayes. For who so humbleth him selfe, him shall he set vp: and who so loketh meekely, shall be healed. Yf thou be innocent, he shall saue the: and throwe the vnrighteousnesse of thyne handes shalte thou be deliuered.

CAPI. XXIII.

IOb answered and sayde: My sayinge is yet this daye in bytternesse, and my hande hyre amonge my groninges. O that I might se him and fynde him: O that I myght come before his seat, to pleade my cause before him, and to fyll my mouth with argumentes, that I myght knowe what answere he would gyue me: and that I might vnderstande, what he wolde saye vnto me. Wyll he pleade against me with his great power and strength, or wyll he leane him self vtterly vpon me? Oh no, let him not so to with me. But let him gyue me lyke power to go to the lawe, then am I sure to wynne my matter. For though I go before I fynde him not: Yf I come behynde, I can gette no knowlege of him: Yf I goo on the lefte syde to ponder his workes, I can not aceyue vnto therm. Agayne, yf I goo on the ryghte syde, he hydeth hym selfe that I can not se him: but as for my way he knoweth it, and tryeth me as the golde in the fyre.

Neuertheleſſe my fete kepe his path, his byghe strete haue I holden, and not gone out of it: I haue not forsaken the commaundement of his lyppes, but loke what he charged me with his mouthe, that haue I fast in my herte. It is he hym selfe alone, who shall tourne hym backe? He dothe as him lusteth, and hyngeth to passe what he wyll. He rewardeth me no to my desome, and many other thynges mo doth he, as he was by his power. This is the cause that I thynke at his presence, so that when I consider him, I am afrayde of him. For no so mocke as he is God, he maketh my herte softe: and seynge that he is almyghtye, he putteth me in feare. Thus cannot I get out of darckenes, the cloude hathe so couered my face

¶ Iob desyreth both the worlde laws of iustice, and knoweth what euyll belongeth to the wycked.

CAPI. XXIIII.

COnsyderynge then there is no tyme hyd from the almyghtye, how happeneth it that they whiche knowe him, wyll not regarde his dayes? For some there be that remoue other mennes landemarkes: that reserue therm of their cattell, and kepe the same for their owne: that dryue awaye the asse of the fatherlesse: that take the wydowes ox for a pledge: that thruste the poore oute of the waye, and oppresse the symple of the worlde together. Beholde, the wylde asses in the desert goo by tymes, as their maner is, to seke foode for their children. They reape the corne in the felde that is not their owne: and gather the grapes out of his vineyarde, whom they haue oppressed by violence. They are the cause that so many men are naked and bare, hauynge no clothes to couer them: kepe them from cold. So that when the showres in the mountaines haue rayned vpon them, and they be all wet, they haue none other succour, but to kepe them amonge the rockes.

They spoyle the suckynge fatherlesse chyldren, and put the poore in pryson: in so moche that they let them goo naked wythoute clothynge, and yet the hungrye beare the sheues. The poore are fayne to laboure in their oyle mylles, yea and to treade in their wyne presses, and yet to suffre thyrst. The sole cyte cryeth vnto the Lorde with syghynge, the soules of the slayne, make their complaynte: But God disregardeth them not for al this, where as they notwithstandynge are rebellious & disobedient enemies, which like not his light and waye, nether turne againe in to his paths. Timely in the morynge no they aryse to murther the symple and poore, and in the nyght they go a stealynge.

The eye of the vngodly is lyke the aduoutrar; that waiteth for the darcknesse, and sayth thus in him selfe: Tush, there shall no man se me, and so he disguyseth his face. In the nyght season they searche the houses, and hyde them selues in the daye tyme, but wyll not knowe the lyght. For as soone as the daye breaketh, the shadowe of derk commeth vpon them, and they goo in horrible darcknesse. The vngodlye is very swyfte. O that his portion also vpon earthe were swyfter then the runnyng water, which sufferely not the lyppes to beholde the fayre and pleasaunt vineyardes: O that they (for the wickednesse whiche they haue done) were drawen to the hell lyke then snowe melteth at the heate. O that all compassion vpon them were forgotten: that they were clene put oute of mynde, and vtterlye broken downe lyke an vnfruitful tre. For they mayntayne the barayn, & make them that they cannot beare, and vnto wydowes they do no good. They plucke downe the myghtye with their power, and when they them selues are gotten vp, they are neuer without feare, as long as they lyue. and though they myght be safe, yet they wil not receyue it, for their eyes lye vpon their owne wayes. They are exalted for a litle, but shortly are they gone, brought to extreme pouerte, and taken oute of the waye: yea and vtterly plucte of, as the eares of corne. Is it not so? Who wyll then reprouue me as a lyar, and saye that my wordes are no thynge worth?

¶ Baldad proueth that no man is cleane and without sinne before God.

CAPI. XXV.

THen answered Baldad the Suhite, and sayd: Power and feare is with him alone, that maketh peace, in his hyghnesse, whose men of warre are innumerable, and vpon whom his light ariseth ouer al. But how may a man be iustified before God be mighty? Or how can he be borne of a woman? Beholde, the moone shyneth not, in comparison to him, and the sterres are vnpure in his sight. How much more then man that is but corruption: and the sonne of man, whiche is but a wormé?

CAPI. XXVI.

IOb answered and sayde: O howe helpest thou the weyke? what comfort gruest thou vnto him that hath no strength? Where is the counsel that thou sholdest gyue him which hath no wysdome? Wyl thou so shewe thyne excellent syghrousnesse, before whome haste thou spoken those wordes? Who made the brethe to come oute of the mouthe? The gyauntes and wormes that are slayne, and lye vnder the worlde with their companions, yea and all they whiche dwell benethe in the hell are not hyd from him, and the verye destruction selfe can not be kepte oute of his syght. He stretcheth oute the northe ouer the empty, and hangeth the earthe vpon nothynge. He byndeth the water in his cloudes, that they fall not downe together, he holdeth backe his floote, that can not be sene, and spredeth his cloudes before it. The wonders of God.

He hath compassed the waters with certayne bounds, vntyll the daye and nyght come to an ende. The verye pyllers of heauen tremble and quake at his reproffe. He stilleth the see with his power, and thorowe his wysdome hath he set forthe the worlde. With his spirite hathe he garnyshed the heauens, and with his hande hathe he wounded the rebellyous serpente. This is nowe a worde comme of his doynges. But who is able sufficyently to rehearle his workes? Who can perceyue and vnderstande the thonder of his power?

¶ The constancye and perfectnes of Iob, and the parte of the vnrighteous with god.

CAPI. XXVII.

AGayne Iob brent forthe in his communication, sayinge: as truely as God lyueth (whiche hathe taken awaye my power fro me) and the almyghtye, that hathe vexed my myndе: my lyppes shall talke of no vanitie, and my tonge shall speake no deceyte, whyle my brethe is in me, and as long as the wynde (that God hath gruen me) is in my nosthrels.

God forbyde I shoulde geaunte youre cause to be right. As for me, vntyll myne ende come, wyll I neuer goo fro myne innocencye. My righteous dealynge kepe I faste, whiche I wyll not forsake: my herte shall not reproue me of my dayes. Therfore myne enemye shal be found as the vngodly, and he that taketh parte against me as the vnrighteous. What hope hathe the hypocryte, thoughe he haue geate good, and thou the God gruse him ryches after? so herest thou his desire? Wolde God heare him the soner, whan he crieth vnto him in his trou-

nede? Hathe he suche pleasure and delyte in the almyghtye, that he dare alwaye cal vpon God? I will teache you in the name of God, and the thynge that I haue of the almyghtye wyll I not kepe from you. Beholde ye all yourselues in your owne conceyte, as thoughe ye knewe all thynges. Wherefore then do ye go about with suche vayne wordes? sayinge: This is the porcion that the wicked shal haue of God, and the heritage that extremites shall receyue of the almyghtye. If he get many children, they shall perysshe with the swerde, and his posterite shall haue scarcenesse of breed. Loke whom he leaueth behynde hym, they shall dye and be buryed, and no man shall haue pitye of his widowes. Thoughe he haue as moche money as the duste of the earth, and rayment as redye as the claye, he maye well prepare it: but the goodye shall put it vpon him, and the innocent shall deale oute the moneye. His house shall endure as the moth, & as a boothe that the watchman maketh. When the ryche man dyeth, he carryeth nothynge with him: he is gone with the twynckelynge of an eye. Destruction taketh holde vpon hym as a water flooude, and the tempest stealeth him awaye in the nyghte season. A vehement wynde caryeth him hence, and departeth: a storme plucketh him out of his place. It ruisheth in vpon him and spareth him not, he maye not escape from the power therof. Then clap men their handes at him, yea and iest of him when they loke vpon his place.

¶ Iob sheweth that the wisdome of God is vnsearcheable.

CAPI. XXVIII.

A THere are places where siluer is molten, and where gold is tryed: where yron is dygged oute of the grounde, and stones resolued to metall. The darkenesse shall ones come to an ende, he can seke out the ground of al thinges: the stones, the darke, and the horrible shadowe. With the ryuer of water parteth he asunder the straunge people, that knoweth no good neyghbourheed: suche as are eude, vnmanerly, and boystours. He bringeth foode oute of the earth, and that which is vnder, consumeth he with fyre. There is founde a place, whose stones are clene Saphires, and where the clottes of the erth are gold. There is a waye also that the byrdes knowe not, that no vultures eye hathe sene: wherin the proude and hye minded walke not, and where no lyon commeth. There putteth he his hande vpon the stonye rockes, and ouerthroweth the mountaynes. Ryuers flowe oute of the rockes, and loke what is pleasaunt, his eye seeth it. Out of droppes bringeth he great floudes togyther, and the thynge that is hydde, bringeth he to lyghte. How commeth a man then by wysdome? Where is the place that men fynde vnderstandynge? Deeply no man can tell how worthy a thyng she is, neither is she founde in the lande of the lyuynge. The depe sayeth: she is not in me. The see saith: she is not with me. She can not be gotten for the most fyne golde, neither maye the pryce of her be bought with anye moneye. No wedges of golde, of Ophir, no precious Onix stones, no Saphirs maye be compared vnto her. No, neither gold, ne christal, neither swete owches, ne golden plate. There is nothynge so worthy, or so excellet, as is ones to be named vnto her: for perfect wysdome goeth farre beyonde them all. The Topas that commeth out of Inde, maye in no wyse be lykened vnto her, yea no maner apparell, howe pleasaunte and fayre so euer it be.

Whence then commeth wysdome? & where is the place of vnderstandynge? She is hyde from the eyen of all men, yea & from the foules of the ayre. Destruction and deathe saye: we haue herde tell of her with our eares. But God seeth her waye, and knoweth her place. For he beholdeth the endes of the world, and loketh vpon all that is vnder heauen. When he weyed the wyndes, and measured the waters: when he set the rayne in order, and gaue the myghty floudes a lawe, then dyd he se her, then declared he her, prepared her, and knewe her. And vnto man he sayd: Beholde to feare the Lorde is wysdome: and to forsake euyll, is vnderstandynge.

¶ Iob complayneth of the prosperitie of the vngodly, subtelly reprouynge his frendes of iniury, because they sayde that Iob suffred accordynge to his deserue nge.

CAPI. XXIX.

SO Iob proceded and wente forthe in his communication, sayinge: O that I were as I was in the monethes paste, and in the dayes when God preserued me: when his lyght shined vpon my heed: when I went after the same lyghte, and shynynge euen thorowe the darckenesse. As it stode with me, when I was welthye and hadde ynoughe: when God prospered my house: when the almyghtye was with me: when my houshalde folkes stode about me: when my wayes ranne ouer with butter, and when the stonye rockes gaue me ryuers of oyle: when I went thorowe the citye vnto the gate, and when they sette me a chayre in the strete: when the younge men / as soone as they sawe me, hyd them selues, and when the aged arose, and stode vp vnto me: when the princes lefte of their talkynge, and layde their fyngers vpon their mouthe: when the myghtye kepte still their voyce, and when their tonges cleaued to the rofe of their mouthes. When all they that herde me, called me happye: and when all they that sawe me, wyssched me good. For I deliuered the poore when he cryed, and the fatherlesse that wanted helpe. He that shoulde haue ben lost, gaue me a good worde, and the wydowes herte praysed me. And why? I put vpon me ryghteousnesse, whiche couered me as a garmente, and equitie was my crowne. I was an eye vnto the blynde, and a fote to the lame, I was a father vnto the poore, and when I knewe not their causes, I soughte it oute diligently. I brake the crastes of the wycked, and plucked the spoyle oute of their tethe.

Therfore I thoughte verily, that I shoulde haue dyed in my nestle: and that my dayes shoulde haue ben as manye as the sandes of the see. For my roote was spredde oute by the water syde, and the dewe laye vpon my corne. Myne honoure encreased more and more, and my bowe was euer the stronger in my hande. Vnto me men gaue eare, me they regarded, and with silence they tarryed for my counsell. If I hadde spoken, they wolde haue it none other wyse, my wordes were so well taken amonges them. They wayted for me as the earthe dothe for the rayne: and gaped for me, as the grounde dothe to receyue the latter dewe. When I laughed, they knewe well it was not earnest: and this testimonye of my countenaunce fell not to the earth. When I ygreed vnto their waye, I was the chyefe, and sate as a kynge amonge his seruauntes: Or as one that comforteth suche as be in heynesse.

CAPI. XXX.

BVt nowe they that are myne inferyours and yonger then I, haue me in derysyon: yea euen they, whose fathers I would haue thoughte scorne to haue set with the dogges of my cattell. The power and strengthe of their handes myghte do me no good, and as for their age, it is spente and paste awaye without anye profyte. For deepe mysery and honger, they wente aboute in the wildernesse lyke wretches and beggers, plucknge vp herbes amonge the bushes, and the Iunipers roote was their meate. And when they were dryuen forth, men cryed after them, as it had ben after a theefe. Their dwellynge was beside foule brookes, yea in the caues and dennes of the earthe. Vpon the brye beth wente they aboute cryinge, and in the bromebushes they gathered them togyther. They were the children of fooles and vylaynes, which are deed alwaye from the worlde. Now am I their songe, and am become their talkynge worde: they abhorre me, they flee farre from me, and spyne my face with spettle. For the Lorde hathe opened his quyuer, he hathe hurte me, and put my bridle in my mouthe. Vpon my ryghte hande they rose togyther agaynste me, they haue hurte my feete, made awaye to destroye me, and my pathe haue they clene marred. It was easye for them to doo me harme, that they neded no man to helpe them. Dout fell vpon me, as it hadde ben the breakynge in of waters, and came in by heapes to destroye me. Fearefulnesse is tourned agaynst me.

Myne honoure vanysheth awaye more swyftly then wynde, and my prosperitie departeth hence lyke as it were a cloude. Therfore is my myndé poured full of heuynesse, and the dayes of my trouble haue taken holde vpon me. My bones are pearsed thorowe in the nyghte season, and my synowes take no reste. With all their power haue they chaunged my garment, and gyrded me therwith as it were with a cote. I am cuē as it were claye, and am become like asshes and dust. When I crye vnto the, thou doest not heare me: and thoughe I stande before the, yet thou regardest me not. Thou art become myne enemy, and with thy violent hande, thou takest parte agaynst me. In tymes past thou dyddest set me vp on hye, as it were aboue the wynde, but nowe hast thou gyuen me a verye sore fall. Sure I am that thou wylt deliuer me vnto deth: where as a lodgynge is prepared for all thynge lyuynge. How vse not men to do violence vnto them that are destroyed allredye: but where hurte is wonte, there vse they to helpe. Dyd not I wepe in the tyme of trouble? hadde not my soule compassion vpon the poore? Yet neuertheles, where as I loked for good, euyl happened vnto me: and where as I waited for lyghte, there came darckenesse. My bowelles sethe within me, and take no reste, for the dayes of my trouble are come vpō me. Mekely and lowly came I in, yea and without anye displeasure: I stode vp in the congregation and communed with them. But nowe, I am a companion of Dragons, and a felowe of Estriches. My skynne vpon me is tourned to blacke, and my bones are brent with heate: my harpe is tourned to sorow, and my pype to weppynge.

CAPI. XXXI.

I Made a couenaunt with myne eyes, that I wolde not loke vpon a damosell. For howe greate a porcion shall I haue of God from aboue? and what enheritaunce frome the almyghtye on hye? As for the vngodlye, and he that tourneth him selfe to the company of wicked doers, shall not destruction and mysery come vpon him? Dothe not he se my wayes, and tell all my goynges? If I haue cleued vnto vanite, or yf my fete haue runne to disceyte: lette me be weyed in an euen balaunce, that God maye se myne innocencye. If so be that I haue withdrawen my foote out of the right waye: yf myne herte hath folowed myne eye syght, yf I haue stayned or defyled my handes: O then is it reason, that I sowe, and an other eate / yea that my generacion and offsprynge be cleane rooted oute. If myne herte hathe lusted after my neyghbours wyfe, or yf I haue layde wayte at his doore: O then lette my wyfe be an other mannes harlot, and let other lye with her. For this is a wyckednesse and synne that is worthy to be punished, yea a fyre that vtterly shold consume me, and rote oute all my substaunce. Dyd I euer thynke scorne to do ryghte vnto my seruauntes and maydens, when they had any matter agaynst me? Yet ferrye that God wyll syt in iudgement what shall I doo? And for so moche as he wyll nedes vysyt me, what answeare shall I gyue him? Dyd not he that fashioned me in my mothers wombe, made he not him also? were we not bothe shapen alyke in oure mothers bodyes? When the poore despyseth any thyng of me, haue I denyed it them? Haue I caused y wydowe stande waytynge for me in vayne? haue I eaten my portion alone, that the fatherlesse hath had no part with me? for mercy grewe vp with me fro my youth, and compassion fro my mothers wombe. Haue I sene any man perysshe thorow nakednesse and want of clothyng? Or any poore man for lacke of rayment, whose syde thanked me not, because he was warmed with the wolle of my shepe?

Dyd I ever lyfte vp my hande to hurte the fatherlesse? yea in the gate where I sawe my selfe to be in authorite: then let myne arme fall fro my shoulder, and myne arme bolte be broken fro me the ioyntes. For I haue ever feared the vengeaunce and punyshment of God, and knowe it well, that I was not able to beare his burthen. Haue I put my trust in golde? Or haue I sayde to the fyne golde of all: thou arte my confidence? Haue I reioyced because my substaunce was greate, and because my hande gat so moche? Dyd I ever greatly regarde the sylynge of the sonne? or hadde I the goynge downe of the moone in greate reputation? Hathe my herte meddled prively with any deceyte? Or dyd I ever kisse myne owne hande? that were a wyckednesse worthye to be punyshed, for then shoulde I haue denyed the God that is above. Haue I ever reioyced at the hurte of myne enemye? Or was I ever glad that anye harme happened vnto him? Oh no. I never suffered my mouthe to wo suche a synne as to wysshe him evyll. Yet they of myne owne housholde saye: who shall lette vs to haue oure bellye full of his flesshe? I haue not suffered a straunger to lye without, but opened my doores vnto him. Haue I ever done anye wicked dede, where thorowe I shamed my selfe before men: or anye abhomination, that I was fayne to hyde it? For yf I hadde feared anye greate multytude of people: or yf I hadde ben despysed of the symple: O then shoulde I haue bene afrayde. Thus haue I quietly spente my lyfe, and not gone out at the doore. O that I hadde one whiche woulde heare me. Loo, this is my cause. Lette the almyghtye gyue me answere: and let him that is my contrarye partye, sue me with a lybell. Then shall I take it vpon my shoulder, and as a garlande aboute my heed. I shall tolde the nombre of my goinges, and delyuered them vnto him as to a prynce. But yf case be that my lande crye agaynste me, or that the forowes therof make anye complaynte: Yf I haue eaten the frutes therof vnpayed for, yea yf I haue greued anye of the plowemen: then lette thystles growe in stede of my whete, and thornes for my barleye.

¶ Eliu after the other had fynyshed their communycacyon, reproueth them of foolyshnes. Ye muste not a man wryte, but the spirite of God.

CAPI. XXXII.

SO these thre men woulde styrre no more Job, because he helde him selfe a ryghteous man. But Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite of the kynred of Ram, was very sore displeased at Job, that he called him selfe iust before God. And to Jobs three frendes he was angrye also, because they hadde made no reasonable answeare to ouercome him. Nowe tarryed Eliu tyll they hadde ended their communicacion with Job, for why they were elder then he. So when Eliu the sonne of Barachell the Bussite sawe that these thre men were not able to make Job answeare, he was myscontent, so that he gaue answeare him selfe and sayde: Lorde be pytye that I am younge, and ye be men of age, I was afrayde, & durste not shewe forthe my mynde, for I thought thus within my selfe: Ye becommeth elder men to speake, and the aged to teache wysdome. Euery man (no doubte) hathe a mynde, but it is the inspiracion of the almyghtye that geueth vnderstandynge. All men are not wyse, neither dothe euerye aged man vnderstande the thynge that is lawfull. Therfore wyll I speake also (in so farre as I maye be bolde) and wyll shewe you myne opinion. For when I hadde waited tyll ye made an ende of your talkynge, and herde youre wysdome, with arguementes ye made in your communicacion: yea when I hadde diligently pondred what ye sayde: I founde not one of you that made any good argument agaynste Job, as that timely coulde make answeare vnto his wordes: lette Sholde praise your selues to haue founde out wysdome: bycause it is God that hath cast hym oute, and no man. Neuertheles seynge he hathe not spoken vnto me, therfore wyll not I answeare him as ye haue done (in they were so abasshed, that they coulde not make answeare, nor speake one worde) but I shall wyll not speake, standynge styll lyke dombe men, and makynge no answeare: I haue a good hope for my parte to shape him an answeare, and to shewe him my meanyng. For I am full of wordes, and the spirite that is within me, compelleth me.

Beholde, I am as the newe wyne, whiche hath no vente, and bursteth the newe bottels in sunder. Therfore wyl I speake, that I may haue a vente: I wyll open my lyppes, and make answeare. I wyll regarde no mannes persoune, no man wyll I spare. For yf I shall go about to please men, I knowe not how sone my maker woulde take me away.

CAPI. XXXIII.

I Wherfore heare my wordes (O Job) and herken vnto me all that I wyll saye: Beholde, I wyll open my mouthe, and my tonge shall speake oute of my chawes. My herte shall ordre my wordes a ryght, and my lyppes shall talke of pure wysdome. The spirit of God hath made me, and the breth of the almyghty hath gyuen me my life. Yf thou canst, then gyue me answeare: prepare thy selfe & stande before me face to face. Beholde before God am I euē as thou, for I am fashioned and made euen of the same moulde. Therfore thou needest not be afrayde of me, neither nedeth thou to feare, that my authoryte shalbe to hye for the. Nowe haste thou spoken in myne eares, and I haue herd the voyce of thy wordes: I am clene without any faute. I am innocent, and there is no wyckednes in me. But lo, he hath pyked a quarell agaynste me, and taketh me for his enemye: he hath put my fote in the stockes, and loketh narowlye vnto all my pathes. Beholde, vnto these vnreasonable wordes of thyne wyll I make answeare.

Holde God be reproued of man? Why doest thou then stryue agaynst him bycause he geueth thē no accomptes of all his doynges? For when God doth ones commaūde a thing then holdeth man de curious, to serche whether it be right. In dreames and visions of the night season (when slombring commeth vpon men that they fall a slepe in their beddes) he wyssheth them in the eares, he informeth them and teacheth them playnely that it is be white withdraweth man from euill, deliuereth him from pryde, keepeth his soule from destruction, and his lyfe from the swerde. He chastneth him with sycknesse, and bringeth him to his bed: he layeth sore punishment vpon his bones, so y his lyfe may awaye with no breed, and his soule abhorreth to eate anye daynty meat: in so moche that his body is clene consumed awaye, and his bones appere no more. His soule draweth on to destruction, and his lyfe to deth. Now if there be a messenger (one amonge a thousande) sent for to speake vnto man, and to shewe him the ryght waye: then the Lorde is mercyfull vnto him, and sayth: he shall be deliuered, that he fall not downe in destruction. For I am sufficiently reconcyled. Then his flesshe (whiche hath ben in misery & trouble) shal be as it was in his youth. For yf he yelde him selfe vnto God, he is gracyous, and sheweth him his countenaūce ioyfully, and rewardeth man for his ryghtousnesse. Suche a respecte hathe he vnto men. Therfore let a man confesse (and saye) I offended, but he hathe chastened and reformed me: I odd ryghtously, neuertheles he hath not recompensed me therafter. Yea he hath deliuered my soule from destruction, and my lyfe that it seeth the lighte. Lo, thus worketh God alwaye with man, that he keepeth his soule from perysshynge, and letteth him enioye the lyghte of the lyuynge. Marke well (O Job) and heare me: holde thy styll, vntyll I haue spoken. But yf thou hast any thynge to saye, then answeare me, and speake, for thy answere pleaseth me. Yf thou hast nothing, then heare me, & holde thy tonge, so shall I teache the wysdome.

CAP. XXXIIII.

ELiu proceedinge forth in his communication, sayd: heare my wordes (O ye wyse men) herken vnto me, ye that haue vnderstandynge. For lyke as the mouth tasteth the meates, so the eare proueth and discerneth the wordes. As for the iudgement, let vs seke it out amonge oure selues, that we may knowe what is ryght. And why? Job hath sayde: I am ryghteous, but God dothe me wronge. I muste nedes be a lyer, thoughe my cause be ryghte, and vyolently I am plaged where as I made no faute: where is there suche one as Job, that drynketh vp scornefulnesse like water? whiche goeth in the company of wycked doers, and walketh with vngodly men? For he sayth: Thoughe a man be good, yet is he nought before God. Therfore herke vnto me ye that haue vnderstandyng.

Fare be it from God, that he shold medle with wickednes: and fare be it from the almighty, that he shold medle with vnrighteous dealyng: but he rewardeth the workes of man and causeth euery man to fynde accordinge to his wayes. For sure it is that God condemneth no man wrongfully, and the iudgement of the almighty is not vnryghteous. Who ruleth the earthe in his stede? Or whome hathe he set to gouerne the hole worlde? To whome hathe he gyuen his dreed, for to drawe his spirite and breth vnto him? All flesshe shall come together vnto nought, and all men shall turne againe vnto earthe. Yf thou now haue vnderstandyng, heare what I say, and harken to the voyce of my wordes.

Maye he be made whole, that loueth no ryghte? Yf thou were a very innocent man, shouldest thou then be punyshed? For he is cal the same, that knoweth the rebellyous kynges, and sayth to Princes: Vngodlye men are ye. He hath no respecte vnto the personnes of the lordye, and regardeth not the ryche more then poore. For they be all the worke of his handes. In the twinclynge of an eye shall they be slayne: and at mydnyght, when the people and the tyraunnes rage, then shall they perisshe and be taken awaye without handes. And why? his eyes loke vpon the wayes of man, and he seeth all his goynges. There is no darkenesse nor thycke shadowe, that can hyde the wycked doers from him. For no man shal be suffered to go in to iudgement with God.

Many one, yea innumerable dothe he punysshe, and setteth other in their rowmes. For he knoweth their cruell and darke workes, therfore shall they be ouerthrowen. They that were in the stede of Gods, dealte lyke vnbodlye men. Therfore turned they backe trayterously and vnfaythfully from him, and wold not receyue his his wayes. In so moch ꝑ they haue caused ꝑ poore of the pooze to come vnto him, & nowe he heareth the complainte of suche as are in necessitie. Yf he pardoner and graunte pardon, who will iudge or condemne? But yf he hyde away his countenaunce, who will turne it about agayne, whether it be to the people or to any man? For the wickednesse and synne of the people, he maketh an hypocrite to reygne ouer them. For so moche then as I haue begon to talke of God, I will not hynder ꝑ.

Yf I haue gone a mysse, enfourme me: yf I haue wone wronge, I will leaue of. Wilt thou not gyue a reasonable answere? Art thou a-frayed of any thinge, seynge thou begannest first to speake, and not I? For els the men of vnderstandinge and wysdome, that haue here
me, myght saye: What canst thou speake?
As for Job he hath neyther spoken to the pur pose nor wysely. O father, let Job be well tryed, because he hath turned him selfe to the wycked: yea aboue his synnes he hathe blas-phemed, which offence he hath wone curn before vs, in that he stryueth against God with his wordes.

¶ Neyther doth godlynes profyte, or vngodlynes
hurte to God, but to man.

CAPI. XXXV.

Elyu spake more ouer, and sayde: Thinkest thou it ryght that thou sayest: I am ryghteous before God? Seinge thou sayest so, howe well thou knowest it? What thinge hast thou more excellent then I, that am a synner? Therefore will I gyue answere
vnto the and thy fendes: loke vnto the heauen, and beholde it: consyder the cloudes, how they are hygher then thou. Yf thou synnest, what dooest thou vnto him? Yf thyne offences be many, how greeued thou his fauoure?
Yf thou be ryghteous: what gyuest thou him?
Or what receyueth he of thy handes? Or suche an vngodly personne as thou, and of the sonne of man that is righteous as thou pre-tendest to be: there is a great crye and complaynt made by them that are oppressed with violence, yea euery man complayneth vpon ꝑ cruell arme of tyrannes. For suche one neuer sayeth: Where is God that made me? & that shyneth vpon vs, that we myght prayse him in the nyght? Which gyueth vs more vnderstandinge, then he doeth the beastes of the earth, and teacheth vs more then the foules of heauen.

Yf any suche complayne, no man giueth
answere, and that because of the wickednesse of proude tyrannes. But yf a man call vpon God, doeth not he heare hym? Doeth not the almyghty accepte his crye? When thou speakest then, shulde not he pardon the,
yf thou open thy selfe before him, and put thy trust in him? Then doeth he no violence in his wrathe, neyther hath he pleasure in ceremonies and dere inquysitions. Therefore hath Job opened his mouth but in vayne, and folyshly hath he made so many wordes.

¶ Elyu theweth wherefore God punysheth and exercyseth.

CAPI. XXXVI.

Elyu proceeded for the in his talkynge and sayde: Holde the styll a lytle, and I shal shewe the, what I haue yet to speake in Gods behalfe. I will open vnto the yet more of myne vnderstanding, and proue my mak-ynge righteous. True are my wordes, and no lye and the knowledge, wherewith I argue against the, is perfect. Beholde, God casteth not away the myghty, for he him selfe is mighty in power and wysdome.

As for the vngodly, he preserueth them not but helpeth the poore to their right. He witheth not his eyes awaye from the righteous
he setteth vp kynges in their trone, and stableth them, so that they alwaye sit therin.
But yf they be layde in pryson and chayned,
or bounde with the bondes of pouertie: then sheweth he them their workes and dedes and the synnes wherewith they haue bled mani tyolence.

He with punysshyng and nurturing of sin, rounderth them in the eares, warneth them to leaue of from their wyckednesse, and to amende. Yf they now will take hede and obedient, they shall weare out their dayes in prosperitie, and their yeres in pleasure tyr.
But yf they will not obeye, they shall go thr rowe the swearde, and perysshe, or they be ware. As for suche as be fayned, dissembler, and hypocrites, they heape vp wrath for them selues: for they call not vpon him, though they be his prysonners. Thus their soule perisheth in folye, and their lyfe with the condemned. The poore deliuereth he out of his trayntnesse, and comforteth suche as be in ad-uersitie and trouble. Euen so shall he depryue (yf thou wilt be content) frome the bottomlesse pytte that is beneth: and yf then with holde the quyete, he shall fyll thy table with plentye.

Neuertheles thou hast condemned the iud-gement of the vngodly, yea euen suche a iud-gement and sentence shalt thou suffre. For yt shall not thy cause be fylled with mockes, ne pacyfyed with many gyftes. Hath God ordeyned then, that the glorious lyfe of the, and all suche myghty men, shoulde not be put downe? Prolonge not thou the tyme, tyll there come a nyght for the, to set other people in thy stede. But beware that thou turne not aside to wyckednesse and synne, wherto hytherto thou hast chosen more then trouble. Beholde, God is of a myghty hyghe nesse. Beholde, God is of a myghty hyghe powre: Where is suche a gyuer and lawgy uer as he? Who shal reproue him of his wyc kednesse? Who wyll saye vnto hym: thou hast done wrong?

O consyder how great and excellent his wo
rkes be, whome all men loue and praise: yea and wonder at him, and yet they se hym not clere

clere of. Beholde, so great is God, that he passeth our knowledge, neyther are we hable to come to the experience of his yeres. He tur neth the water to small droppes, he dryueth his cloudes togither for to rayne, so that they power downe and drop vpon men. He cā sprede out the cloudes (a couering of his tabernacle)
and cause his lyght to shyne vpon them, and to couer the bottome of the see. By these thin ges gouerneth he his people, and gyueth the aboundance of meate. In the turnyng of an hande he dyuideth the lyght, and at his commaundement it commeth agayne. The tyding hereof sheweth he to his frendes and to the cattell.

¶ Elyu proueth that the wysdome of god is vnsear-chable.

CAP. XXXVII.

1 At this, my hert is astonyed, and moued out of his place. Heare then the sounde of his voyce, and the noyse that goeth out of his mouth. He gouerneth euery thinge vnder the heauen, and his lyght reacheth vnto the ende of the worlde. A roaring voyce followeth him: for his glorious maie-stie vttereth suche a thonder clap, that (though a man heare it) yet maye he not perceyue it af terwarde. It vttereth an horrible sounde, whē God sendeth out his voyce: greate thinges doth he, which we can not comprise. Whē he commaundeth the snowe, it falleth vpon the earth: As soone as he vttereth the rayne a sharpe, forthwith the showers powe their strength and fall downe. He sendeth feare vpon euery man, that they myght knowe their owne workes. The beastes crepe into their dennes, and take their rest. Out of the South, commeth the tempeast, and colde out of the North.

At the breth of God, the frosse commeth,
and the waters are shed abrode. The cloudes bestow their labour in gyuynge moysture, the cloudes powre downe their rayne. He dissetteth himselfe on euery syde, according as it plea seth him to deale oute his workes, that they maye do, what so euer he commaundeth them
vpon the hole worlde: whether it be to pu
nysh any lande, or to doo good vnto them,
that seke hym.

Herken vnto this (O Job) stande styll, and consyder the wondrous workes of God. Arte thou of counsell with God, when he doeth these thinges? When he causeth the lyght to come forthe of his cloudes? Arte thou of his counsell when he spreadeth out the cloudes?
Hast thou the perfect knowledge of his wonders? and howe thy clothes are warme, whē
the lande is styll thorow the South wynde?
Hast thou helped hym to spreade out the hea
uen, which is to loke vpon, as it were cast of cleare metall? Teache vs what we shall saye vnto him, for we are vnmete because of darknesse.

Shal it be tolde him what I saye? Shuld a man speake, or shulde he kepe it backe? For euery man seyth not the lyght, that he keepeth cleare in the cloudes, which he clenseth when he maketh the wynde to blowe. Colde is brought out of the North, but the prayse and honoure of Gods feare commeth frome God him selfe. It is not we that can fynde out the almyghty: for in power, equitie, and righte-ousnesse, he is hyghe than can be expressed.
Sythe then that euery body feareth him, why shoulde not all wyse men also stande in awe of him?

¶ The wonders that the Lorde hath done frome
the begynnynge.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

Then spake the Lorde vnto Job oute of the storme, and sayde: what is he that hydeth his mynde with folysh wordes?
Gyrde vp thy loynes lyke a man, for I will question the, se thou gyue me a direct answer.
Where wast thou, when I layde the founda cions of the earth? Tell playnly yf thou haste vnderstandynge. Who hath measured it, kno west thou? Or, who hath spred the lyne vpō it? Wherevpon stande the pyllers of it? Or, who layd the corner stone? Where wast thou when the morynge starres praysed me together, and all the children of God reioyced triumphantely? Who shut the see with doores, when it brake forth as a childe out of his mo thers wombe? When I made the cloudes to be a couerynge for it, and swadled it with the darcke? When I gaue it my commaunde-ment, makynge doores and barres for it, say-enge: Hytherto shalt thou come, but no further, and here shalte thou laye downe thy prowde and hyghe waues? Hast thou gyuen
the morynge his charge, (as soone as thou wast borne) and shewed the daye spryngе his place, that it might take holde of the corners of the earthe, and that the vngodly myghte be shaken out? Their tokens and weapons, hast thou turned lyke claye, and set them vp agayne as the chaungynge of a garment. Yea thou hast spoyled the vngodly of their lyght, and broken the arme of the prowde. Camest thou euer into the grounde of the see? or hast thou walked in the lowe corners of the depe?
Haue the gates of death bene opened vnto ꝑ
or hast thou sene the doze of euerlastyng treasure? Haste thou also perceyued how broade the earth is? Now yf thou hast knowledge of all, then shew me where lyght dwelleth, and where darckenes is: that thou mayste bringe vs vnto their quarters, yf thou canst tell the waye to their houses.

Knewest thou (when thou wast borne) how olde thou shuldest be? Wentest thou euer in to the threasaures of the snowe? or hast thou sene the secrete places of the hayle, which I haue ordayned against the tyme of trouble, a-gainste the tyme of battayle and warre? By what

what waye ta the lyght parted, and the heate dralt out vpon the earthe? Who diuideth the abomnbaunce of waters into ryuers, or who maketh a waye for the ouermy weather, that it wanereth and mopsturreth the dyre and barren grounde: to make the grasse growe in places where no body dwelleth, and in the wyldernesse where no man remayneth? Who is the father of rayne? Or who hathe begotten the droppes of dewe? Out of whose wombe came the yse? Who hathe gendred the colde nes of the ayre? that the waters are as harde as stones, and ire congeled abaut the depe. Hast thou brought the seuen starres together? Or art thou able to breake the circle of heauen? Canst thou bringe forth the morninge starre or the eueringe starre at conuenient tyme, and conuerte them home agayne? Knowest thou the course of heauen, that thou mayst set vp the ordinaunce thereof vpon the earthe? Commaunde, canste thou lyfte vp thy voyce to the clouds, that they maye powre downe a greate rayne vpon the? Canste thou thondre also that they maye goo their waye, and be obedient vnto the, sayenge: Lo here are we? Who giueth sure wysdome or stedfast vnderstandinge? who nombreth the cloudes in wysdome? Who stylleth the vehement waters of the heauen? Who turneth the clottes to dust, and them to be clottes agayne? Huntest thou the praye frome the Lyon? or fedest thou his whelpes lyenge in their dennes and lurkynge in their couches? Who prouydeth meate for the rauen, when his younge crye vnto God, and flytter aboute for wante of meate?

¶ God speaketh vnto Job, shewynge him by the example of his workes, that his ygnorauntes to vnsearchable.

CAPI. XXXIX

KNowest thou the tyme when the wylde goates bringe forth their younge among the stony rockes? Or sayest thou wayte tohen eye hynde trauayle? reckonest thou the monethes after they conceyue, that thou knowest the tyme of their bearinge? or when they lye downe, when they cast their younge, and tohen they are delyuered of their trauayle and payne? How tyme younge growe vp, and wax great vpon good erbage? Who letteth the wylde asse go lose? or who lowseth ye bondes of the mule? Vnto whom I haue gyuen the wylderneisse to be their house, and the vnfylled lande to be their dwellynge place That they maye gyue no force for the multitude of people in the cyties, neyther eye to the cryenge of the driuer: but take their pasture aboute the mountaynes, and search after euery greene grasse.

Wyll the Vnicorne be so tame as to do the seruice, or to abyde dyll by thy crybe? Canst thou bynde the vnicorne aboute hym with the lowe bonds, to make hym plowe after eyen in the furrowes? Is thyne arme then lyke the arme of God? Maiest thy voyce suche a sounde as his? Then arme thy selfe with thyne owne power, aepsle, decke the in thy holy aray, powre out the indignation of thy wrathe: se that thou cast downe all the proude: looke vpon all suche as be stubbourne, to ouerthrowe: treade all the vngodly vnder thy feete: hyde them downe into the myre, & couer their faces with darcknesse: Then wyll I confesse also, that thyne owne right hande hath saued the.

Beholde, Behemoth (whom I made with the) which eateth haye as an oxe: lo, howe stronge he is in his loynes, and what power he hath in the nauell of his bodye. He spreadeth out his tayle lyke a Cedre tree, all his partes are dyke. His synnes are lyke pypes of braste, his rygge bones are lyke staues of yron. Full wyse God made him, he ordeyned the wyldernesse for him, that the mountaynes shulde grue him grasse, where all the beastes of the felde take their pastyme. He lyeth among the reedes in the fennes, the leaues hyde him with their shadowe, and the wyllowes of the broke couer him rounde aboute. Lo, without any labour may he drynk out of the dole floude, and suppe of Jordan without any trauayle. Who darre laye hand vpon him openly, and vndertake to catche him? Or, who darre put a hooke thorow his nose, and laye a snare for him?

Darrest thou drawe out Leuiathan with an angle, or bynde his tongue with a snare? Canst thou put a ryngue in the nose of him? or bore his chaftes thorow with a naule? Wyll he make many fayre wordes with the, (thinkest thou) or flatter the? Wyll he make a couenaunt with the? Or art thou able to compell him to do vnto the continual seruice? Wylt thou take thy pastyme with him as with a byrde? or grue hem vnto thy maydens, that thy companyons maye bore him in peces, or be parted amonge the marchaunt men? Canst thou fyll the net with his skynne, or the fysshe garnier with his heed? Darrest thou laye hande vpon him? It is better for the to consider what harme myght happen the there thorow, and not to touche him. For when thou remembrest to haue holde vpon him, he shall begyle the: Euery man also that seyth him, shall go backe. And why? there darre none be so bolde, as to rayse him vp.

CAPI. XLI.

WHo is able to stande before me? Or, who hath geuen me auye thinge afore hand, that I am bound to rewarde hym agayne? All thynges that are heauen are myne. I feare him not, whether he threaten or speke fayre. Who vncloseth hym vp, and stryppeth him out of his clothes? Or who taketh hym by the bydle of his brydle? Who openeth the doore of his face? for he hathe horrible teeth rounde aboute. His bodye is couered with scales, as it were with shyldes, lockt in, kepte, and well compact togyther. One is so ioyned to an other, that no ayre can come in: Yea one hangeth so vpon an other, and sticketh so togyther, that they can not be sundered. His neesing is lyke a glystrynge fyre, and his eyes lyke the morninge shyne. Oute of his mouthe go torches and fyre brandes, out of his nostrels there goeth a smoke, lyke as out of an hote seething pot. His breth maketh the coles burne, the flamme goeth out of his mouth. In his necke remayneth strength, and before his face sorow is tourned to gladnesse. The membres of his body are ioyned so strayte one to an other, and cleue so fast togyther, that he can not be moued.

His hert is as harde as a stone, and as fast as the stithye that the hammer man smyteth vpon. When he goeth: the myghtyest of all are afrayed, and the waues heup. If he draw out the sworde, there maye neyther speare, ne brest plate, abyde him. He setteth as moch by a strawe as by yron, and as moche by a rotten stocke as by metall. He flaretth not away for him that bendeth the bowe: and as for synge stones, he careth as moche for stubble as for them. He counteth the hammer no better then a strawe, he laugheth him to scorne & shaketh the speare. He treadeth the golde in the myre lyke the sharpe potsherdes. He maketh hys to lethe and boyle lyke a pot, and stereth the see togyther lyke an oyntement. The waye is lyght after him, the hye is his walkynge place. Vpon earthe is there no power lyke vnto his, for he is so made that he feareth not. If a man wyll consyder all hyghe thinges, this same is a kynge ouer all the children of pryde.

¶ The repentaunce of Job. He prayeth for his frendes, and his goodes are restored double vnto hym.

CAPI. XLII.

THen Job answered the Lord, and sayd: A
I knowe that thou hast power ouer all Esay.xl.di.c
thinges, and that there is no thought Regū.xvi.b.
hyde vnto the. For who can kepe his owne counsell so secrete, but it shall be knowen? Therfore haue I spoken vnwysely, seynge these thinges are so hygh, and passe myne vnderstandynge. O herken then vnto me also, & let me speake: answere vnto the thinge that I will aske the. I haue gruen dylygent eare vnto the, and now I se the with myne eyes. Wherfore I grue myne owne self the blame, and take repentaunce, in the dust and asshes.

Nowe when the Lorde hadde spoken these wordes vnto Job, he sayde vnto Elyphas the B Themanite: I am displeased with the and thy two frendes, for ye haue not spoke the thyng that is right is right before me, lyke as my seruaunt Job hath done. Therfore take seuen oxen and seue rammes, and go to my seruaunt Job, offer vp also for your selues a brentoffringe: and let my seruaunt Job praye for you. Him will I Marche.v.c. accepte, and not deale with you after youre fo-lysshnesse: in that ye haue not spoken ỹ thing whiche is ryghte, lyke as my seruaunte Job hath done.

So Eliphas the Themanite, Baldad the Suhite and Sophar the Naamathite wente
their waye, and dyd accordinge as the Lorde commaunded them. The Lorde also accepted the persoune of Job, and the Lorde tourned him vnto Job, when he prayed for his frende-des: Yea the Lorde gaue Job twyse as moch
as he had afore.

And then came there vnto him all his brethren, all his sisters, with all them that had bene of his acquayntaunce afore, and ate bred with him in his house, wondringe at him, &
comfortynge him ouer all the trouble, that ỹ Lorde hadde brought vpon him. Euery man gaue him a shepe and a Jewell of golde

And the Lorde made Job rycher then he was before: for he hadde fourtene thousande shepe, sixe thousande Camels, a thousande yoke of oxen, and a thousande asses. He children also, seuen sonnes and three doughters. The first called Daye: the seconde Pe-uerte: the thirde All pleasantnes. In all the lande were none founde so fayre, as the doughters of Job, & their father
gaue them enheritaunce amõg their brethren. After this lyued Job fourtye yeres, so that he sawe
his children, and his childrens children
to the fourth generation.
And so he dyed,
beynge
old
and of a perfect age.

PSAL. L

1 BLessed is ỹ man, that goeth not in the counsell
of the vngodly: that aby-deth not in the way of sinners, and sitteth not in ỹ seate of the scornefull.

2 But delyteth in the law of the Lorde, and exercy-
seth him selfe in his lawe,
day and nyght.

3 Suche man is lyke a tree planted by the watryde, that bringeth forth his frute in due season.

His leaues shall not fall of, and what soeuer he doth, shall prospere.

4 Not so with the vngodly, not so but they are lyke dust, which the wynde scattereth away from of the grounde.

5 Therfore the vngodly shall not stande in ỹ iudgement, nyther the sinners in the congregation of the righteous.

6 For the Lorde alloweth the way of the righ teous, but the waye of the vngodly shall pe-rysh.

PSAL. II.

1 WHy w the Heythen grudge? why do the people ymagyne vayne thinges?

The kynges of the earthe stande vp, &
the rulers are come togither, against ỹ Lorde
and against his annointed.

2 Let vs breake their bondes asunder, and cast
awaye their yoke from vs.

3 But he ỹ dwelleth in heauen, shall laughe them to scorne: the Lorde him selfe shal haue
them in derysion.

4 Yet shal he speake vnto them in his wrath,
and vexe them in his sore displeasure.

5 Yet haue I set my kynge vpon my holy hill of Sion.

6 As for me, I will preache the lawe, wher-of the Lorde hath sayde vnto me: Thou arte
my sonne, this daye haue I begotten the.

7 Aske of me, and I shall gyue the the Hey-then for thyne enheritaunce, Yea the vttermoste partes of the worlde for thy possession.

8 Thou shalt rule them with a rod of yron,
and breake them in peces lyke an earthen vessell.

9 Be wyse now therfore, O ye kynges, be warned, ye that are iudges of the earth.

10 Serue the Lord with feare, and reioyse before him with reuerence.

11 Embrace instruction, least the Lorde be an gry, and so ye perysh from the right waye.

12 For his wrath shalbe kyndled shortly: blef
sed are all they that put their trust in him.

PSAL. III.

A Psalme of Dauid when he fledde from the face of Absalom.

1 LOrde, how many are myne aduersaries? A how many are they that ryse against me?

2 Many there be that saye of my soule: there is no helpe for him in God. Selah.

3 But thou, O Lorde, art my defender, my worshyp, and the lyfter vp of my head.

4 I call vpon the Lorde with my voyce, and he heareth me out of his holy hyll. Selah.

5 I layde me downe and slept, but I rose vp agayne, for the Lorde sustayned me.

6 I am not afrayd for thousandes of people, B that compasse me rounde about.

7 Aryse Lorde, and helpe me, O my God:
for thou smytest all myne enemyes vpon the cheke bones, and breakest the teth of the vngodly.

8 Helpe belongeth vnto the Lorde, therfore
let thy blessynge be vpon thy people.

PSAL. IIII.

To the chaunter in Neginoth, a Psalme of Da-
uid.

1 HEare me when I call, O God of my A righteousnes: thou that conforted me in my trouble: haue mercy vpon me, &
herken vnto my prayer.

2 O ye sonnes of men, how longe will ye blas pheme myne honour? why haue ye such pleasure in vanitie, and seke after lyes? Selah.

3 Knowe this, that the Lord dealeth mar-uoulsly with his saynte: and when I cal vpon
the Lorde, he heareth me.

4 Be angry, but synne not: comẽ with your owne hertes vpon your beddes, and remembre your selues. Selah.

5 Offre the sacrifice of righteousnes, and put B
your trust in the Lorde.

6 There be many that saye: who will do vs any good? Lorde lyft vp vpon vs the lyght of thy countenaunce.

7 Thou reioysest myne herte, thoughe they encreace be greate both in corne and wyne.

8 Therfore will I lay me downe in peace, and take my rest: for thou Lorde only settest me in a sure dwellynge.

PSAL. V.

To the chaunter by Nehiloth, a Psalme of Da-
uid.

1 HEare my wordes (O Lord) consydre my A callinge.

2 Marke the voyce of my petition, my kynge and my God, for vnto the, wil I make my prayer.

3 Heare my voyce by tymes (O Lord) for ear ly in the mornynge will I get me vnto the, &
that with diligence.

4 For thou art not the God that hath pleasure in wickednesse, there maye no vngodly persoune dwell with the.

5 Suche as be cruell maye not stande in thy sight

ryght, thou art an ennemye vnto all wycked doers.

Thou destroyest the lyers: the Lord abhorreth the bloudthursty and deceytful.

But I will come into thy house, euen vpon the multitude of thy mercye: and in thy awe will I worshyp towarde thy holy temple.

Lead me (O Lorde) in thy ryghteousnesse because of myne enemyes, and make thy way playne before me.

For there is no kyndfulnesse in their mouthes: they dissemble in their hertes: their throte is an open sepulchre: with their tongues they dissemble.

Punysh them (O God) that they may perysh in their owne ymagination: cast them out because of the multitude of their vngodlynes for they rebell against the.

Agayne, let all them that put their trust in the, reioyse: let them euer be gruynge of thankes, because thou defendest them: that they which loue thy name, may be ioyfull in the.

For thou Lorde gyuest thy blessinge vnto the righteous: and with thy fauorable kyndnes thou defendest him, as with a shylde.

PSAL. VI.

To the chaunter by Neginoth vpon Sheminith, a Psalme of Dauid.

LOrd rebuke me not in thyne anger: chasten me not in thy displeasure.

Haue mercy vpon me (O Lorde) for I am weake: Lorde heale me, for all my bones are vexed.

My soule also is in great trouble, but Lord how longe?

Turne the (Lorde) and deliuer my soule: saue me for thy mercyes sake.

For in death no man remembreth the: Or who will gyue the thankes in the hell?

I am wery of grouynge: euery nyght wash I my bedde, and water my couche with my teares.

My countenaunce is chaunged for very inward griefe, I consume away, I haue so many enemyes.

Awaye from me all ye wycked doers, for the Lorde hathe heard the voyce of my weepynge.

The Lorde hath herde myne humble petitiō the Lorde hath receyued my prayer.

All myne ennemyes shalbe confounded and sore vexed: they shalbe turned backe and put to shame, and that right sone.

PSAL. VII.

Rom.iii.b

Psigaion of Dauid, whiche he sange for the wordes of Chus the sonne of Jemini.

O Lorde my God, in the vo I trust: saue me from all them that pursue, and deliuer me.

Least he hanche vp my soule lyke a Lyon, and teare it in peces, whyle there is none to helpe.

O Lorde my God, yf I haue wrought any suche thinge, yf there be any vnrighteousnes in my handes.

Yf I haue rewarded euyll vnto them that deale frendly with me, or hurt the that without cause are myne ennemyes.

Then let myne enemy persecute my soule, & take me: yea let him treade my lyfe downe in the earth, & laye myne honour in the dust. Selah.

Stande vp (Lorde) in thy wrathe, lyft vp thy self ouer the furyous indignacio of myne ennemyes: aryse vp (for me) in the vengeaūce that thou hast promysed.

That the congregacion of the people may come about the, for their sakes therfore lyft vp thy selfe agayne.

The Lorde is iudge ouer the people: iudge me then (O Lorde) accordinge to my ryghte & ouines and innocency.

Let the wyckednes of the vngodly come to an ende: but mayntayne the iust, thou ryghteous God, that tryest the very hertes and reynes.

My helpe commeth of God, which preserueth them that are true of hert.

God is a ryghteous iudge, and God is mighty & mayntaynge.

Yf men will not turne, he hathe whet his swerde: he hathe bent his bowe and made redy.

He hath prepared him the weapōs of death, and ordeyned his arowes to destroye.

Beholde, he trauayleth with mischefe, he hathe conceyued vnhappynesse, and brought forth a lye.

He hath graue and dygged vp a pyt, but he shall fall him selfe into the pyt that he hathe made.

For his vnhappynes shall come vpon his owne hed, and his wyckednes shal fall vpon his owne pate.

But I will gyue thankes vnto the Lorde for his righteousnes sake, and will prayse the name of the most hyghe Lorde.

PSAL. VIII.

To the chaunter vpon Githith, a Psalme of Dauid.

O Lorde our gouernour: howe wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde? howe excellent is thy glory about the heauens?

Out of the mouth of the very babes & sucklynges thou hast ordeyned prayse, because of thyne ennemyes, that thou myghtest destroye the ennemy and the auenger.

For I consyder thy heauens, euen the worke of thy fingers: the mone and the starres whiche thou hast made.

What is man, that thou art so myndefull of hym? eyther the sonne of man that thou visitest him?

After thou haddest for a season made him lowre then the aungels, thou crownedst him with honour and glory.

Thou

Thou hast set him aboue the workes of thy handes: and thou hast put al thinges in subiection vnder his fete.

All sheepe and oxen, yea the beastes of the felde.

The foules of the ayre, the fysshe of the see, and what so euer walketh thorow the wayes of the see.

O Lorde our gouernour, how wonderfull is thy name in all the worlde?

PSAL. IX.

To the chaunter vpon Muth Laben, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Will geue thankes vnto the (O Lorde) with my hole herte, I will speake of al thy meruelous workes.

I will be glad, and reioyce in the, yea my songes will I make of thy name, O thou most hyghe.

Because thou hast driuen myne enemyes backe, they were discomfyted, and perysshed at thy presence.

For thou hast mayntayned my right & my cause: thou sittest in the throne that art the true iudge.

Thou rebukest the heythen, and destroyest the vngodly, thou puttest out their name for euer.

The enemyes swerdes are come to an ende, thou hast ouerthrowen their cyties, their memorial is perysshed with them.

But the Lorde endureth for euer, he hath prepared his seate vnto iudgement.

He gouerneth the worlde with righteousnes, and ministreth true iudgement vnto the people.

The Lorde is a defence for the poore, a defence in tyme of trouble.

Therfore they that know thy name, put their trust in the: for thou (Lorde) neuer forsakest them, that seke the.

Prayse ye the Lorde, which dwelleth in Sion, shewe the people of his wynges.

And why? he maketh inquisition for their blode, and remembreth them: he forgetteth not the complaynt of the poore.

Haue mercy on me (O Lorde) consyder the trouble that I am in amonge myne ennemyes, thou that lyftest me vp frome the gates of death.

That I maye shew all thy prayses within the gates of the doughter of Sion, and reioyse in thy sauynge health.

But the heythen are suncken downe in the pyt that they made: in the same nette whiche they hyd oute pyuyly, is their owne feete taken.

Thus the Lorde is knowne to execute true iudgement, when the vngodly is trapped in the workes of his owne handes. Selah.

The wycked muste be turned vnto hell, and all the heythen that forget God.

But the poore shall not alwaye be out of remembraunce, the patient abydinge of such as be in trouble shal not perysh for euer.

Aryse Lorde, let no man haue the vpper hande, let the heythen be condemned before the.

O Lorde set a ϕ scolemaister ouer them, that the heythen maye knowe them selues to be but men. Selah.

ϕ Blawe maker.

There is no Tytle in the Hebrue.

Here the Hebrues begyn the tenth Psalme.

WHy art thou gone so farre of, O Lorde? wilt thou hyde thy selfe in tyme of trouble?

Whyle the vngodly hath the ouerhande, the poore must suffre persecution.

O that they were taken in the ymaginacō which they go about.

For the vngodly maketh boost of his owne hertes desire, the couetous blesseth him selfe, and blaspemeth the Lorde.

The vngodly is so proude and full of indignacion, that he careth not: neyther is God before his eyes.

His wayes are alway filthy, thy iudgemēkes are farre out of his sight, he despyeth all his ennemyes.

For he saith in his hert: Tush, I shall neuer be cast downe, there shal no harme happē vnto me.

His mouthe is full of cursinge, fraude and deceyte: vnder his tongue is trauayle and sorow.

He sitteth lurkyng in the gardens, that he maye pryuely murther the innocent, his eyes are set vpon the poore.

He lyeth in awayte secretly, as it were a lyon in his denne.

He lurketh that he maye rauysh the poore, yea to rauysh the poore, when he hathe gotten him in to his net.

Then smyteth he, then oppresseth he & crusheth downe the poore with his auctorite.

For he sayth in his hert: Tush, God hath forgotten, he hath turned awaye his face, so that he will neuer se it.

Aryse O Lorde God, lyft vp thyne hande, and forget not the poore.

Wherfore shoulde the wycked blaspheme God and saye in his hert: tush, he careth not for it.

This thou seyst, for thou consyderest the mysery and sorow.

The poore gyueth him selfe ouer into thy hād and committeth him vnto the, for thou art the helper of the frendlesse.

Breake thou the arme of the vngodly and malicious, searche out the wickednesse which he hath done, that he maye perysh.

The Lorde is kynge for euer, the heythen shall perysh out of his lande.

Lorde, thou hearest the desyrous longynge of the poore: their hert is sure, that thyne eare herkeneth therto.

Helpe the fatherlesse and poore vnto their right, that the vngodly be no more exalted vpon earth.

¶ To the chaunter, of Dauid.

A IN the Lorde put I my trust: how wyll ye then saye to my soule: that she shoulde flie as a byrde vpon your hyll?

For lo, the vngodly haue bent their bowe, and made redye their arowes in the quyuer, that they maye pryuely shote at them, which are true of hert.

The very foundacion haue they cast downe what can the righteous then do with all?

B But the Lorde is in his holy temple, ✠ Lorde his seate is in heauen: hye consydereth it with Ibat.ll his eyen, his eye lyddes beholde the childzen of men.

The Lorde seyth both the righteous & vngodly, but who so delyteth in wickednes, him his soule abhorreth.

Vpon the vngodly he shal rayne snares, fire brymstone, storme and tempest: this rewarde shall they haue to dryncke.

For the Lorde is righteous, and he loueth righteousnes: his countenaunce beholdeth the thinge that is iust.

After the Hebrues.xii. PSAL. XI.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Shemmith, a Psalme of Dauid.

A HElpe Lorde, for there is not one saincte more: very few faythful are there amõg the childzen of men.

Euery man telleth lyes to his neyghboure, they vse but flatter with their lyppes and dissemble in their herte.

O that the Lorde wolde rote out all disceyt full lyppes, & the tongue that speaketh proude thinges.

Which saye: our tong we shulde preuayle we are they that ought to speake, who is lorde ouer vs?

B Now for the troubles sake of the oppressed and because of the complaynte of the poze, I will aryse (sayth the Lorde) I will helpe the and set them at rest.

The wordes of the Lorde are pure wordes: euen as the syluer, which frome earth is tryed and purifyed seuen tymes in the fire.

Kepe them therefore (O Lorde) and preserue vs from this generacion for euer.

For when vanite and prides getteth the ouerhande amonge the childzen of men, al are full of the vngodly.

After the Hebrues.xiii. PSAL. XII.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

A HOw longe wilt thou forget me, Lorde? for euer? how longe wilt thou hyde thy face from me?

How longe shall I seke counsell in my soule? how longe shall I be so vexed in myne herte? howe longe shall myne ennemy tryumphe ouer me?

Consydre, and heare me, O Lorde my God lyghten myne eyes, that I slepe not in death.

Least myne ennemy saye: I haue preuayled B against him: for yf I be cast downe, they that trouble me shall reioyce at it.

But my trust is in thy mercye, and my hert is ioyfull in thy sauinge health.

I will singe of the Lorde, that dealeth so louingly with me.

Ye I will praise the name of the Lorde the hyghest.

PSAL. XIII.

¶ To the chaunter, of Dauid.

THe folysh bodyes saye in their hertes: A there is no God.

They are corrupt, and become abhominable in their wynges, there is not any doth good.

The Lorde loked downe frome heauen, vpon the chyldren of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde vnderstande and seke after God.

But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all togither become vnprofitable: there is none that doth good, no not one.

How can they haue vnderstandinge, that worke myscheefe, eatynge vp my people, as it were bred, and call not vpon the Lorde?

Therfore shall they be brought in great feare for God standeth by the generacion of the righteous.

As for you, ye haue made a mocke at ✠ counsell of the poze, because he putteth his trust in the Lorde.

Oh that the sauynge helthe were gyuen vnto Israel out of Sion.

Oh that the Lorde wolde delyuer his people out of captiuitie.

Then shuld Jacob reioyce, and Israel shuld be right glad.

PSAL. XIIII.

¶ A Psalme of Dauid.

LOrde, who shal dwell in thy tabernacle? A who shall rest vpon thy holy hyll?

Euen he that leadeth an vncorrupt lyfe B that doth the thinge which is right, and that speaketh the truthe from his hert.

He that vseth no disceyt in his tongue: he that doth no euyll to his neyghbour, & slaundreth not his neyghbours.

He that setteth not by the vngodly, but maketh moche of them that feare the Lorde: he that sweareth vnto his neyghbour, and disc poyncteth him not.

He that gyueth not his moneye vpon vsurey, and taketh no rewarde agaynste the innocent.

Who so doth these thinges, shall neuer be remoued.

I haue sayde vnto the Lorde: thou art my God, my goodes are nothinge vnto the.

All my delyte is vpon the sayntes that are in the earth, and vpon suche lyke.

But they that runne after an other, shall haue great trouble.

Their sacrifices of blonde will not I offre, neyther make mencyon of their name in my mouth.

B The Lorde him selfe is my good and my portyon, thou mayntaynest myne enheritaunce.

The lot is fallen vnto me in a fayre ground yea I haue a goodly heritage.

I wyl thanke the Lord for geuyng me warnynge: my reynes also haue chastened me in the nyght season.

Afore hande sawe I God allwayes before me, for he is on my righthande, that I shulde not fal.

Therfore dyd my hert reioyce, and my tonge was glad, my flesche also shall rest in hope.

For thou shalte not leaue my soule in hell, neyther shalt thou suffre thy sayncte to se corruption.

Thou hast shewed me the wayes of lyfe: thou shalt make me full of ioye with thy countenaunce.

At thy right hande there is pleasure & ioye for euermore.

PSAL. XVI.

¶ Prayer of Dauid.

HEare the right (O Lorde) consydre my A complaynte: herken vnto my prayer, ✠ goeth not out of a fayned mouth.

Let my sentence come forth frome thy presence: and loke vpon the thinge that is equall.

Thou hast proued and vysited myne hert in the nyghte season: thou haste tryed me as the fyre: and hast founde no wyckednesse in me: for I vtterly purposed that my mouth shulde not offende.

Because of ✠ wordes of thy lyppes, I haue B kept me frome the workes of men: in ✠ waye of the murtherer.

Didst thou my goynges in thy pathes: that my fote steppes slippe not.

For vnto the I crye: heare me O God: enclyne thyne eares to me: and herken vnto my wordes.

Shewe thy maruelous louynge kyndnesse, thou that sauest them which put their trust in the, frome suche as resist thy right hand.

C Kepe me as the balle of an eye, defende me D vnder the shadow of thy wynges.

Frome the vngodly that trouble me, from myne ennemyes which cõpasse my soule round about.

Which mayntayne their owne welthynesse with oppression, and their mouth speaketh prowde thinges.

They lye in wayte in our way on euery syde turnyng their eyes vnto the grounde.

Lyke a Lyon that is greedy of his pray, and D as it were a Lyons whelpe lurkynge in his denne.

Aryse Lorde, disapoynte him and cast him vnder: delyuer my soule with thy swerde frõ the vngodly.

Frome the men of thy hande (O Lord) frõ the men of the worlde, which haue their portion in this lyfe: whose belyes thou fyllest with thy treasure.

They haue childzen at their desire, and leaue the rest of their substaunce for their babes.

But I will beholde thy presence in righteousnesse: and when thy glorye appeareth, I shall be satisfyed.

PSAL. XVII. After the Hebrues. xviii.

¶ To the chaunter of Dauid seruaunt of the Lord whiche sayde vnto the Lorde the wordes of this songe, on the daye in whiche the Lorde delyuered hym frome the hande of all his enemyes, and frome the hande of Saul, and sayde.

I Wyll loue the (O Lorde) my strength. A

The Lorde is my succour, my refuge, my Sauiour: my God, my helper in whom I trust: my buckler, the horne of my helth, and Heb.ll.e my protection.

I will praise the Lorde, and call vpon him, so shall I be safe from myne ennemyes.

The sorowes of death compassed me, & the brookes of vngodlynes made me afrayed.

The payues of hell came about me, ✠ snares of death toke holde vpon me.

Yet in my trouble I called vpon the Lord, and complayned vnto my God.

So he herde my voyce out of his holy temple, and my complaynte came before him, euen into his eares.

Then the earthe trembled and quaked, the very foundacions of the hylles shoke & were remoued, because he was wroth. B

There went a smoke out of his nostrelles & a consuminge fire out of his mouth, so that coles were kyndled at it.

He bowed the heauens and came downe, & it was darcke vnder his fete.

He rode vpon the Cherubyns and dyd flie: he came flyenge with the wynges of the wynde.

He made darknes his pauylyon rounde about him, with darcke water and thicke cloudes to couer him.

At the brightnes of his presence the cloudes remoued, with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

The Lorde also thondred out of the heauē and the hyegth gaue his thondre with hayle stones and coles of fyre.

He sent out his arowes and scattered them, he caste fore lyghtenynges, and destroyed them.

The springes of waters were sene, and the foundacyons of the rounde worlde were discouered at thy chyding (O Lorde) at the blaste ſtynge and dyeth of thy diſpleaſures.

E He ſent downe frome the heygth to fetche me, and toke me out of great waters.

He delyuered me frome my ſtronge ennemyes, and from my foes which were to migh ty for me.

They preuented me in the tyme of my trou ble, but the Lorde was my defence.

He brought me forth alſo into libertie: and delyuered me, becauſe he had a fauoure vnto me.

The Lorde ſhall rewarde me after my ryght teous dealynge, & accordinge to the clennelle of my handes ſhall he recompence me.

For I haue kept the wayes of the Lord: & haue not behaued my ſelfe wyckedly againſte my God.

I haue an eye vnto all his lawes, and caſte not out his commaundementes frome me.

Vncorupt will I be before him, and wyll eſchewe myne owne wyckednes.

Therfore ſhall the Lorde rewarde me af ter my ryghteous dealynge, and accordyng vn to the clennelle of my handes in his eye ſight.

With the holy thou ſhalt be holy, & with the innocent thou ſhalt be innocent.

With the cleane thou ſhalt be cleane, and with the frowarde thou ſhalt be frowarde.

For thou ſhalt ſaue the poze oppreſſed, and bringe downe the byghe lokes of the proude.

For in the I can diſcomfort an hoſt of men: yea in my God I can leape ouer the wall.

The waye of God is a perfect waye: the wordes of the Lorde are tryed in the fyre: he is a ſhylde of defence, for all them that truſt in him.

For who is God, but the Lorde? Or, who hath any ſtrength, but our God?

It is God that gyrded me with ſtrength, & made my waye vncorupt.

He hath made my fete lyke hyertes fete, & ſet me vp on hyghe.

He teacheth myne handes to fight, and ma keth myne armes to breake euen a bowe of ſteele. 2. Regū xxiii.c

Thou haſt gyuē me the defence of thy helth thy righthande vpholdeth me, and thy louing correction maketh me great.

Yea the wordes of my mouthe, and the me- ditacion of my herte ſhall be acceptable vnto the, o Lorde, my helper and my redemer.

PSAL. XIX.

To the chaunter, a Pſalme of Dauid.

THe Lorde heare the in the tyme of trou- ble: the name of the God of Iacob de- fende the.

Sende the helpe frome the ſanctuarye: and ſtrengthe the out of Syon.

Remembre all thy offeringes, and accepte thy brente ſacrifyce. Selah.

Graunte the thy hertes delyre, and fulfyll all thy mynde.

We will reioyſe in thy helthe, and triumphe in the name of the Lorde our God: the Lorde perfourme all thy petitions.

Nowe knowe I, that the Lorde helpeth his annoynted, and wyll heare him frome his holye heauen: myghtye is the helpe of his ryghte hande.

Some put theyr truſte in charettes, and ſome in horſes: but we wyll remembre the name of the Lorde oure God.

They are brought downe and fallen, but we are ryſen and ſtande vpryght.

Saue Lorde, and helpe vs, o kyng, when we call vpon the.

PSAL. XX.

To the chaunter, a Pſalme of Dauid.

LOrde, howe ioyfull is the kynge in thy ſtrengthe? O howe exceadynge glad is he of thy ſauynge helthe?

Thou haſte gyuen him his hertes delyre, and haſte not put hym from the requeſt of his lyppes. Selah.

For thou haſte preuented him with lyke- all bleſſynges: and ſette a crowne of golde vpon his heed.

He asked lyfe of the, and thou gaueſt him a longe lyfe, euen for euer and euer.

His honour is great in thy ſauynge helthe: glorye and greate worſhyp ſhalte thou laye vpon hym.

For thou ſhalte gyue hym euerlaſtynge helthe: and make him glad with the ioye of thy countenaunce.

And why? becauſe the kynge putteth his truſt in the Lorde: and in the mercye of the hyeſt he ſhall not myſcarye.

Lette all thyne ennemyes fele thy hande: let thy ryghte hande fynde oute all them that hate the.

Thou ſhalte make them lyke a fyre ouen in tyme of thy wrathe: the Lorde ſhall de- ſtroye theym in his diſpleaſure, and the fyre ſhall conſume them. I

Their frute ſhalte thou roote oute of the earthe: and their ſede frome the chyldren of men.

For they purpoſed myſchyefe againſt the: and ymagined ſuche craftes, as they were not hable to performe.

Therfore ſhalte thou put them to flyght: & with thy ſtrynges thou ſhalt make redy thyne arowes againſt the faces of them.

Be thou exalted, Lorde, in thyne owne ſtrengthe: ſo will we ſynge and prayſe thy power.

PSAL. XXI. After the Hebrues, xxii.

To the Chaunter vpon Aieleth, of the morninge ſtarre, a Pſalme of Dauid.

MY God, my God: why haſt thou forſa ken me? the wordes of my complaynte are farre fro my helthe. A

O my God, I crye in the daye tyme, but thou heareſt not: and in the night ſeaſon alſo I take no reſte.

Yet dwelleſt thou in the ſanctuarye, o thou worſhyp of Iſrael.

Oure fathers hoped in the: they truſted in the, and thou dyddeſt delyuer them.

They called vpon the, and were helped: they put their truſt in the, and were not con- founded.

But as for me, I am a worme and no man: a beaſt ſcorne of men and the oute caſte of the people.

All they that ſe me, laughe me to ſcorne: they ſhoute oute their lyppes, and ſhake their heedes. B Mat. xxvii.d Mark. xv.b

He truſted in God, let him deliuer him: let him helpe him, yf he wil haue him.

But thou art he that toke me out of my mo thers wombe: thou waſt my hope, whē I han ged yet vpon my mothers breſtes.

I haue ben lefte vnto the, euer ſythens I was borne: thou arte my God, euen fro my mothers wombe.

Go not fro me then, for trouble is harde at C hande, and here is none to helpe me.

Great bulles are come about me: fat oxen cloſe me in on euery ſyde.

They gape vpon me with their mou- thes: as it were a rampynge and rorynge lyon.

I am poured oute lyke water: all my bones are oute of ioynte: my herte in the myddeſt of my bodye, is euen lyke meltynge waxe.

My ſtrengthe is dryed vp lyke a potte- ſherde, my tonge cleaueth to my gommes: and thou haſte brought me in to the duſte of deathe. D

For dogges are come aboute me: the coun- ſell of the wycked harthe layde ſiege againſte me.

They perſed my handes and my fete, I might haue tolde all my bones: but they ſtode ſta- rynge and lokynge vpon me. Mat. xxvii.d Iohn. xix.b

They haue parted my garmentes amonge them, and caſt lottes vpon my veſture.

Be

But be not thou farre fro me, o Lord: thou art my succour, hast the to helpe me.
Deliuer my soule from the sworde, my dar-
lynge from the power of the dogge.
Saue me from the lyons mouth: and heare
E me bitwene the hornes of the vnicornes.
So wyll I declare thy name vnto my brethren: in the middest of the congregacion wyl
I prayse the.
Prayse the Lord ye that feare him: magnifie him all ye seed of Jacob, and let all the seed of Israel feare him.
For he hath not despised ne abhorred the mi-F serable state of the poore: he hath not hyd his face fro me, but when I called vnto hym, he herde me.
I will prayse the in the great congregacion,
and performe my vowes in the sight of al the
that feare the.
The poore shall eate and be satisfied: they that seke after the Lord shal prayse him: our herte shall lyue for euer.
All the endes of the worlde shall remembre them selues, & be turned vnto the Lorde: and all the generacions of the heythen shall wor-
G shyp before him.
For the kingdom is the Lordes: and he shal
be the gouernour of the heythen.
All suche as be fatte vpon earthe: shall eate also and worshyp: all they that lye in the dust and lyue so hardly, shall fall downe before him.
The seed shall serue him, and preache of the Lorde for euer.
They shall come and declare his rightoulnesse: vnto a people that shal be borne, whom the Lorde hath made.

A THe Lord is my shepherde: I can want
nothynge.
He fedeth me in a grene pasture, and leadeth me to a fresh water.
He quickneth my soule, and bringeth me forth in the waye of righteousnesse for his names sake.
B Though I walde walke now in the valey

for thou art with me: thy staffe and thy hepe-herde comfort me.
Thou preparest a table before me agaynste

A THe erth is the Lordes, and al that ther-

For he hath founded it vpon the seas: and buylded it vpon the floudes.
Who shal go vp in to the hyll of the Lord
or who shall remayne in his holy place?
Euen he that hath innocent handes and a clene herte: which lifteth not vp his mynde
to vanitie, and sweareth not to deceyue.
He shal receyue the blessing from the Lord and mercy from God his sauyour.
This is the generacion of them that seke

For all they that hope in the, shall not be ashamed: but suche as be scornefull dispysyon.

Shewe me thy wayes (Lorde) and teache
me thy pathes.
Leade me in thy truthe, and lerne me: for thou arte the God of my helthe, and in thee

Call to remembraunce, O Lorde, thy tender mercyes, and thy louynge kyndenesses, which haue ben euer of olde.
Oh remembre not the synnes and offenses

O how kendly and righteous is the Lorde:
therefore wil he teache synners in the waye.
He leadeth the symple aright: and suche as
be meke, them lerneth he his wayes.
All the wayes of the Lorde, are very mercy and faythfulnesse, vnto suche as kepe his testament and couenaunt.
For thy names sake, o Lorde, be mercyfull
vnto my synne, for it is great.
What so euer he be that feareth the Lorde
he shall shewe hym the waye that he hathe

Lorde, I loue the habytacyon of thy

PSAL. XXVI.

Of Dauid.

A THe Lorde is my lyghte and my helthe:
whome then shalde I feare? the Lorde is the strength of my life, for whom then shalde I be afrayde?
Therfore when the wycked, euen myne enemies came vpon me to eate vp my flesshe,
they stombled and fell.
Though an hoste of men were layde against Hoc: me, yet shal not my herte be afrayd: and though put my truste in him.

One thyng haue I desyred of the Lord, whiche I will requyre: namely, that I maye dwell in the house of the Lorde all the dayes of my life, to beholde the fayre beautie of the Lorde,
and to vysit his temple.
For in tyme of trouble he hath hyde me in his tabernacle, yea in the secrete place of his dwellyng hath he kepte and set me vp vpon a

Shewe me thy waye, O Lorde: and leade

myes.
Deliuer me not in to the wyles of myne
aduersaryes: for there are false wytnesses risen vp agaynste me: and they ymagen myschiefe.
Neuertheles I beleue verily to se the goodnesse of the Lorde, in the lande of the ly-

Heare the voyce of my humble peticyon,

Plucke me not awaye amonge the vngod-

Rewarde them accordynge to their de-

Prayed be the Lorde: for he hath herde the voyce of myne humble peticion.
The Lorde is my strengthe and my shylde:

A Psalme of Dauid.

A Scrybe vnto the Lorde, O ye myghtye: ascribe vnto the Lorde worshyp & strengthe.

Gyue the Lorde the honoure of his name: bowe your selues to the holye maiestie of the Lorde.

It is the Lorde that commaundeth the waters: It is the gloryous God that maketh the thonder, it is the Lorde that ruleth the see.

B The voyce of the Lorde is myghtye in operation: the voyce of the Lorde is a gloryous voyce.

The voyce of the Lorde breaketh the Cedar trees: yea the Lorde breaketh the Cedars of Libanus.

He maketh them to lepp lyke a calfe: Libanus and Sirion lyke a yong vnycorne.

C The voyce of the Lorde diuydeth the flames of fyre: the voyce of the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse: yea the Lorde shaketh the wyldernesse of Cades.

The voyce of the Lorde moueth the hyndes: and discouereth the thycke bushes: in his temple shall euerye man speake of his honoure.

The Lorde sytteth the water floude: & the Lorde remayneth a kyng for euer.

A Psalme and songe of the dedycacion of the house of Dauid.

A I Wyll magnifye the, O Lorde, for thou hast set me vp: and not suffred my foes to tryumphe ouer me.

O Lorde my God, I cryed vnto the: & thou hast healed me.

Thou Lorde hast brought my soule oute of hell: thou hast kepte my lyfe, where as they go downe to the pyt.

Sing prayses vnto the Lorde (o ye saynctes of his) gyue thankes vnto him for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

For his wrath endureth but the twynckling B of an eye, and his pleasure is in lyfe: heuinesse maye well endure for a nyghte, but ioye commeth in the morninge.

As for me, when I was in prosperite, I saide: truly, I shall neuer fall more.

And why? thou Lorde of thy goodnes hadest made my hyll so stronge.

But as soone as thou turnedst thy face fro me, I was brought in feare.

C Then cryed I vnto the, O Lorde, yea vnto the Lorde made I my prayer.

What profyte is there in my bloude: yf I go downe to corruption?

Maye the dust gyue thankes vnto the? or shall it declare thy faythfulnesse?

Heare, O Lorde, and haue mercye vpon me: Lorde be thou my helper.

D And so thou hast turned my heynesse into ioye: thou hast put of my sackclothe, and gyrded me with gladnesse.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

IN the, O Lorde, is my trust: let me neuer be put to confusion, but delyuer me in thy E righteousnesse.

Bowe downe thyne eare to me, make haste to delyuer me: be thou my stronge rocke and a house of defence, that thou mayst saue me.

For thou arte my stronge holde and my castell: be thou my guyde, and leade me for thy names sake.

Drawe me oute of the nette that they haue layde pryuely for me, for thou art my strengthe.

F Into thy handes I commende my spirite: thou hast delyuered me, o Lorde, thou God of trueth.

I hate them that holde of vanities: and my trust is in the Lorde,

I wil be glad and reioyse in thy mercy: for thou hast considered my trouble, thou hast knowen my soule in aduersitie.

Thou hast not delyuered me ouer into the handes of the ennemye, but hast set my fete in a large rowme.

G Haue mercy vpon me, o Lorde, for I am in trouble, myne eye is consumed for very heynesse, yea my soule and my body.

My lyfe is waxen olde with heuinesse: and my yeres with mournynge.

My strength faileth me because of myne vnrighteousnesse, and my bones are corrupte.

H I am become a verye reproche amonge all myne ennemyes: my neyghbours and they of myne owne acquyntaunce are afrayde of me: they that se me in the strete, conuey them selues fro me.

I am cleane forgotten and oute of mynde, as a dead man: I am become lyke a broken vessell.

For I haue herde the blasphemye of D the multytude: euerye man abhorreth me, they haue gathered a counsell together agaynste me, and are purposed to take away my lyfe.

But my hope is in the Lorde, and I saye: thou art my God.

My tyme is in thy handes: delyuer me from the handes of myne ennemyes, and from them that pursue me.

Shewe thy seruaunt the lyght of thy countenaunce: helpe me for thy mercyes sake.

Let me not be confounded, O Lorde: for I call vpon the: let the vngodlye rather be put to confusyon, and brought vnto the pit.

Let the lyenge lyppes be put to sylence: which cruelly, disdaynfully, & despitefully speake agaynst the righteous.

How greate and manyfolde is thy good- nesse which thou hast hydde for them that feare the?

O what thinges bryngest thou to passe for them that put their truste in the: euen before the sonnes of men?

I Thou hydest them pryuely by thyne owne presence from the proude men: thou kepest them secretly in thy tabernacle, from the strife of tonges.

Thankes be to the Lorde: for he hath shewed me excedynge great kyndnes in a stronge cyte.

K In when the sodeyn feare came vpon me, I sayd: I am cast out of thy sight.

Nerethelesse thou herdest myne humble prayer: when I cryed vnto the.

L Loue the Lorde (all ye his saynctes) for the Lorde preserueth the faythfull, and plentifully rewardeth the proude doer.

Be stronge therfore and take good herte vnto you: all ye that put youre truste in the Lorde.

PSAL. XXXI.

An instruction of Dauid.

BLessed are they, whose vnrighteousnesse is forgyuen: and whose synnes are couered.

A Blessed is the man, vnto whom the Lorde imputeth no synne: in whose spirite there is no gyle.

For whyle I helde my tonge: my bones consumed awaye, thorowe my daylye complaynynges.

And because thy hand was so heuy vpon me both daye and nyght: my moysture was lyke the drouth in sommer. Selah.

B Therfore I confessed my synne vnto the: & hyd not myne vnrighteousnesse.

I sayd, I wyll knowlege myne offence, and confesse my selfe vnto the Lorde: and so forgaue thou me the wickednesse of my synne. Selah.

For this shall euerye saynt make his prayer vnto the in due season: therfore shall not the great waterr floudes come nye him.

Thou arte my defence in the trouble that is come aboute me: compasse thou me aboute also with the ioye of delyueraunce. Selah.

C I wil enforme the, and shewe the the waye wherin thou shalte goo: I wyll fasten myne eyen vpon the.

Be not ye now lyke horses & mules, which haue no vnderstandyng.

Whose mouthes thou must holde with bytt and bridle, yf they wyll not obeye the.

Greate plages shall the vngodly haue, but who so putteth his truste in the Lorde, mercy shall compasse him on euery syde.

Be glade, O ye righteous, and reioyse in the Lorde: be ioyfull all ye that are true of herte.

PSAL. XXXII.

After the Hebrues. xxxii.

REioyse in the Lorde, O ye righteous, for it becommeth well the iuste to be thankfull.

Prayse the Lorde with harpe: synge psalmes vnto him with the lute and instrumēt of ten strynges.

Synge him a newe songe, yea sing lustely vnto him with a lusty courage.

For the worde of the Lorde is true: and all his workes are faythfull.

B He loueth mercy and iudgement: the earth is full of the goodnesse of the Lorde.

By the worde of the Lorde were the heuens made: and all the hostes of them by the breth of his mouthe.

He gathereth the waters together as in a bottell: and layeth vp the depe in secrete.

Let all the earthe feare the Lorde: and let all them that dwell in the worlde, stande in awe of him.

C For loke what he sayth, it is done: and loke what he commaundeth, it standeth fast.

The Lorde bringeth the counsel of the heythen to nought, and turneth the deuises of the people.

But the counsell of the Lorde endureth: and the thoughtes of his herte from generacion to generacion.

Blessed are the people that holde the Lorde for their God: and blessed are the folke whom he hath chosen to be his heritage.

D The Lorde loketh downe from heuen, and beholdeth all the chyldren of men: from his stronge seat he consydereth all them that dwell in the worlde.

He onely hath facioned al the hertes of the, and knoweth all their workes.

A kynge is not holpen by his owne greate hoste: neither is a gyaunte saued thorowe the might of his owne strength.

E A horse is but a vayne thing to saue a man, it is not the power of his strength that can deliuer him.

Beholde, the eye of the Lorde loketh vnto them that feare him, and put their trust in his mercy.

That he may deliuer their soules from deth: and to fede them in the deare tyme.

Let our soule patiently abide the Lorde: for he is our helpe and shylde.

So shall our hertes reioyse in him: because we haue hoped in his holy name.

Let thy mercyfull kyndnesse, o Lorde, be vpon vs: lyke as we put our trust in the.

When the righteous crye, the Lord heareth them: and deliuereth them out of all they; troubles.

The Lorde is nye vnto them that are contrite in herte, and wil helpe suche as be of an humble spirite.

Great are the troubles of the righteous, but the Lorde deliuereth them out of all.

He keepeth al their bones, so that not one of them is broken.

For they haue pryuyly layde their net for me without cause: yea & made a pyt for my soule whiche I neuer deserued.

Let a sodein destruction come vpon hym vn-wares, and the net that he hathe layde pryu-ly catche hym selfe, that he maye fall into his owne mischiefe.

But let my soule be ioyfull in the Lorde: and reioyce in his helpe.

All my bones shal saye: Lorde who is lyke vnto the? which deliuerest the poore from him that are to stronge for hym, yea the poore and the nedy from his spoylers.

False witnesses are ryssen vp, and layd vnto my charge thynges that I knowe not.

They rewarde me euil for good, to the great discomfort of my soule.

C Neuertheles when they were sycke, I put on sackecloth: I humbled my soule with fastyng, and my prayer turned in to myne owne bosome.

I behaued my self as though it had ben my frende or my brother: I went heuyly, as one that mourneth for his mother.

But in myne aduersite they reioyce & gather them togyther: yea the very lame come together against me vnwares, makinge mowes at me, and cease not.

With the gredye and scornefull hypocrits they gnasshed vpon me with their teth.

Lorde wylan wilt thou loke vpon this? Reskue my soule from the wicked rumour of them, my derlynge from the lyons?

So wyll I geue the thankes in the great congregacion: and prayse the amonge moche people.

Let them not triumphe ouer me, that are myne ennemyes for nought: lette them not wynke with their eyes that hate me without cause.

And why? their commening is not for peax, but they ymagen false wordes against ; quietes of the lande.

They gape vpon me with their mouthes, sayinge: there, there: we se it with our eyes.

This thou seest, o Lord: hold not thy tong then: go not farre fro me, o Lorde.

Awake Lorde and stande vp: auenge thy cause my God and my Lorde.

Judge me, o Lorde my God, accordinge to thy righteousnesse, that they triumphe not ouer me.

Let them not say in their hertes, there there so wolde we haue it: let them not say: we haue ouercome him.

Let them be put to confusion & shame, that reioyse at my trouble: let them be clothed in rebuke and dishonour, that boste them selues agaynst me.

Let

Lette them also be glad & reioyce, that fauoure my righteous dealynge: yea lette them saye alwaye: blessed be the Lorde, whiche hath pleasure in the prosperite of his ser-uaunt.

And as for my tonge, it shall be talkynge of thy righteousnesse and of thy prayse, al the day longe.

PSAL. XXXV.

To the chaunter, of Dauid the seruaunte of the Lorde.

1 MY herte sheweth me the wyckednesse of the vngodly: that there is no feare of God before his eyes.

For he dissembleth before his face, so longe till his abhominable synne be found out.

The wordes of his mouthe are vnryghteousnesse and deceyte: he wyll not be learned to do good.

He ymagineth mischiefe vpon his bed: he hath set him in no good waye, he refuse the thyng that is euill.

Thy mercye, O Lorde, reacheth vnto the heauens: and thy faythfulnesse vnto the cloudes.

Thy righteousnes standeth like the stronge mountaynes: and thy iudgemente like the great depe.

Thou, Lorde: preseruest bothe men and beastes.

How precious is thy mercy, o God, that the children of men may put their trust vnder the shadow of thy wynges?

They shal be satisfied with the pleasantnesse of thy house: and thou shalt geue them drinke of the pure of thy pleasures.

For by the is the well of life: & in thy lyght, shal we se lyght.

Spreade forth thy louing kindnesse vnto: the that know the, and thy righteousnesse vnto the that are true of herte.

Lette not the foote of pryde ouertake me: let not the hande of the vngodly caste me downe.

As for wicked doers, they fall: they are cast downe, and are not able to stande.

PSAL. XXXVI.

To the Chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

1 FRet not thy selfe at the vngodly: be not thou emyous agaynst the euil doers.

For they shall soone be cut downe lyke the graste: and be withered euen as the greene herbe.

Put thou thy truste in the Lorde, and be doing good: so shalt thou dwel in the land, and verily it shall fede the.

Delite thou in the Lorde: and he shal geue the thy hertes desyre.

Commyt thy waye vnto the Lorde, serue thy hope in hym: and he shall bryng it to pas.

He shall make thy righteousnesse as cleare as the lyght: and thy iust dealing as the noone daye.

Holde the styll in the Lorde, and abyde patiently vpon him: but greue not thy selfe at one that hath prosperous, and lyueth in abho-mination.

Leue of from wrath, let go displeasure: let not thy gelousye moue the also to do euil. B

For wicked doers shal be rooted out, but they that patiently abyde the Lorde, shal enherite the lande.

Suffre yet a lytle whyle, and the vngodlye shall be clene gone: thou shalt loke after his place, and he shall be awaye.

But the meke spirites shall possesse the erth: and haue pleasure in moche rest. Matth. v. d

The vngodly layeth wayte for the iust, and gna-sheth vpon him with his teth.

But the Lorde laugheth him to scorne: for he seeth that his daye is commyng.

The vngodly drawe out their swerde and bende their bowe: to caste downe the symple and poore, and to slee suche as go the righte waye.

Their owne swerde shall go thorowe their owne herte: and their bowe shall be broken. C

A small thyng that the righteous hathe: is better then great riches of the vngodly.

For the armes of the vngodlye shall be broken: but the Lorde vpholdeth the righteous.

The Lord knoweth the dayes of the godly: and their inheritaunce endureth for euer.

They shall not be confounded in the perilous tyme: and in the dayes of derth, they shal haue ynough.

But the vngodly shal perish: and when the ennemyes of the Lord are in their flowers, they shal consume, yea euen as the smoke shal they consume awaye. D

The vngodlye borroweth, and payeth not agayne: but the righteous is mercyfull and liberall.

Suche as be blessed of him, shal possesse the lande: and they whom he curseth, shall be rooted out.

The Lord ordreth a good mans going: and hath pleasure in his waye.

Though he fall, he shal not be hurt: for the Lorde vpholdeth him with his hande.

I haue ben yong and now am old: yet saw I neuer the righteous forsaken, ne his seed to seke their breed. E

The righteous is euer mercyfull, and lendeth gerely: therfore shal his seed be blessed.

Flee from euil, and do that is good: so shalt thou dwell for euer.

For the Lorde louyth that is ryght, he forsaketh not his sayntes, but they shall be preserued for euermore: where as the seed of the vngodly shal be rooted out. F

Yea the righteous shall possesse the lande: & dwel therin for euer.

The mouthe of the righteous is practised in wysdome: and his tonge talketh of iudge-ment.

Kk The law

The law of his God is in his hert: therfore shal no ꝓfe of his fote slyppe fyde.

The vngodly seeth the rightous, and goeth about to slee him.

But the Lorde wyll not leaue hym in his handes: ne condemne hym when he is iudged.

Hope thou in the Lorde, and kepe his way, and he shall so promote the, that thou shalte haue the lande by enheritaunce, and se when the vngodly shal perysshe.

I my selfe haue sene the vngodly in greate power: and flourysshynge lyke a grene baye tree: but when I wente by, loo, he was gone, I sought hym, but he could no where be founde.

Kepe innocencye, and take hede vnto the thynge that is ryghte: for that shall brynge a man peace at last.

But the transgressours shall perysshe together: and the vngodlye shall be rooted out at the last.

The helpe of the righteous commeth of the Lorde: he is their strength in tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shall stande by them, and saue them: he shal deliuer them from the vngodly, and helpe them, because they put their trust in him.

PSAL. XXXVII.

After the Hebrues.xxxviii.

To the chaunter, to bringe to remembraunce.

A PUt me not to rebuke, oh Lorde, in thyne anger: chastise me not in thy heuye displeasure.

For thy arrowes sticke fast in me, and thy hande presseth me sore.

There is no hole parte in my body, because of thy displeasure: ne is rest in my bones by reason of my synnes.

For my wickednesses are gone ouer my heed, and are like a sore burden, to heuye for me to beare.

My woundes stinke and are corrupt, thorough my foolishnesse.

I am brought in to so greate trouble and misery: that I goo mourninge all the daye long.

For my loynes are clene dryed vp: and there is no hole parte in my body.

I am feble and sore smitten: I rore for the verye disquietnesse of my hert.

Lorde, thou knowest all my desire: and my groninge is not hyd from the.

My herte panteth, my strengthe hath fayled me: and the lyghte of myne eyes is gone fro me.

My louers and frendes stande lokynge vpon my trouble: and my kynsmen are gone a farre of.

They that sought after my lyfe, and to worke me harme: spake ofte yll and ymagined deceyte all the daye longe.

But I as a deafe man herde not: and was euen as one that were dom, not openyng his mouthe.

I am become as a man that heareth not: and that can make no reasonable answere with his mouthe.

For in the, o Lorde is my trust: thou shalte heare me, o Lorde my God.

For I desire that myne enemies triumphe D not ouer me: for if my foote slyp, they reioyce greatly against me.

I am redye to suffre trouble: and my heuynesse is euer in my sight.

For I confesse my wickednesse: & my synne greueth me.

But myne enemyes lyue, and are mighty: and they that hate me without cause, are many in nombre.

They that rewarde me euyll for good: speake euyll of me, because I followe that good is.

Forsake me not (O Lorde my God) goe not farre fro me.

Haste the to helpe me: Lorde, my sauioure.

PSAL. XXXVIII.

To the chaunter for Idithun, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Sayd: I will kepe my wayes that I offende not in my tonge.

And so I shut my mouth, whyle the vngodly sayd wayte for me.

I held my tonge, I was domme, I kept silence yea euen from good wordes, but it was payne and sicknesse to me.

My hert was hote within me: and while I was thus musing, the fyre kyndled, so that I spake with my tonge.

Lorde, let me knowe myne ende, & the nombre of my dayes: that I may be certified what I want.

Beholde, thou hast made my dayes a spanne longe: and my lyfe as it were nothinge before the.

O howe vayne, are all men lyuynge! Selah.

Yea euery man walketh as it were a shadow, and disquieteth him selfe in vayne: he heapeth vp ryches, and can not tell to whome he gathereth them.

And nowe Lorde, wherein shall I comforte me? my hope is in the.

Deliuer me from all myne offences: & make me not a scorne vnto the foolish.

I kept silence, and open not my mouth: for thou hast done it.

Turne thy plages awaye fro me: for I am consumed thorowe the feare of thy hande.

When thou punishest man for synne, thou chastenest him: so that his beautie consumeth awaye, lyke as it were a moth.

O howe vayne are all men! Selah.

Heare my prayer, o Lorde, and consider my cryinge: shewe not thy selfe as though thou sawest not my teares.

For I am a straunger and pilgrim with the as all my fore fathers were.

Oh spare me a lytle that I maye refreshe my selfe before I goo hence: and be no more seene.

PSAL. XXXIX.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

I Wayted patiently for the Lorde, whiche enclyned him selfe vnto me: and herde my callynge.

He brought me out of the horrible pit, out of the myre and claye: he set my fete vpon the rocke, and ordred my goinges.

He hath put a new song in my mouth, euen a thanckesgiuing vnto our God.

Many men seing this shal feare the Lorde: and put their trust in him.

Blessed is the man that setteth his hope in the Lorde: and turneth not vnto the proude, & to suche as go about with lyes.

O Lorde my God, great are thy wonderous workes whiche thou hast wrought: and in thy thoughtes towarde vs, there may none be likened vnto the.

I would declare them and speake of them: but they are so manye, that they can not be tolde.

Sacrifyce and offeryng thou wouldest not haue, but a body thou hast ordeyned me: burnt offrynges and sacrifyce for synne thou hast not alowed.

Then sayde I: lo I come. In the begynnynge of the boke it is wrytten of me, that I should fulfyll thy wyll, o my God, and that am I content to do: yea thy lawe is within my hert.

I will preache of thy righteousnesse in the greate congregacion: loo, I will not refrayne my lyppes, o Lorde, and that thou knowest.

I doo not hyde thy righteousnesse in my hart: my talkyng is of thy truthe and saluacion boldely: I kepe not thy louynge mercye and faythfulnesse backe from the greate congregacion.

Turne not thou thy mercy fro me, o Lorde: but let thy louing kyndnes and truth alwaye preserue me.

For innumerable troubles are come aboute me: my synnes haue taken suche hold vpō me that I am not able to loke vp: yea they are more in nombre then the heeres of my heed, and myne hert failed me.

O Lorde, lette it be thy pleasure to deliuer me: make haste (O Lorde) to helpe me.

Let them be ashamed and confounded that seke after my soule to destroye it: let them fall backwarde and be put to confusion, that wish me yll.

Let them soone be brought to shame that crye ouer me: there there.

But lette all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy sauynge helthe, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in misery: but the Lorde careth for me.

Thou art my helper and redemer: make no long tarying, o my God.

PSAL. XL.

After the Hebrues.xxxix.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

BLessed is he that considereth the poore: the Lorde shall deliuer hym in tyme of trouble.

The Lorde shal preserue him, and kepe him alyue: he shal make him to prosperе vpō erth and shal not deliuer him in to the wyll of his ennemyes.

The Lorde shall refresh him when he lyeth sicke vpon his bed, yea thou makest his bed in all his sickenesse.

I sayd: Lorde be mercyfull vnto me: heale my soule, for I haue synned agaynst the.

Myne enemies speke euil vpon me: when shal he dye, and his name perysshe?

Thoughe he came in to se, yet meaned he falsehed in his herte: heapyng mischefe vpon him selfe.

All they that hate me, ioyn together agaynst me: and ymagen euil against me.

They haue gyuē a wicked sentence vpō me: when he lyeth, he shal ryse vp no more.

Yea euen mine owne familiar frende whom I trusted, which did eate my breed, hath lyfte vp his hele agaynst me.

But be thou mercyfull vnto me, o Lorde: rayse thou me vp, and I shal rewarde them.

By this I know thou fauourest me that my ennemy shal not triumphe ouer me.

Thou hast vpholden me because of myne innocencye: and setest me before thy face for euer.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israell: from hence forth, and for euermore, Amen, Amen.

PSAL. XLI.

After the Hebrues.xli.

To the chaunter a monicion of the sonnes of Corah.

LYke as the harte desyreth the water brookes: so longeth my soule after the, O God.

My soule is a thurst for God, yea euen for the lyuinge God: when shal I come & behold the face of God?

My teares are my meate daye and nyghte, while it is dayly said vnto me: where is now thy God?

Now when I thinke therupon, I poure out my hert by my selfe: for I wold fayne go hence with the multitude, and passe ouer with them vnto the house of God, in the voyce of prayse and thankesgyuinge, amonge suche as kepe holy daye.

Why artest thou so full of heuynesse (o my soule) and why arte thou so vnquiete within me?

Put thy truste in God, for I will yet gyue him thanckes for the helpe of his countenaunce.

My God, my soule is vexed within me therfore I remembre the land of Jordan, and the litle hyll of Hermonim.

One depe calleth an other with the voyce of L the whyrlies: all the waues and water flouds are gone ouer me.

The Lorde hath promised his louing kyndnesse daylye, therfore will I prayse him in the nyghte season, and make my prayer vnto the God of my lyfe.

I wyl saye vnto God my stony rocke: why hast thou forgotten me? why go I thus heuily whyle the enemy oppresseth me?

Whyle my bones are broke, and while mine
D enemies cast me in the tethe daylye, saying vnto me: where is now thy God?

Why art thou so heuy, o my soule? and why art thou so disquieted within me?

Put thy trust in God: for I will yet thanke him for the helpe of his countenaunce, and because he is my God.

After the Hebrues.xliii. PSAL. XLII.

A Gyue sentence vpon me (o God) and defende my cause agaynst the vnholy people: deliuer me from the disceytful and wicked man.

For thou (o God) art my strength: why hast thou shot me from the? why go I then so heuily, whyle the enemy oppresseth me?

Send out thy light and thy truth, that they may lead me and bring me vnto thy holy hyll, and to thy dwellyng.

That I may go in to the aulter of God, euen
B vnto the God which is my ioye and pleasure: and vpon the harpe to giue thankes vnto the, o God, my God.

Why art thou so heuy (o my soule) and why art thou so disquieted within me?

Put thy trust in God, for I will yet giue him thankes for the helpe of his countenaūce, and because he is my God.

C To the chaunter an instruction of the sonnes of Korah.

A We haue herd with our eares, o God, our fathers haue told vs, what thou hast wrought in their time of olde.

Howe thou hast driuen oute the Heithen with thy hande, and planted them in: howe thou hast destroyed the nacyons and caste them out.

For they got not the land in possession through their owne swerde, neither was it their owne arme that helped them.

But thy right hand, thyne arme & the lyght of thy countenaunce, because thou hadest a fauour vnto them.

Thou art the kyng and my God: thou sendest helpe vnto Jacob.

Through the, wil we ouer throw our enemies: and in thy name will we treade them vnder, that rise vp against vs.

For I will not trust in my bowe: it is not my swerde that shall helpe me.

But it is thou that sauest vs from our enemyes: and puttest them to confusion that hate vs.

We will alwaye make our boste of God, and F praise thy name for euer. Selah.

But nowe thou forsakest vs, and puttest vs to confusion, and goest not forth with our hostes.

Thou makest vs to turne our backes vpon our enemyes, so that they which hate vs spoile our goodes.

Thou lettest vs be eaten vp like sheepe: and scatterest vs among the Paynims.

Thou sellest thy people for nought: and takest no money for them.

Thou makest vs to be rebuked of our
E neyghboures, to be laughed to scorne, and hadde in derision, of them that are rounde about vs.

Thou hast made vs a very byworde amonge the Heithen: and that the people shake their heedes at vs.

My confusion is daylye before me: and the shame of my face couereth me,

For the voyce of the slaūderer and blasphemer: for the enemy and auenger.

All this is come vpon vs: and yet haue we not forgotten the, nor behaued our selues vnfaythfully in thy couenaunt.

Our herte is not turned backe, neither our
G steppes gone out of the waye.

For thou hast smitten vs in the place of dragons, and couered vs with the shadow of death.

If we had forgotten the name of our God and holden vp oure handes to anye straunge
D God.

Should not God find it out? for he knoweth the very secretes of the herte.

But for thy sake we are killed all the daye longe: and are counted as sheepe appoynted to be slayne.

Vp Lorde, why slepest thou? awake, caste vs not of for euer.

Wherfore hydest thou thy face? lyste thou cleane forget oure mysery and oppression?

For our soule is brought low euen vnto the dust, and our belly cleueth vnto the ground.

Arise, o Lord, helpe vs and deliuer vs for thy mercy sake.

PSAL. XLIIII.

C To the chaunter vpon Solanim, an instruction of the children of Korah, a songe of loue.

My herte is endyteynge good matter: I
I speake of that whiche I haue made vnto the kynge: my tonge is the pen of a ready wryter.

Thou art the fayrest among the children of men, full of grace are thy lippes, therfore God blesseth the for euer.

Gyrde the with thy swerde vpon thy thygh (o thou myghtye) with worshyp and renowme.

Good lucke haue thou with thyne honour, ryde on with the truthe, mekenesse and rygh-teousnesse: and thy right hand shal teache wonderfull thinges.

Thy arowes are sharpe, the people shall be subdued vnto the: euen in the myddest among the kinges ennemyes.

Thy seat (God) endureth for euer: the scepter of thy kyngdome is a right scepter.

Thou hast loued righteousnesse, and hated
H iniquite: wherfore God (whiche is thy God) hath annoynted the with the oyle of gladnes aboue thy felowes.

All thy garmentes are lyke Myrre, Aloes, & Casia, when thou comest out of thyne yuorye palaces in thy beautifull glory.

Kynges doughters go in thy goodly araye, and vpon thy right hande standeth a quene in a garment of moost pure golde.

Harken (o doughter) consider & bowe downe
E thyne eare: forget thine owne people, and thy fathers house.

So shall the kynge haue pleasure in thy beautye, for he is thy Lorde, and thou shalte worship him.

The doughters of Tire shall be there with F giftes, the ryche among the people shal make their supplicacion before the.

The kynges doughter is all glorious within, her clothing is of wrought golde.

She shall be brought vnto the kynge in D raymente of needle worke, and maydens after her: suche as be nexte her shall be brought vnto the.

With ioye & gladnesse shal they be brought and go into the kinges palace.

In stede of thy fathers thou halte gotten children, whom thou shalte make princes in all landes.

I will remembre thy name from one gene-
G racion to an other: therfore shall the people giue thankes vnto the, worlde without ende.

PSAL. XLV.

C To the chaunter, a songe of the children of Korah vpon Alamoth.

God is our refuge, our strength and
I helpe in our troubles & aduersitie, we haue founde.

Therfore we will not feare, though the earth fall, and though the hylles were caryed in to the myddest of the see.

Though the waters of the see raged and
H were neuer so troublous, and though the mountaynes shooke at the tempeste of the same.

For there is a floude whiche with his riuers
F reioyseth the citye of God, the holy dwellyng of the hyest.

God is in the middest of her, therfore shall she not be remoued: for God helpeth her, and that right early.

The Heithen are mad, the kyngdomes make
S moche a do: but when he sheweth his voyce, the earth melteth awaye.

The Lorde of hostes is with vs; the God of Jacob is oure defence.

Come hyther and behold the workes of the Lorde: what destructions he hathe brought vpon the earth.

He hathe made warres to cease in all the
S world: he hath broke the bow, he hath knapped the spere in sondre, and brent the charettes in the fyre.

Be styll then, and confesse that I am God: I wil be exalted amonge the Gentiles, and I wil be exalted vpon erth.

The Lorde of hostes is with the: the God of Jacob is oure defence. Selah.

C To the chaunter, a Psalme of the childzen of Korah.

Clap your handes together (all ye peo-
A ple) synge vnto God with the voyce of thankesgyuynge.

For the Lorde most hye is to be feared: and he is the great kyng vpon all the erth.

He shal subdue the people vnder vs, and the P Paynims vnder our fete.

He choseth vs for an heritage the beautie of Jacob whom he loued. Selah.

God is gone vp with a merye noyse: & the Lord
V with the sounde of the trompet.

Synge prayses, synge prayses vnto God: synge prayses, synge prayses vnto our kynge.

For God is kyng of all the erth: sing prayses vnto him with vnderstanding.

God is king ouer the Heithen: God sitteth in his holy seate.

The princes of the people are gathered together vnto the God of Abraham: for God is farre hyer exalted, then the myghtye lordes of the earthe.

C A songe of a Psalme of the childzen of Korah.

Great is the Lorde and hyghe to be prai-
A sed, in the citye of our God: euen vpon his holy hyll.

The hill of Sion is like a fayre plant whereof all the lande reioyseth: vpon the north syde lyeth the citye of the great king.

God is wel knowen in her palaces: that he is the defence of the same.

For lo, kynges are gathered, and gone by together.

They maruayled to se suche thynges: they
V were astonied, and sodeynly fell dowue.

Feare came vpon them: and sorow as vpon a woman in her trauayle.

Thou shalte breake the shyppes of the see: through the East wynde.

Lyke as we haue herde, so se we in the citye of the Lorde of hostes, in the citye of oure God: God vpholdeth the same for euer. Selah.

We wayt for thy louing kindnesse (o God)
E in the myddest of thy temple.

After

O God, according vnto thy name, so is thy prayse vnto the worldes ende: thy right hand is full of righteousnesse.

Oh let the mounte Sion reioyse: and the doughters of Juda be glad, because of iudgementes.

Walke about Sion: go rounde aboute her and tell her toures.

Marcke well her walles, sette vp her houses: that it maye be tolde them that come after.

For this God is our God for euer and euer, and he shall alwaye be our gyde.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of the children of Corah.

Heare this, all ye people: ponder it well all ye that dwell vpon the erth.

Bigh and lowe, riche and poore: one with an other.

Psal. lxxviii. My mouth shal speake of wisdome, and my hert shall muse of vnderstanding.

I wil encline myne eare to the parable, and shewe my darke speache vpon the harpe.

Wherfore sholde I feare cupll dayes, when the wickednesse of my heles compasseth me round about?

They that put theyr truste in their goods: and boste themselues in the fulnesse of theyr ryches.

No man maye deliuer his brother: ne make agreement vnto him for God.

For it costeth more to redeme their soules: so that he must let it alone for euer, yea though he lyue long, and se not the graue.

For it shall be sene, that suche wyse men shal dye and perysche together, as well as the ignorant and foolysshe, and leue their goodes for other.

Loke what is in their house, it continueth styll: their dwellinge places endure from one generation to an other, & are called after theyr owne names vpon erth.

Neuertheles man abideth not in suche honour, but is compared vnto the brute beestes, & becommeth like vnto them.

This waye of theyrs is verye foly, and yet their posteritie prayseth it with theyr mouthe. Selah.

They lye in the hell lyke sheepe, death shall gnaw vpon them, & the righteous shal haue dominacion of them in the mornynge by tymes: their strength shall consume, and hell shall be their dwellynge.

But God shall deliuer my soule from the power of hell, when he receyueth me. Selah.

Be not thou afrayd whē one is made ryche: and the glory of his house increased.

* For he shall carye nothynge awaye with him when he dyeth, neither shall his pompe folowe him.

Whyle he lyueth he is counted an happye man: and so longe as he is in prosperitie men speake good of him.

But when he foloweth his fathers generacion, he shall neuer se light any more.

When a man is in honoure, and hathe no vnderstandynge, he is compared vnto the brute beestes, and becommeth like vnto them.

PSAL. XLIX.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

The Lorde euen the mighty God hath spoken and called the worlde from the rysinge of the sunne, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

Out of Sion appereth the glorious brightye of God.

Oure God shall come, and not kepe silence: there goeth before him a consumynge fyre, and a mysghtye tempest rounde aboute hym.

He shall call the heauens from aboue: the erth, that he may iudge his people.

Gather my saynctes togither vnto me: thē that sette more by the couenaunt then by my offerynge.

And the heauens shall declare his righteousnesse: for God is Judge hym selfe. Selah.

Heare, o my people: let me speake, let me testifie amonge you, o Israel: I am God, & euen thy God.

I reproue the not because of thy sacrifice, thy burntoffrynges are alwaye before me.

I wyll take no bullockes out of thy house ne gotes out of thy foldes.

For all the beestes of the feld are myne, and thousandes of catell vpon the hylles.

I knowe all the foules vpon the mountaynes: and the wylde beestes of the felde are in my sight.

If I be hungrye, I wyll not tell the: for the hole worlde is myne, and all that therin is.

Thinkest thou that I will eate the fleshe of oxen, or drynke the bloude of gotes?

Offre vnto God prayse and thankesgyuynge: and paye thy vowes vnto the moste Lord.

And call vpon me in the tyme of trouble: so wyll I heare the, that thou shalte thanke me.

But vnto the vngodly saith God, why wilt thou preache my lawes, and takest my couenaunt in thy mouth?

Where as thou hatest to be reformed: and castest my wordes behynde the?

If thou sest a thefe, thou runnest with him: and art partaker with the aduouterers.

Thou lettest thy mouth speake wickednesse: and thy tonge practyseth deceyte.

Thou sittest and speakest against thy brother: yea and slaunderest thyne owne mothers sonne.

This thou doest, whyle I holde my tonge, and thynkest me to be euen suche one as thy selfe: but I wyll reproue the, and set my selfe against the.

Consider

Consider this, ye that forget God: least I plucke you awaye, and there be none to deliuer you.

Who so offreth me thankes and prayse, he honoureth me: and this is the waye, whereby I will shewe him the sauinge health of God.

¶ To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid, when the Prophet Nathan came vnto him, after he had lyen with Bethsabe.

Haue mercy vpon me (O God) after thy goodnes, and accordinge vnto thy great mercyes, do awaye myne offences.

Washe me wel from my wickednesse, and clense me from my synne.

For I knowledge my faultes, and my synne is euer before me.

Against the onely, against the haue I synned, and done euyll in thy sight: that thou mighst be iustified in thy sayenges, and ouercome, when thou art iudged.

Beholde, I was borne in wickednesse, and in synne hath my mother conceyued me.

But lo, thou hast a pleasure in the truthe, & hast shewed me secrete wysdome.

Purge me with Isope, and I shal be cleane washe thou me, and I shall be whyter then snowe.

Oh let me heare of ioye and gladnesse, that the bones whiche thou hast broken, maye reioyse.

Turne thy face from my synnes, and put out all my misdedes.

Make me a cleane hert, O God, and renue a right spirite within me.

Cast me not awaye from thy presence, and take not thy holy spirite from me.

Gyue me the comfort of thy helpe agayne, and stablyshe me with thy free spirite.

Then shall I teache thy wayes vnto the wicked, that synners maye be conuerted vnto the.

Deliuer me from bloude gyltynesse, O God, thou that art the God of my healthe, that my tonge maye prayse thy righteousnesse.

Open my lyppes, O Lorde, that my mouth maye shewe thy prayse.

For yf thou haddest pleasure in sacrifice, I wolde gyue it the: but thou deliytest not in burntoffrynges.

The sacrifice of God is a troubled spirite, a broken and a contrite hert, O God, shalt thou not dispyse.

Be fauorable and gracious vnto Sion, that the walles of Jerusalem maye be buylded.

For then shalt thou be pleased with the sacrifice of righteousnesse, with the burntoffrynges and oblacions: then shall they lay bullocks vpon thyne aulter.

¶ To the chaunter, an exhortacion of Dauid, when Doeg the Edomite came to Saul, and shewed him, sayinge: Dauid is come to the house of Achimelech. 1.Regū.xxii.

Why boastest thou thy selfe, thou tyraūt, that thou canst do mischefe?

Where as the goodnesse of God endureth yet daylye.

Thy tonge ymagineth wickednesse, and with lyes it cutteth lyke a sharpe rasoure.

Thou louest vngraciousnes more then good, to talke of lyes more then righteousnesse. Selah.

Thou louest to speake all wordes that may do hurt, O thou false tongue.

Therfore shal God cleane destroye thē, smyte the in peces, plucke the out of thy dwellyng, and rote the out of the lande of the lyuynge. Selah.

The righteous shall se this, and feare, and laughe him to scorne.

Lo, this is the man, that toke not God for his strengthe, but trusted vnto the multitude of his ryches, and was myghty in his wickednesse.

As for me, I am lyke a greene olyue tree in the house of God: my trust is in the tender mercy of God for euer and euer.

I will alwaye gyue thankes vnto the, for that thou hast done: & will hope in thy name, for thy saynctes lyke it well.

¶ To the chaunter vpon Mahalath, an instruction of Dauid:

The folysh bodyes saye in their hertes: there is no God.

Corrupt are they, and become abominable in their wickednesses: there is not one, that doth good.

God loked downe from heauen vpon the children of men, to se yf there were anye that wolde vnderstande, or seke after God.

But they are all gone out of the waye, they are all become vnprofitable: there is none that doth good, no not one.

How can they haue vnderstandinge, that are the workers of wickednes, eatynge vp my people as it were bread, and call not vpon God?

They are afrayd, where no feare is: for God breaketh the bones of them that besiege the: thou puttest them to confusion, for God despyseth them.

Oh that the sauinge health were gyuen vnto Israel out of Sion: Oh that the Lord wolde deliuer his people out of captiuite.

Then shulde Jacob reioyse, & Israel shulde be right glad.

¶ To the chaunter in Negmoth, an instruction of Dauid, when the Zephites came and sayde vnto Saul: Dauid is hydde amongest vs.

Helpe

A HElpe me (O God) for thy names sake,
and deliuer me in thy strength.
Heare my prayer (O God) consyder
the wordes of my mouth.
For straungers are risen vp against me, and the mightye (which haue not God before their eyes) seke after my soule. Selah.
But lo, God is my helper: it is he that vp-
B holdeth my soule.
He shall reward cuyll vnto myne ennemies: and in thy trouth shalte thou distroye
them.
A free wyll offringe wyll I gyue the, and prayse thy name, O Lorde, because it is so co-fortable.
For thou hast deliuered me out of all my

¶ To the chaunter in Neginoth, an instruction of Dauid.

A HEare my prayer. O God, and hyde not thy selfe from my petition.
Take hede vnto me & heare me, howe
pytefully I mourne and complayne.
The ennemy cryeth so, and the vngodly cō meth on so fast: for they are myndyd to do me some mischefe, so maliciously are they set against me.
My herte is brusy within me, and the feare
of death is fallen vpon me.
Fearefulnesse and tremblynge are come vpō
B me, and an horrible dreade hathe ouerwhel-med me.
And I sayde: O that I had wynges like a doue, that I might flee some where, and be at rest.
Lo, then wolde I get me awaye farre of, & remayne in the wyldernesse. Selah.
I wolde make haste to escape, from the ster-
my wynde and tempest.
Destroye their tongues (O Lorde) and dyuyde them, for I se vnrighteousnes and strife
in the cyte.
This goeth daye and night about the wal les, mischefe and vyce are in the middest of it.
C Wyckednesse is therin, deceyt and gyle go
not out of her streets.
If it were myne ennemye that reuyled me,
I could beare it: or if one that ought me euel
wyll, did threaten me, I wolde hyde my selfe
from him.
But it is thou my companyon, my gyde &
myne owne familiar frende.
We had swete and secrete communication
together in the house of God.
Let death come hastely vpon them, and let them go myne quycke into hell, for wycked-nes is amonge them in their dwellynges.
But I will call vnto God, and the Lorde shall helpe me.
In the euenynge, mornynge & at none daye will I mourne and complayne: and he shall heare my voyce.

It is he that deliuereth my soule in peace,
from them that ye in wayte for me: for they are many against me.
Yea turne God that endureth for euer, shall
D heare me, and bringe them downe.
For they will not turne: & why? they feare
not God.
Yea they laye handes on such as be at peace
with him, and so they breake his couenaunt.
Their mouthes are softer then butter, and yet haue they battel in their mynde: their wo des are smoother then oyle, & yet be they sy-ry swerdes.
Cast thy burthen, or care, vpon the Lorde,
he shall norysh the, and not leaue the righteous in vnquietnesse.
But as for them, thou (O God) shalt cast
downe into the pyt of destruction.
The bloudthursty and deceytfull shall not lyue out halfe their dayes: nevertheles my trust is in the.

¶ To the chaunter, vpon the dumme stocke done in Gethe. A psalme of David, when the Philistines toke him in Geth.

BE mercyfull vnto me (O God) for man
wyll treade me downe: they are daylye
fightinge and troublinge me.
Myne enemyes treade me daylye vnder their fete, for they be many that proudly fight against me.
Neuertheles, when I am afrayed, I put my trust in the.
I will comforte my selfe in Gods worde, yea
I will hope in God, and not feare: what can flesh then do vnto me?
They vexe me daylye in my wordes: all the E their ymagina, is to do me euell.
They holde all together, and kepe themsel ues close: they marke my steppes, howe they maye take the my soule.
But in vayne, for it shall escape them: an-wyp? thou (O God) in thy displeasure shalt cast downe suche people.
Thou tellest my vpbytinges, then putte
my teares in thy bottell, and nombrest them.
When to cure I call vpon the, myne enne-myes are put to flight: whereby I know that I am my God.
In Gods worde will I reioyce, in the Lor
des worde will I comfort me.
Yea in God do I trust, and am not afrayd
what can man then do vnto me?
Vnto the (O God) will I pare my vo-wes, vnto the will I giue thankes and

For thou hast deliuered my soule from death, and my feete from fallynge, that I may walke before God in the lyght of the lyuinge.

PSAL. LVI.

gis shall be my refuge, vntyll wyckednesse be ouerpast.
I call vnto God the hyghest, euen the God
that shal helpe me vp agayne.
He shall sende from heauen, and saue me
from the reproofe of him that wolde swalow

This shall God sende, for his mercy & faith
fulnes sake.
I lye with my soule amonge the cruell Lions: euen amonge the childre of men, whose teethe are speares and arowes, and their tōge
a sherpe swerde.

Awake, O my glory, awake lute & harpe, I
my selfe will awake right early.
I will gyue thankes vnto the, O Lorde, amonge the people, I will singe prayses vnto
the amonge the Heythen.
For the greatnes of thy mercy reacheth vn

in dede, then iudge the thinge that is right,
O ye sonnes of men.
But ye imagen mischefe in your hertes, &
your handes deale with wyckednes.
The vngodly are frowarde, euen fro their mothers wombe: as soone as they be borne,
they go a strape and speake lyes.
They are as furyous as the serpent, euen

ז God bielle vs, and let all the endes of the worlde feare him.

PSAL. LXVII.

After the Hebrues. ij. viii.

To the chaunter, a Psalme and songe of Dauid.

א LEt God aryse, so shall his ennemyes be scattered, and they that hate him, shall flee before him.

ב Lyke as the smoke vanyssheth, so shalt thou dryue them away: and lyke as waxe melteth at the fyre, so shall the vngodly perysshe at the presence of God.

ג But the righteous shall be glade and reioyce before God, they shall be merry and ioyfull.

ד Synge vnto God, synge prayses vnto his name: magnifye him that rydeth aboue the heauens (whose name is the Lorde) and reioyce before him.

ה He is a father of the fatherlesse, he is a defender of wydowes: euen God in his holy habitation.

ו He is the God that maketh men to be of one mynde in a house, and bringeth the prysonners oute of captyuyte in due season, but letteth the rennegates contynue in scarcenesse.

ז O God, when thou wentest forth before thy people, when thou wentest thorow the wyldernesse. Selah.

ח The earthe shoke, and the heauens dropped at the presence of God in Sinai, at the presence of God, whiche is the God of Israel.

ט Thou O God sendest a gracious rayne vpō thyne enheritaunce, and refreshest it, when it is drye.

י That thy beastes maye dwell therin, whiche thou of thy goodnesse hast prepared for the poore.

ל Kynges with their armyes shall flee, and they of the householde, shall dyuyde the spoyle.

מ Yf so be that ye lye amonge the pales, the wynges fethers shal be couered with syluer, and her wynges of the colour of golde.

נ When the almyghtye setteth kynges vpon the earthe, it shall be cleare euen in the darknesse.

ע Why hoppe ye so, ye great hylles?

פ It pleaseth God to dwell vpon this hyll, yea the Lorde will abyde in it for euer.

צ The charettes of God are many thousande tymes a thousand, the Lorde is amonge them in the holy Sinai.

ק Thou art gone vp on hyghe, thou hast led captiuite captiue, and receyued gyftes for me. Yea euen for thyne enemyes, that they might dwell with the Lorde God.

ר Praysed be the Lorde dayely, euen the God which helpeth vs, and poureth his benefytes vpon vs. Selah.

ש The God that is our Sauiour, euen God the Lorde by whome we escape death.

ת The God that smyteth the enemyes vpon the heades and vpon the heary scalpes: suche as go on still in their wyckednes.

The Lorde hath sayde: some will I bring agayne frome Basan, some will I bringe agayne frome the depe of the see.

That thy fote maye be dypped in the blond of thyne ennemyes, and that thy dogges may lycke it vp.

It is well sene, O God, howe thou goest, how thou my God and kyng goest in the sanctuary.

The syngers go before, and then the mynstrelles amonge the maydens with the tymbrels.

Gyue thankes vnto God the Lorde in the congregacion, for the welles of Israel.

There lytle Ben Jamin, the Pynces of Juda, the Pynces of Zabulon, and the Pynces of Nephthaly beare rule amonge them.

Thy God hathe committed strength vnto the, stablyshe the thinge, O God, that thou hast wrought in vs.

For thy temples sake at Jerusalem shal kynges bringe presentes vnto the.

Reproue the beastes amonge the reedes, the heape of bulles with the calues: thase that dryue for money.

Oh scatter the people that delyte in battayle.

The princes shall come out of Egypte, the Mozyans lande shall stretche out her handes vnto God.

Synge vnto God, O ye kyngdomes of the earth: synge prayses vnto the Lorde. Selah.

Which sitteth in the heauens ouer all from the begynnynge: Lo, he shall sende oute his voyce, and that a myghty voyce.

Impute the power vnto God, his glory is in Israel, and his might in the cloudes.

God is wonderfull in his sanctuarye, he is the God of Israel, he will gyue strength and power vnto his people. Blessed be God.

PSAL. LXVIII.

After the Hebrues.

To the chaunter vpon Solamm of Dauid.

א HElpe me, O God, for the waters are come in euen vnto my soule.

ב I stycke fast in the depe myre, where no grounde is: I am come into depe waters, & the floudes will drowne me.

ג I am wery of crying, my throte is dryc, my sight fayleth me, for waytinge so longe vpon my God.

ד They that hate me without cause, are mo then the heares of my head: they that are myne enemyes and wolde destroye me spytefully are myghty: I am fayne to paye the thynges that I neuer toke.

ה God thou knowest my simplenesse, and my faultes are not hyd from the.

ו Let not them that trust in the, O Lorde God of hostes, be ashamed for my cause: let not those that seke the, be confounded thorow me O God of Israel.

ז And why? for thy sake do I suffre reproffe, shame couereth my face.

ח I am become a straunger vnto my brethren, and an aleaunt vnto my mothers children.

ט For the zele of thyne house hath euen eaten me, and the rebukes of them that rebuked the, is fallen vpon me.

י I wept and chastened my selfe with fasting and that was turned to my reproffe.

כ I put on a sack clothe, and therfore they iested vpon me.

ל They that sate in the gate, spake against me, and the dronkardes made songes vpon me.

מ But Lorde I made my prayer vnto the in an acceptable tyme.

נ Heare me, O God, with thy great mercy & sure helpe.

ס Take me out of the myre, that I sinke not: Oh let me be delyuered frome them that hate me, and out of the depe waters.

ע Let the water floude drowne me, that the depe swalow me not vp, and that the pyt shut not her mouth vpon me.

פ Heare me, O Lorde, for thy louynge kynd nesse is comfortable: turne the vnto me accordinge vnto thy great mercy.

צ Hyde not thy face from thy seruaunt, for I am in trouble: haste the to helpe me.

ק Drawe nyghe vnto my soule, and saue it: delyuer me because of myne enemyes.

ר Thou knowest my reproffe, my shame and my dishonour: myne aduersaries are all in thy sight.

ש The rebuke breaketh my herte, and maketh me hevy: I loke for some to haue pitie vpon me, but there is no man: and for some to comforte me, but I fynde none.

ת They gaue me gall to eate, & when I was thurstie, they gaue me vynegre to drinke. Roma. xi. 9

Let their table be made a snare to take themselues with all, an occasion to fall and a rewarde vnto them.

Let their eyes be blynded, that they se not: and euer bowe downe their backes.

Powre out thyne indignacion vpon them, and let thy wrathfull displeasure take hold of them.

Let their habitation be voyde, and no man to dwell in their tentes. Act. i. d

For they persecute him whō thou hast smytten, and bespoke thy woundes they haue gyuē him mo. f

Let them fall frome one wickednesse to an other, and not come into thy righteousnesse.

Let them be wyped out of the booke of the lyuynge, and not be written amonge the righteous.

As for me, I am poore and in heuynesse, let thy helpe defende me, O God.

That I may prayse the name of God with a songe, and magnifye it with thanckesgyuinge.

This shall please the Lorde better then a bullocke, that hath hornes and hoofes.

O consydre this and be glad (ye that be in aduersitie) seke after God, & your soule shall lyue. g

For the Lorde heareth the poore, and despyseth not his prysoners.

Let heauen and earth prayse him, the see & all that moueth therin.

For God will saue Sion, and buylde the cyties of Juda, that men maye dwell there, & haue them in possession.

The sede of his seruauntes shall inherete it: and they that loue his name, shall dwell therin.

PSAL. LXIX.

After the Hebrues.

To the chaunter, of Dauid to bringe to remembraunce.

HAste the, O God, to delyuer me, and to helpe me, O Lorde. g

Let them be shamed and confounded that seke after my soule: *let them be turned backwarde, and put to confusion, that wysh me euyll. *Psalm. xl. e

Let them sone be brought to shame, that crye ouer me, there there.

But let all those that seke the, be ioyfull and glad in the: and let all suche as delyte in thy saluynge healthe, saye alwaye: the Lorde be praysed.

As for me, I am poore and in myserye, hast thou God for to helpe me.

Thou art my helpe, my redemer & my God O make no longe tarynge.

PSAL. LXX.

After the Hebrues.

A IN the, O Lord, is my trust, let me neuer be put to confusion, but rydd me, & delyuer me thorow thy righteousnesse: enclyne thyne eare vnto me, and helpe me.

Be thou my stronge holde (where vnto I maye alwaye flie) thou that haste promysed to helpe me: for thou art my house of defence & my castell.

Delyuer me, O my God, out of the hande of the vngodly, out of the hande of the vnrighteous and cruell man.

For thou, O Lorde God, art the thing that I longe for, thou art my hope euen frome my youth.

I haue leaned vpon the euer sythes I was borne, thou art he that toke me out of my mothers wombe, therfore is my prayse alwaye of the.

B I am become a wonder vnto the multitude but my sure trust is in the.

O let my mouth be fylled with thy prayse and honour all the daye longe.

Cast me not awaye in myne olde age, forsake me not when my strength fayleth me.

For myne ennemyes speake against me, and they that laye wayte for my soule, take their councell togither, sayenge: God hath forsaken him, persecute him, take him, for there is none to helpe him.

Go not farre from me, O God: my God, haste the to helpe me.

Let them be confounded and perysshe, that are against my soule: let them be couered with shame and dishonoure, that seke to do me euyll.

C As for me I will paciently abyde alwaye, and will euer encrease thy prayse.

My mouth shal speake of thy righteousnes and sauinge helth all daye longe, for I know no ende therof.

Let me go in (O Lorde God) and I will make mencion of thy power and righteousnes onely.

Thou, O God, hast lerned me fro my youth vp vntyll now, therfore will I tel of thy wōderous workes.

Forsake me not, O God, in myne olde age, when I am graye headded: vntyll I haue shewed thyne arme vnto chyldren chyldren, and thy power to all them that are yet for to come.

D Thy ryghteousnesse, O God is very hyghe, thou that vsest great thinges: O God, who is lyke the?

O what great troubles and aduersities hast thou shewed me? and yet dydest thou tourne and refresh me: and broughtest me frome the depe of the earth agayne.

Thou hast brought me to great honoure, & comforted me on euery syde.

Therfore will I prayse the and thy faythfulnesse, O God, playenge vpon the lute, vnto the will I synge vpon the harpe, O thou holy one of Israel.

My lippes wolde fayne synge prayses vnto the: and so wolde my soule whom thou hast delyuered.

My tongue talke th of thy ryghteousnesse all the daye longe, for they are confounded & brought vnto shame, that sought to do me euyll.

PSAL. LXXI.

Vnto Salomon.

GIue the kynge thy iudgement, O God, and thy righteousnesse vnto the kynges sonne.

That he may governe thy people according vnto right, and defende thy poore.

That the mountaynes maye bringe peace, & the lytle hylles righteousnesse vnto the people.

He shal kepe the symple folke by their right defende the children of the poore, and punyshe the wronges doer.

Thou shalt be feared as longe as the sonne and mone endure, from one generacion to an other.

He shall come downe lyke the rayne into a flese of wolle, and lyke the droppes that water the earth.

In his tyme shall ryghteousnes flouryshe, peace and aboundaūce of peace, so longe as the mone endureth.

His dominion shall be from the one see to the other, and frome the floude vnto the worldes ende.

They that dwell in the wyldernesse shall knele before him, and his ennemyes shal lycke the dust.

The kynges of the see and of the Iles shal bringe presentes, the kynges of Arabye & Saba shall offre gyftes.

All kynges shall worshyp him, and all nacyons shall do him seruice.

For he shall delyuer the poore when he axeth, and the nedy that hath no helpe.

He shalbe fauorable to the symples poore, he shall preserue the soules of suche as be in aduersitie.

He shall delyuer their soules frome crueltie and wronge, and deare shal their blonde be in his sight.

He shall lyue, and vnto him shall be gyuen of the golde of Arabia: prayer shall be made euer vnto him, and dayly shall he be praysed.

There shalbe an heape of corne in the earth vpon the hylles, his frute shall shake lyke Libanus, and shall be grene in the cyte, lyke grasse vpon the earth.

His name shall endure for euer, his name shall remayne vnder the sunne amonge posteerities, which shalbe blessed thorow him, & all the heythen shall prayse him.

Blessed be the Lorde God, euen the God of Israell, whiche onely doeth wonderous thinges.

And blessed be the name of his maiestye for euer, and all landes be fulfilled with his glorye. Amen, Amen.

Here ende the prayers of Dauid, the sonne of Jesse.

PSAL. LXXII.

A Psalme of Asaph.

1 HOw louynge is God vnto Israel, to suche as are of a cleane herte?

Neuertheles my feete were almost gone, my treadinges had well nyghe slypte.

And why? I was greued at the wycked, to se the vngodly in such welthe.

For they are in no parell of deth, but stand fat lyke a palace.

They come in no myssfortune lyke other folke, neyther are they plaged lyke other men.

And this is the cause that they be so puffe vp with pryde, and ouerwhelmed with cruelte and vnrighteousnesse.

Their eyes swell for fatnesse, they do euen what they lyst.

Corrupt are they, and speake blasphemyes 2 maliciously, proude and presumptuous are their wordes.

They stretche forth their mouthe vnto the heauen, and their tongue goeth thorowe the worlde.

Therfore fall the people vnto theym, and thynke out sucke they no small vauntage.

Tush (saye they) how shulde God perceyue it? is there knowledge in the most hyghest?

Lo, these are the vngodly, these prosper in the worlde, these haue eyches in possession.

Shoulde I then clense my herte in vayne (thought I) and washe my handes in innocency?

Therfore shuld I be then punyshed dayely, and be chastened euery morninge?

Yea I had almost also sayde euen as they: but lo, then shulde I haue condemned the generacion of thy children.

Then thought I to vnderstand this, but it was to harde for me.

Vntyl I went into the Sanctuary of God and vnderstood the ende of these men.

Namely, how thou haste set them in a slypp pery place, that thou mayst cast them downe headlynges and destroye them.

O how sodenly do they consume, perysh, & come to a fearfull ende?

Yea euen lyke as a dreame when one awaketh, so makest thou their ymage to vanysshe out of the cyte.

Thus my herte was greued, and it went e- uen thorow my reynes.

So foolysh was I and ignorant, and as it were a beast before the.

Neuertheles I am alwaye by the, thou holdest me by my right hande.

Then leadest me with thy counsel, and afterwarde receyuest me vnto glory.

O what is there prepared for me in heaue? & there is nothinge vpon earth, that I desire in comparyson of the.

My flesh and my herte fayleth, but God is the strengthe of my herte, and my portion for ever.

Lo, they that forsake the shall perysshe: thou destroyest all them that commyt fornication against the.

But it is good for me, to holde me fast by God, to put my trust in the Lorde God, and to speake of all thy workes.

PSAL. LXXIII.

A Instruction of Asaph.

A OGod, wherfore doest thou cast vs so cleane away? why is thy wrath so hote against the shepe of thy pasture?

O thynk vpon thyne assemble, whom thou haste purchased frome the begynnynge: the stake of thyne enheritaunce, whom thou hast redemed, euen this hyl of Sion wherin thou dwellest.

Treade vpon them with thy fete, and caste them downe to the grounde, for the ennemye hath destroyed all togyther in the Sanctuarye.

B Thyne aduersaries roare in thy houses, & set vp their banners for tokens.

C Men maye se the axes glyster above, lyke as those that hewe in the wod.

They cut downe all the sylynge worke of the holy place with hylles and axes.

They haue set fire vpō the Sanctuary, they haue defyled the dwelling place of thy name, euen vnto the grounde.

Yea they saye in their hertes: let vs spoyle them al togither, thus haue they brent vp al the houses of God in the lande.

We se our tokēs no more, there is not one Prophet more, no not one that vnderstādeth any more.

O God, how longe shall the aduersarye do this dishonoure? how longe shal the ennemy blaspheme thy name? for euer? 1.Mac.4.v.6

Why withdrawest thou thyne hand? why pluckest thou not thy righthande out of thy bosome, to consume thyne ennemyes?

But God is my kynge of olde, the helpe is done vpon earth, he doth it him selfe.

Thou diuidest the see thorowe thy power, thou breakest the heades of the dragons in the waters.

Thou smytest the heades of Leuiathan in peces, and gyuest him to be meat for the people in the wildernesse.

Thou dryggest vp welles and brokes, thou dryest vp myghty waters.

The daye is thyne, and the nyght is thyne: thou haste prepared the lyghtes and the Sunne.

Thou hast set al the borders of the earthe, thou hast made both somer and wynter.

Remembre this, O Lorde, how the ennemy rebuketh, and how the folysh people blaspheme thy name.

O delyuer not the soule of thy turtle doue vnto the beastes, and forget not the assemble of the poore for euer.

Loke vpon the couenaunt, for the darcke houses of the earth are full of wyckednesse.

D O let not the symple go awaye ashamed: for the poore and nedye geue prayses vnto thy name.

Arise, O God, and maynteyne thyne owne cause, remembre how the foolysh man blaspheme eth the daycly.

Forget not the voyce of thyne enemyes, for the presumption of them that hate the, increaseth euer more and more.

PSAL. LXXIIII.

After the Babylonians.

¶ To the chaunter, destroye not, a Psalme and songe of Asaph.

A VNto the, O God, will we geue thankes, yea vnto the will we geue thankes, and seynge thy name is so nyghe, we will tell of thy wondrous workes.

When I maye get a conuenient tyme, I shall iudge accordinge vnto right.

The earth is weake and all that is therin, but I beare vp her pyllers.

I sayde vnto the mad people, waxe not so madly, and to the vngodly: set not vp youre hornes.

Set not vp your hornes on hyghe, & speake not with a styf necke.

For promocion commeth neyther from the East nor frome the west, nor yet from the wilderneſſe.

And why? God is the iudge: he putteth B wnne one, and setteth vp an other.

For in the hande of the Lorde there is a cup full of stronge wyne, and he poureth out of ſ same:

As for the dregges therof, all the vngodly of the earth shall drynke them, and sucke the sute.

But I will talke of the God of Jacob, and prayse him for euer.

All the hornes of the vngodly wyl I breake and the hornes of the righteous shall be exalted.

PSAL. LXXV.

After the Babylonians.

¶ To the chaunter, in Neginoth, a Psalme and songe of Asaph.

A IN Juda is God knowen, his name is great in Israel.

At Salem is his tabernacle, & his dwellinge in Sion.

There breaketh he the arowes of the bowe the shylde, the sweard, and the hole battaple.

Thou art of more honour and myght then the hylles of robbers.

The proude shall be robbed and slepe their slepe, and the myghty shal be vnable to worke thinge with their handes.

B When thou rebukest them, O God of Jacob, both the charettes and horsemen shal fal on slepe.

Thou arte fearfull, for who maye abyde in thy sight, when thou art angry?

When thou lettest thy iudgement be herde frome heauen, the earthe trembleth and is styll.

Yea when God aryseth to geue iudgemente and to helpe al them that be in aduersite vpō earth. Selah.

When thou punyshest one man, he wyll knowledge that thou arte redye to punyshe other mo.

Loke what ye promyse vnto ſ Lorde your God, se that ye kepe it, all ye that be rounde about him: bringe presentes vnto him that ought to be feared.

Which taketh awaye the brethe of Princes and is wonderfull amonge the kynges of the earth.

PSAL. LXXVI.

¶ To the chaunter, for Jduthun a Psalme of Asaph.

I Cryed vnto God with my voyce, yea vnto God cryed I with my voyce, and he heard me.

In the tyme of my trouble I sought the Lorde, I helde vp myne handes vnto him in ſ nyghte season, for my soule refused all other comforte.

When I was in heynesse I thought vpō God: when my hert was vexed, then dyd I speake. Selah.

Thou holdest myne eyes wakynge, I was so feble, that I could not speake.

Then remembred I the tymes of olde, and the yeres that were past.

I called to remembrance my songe in the night, I communed with myne owne hert, & sought out my spirite.

Wyll the Lorde cast out for euer?

Will he be no more intreated?

Is his mercy cleane gone?

Is his promyse come vtterly to an ende for euermore?

Hathe the Lorde forgotten to be gracious?

Or, hath he shut vp his louynge kyndnesse in displeasure?

At the laste, I came to this poynte, that I thought: O why art thou so feble? myght ſ hande of the most hyghest can chaunge all.

Therfore will I remembre the workes of the Lorde, and cal to mynde thy wonders of olde tyme.

I will speake of al thy workes, & of thy kynge shalbe of thy wynges.

Thy waye, O God, is holye: who is so great and mighty as God?

Thou arte the God that doest wonders, thou hast declared thy power among the people.

Thou with thyne arme hast delyuered thy people, euen the sonnes of Jacob and Joseph. Selah.

The waters sawe the, O God, the waters sawe the, and were afrayed, the depthes were moued.

The thicke cloudes powred out watre, the cloudes thondered, and thyne arowes went abroade.

Thy thonder was herde rounde about, the lyghtlightynges shone vpon the grounde, the erth was moued and shoke withall.

Thy waye was in the see, and thy pathes in the great waters, yet could no man know thy fotesteppes.

Thou ledest thy people lyke a flocke of shepe, by the hande of Moses and Aaron.

PSAL. LXXVII.

¶ Instruction of Asaph.

HEare my lawe, O my people, enclyne your eares vnto ſ wordes of my mouth.

I wyll open my mouth in parables, & speake of thynges of olde.

Which we haue herde and knowen, & suche as our fathers haue tolde vs.

That we shoulde not hyde theym frome the chyldren of the generacyons to come: but to shewe the honoure of the Lorde, his myght and wonderfull workes that he hathe done.

He made a couenaūt with Jacob, and gaue Israel a lawe, which he cōmaunded our forefathers to teache their children.

That their posteritie myght know it, & the children which were yet vnborne.

To thintent that when they came vp, they might shewe their children the same.

That they also might put their trust i God not to forget what he had wone, but to kepe his commaundmentes.

And not to be as their forefathers, a frowarde and ouerthwarte generacion, a generacion that set not their hert a right, and whose spirite was not true towarde God.

B Lyke as the children of Ephraim, which beynge harnessed and carynge bowes, turned them selues back in the tyme of batayle.

They kept not the couenaunt of God, and wolde not walke in his lawe.

They forgat what he hadde wone, and the wonderfull workes that he hadde shewed for them.

Marueylous thinges dyd he in the sight of our fathers in the lande of Egypte, euen in ſ fielde of Zoan.

He dryuyded the see and let theym goo thorowe it, and made the waters to stande lyke a wall.

In the day tyme he led them with a cloude and all the nyghte thorowe with a lyght of fyre.

He clouē the hard rockes in the wylderneſſe and gaue them drynke therof, as it had bene out of the great deapth.

He brought waters onte of the stony rocke, so that they gushed out lyke the ryuers.

Yet for all this they synned agaynste him, and prouoked the most hyghest in the wylderneſſe.

They tempted God in their hertes, and required meat for their lust.

C For they spake against God, and sayde: yea, God shall prepare a table in the wyldernes, shall he?

Lo, he smote the stony rocke, that the waters flowed, and the streames gushed oute, but how can he geue bred & prouyde flesh for his people?

When the Lorde herde this, he was wroth so the fyre was kyndled in Jacob, and heuye displeasure against Israel. Numer.xi.b.

Because they beleued not in God, and put not their trust in his helpe.

So he commaunded the cloudes above, & opened the wyes of heauen.

He rayned downe Manna vpon theym for to eate, and gaue them bred frome heauen. Exo.xvi.c. Numer.xi.b.

Then ate they aungels fode, for he sent thē meat ynough.

He caused the eall wynde to blow vnder ſ heauen, and thorow his power he brought in the south wynde. 1.Cor.x.a.

He made flesh to rayne vpō them as thicke as dust, and feathered foules lyke as the sande of the see. Numer.xi.g.

He let it fall amonge their tentes rounde about their habitations.

So they ate, and were fylled, for he gaue them their owne desire.

They were not disappointed of their lust. Numer.xi.g.

But whyle the meat was yet in their mouthes: the heuy wrath of God came vpō them D slewe the welthyest of them, & smote downe the chosen men of Israel.

But for all this they synned yet more, and beleued not his wonderous workes.

Therfore their dayes were consumed in vanitie, & sodenly their yeres were gone.

When he slewe them, they sought him, and turned them early vnto God.

They thought then that God was their succoure, and that the hyghe God was their redemer.

Neuertheleſſe they dyd but flatter him in their mouthes, & dissembled with him in their tongues.

For their hert was not hole with him, neyther continued they in his couenaunt.

But he was so mercyfull, that he forgaue their mysdedes, and destroyed them not.

Yea many a tyme turned he his wrathe awaye, and wolde not suffre his hole displeasure to aryse.

For he consydered that they were but flesh euen a wynde that passeth awaye, and commeth not agayne.

O how oft haue they greued him in ſ wyl- E derneſſe?

How many a tyme haue they prouoked him in the deserte?

They turned backe, and tempted God, and moued the holy one in Israel.

They thought not of his hande, in ſ daye when he delyuered theym frome the hande of the ennemy.

How he hadde wrought his myracles in Egypte, and his wonders in the lande of Zoan. Exodi.c.

Howe he turned their waters in to blonde so that they myght not drynke of the ryuers.

How he sent lyce amonge them, to eate them vp, and frogges to destroye them. Exod.viii.c.

Where he gaue their fruites vnto the Locuste, and their labour vnto the Grasshopper.

He slewe their vynes with hayle stones, and their Mulbery trees with the frost.

He smote their cattell with hayle stones, and their flockes with hoote thonder bolttes.

Exod.ix.d.e.

How he sent vpon them the furyousnes of his wrath, anger and displeasure: with trouble and sayllynge in of euyll aungels.

When he made a waye to his fearefull indignation, and spared not their soules from death, yea and gaue their cattell ouer to the pe stilence.

When he smote all the first borne in Egypt
the most principal and mightyest in the dwel lynges of Ham.

Exod.xviii.e.

His owne people, he lead therym forth lyke
f sheepe, and carryed them in the wylderneſſe like a flocke.

He brought the out safely, that they ſhuld
not feare, and ouerwhelmed their ennemyes with the see.

He carryed the vnto the borders of his San ctuary: euen to this hyll, which he purchased with his right hande.

Iosue.xxii.b.

He dyd cast out the Heythen before them,
caused their lande to be diuyded among them
for an heritage, and made the tribes of Israe el to dwell in their tentes.

For all this they tempted and displeased
the most hyghe God, and kept not his cou-enaunt.

But tourned their backes, and fell awaye lyke their forefathers, starringe aside lyke a broken bowe.

And so they greued hym with their hyghe places, and prouoked him with their ymat ges.

When God herde this, he was wroth, and toke sore displeasure at Israel.

So that he forsoke the tabernacle in Silo,
1.Regū.iiii.a. euen his habitation wherin he dwelt among men.

He deliuered their power into captiuitie, g
their glory into the ennemyes hande.

He gaue his people ouer into the swerde,
for he was wroth with his heritage.

The fire consumed their yong men, & their maydens were not geuen to mariage.

Their priestes were slayne with the swerde,
and there were no wydowes to make lamentation.

So the Lord awaked as one out of sleepe
and like a mā refreshed with wyne.

He smote his ennemyes in the vtmost par-
tes, and put them to a perpetual shame.

He refused the tabernacle of Joseph, & chose
not the [illegible],

But [illegible] the tribe of Iuda,
euen the [illegible] which he loued.

And [illegible] his temple on hyghe,
and layde the foundacion of it, lyke vnto the ground
that it neuer [illegible] remoue.

He chose [illegible] also his seruaunt, & toke
him [illegible] the sheepfolde.

As he was folowynge the yowes great with yonge, he toke hym, that he myght feede Jacob his people, and Israell his enherytaunce.

So he fed theym with a faithfull and true
hert, and ruled them with all the diligence of his power.

PSAL. LXXVIII.

¶ A Psalme of Asaph.

O God, the Heythen are broke into thyne heritage: the holy temple haue they defyled, and made Jerusalem an heape of stones.

The ded bodyes of thy seruauntes haue
they geuen vnto the foules of the ayre to be deuoured, and the flesh of thy sayntes vnto beastes of the lande.

Their bloude haue they shed lyke water on euery syde of Jerusalem, and there was no mā to bury them.

We are become an open shame vnto our ne
nemyes, a very scorne and derision vnto them
that are round about vs.

Lorde, how longe wilt thou be angry? shall thy gelousy burne lyke fire for euer?

Poure out thyne indygnacion vpon the hy
then that know the not, and vpon the kyng-domes that cal not vpon thy name.

For they haue deuoured Jacob, and layde waste his dwellynge place.

O remembre not our olde synnes, but haue mercy vpō vs, and that sone, for we are come to great myserye.

Helpe vs, O God our sauiour, for the glory of thy name: O delyuer vs, & forgeue vs
our synnes for thy names sake.

Wherfore shall the Heythen say: where is now their God?

O let the vengeaūce of thy seruātes bloud
that is shed, be openly shewed vpon the hey-
then in our sight.

O let the sorowfull syghynge of the prysoners come before the, and according vnto the power of thyne arme, preserue those that are appoynted to dye.

And for the blasphemye wherewith our neyghboures haue blasphemed the, reward them, O Lorde, seuen folde into their bo-some.

Thou haste brought a vyneyarde forthe of Egypt: thou diddest cast out the Heythen, and plant it.

Thou madest rowme for it, and caused it to take rote, so that it fylled the lande.

The hylles were couered with the shadowe of it: and so were the strong Cedar trees with the boughes therof.

She stretched out her braūches vnto the see:
and her boughes vnto the water.

Why hast thou then broken downe her hedge: that all they which go by, plucke of her grapes?

The wylde boze oute of the wod hathe rooted it vp: and the beestes of the felde haue de-uoured it.

Turne the agayn thou God of hostes: loke downe from heuen, beholde and vysyte this vineyarde.

Mayntayn it that thy right hand hath plan ted: and the sonne whom thou madest so moch astor thy selfe.

For, why? it is brent with fyre, and hewē downe: O let them perish at the rebuke of thy countenaunce.

Lette thy hande be vpon the man of thy right hande: and vpon the man whom thou madest so moche of, for thyne owne selfe.

And so wyll not we goo backe from the:
Oh lette vs lyue, and we shall call vpon thy name.

Turne vs agayne, o Lorde God of hostes:

O Lorde God of hostes, who is lyke vnto the in power? thy truthe is rounde aboute the.

Thou abatest the raginge of the see: thou stylest the waues therof, when they aryse.

Thou breakest the proude lyke one that is wounded, thou scatterest thyne enemies abrode with thy mighty arme.

Genesis.i.a The heuens are thyne, the erth is thyne: thou hast layd the foundacion of the round worlde, and all that therin is.

Thou hast made the Northe and the Southe: Tabor and Hermon shall reioyse in thy name.

Righteousnesse and equitie is the habitacion of thy seate: mercye and truthe goo before thy face.

Blessed is ye people, o Lord, that can reioyse in the, and walketh in the light of thy countenaunce.

Their delyte is in thy name all the daye long, and thorow thy righteousnesse they shall be exalted.

For thou arte the glorye of their strengthe and thorowe thy fauoure shalte thou lyfte vp our hornes.

The Lorde is our defence: and the holy one of Israel is our kyng.

D Thou spakest sometimes in visions vnto thy sayntes, and saydest: I haue layde helpe vpon one that is mighty, I haue exalted one chosen out of the people.

I haue found Dauid my seruaunt: with my holy oyle I haue annoynted hym.

1.Reg.xvi.c. Ac.xiii.d My hande shall holde him fast: and myne arme shall strengthen hym.

The ennemye shall not ouercome hym: and the sonne of wickednesse shall not hurte hym.

I shal smyte downe his foes before his face: and plage them that hate him.

My truthe also and my mercye shall be with him: and in my name shall his horne be exalted.

I will set his hande in the see: and his right hande in the floudes.

He shall call me: thou arte my father, my God, and the strengthe of my saluacion.

And I will make him my fyrstborne: hyer then the kynges of the erth.

E My mercye will I kepe for him for euermore: and my couenaunte shall stande fast with him.

His seed will I make to endure for euer, yea and his trone as the dayes of heuen.

But yf his children forsake my lawe: and walke not in my iudgementes.

Yf they breake mine ordinaunces: and kepe not my commaundementes.

I will visit their offences with the rod: and their synnes with scourges.

Neuertheles my louynge kyndnesse will I not vtterly take from him: ne suffre my truth to fayle.

My couenaunt will I not breake: nor disanulle the thynge that is gone oute of my lyppes.

I haue sworne ones by my holynesse, that I will not fayle Dauid.

His sede shall endure for euer, and his seate also lyke as the sunne before me.

He shall stande faste for euermore as the moone: and as the faythfull witnesse in heuen. Selah.

But now thou forsakest and abhorrest thine annoynted: and art displeased at him.

Thou hast tourned backe the couenaunte of thy seruaunte: and caste his crowne to the grounde.

Thou hast ouerthrowen al his hedges: and brosken downe his strong holdes.

All they that go by, spoyle him: he is become a rebuke vnto his neyghbours.

Thou settest vp the righte hande of his enemyes: and makest all his aduersaryes to ioyse.

Thou hast taken awaye the strengthe of his swerde: and gyuest him not victorye in the battayle.

Thou hast put out his glorye: and cast his trone downe to the grounde.

The dayes of his youthe hast thou shortened: and couered him with dishonoure. G Selah.

Lorde, howe longe wylte thou hyde thy selfe? for euer: shall thy wrathe burne lyke fyre?

O remembre howe shorte my tyme is: hast thou made all men for nought? what man is he that lyueth, and shall not se deathe?

Maye a man deliuer his owne soule from the hande of hell? Selah.

H * Lorde, where are thy olde louynge kyndnesses, which thou swarest vnto Dauid in thy truthe?

Remembre, Lorde, the rebuke that the multytude of thy people doo vnto thy seruauntes, and howe I haue borne it in my bosome.

The righteous shall florysshe lyke a palme tree, and grow lyke a Cedre of Libanus.

Such as be planted in the house of ꝓ Lord, be frutefull, plenteous and grene.

That they may shewe, how true the Lorde my strength is, & that there is no vnrighteousnesse in him.

PSAL. XCII.

After the Hebrues. xciii. g

THe Lorde is kinge, and hath put on glorious apparell: the Lorde hathe put on his apparell: and gyrded him selfe with strength: he hath made the rounde worlde so sure, that it can not be moued.

From that time Lorde hath thy seat ben prepared: thou art from euerlastyng.

The floudes aryse (O Lorde) the floudes lyft vp their noyse, the floudes lyfte vp theyr waues.

The waues of the see are mighty, and rage horribly: but yet the Lorde that dwelleth on hye, is mightyer.

Thy testimonyes, O Lorde, are verye sure: holynesse becommeth thyne house for euer.

PSAL. XCIII.

O Lord God, to whom vengeaunce belongeth: thou God to whom vengeaunce belongeth, shewe thy selfe.

Aryse thou iudge of the world, and reward the proude after their deseruing.

Lord how long shal the vngodly, how long shal the vngodly triumphe?

Howe long shall all wycked doers speake so disdaynfully: and make suche proude boastynge?

They smyte downe thy people, o Lord, and trouble thyne heritage.

They murther the widow and the straunger: and put the fatherlesse to deth.

And yet they saye, truly, the Lorde seeth not: the God of Jacob regardeth it not.

Take hede ye vnwise amonge the people: o ye fooles, when wil ye vnderstande?

He that planteth the eare, shal he not heare? he that made the eye, shal he not se?

He that nourtureth the Heythen: and teacheth a man knowlege, shall he not punyshe?

The Lorde knoweth the thoughtes of men that they are but vayne.

Blessed is the man whome thou lernest (O Lorde) and teachest him in thy lawe.

That thou mayst geue him patience in time e of aduersitie, vntyll the pyt be digged for the vngodly.

For the Lorde will not kayle his people, neither will he forsake his inheritaunce.

And why? iudgement shal be turned agayne vnto righteousnesse, and all suche as be true of herte shall folowe it.

Who ryseth vp with me agaynste the wycked? who taketh my parte agaynst the euyll doers?

Yf the Lorde had not helped me, my soule had almost ben put to sylence.

Whē I said: my fote hath slipped, thy mercy (o Lorde) helde me vp.

In the multitude of the sorowes that I had in my herte, thy comfortes haue refreshed my soule.

Wylt thou haue any thyng to do with the stole of wickednes, which ymagineth mischief in the lawe?

They gather them togyther agaynst ꝓ soule of the ryghtous, and condemne the innocent blonde.

But the Lorde is my refuge, my God is the strength of my confidence.

He shall recompence them theyr wickednesse: and destroye them in theyr owne malyce: yea the Lorde oure God shall destroye them.

PSAL. XCIIII.

For Iesus

O Come let vs prayse the Lord, let vs hertely reioyse in the strengthe of oure saluacion.

Let vs come before his presence with thankesgyuynge, and shewe our selfe glad in him with psalmes,

For the Lorde is a greate God, and a greate kynge, aboue all goddes.

In his hande are all the corners of the earthe: and the strengthe of the hylles is his also.

The see is his, for he made it, and his handes prepared the drye lande.

O come, let vs worshyp and bowe downe our selues: let vs knele before the Lorde our maker.

For he is oure God: and we are the people of his pasture, and the shepe of his handes.

To day if ye wil heare his voyce, harden not your hertes, as when ye prouoked him tyme of temptation in the wildernesse.

Where youre fathers tempted me: proued me, and sawe my workes.

Fourtye yeres longe was I grieued with that generation, and sayde: they erre euer in theyr hertes, they veryly haue not knowen my wayes.

Therfore I sayd vnto the in my wrath: that they sholde not entre in to my rest.

PSAL. XCV.

O Syng vnto the Lorde a newe songe: syng vnto the Lorde all the hole earth.

Syng vnto the Lorde, and prayse his name: be tellynge of his saluacion from daye to daye.

Declare his honour among the heythē, and his wonders amonge all people.

For the Lorde is greate, and can not worthely be praysed: he is more to be feared then all goddes.

As for all the goddes of the Heythen: they be but ydols: but it is the Lord that made the heuens.

Thankesgyuynge and worshyp are before him: power and honoure are in his sanctuary.

Ascribe vnto the Lorde (O ye kynredes of the Heithen) ascribe vnto the Lorde worshyp and strength.

Ascribe vnto the Lorde the honoure of his name: bringe presentes, and come in to his courtes.

O worshyp the Lorde in the beautye of holynesse: let the hole earthe stande in awe of him.

Tell it out amonge the Heithen: that the Lorde is kyng: and that it is he which hathe made the rounde worlde so fast, that it can not be moued, and how that he shal iudge the people righteously.

Let the heuens reioyse, and let the earth be glad: let the see make a noyse, yea and al that therin is.

Let the felde be ioyfull, and all that is therin: let all the trees in the wodde leape for ioye.

Before the Lorde, for he commeth: for he cometh to iudge the earth: yea w righteousnes shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with his truthe.

PSAL. XCVI.

1 Reg. 18.

THe Lorde is kyng, the erth may be glad therof: yea the multitude of ꝓ yles may be glad therof.

Cloudes and darcknesse are rounde aboute him: righteousnesse and iudgement are the habitacion of his seate.

There goeth a fyre before him, & burne vp his enemyes on euery syde.

His lightenynges gaue shine vnto ꝓ worlde: the erth seeth it, and is afrayde.

The hylles melt lyke waxe at the presence of the Lord of the hole erth.

The very heuens declare his righteousnesse: and all the people se his glory.

Confounded be all they that worshyp ymages, and delite in their ydols: worshyp him all ye goddes.

Sion heareth of it, and reioyseth: yea and al the doughters of Juda are glad because of thy iudgementes, o Lorde.

For thou Lorde arte the most hyest ouer all the earth: thou art exalted farre aboue al goddes.

Oye that loue the Lorde, se that ye hate the thyng whyche is euyll: the Lorde preserueth the soules of his sayntes, he shall deliuer them from the hande of the vngodly.

There is sprounge vp a lyghte for the ryghteous: and a ioyfull gladnesse for suche as be true herted.

Reioyse therfore in the Lorde ye ryghteous: and geue thankes for a remembraunce of his holynesse.

OF DAVID. CCV.

O Syng vnto the Lorde a newe songe: for he hath done maruelous thynges.

With his owne ryghte hande, and with his holye arme he hathe gotten the victorye.

The Lorde hath declared his sauing helth, & his righteousnes hath he openly shewed in the sight of the Heithen.

He hath remembred his mercye and truthe towarde the house of Israel: * so ꝓ al the endes of the worlde se the sauynge helthe of our God. Esaye. lii. b Shewe youre selues ioyfull vnto the Lorde all ye landes: synge, reioyse, and geue thankes. B.

With trompettes also and shawmes: O shewe youre selues ioyfull before the Lorde the kynge.

Let the see make a noyse, and all that therin is: yea the hole worlde, and all that dwell therin.

Let the floudes clap their handes: and let all the hylles be ioyfull togyther:

Before the Lorde, for he is come to iudge the earthe.

Yea with ryghteousnesse shall he iudge the worlde, and the people with equitie.

PSAL. XCVIII.

O let men giue thankes vnto thy great and wonderfull name, for it is holy.

The kynges power loueth iudgement, thou preparest equitie, thou executest iudgemēt and righteousnes in Jacob.

O magnifie the Lorde our God: fal downe before his fotestole, for he is holy.

Moises and Aaron amonge his Preestes: and Samuel amonge suche as call vpon his B name: these called vpon the Lorde, and he herde them.

He spake vnto them out of the cloudy piller for they kepte his testimonies, and ꝓ law that he gaue them.

Thou herdest them, o Lorde our God, thou forgauest them, o God, & punishedst their owne inuentions.

A Psalme of Dauid.

A MY songe shall be of mercye and iudgement: yea vnto the (O Lorde) will I synge.

O let me haue vnderstandynge in the waye of godlynesse, vntyll the tyme that thou come vnto me: and so shall I walke in my house with an innocent hert.

I will take no wycked thyng in hande: I hate the synne of vnfaythfulnesse, it shall not cleue vnto me.

A frowarde hert shal depart from me: I will not knowe a wicked person.

B Who so priuely slaundreth his neighbour, hym will I destroye: who so hathe a proude loke, and an hye stomacke, I maye not awaye with him.

Myne eyes shall loke for suche as be faythfull in the lande: that they maye dwell with me: and who so leadeth a godly lyfe, shal be my seruaunt.

There shall no deceytfull person dwell in my house: he that telleth lyes shall not tarye in my syght.

C I shal soone destroye all the vngodly of the land: that all wicked doers may be rooted oute of the cite of the Lorde.

PSAL. CI.

A prayer of the afflict, when he was in woo, and powred out his complaynte before the Lorde.

A HEare my prayer, o Lord, and let my crye ynge come vnto the.

Hyde not thy face fro me in the time of my trouble: enclyne thyne eares vnto me when I call, O heare me, and that ryghte soone.

For my daies are consumed away like smoke: and my bones are brent vp as it were a fyre brande.

B My herte is smytten downe, and withered lyke grasse: so that I forget to eate my bread.

For the voyce of my groning: my bone will scarce cleue to my flesshe.

I am become lyke a Pellycane in the wyldernesse: and lyke an howle in a broken wall.

I wake, and am euen as it were a sparowe sytting alone vpon the house top.

C Myne enemyes raylyng me al the day long: they laugh me to scorne, and are swome together against me.

I eate asshes with my bread, and mingle my drynke with wepinge.

And that because of thyne indignacion and wrath, for thou hast taken me vp, and cast me away.

My dayes are gone like a shadowe: and I am withered lyke grasse.

But thou, O Lorde, endurest for euer: and thy remembraunce throwe oute all generacions.

Aryse therfore and haue mercy vpon Sion: for it is tyme to haue mercy vpon her, yea the tyme is come.

And why? thy seruauntes haue a loue to her stones: and it pityeth them to se her in the dust.

The Heythen shall feare thy name, O Lorde, and all the kynges of the earthe thy maiestye.

For the Lorde shall buylde vp Sion, & shal appere in his glory.

He tourneth hym vnto the prayer of the poore destitute: and despyseth not their desyre.

This shal be written for those that come after: that the people which shal be borne, may prayse the Lorde.

For he loketh downe from his sanctuary: out of the heuen dothe the Lorde beholde the earthe.

That he may heare the mournynges of suche as be in captiuite: and delyuer the children of deathe.

That they maye preache the name of the Lorde in Sion: and his worshyp at Ierusalem.

When the people are gathered together: and the kyngdomes also to serue the Lorde.

He hath brought downe my strength in my iourney: and shortened my dayes.

Yet will I saye, O my God, take me not awaye in the myddest of myne age: as for thy yeres, they endure throwe oute all generacions.

Thou Lorde in the begynning hast layd the foundacion of the erth, and the heuens are the workes of thy handes.

*They shal perishe, but thou shalt endure: they all shall waxe olde as doth a garment, & as a vesture shalte thou chaunge them, & they shall be chaunged.

But thou art the same, and thy yeres shall not fayle.

The children of thy seruauntes shall continue: and their sede shall prospere in thy syght.

PSAL. CII.

Of Dauid.

PRayse the Lorde, O my soule, and all that is within me, prayse his holy name.

Prayse the Lord, o my soule, and forget not all his benefites.

Whiche forgiueth all thy synnes: and healeth all thyne infirmities.

Which saueth thy lyfe from destruction: & crowneth the with mercy, and louynge kyndnesse.

Whiche satisfyeth thy desyre with good thynges: makynge the yonge and lusty as an Egle.

The Lorde executeth righteousnesse & iudgement, for all them that suffre wronge.

B He shewed his wayes vnto Moses: and his workes vnto the chyldren of Israel.

The Lorde is full of compassion and mercye: longe sufferynge, and of greate goodnesse.

He wil not alwaye be chiding: neither will he kepe his anger for euer.

He hathe not dealte with vs after our synnes: ne rewarded vs accordynge to oure wickednesse.

For lyke how hye the heuen is in comparisō of the erth: so great is his mercy also towarde them that feare him.

Lyke howe wyde the East is frome the West: so farre hathe he sette oure synnes from vs.

C Yea lyke as a father pitieth his owne children: euen so is the Lorde mercyful vnto them that feare him.

For he knoweth whereof we be made: he remembreth that we are but dust.

That a man in his tyme is but as is grasse: and flourisheth as a floure of the felde.

For as soone as the wynde goeth ouer it, it is gone: and the place therof knoweth it no more.

But the mercyful goodnesse of the Lord, endureth for euer and euer, vpon them that feare him, and his righteousnesse vpon their children children.

Suche as kepe his couenaunte: and thynke vpon his commaundementes, to doo them.

The Lorde hath prepared his seat in heuen: and his kyngdome ruleth ouer all.

O prayse the Lord ye aungels of his, ye that be mighty in strengthe: fulfyllynge his commaundement, that men may heare the voyce of his wordes.

O prayse the Lorde all ye his hostes, ye seruauntes of his, that do his pleasure.

O speake good of the Lorde all ye workes of his, in euery place of his dominion: prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule.

PSAL. CIII.

PRayse the Lorde, o my soule: o Lorde my God, thou arte become exceadynge glorious, thou arte clothed with maiesty and honoure.

Thou wrapest thy self with light, as it were with a garment, thou spredest out the heuen like a curtayne.

Thou beltest it aboue with waters, the makest the cloudes thy charet, and goest vpon the wynges of the wynde. Hebr.1.

*Thou makest thyne aungels spirites: and thy ministers flames of fyre.

Thou hast layde the erth vpon her foundacion, that it neuer moueth at any tyme.

Thou couerest it with the depe like as with a garment: so that the waters stande aboue the hylles.

But at thy rebuke they flee, at the voyce of thy thonder they are afrayde.

(Then are the hylles seene aloft, and the valleys beneethe in their place which thou hast appoynted for them.)

Thou hast set them their boundes, whiche they may not passe, that they turne not agayn to couer the erth.

Thou causest the welles to springe vp amonge the valeys, and the waters to runne amonge the hylles.

That al beastes of the feld may haue drinke, and that the wylde asses maye quenche their thirst.

Aboue vpon the hylles haue the foules of the ayre their habitacion, & sing among the braunches.

Thou waterest the hylles frome aboue: the earthe is fylled with the frutes of thy workes.

Thou bringest forth grasse for the catel, and grene herbes for the seruice of men.

Thou bringest fode out of the erth: wine to make glad the hert of man, oyle to make him a chereful countenaunce, and breed to strengeth mans herte.

The trees of the Lorde are full of sape: euen the trees of Libanus which he hath planted.

There make the birdes their nestes: and the fyrre hylles are a dwellynge for the Storcke.

The hylles are a refuge for the wylde goates: and so are the stonye rockes for the conyes.

Thou hast appoynted the Moone for certayne seasons, the Sunne knoweth his going downe.

Thou makest darcknesse, that it maye be nyght: wherin all the beastes of the forest wo moue.

Yea and the younge Lyons whiche rore after their praye: and seke their meate at God.

But when the sunne ariseth, they get them awaye together, and lye them downe in their dennes.

Then goeth man forth to his worke, and to tyll his lande vntyll the euenyng.

*O Lorde, how manyfolde are thy workes, right wisely hast thou made them all: yea the erth is full of thy riches. Psalm.civ.

So is this great and wyde see also, wherin are thinges creping innumerable, bothe small and great beastes.

There go the shippes ouer, and there is that Leuiathan, whom thou hast made to take his pastyme therin.

They wayte all vpon the, that thou mayste

gyue them meate in due season.

When thou gyuest it them, they gather it: when thou openest thyne hand, they are filled with goodes.

But when thou hydest thy face, they are sorowfull: yf thou takest awaye their breth, they dye, and are tourned agayne to their dust.

Agayne, whē thou lettest thy breth go forth, they are made: and so thou renuest the face of the earthe.

The glorious maiestie of the Lorde endureth for euer: and the Lorde reioyseth in his workes.

The earthe trembleth at the loke of him: he bothe but touche the hylles, and they smoke.

I wyll synge vnto the Lorde as longe as I lyue: I wyll prayse my God whyle I haue my beynge.

O that my wordes might please him, for my ioye is in the Lorde.

As for synners, they shall be consumed oute of the earth: and the vngodly shal come to an ende: but prayse thou the Lorde, o my soule. Prayse the euerlastynge.

A Alleal vnto Elaye.xxxvi.

O Gyue thankes vnto the Lorde: and cal vpon his name: tell ỹ people what thinges he hath done.

O let your songes be of hym: prayse him, and let your talkyng be of all his wonderous workes.

Glue his holy name a good repoze, let their hertes reioyse that seke the Lorde.

Seke the Lorde and his strength: seke his face euermoze.

Remembre the meruelous workes that he hath done, his wonders and the iudgementes of his mouth.

O ye sede of Abraham his seruaunt, ye chyldren of Jacob his chosen.

He is the Lord our God, whose punishmentes are throwe out all the worlde.

He is alwaye myndefull of his couenaunt, and promyse that he made to a thousand generations.

Yea the couenaunte that he made with Genes.xvii.d Abraham: and the othe that he sware vnto Isaac.

And appoynted the same vnto Jacob for a lawe: and to Israell for an euerlastynge testament.

Sayinge: vnto the will I gyue the lande of Canaan, the lot of youe heritage.

When there was yet but a fewe of them: & the straungers therin.

What tyme as they went from one nacion to an other: from one kyngdome to an other.

1.Par.xvi.d He suffred no man to hurt them, but reproued euen kynges for their sakes.

Touche not myne annoynted, no my Prophetes no harme.

4.Reg.d.e Moreouer he called for a dearthe vpon the lande: and destroyed all the prouysion of breed.

But he had sente a man before them, euen Joseph: whiche was solde to be a bonde seruaunt.

They hurt his fete in the stockes: the yron pearsed his hert.

Vntyll the tyme that his worde came and tyll the worde of the Lorde had tryed hym.

Then sent the kynge, and caused him to be delyuered: the prynce of the people bade lette him goo.

He made him Lorde of his house: and ruler of all his substaunce.

That he myghte enforme his princes after his wyll: and teache his senatours wysdome.

Israel also came in to Egypt: & Jacob was a straunger in the lande of Ham.

But he increased his people exceedingly: and made them stronger then their ennemies.

Whose herte tourned so, that they hated his people: and dealte vntruly with his seruauntes.

Then sent he Moses his seruaunt, & Aaron whom he had chosen.

These dyd his tokens among them, & wonders in the land of Ham.

He sente darcknesse, and it was darcke: for they were not obedient vnto his worde.

He turned their waters in to bloud, & slewe their fysshe.

*Their landes brought forth frogges: yea euen in their kynges chambres.

* He spake the worde: and there came all maner of flyes and lyce in all their quarters.

He gaue them hayle stones for rayne: and flames of fyre in their haude.

He smote their vineyardes and figge trees and destroyed the trees that were in their coastes.

*He spake the worde, and there were grashoppers and caterpyllers innumerable.

These ate vp all the grasse in their land, and deuoured their fruites of the grounde.

*He smote all the first borne in the land, euen the chefe of al their substaunce.

He brought them forth with siluer & golde: there was not one feble person among their tribes.

Egypt was glad of their departing, for they were afrayde of them.

*He spredde out a cloude to be a couerynge: and fyre to gyue lyght in the nyght season.

*At their desire there came quayles: and he filled them with the breed of heuen.

*He opened the rocke of stone, and the waters flowed oute: so that ryuers ranne in the wyldernesse.

For why? he remembred his holye promyse whyche he hadde made vnto Abraham his seruaunt.

Thus he brought forth his people with ioye: and his chosen with gladnesse.

And gaue them the landes of the Heythen: and they toke the labowres of the people in possession.

That they myghte kepe his statutes: and obserue his lawes. Prayse the euerlastynge.

PSAL. CV.

Prayse the euerlastynge.

O Gyue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercye endureth for euer.

Who can expresse the noble actes of ỹ Lord, or shewe forth all his prayse?

Blessed are they that alway kepe iudgemēt, and do righteousnesse.

Remembre vs, o Lorde, accordyng to the fauour that thou bearest vnto thy people: vysit vs with thy sauing helth.

That we myght se the pleasure of thy chosen, that we myghte reioyse in the gladnesse of thy people, and gyue thankes with thyne inheritaunce.

We haue synned with our fathers, we haue done amysse, we haue dealt wickedly.

Our fathers regarded not thy wonders in Egypt, they kepte not thy greate goodnesse in remembraunce: but were disobedient at the see, euen at the red see.

Neuertheles he helped them for his names sake: that he myghte make his power to be knowen.

He rebuked the red see, and it was dried vp: so he led them thorow the depe, as in the wyldernesse.

Thus he saued them from the hande of the hater: and delyuered them from the hande of the enemye.

*As for those that troubled them, the waters ouerwhelmed them, there was not one of them lefte.

Then beleued they in his worde, and sange prayse vnto him.

But within a while they forgat his workes, and wolde not abyde his counsell.

A lust came vpon them in the wyldernesse: so that they tempted God in the desert.

Yet he gaue them their desire, and sent them plenty at their wyshes.

They angred Moses in the tentes, and Aaron the sayut of the Lorde.

So the earthe opened and swalowed vp Dathan: and couered the congregacion of Abiram.

The fyre was kindled in their company, the flame burnt vp the vngodly.

*They made a calfe in Horeb, and worshipped the molten ymage.

Thus they turned their glory in to the similitude of a calfe that eateth haye.

They forgat God their sauiour, whiche had done so great thinges in Egypt.

Wonderous workes in the land of Ham: & fearfull thinges in the red see.

So he sayde he wolde haue destroyed them, had not Moses his chosen stande before him in the gappe: to tourne awaye his wrathfull indignacion, lest he shoulde destroye them.

Yea they thoughte scorne of that pleasaunte lande, and gaue no credence vnto his worde.

But murmured in their tentes, and harkened not vnto the voyce of the Lorde.

Then lyft he vp his hande agaynst them, to Numer.xiiii.d ouerthrowe them in the wyldernesse.

To cast out their sede among the nations, & to scatter them in the landes.

They ioyned them selues vnto Baal Peor: & ate the offrynges of the dead.

Thus they prouoked him vnto anger with their owne inuencions, & the plage was great amonges them.

*Then stode vp Phinehes and executed iustice, and so the plage ceased. Numer.xxv.d

And that was counted vnto him for righteousnesse: amonge all posterities for euermore.

They angred him also at the waters of Numeri.xx.d strife: so that Moses was punished for their sakes.

Because they prouoked his spirite, & he told them playnly with his lyppes.

Neither destroyed they the Heithen: as the Lorde commaunded them.

But were mingled amonge the Heithen: & learned their workes.

In so moche that they worshypped their ymages: whiche tourned to their owne decaye.

Yea they offred their sonnes and doughters vnto deuyls.

And shed the innocent bloud of their sonnes and of their doughters, whom they offred vnto the ymages of Canaan: so that the lande was defyled with bloude.

Thus were they stayned with their owne workes, and went a whoring with their owne inuencions.

Therfore was the wrath of ỹ Lord kindled against his people, in so moche that he abhorred his owne inheritaunce.

And gaue the ouer in to the hand of the Heithen: and they that hated them, were lordes ouer them.

Their ennemies oppressed them, & had them in subiection.

Many a tyme dyd he delyuer them: but they prouoked hym with their owne inuencions, and were brought downe for their wickednesse.

Neuertheles when he sawe their aduersitie he herd their complaynt.

He thought vpon his couenaunt, and pytyed them: accordynge vnto the multitude of his mercyes.

Yea he made all those that had led them awaye captiue, to pitie them. Deutr.xxx.c

Deliuer vs, o Lord our God, and gather vs from amonge the Heithen: that we may gyue thankes to thy holy name, and make our boast of thy prayse.

Blessed be the Lorde God of Israel frome euerlastyng and worlde without ende, and let

O Gyue thankes vnto the Lorde: for he is gracyous, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Let them gyue thankes whome the Lorde hath redemed: and delyuered from the hande of the ennemye.

And gathered them out of the landes, from the East, from the West, from the North, and from the South.

They wente astraye in the wyldernesse in an vntroden waye: and founde no cytye to dwell in.

Hongry and thyrsty: and theyr soule faynted in them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them frome theyr distresse.

He ledde them forthe by the ryghte waye: that they myghte goo to the cytye where they dwelte.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

For he satisfied the empty soule: and filled the hongry soule with good.

Suche as sate in darcknesse, and in the shadowe of deathe, being fast bounde in miserye and yron.

Because they were not obedient to the commaundement of God, but lightly regarded the counsell of the most highest.

Their herte was vexed with laboure: they fell downe, and there was none to helpe them.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them oute of theyr distresse.

He brought them forthe of darcknesse, and from the shadow of deth: and brake their bondes in sonder.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doothe for the chyldren of men.

For he hath broken the gates of brasse, and smitten the barres of yron in sonder.

Folysh men were plaged for their offence, & because of their wickednesse.

Their soule abhorred all manor of meat, they were euen hard at deathes doze.

So they cryed vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuered them oute of their distresse.

He sent his worde and healed them, & saued them from their destruction.

O that men wolde prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he wythe for the chyldren of men.

That they wolde offre vnto him the sacrifice of thankesgyuyng, & tell out his workes with gladnesse.

They that goo downe to the see in shyppes: and occuppe their busynesse in great waters.

These men se the workes of the Lorde, and his wonders in the depe.

For at his worde, the stormy wynde ariseth: and lifteth vp the waues therof.

They are caried vp to the heuen, and downe agayne to the depe: their soule melteth away in the trouble.

They rele to & fro, they slacker like a dronke man: and are at their wittes ende.

So they crye vnto the Lorde in theyr trouble: and he delyuereth them out of their distresse.

He maketh the storme to cease: so that the waues are styll.

Then are they glad because they be at rest: and so he bringeth them vnto the hauē where they wolde be.

O that men wold prayse the goodnesse of the Lorde: and the wonders that he doth for the chyldren of men.

That they wold exalte him in the congregacion of the people: and loue him in the seat of the elders.

Whiche turneth the floudes into dry land, and dryeth vp the water springes.

A frutefull land maketh he barcyn, for the wickednesse of them that dwell therin.

Agayne, he maketh the wyldernesse a standynge water: and water springes of a dry grounde.

There he setteth the hongry, that they may buylde them a city to dwell in.

That they may sow their ground, plāt vineyardes to yelde them frutes of increase.

He blesseth them, so that they multyplye exceedyngly, and suffereth not theyr cattell to decrease.

When they are minished and brought low thorowe oppression: thorowe anye plage or trouble.

Though he suffre them to be euell entreated thorow tyrannes, or let them wander out of the waye in the wildernesse.

Yet helpeth he the poore oute of misery (at the last) and maketh him an housholde lyke a flocke of shepe.

The righteous will consider this & reioyce, the mouth of all wickednesse shal be stopped.

Who so is wise, and pondreth these thinges wel, shal vnderstande the louing kyndnesses of the Lorde.

PSAL. CVII.

A songe of a Psalme of Dauid.

O God, my herte is redy to synge, and to gyue prayse.

Awake, o my glorye, awake lute and harpe, I my selfe wil awake right early.

I will giue thankes vnto the, o Lord, among the people, I will synge prayses vnto the amonge the heithen.

For the greatnesse of thy mercy is hyghe aboue the heuens, and thy faithfulnesse reacheth vnto the cloudes.

Set vp thy self, o God, aboue the heuens: and thy glory aboue all the erth.

That thy beloued maye be delyuered: helpe thou with thy righthande and heare me.

God hath spoken in his sanctuary, whiche thinge reioyseth me.

I will diuide Sichem, & meate out the valley of Suchoth.

Galaad is myne, Manasses is myne, Ephraim is the strength of my head, Iuda is my captayne.

Moab is my washpot, ouer Edom will I stretche out my shue, Philistea thal be glad of me.

Who shall leade me into the stronge cytie? Who shall bringe me into Edom?

Shalt not thou do it (O God) whiche hast cast vs out: thou God, that wentest not forth with our hostes?

O be thou our helpe in trouble, for vayne is the helpe of man.

Through God we shall do great actes, for it is he that shall treade downe oure ennemyes.

PSAL. CVIII.

To the chaunter, a Psalme of Dauid.

HOlde not thy tongue, O God of my prayse.

For the mouth of the vngodly, ye and the mouthe of the deceytfull is opened vpon me, and speake agaynste me with falsse tongues.

They compasse me aboute with wordes of hatred, and fyghte agaynste me without a cause.

For the loue that I badde vnto them, they take now my cōtrary part, but I gyue my self vnto prayer.

Thus they rewarde me euyll for good, and hatred for my good will.

Set an vngodly man to be ruler ouer him, & let Satan stande at his righthande.

When sentence is gyuen vpon him, let him be condemned, and let his prayer be turned in synne.

Let his dayes be fewe, and his bysshoprike let an other take.

Let his children be fatherlesse, and his wyfe a widowe.

Let his children be vagabounds, and beg their bred: let them seke it, as they that be vnhoped.

Let the extorcioner consume all that he hathe, and let straungers spoyle his labour.

Let there be no man to pitye, ner to haue compassyon vpon his fatherlesse children.

Let his ende be destruction, and in the next generacyon, his name be cleane put out.

Let the wyckednesse of his fathers be had in remembraunce in the sight of the Lorde, and let not the synne of his mother be done away.

Let them alwaye be before the Lorde, but as for the memorial of them selues, let it perysh from out of the earth.

And that because his mynde was not to do good, but persecuted the poore helpelesse, and him that was vexed at the herte, to slaye hym.

His delyte was in cursing, and therfore shal it happen vnto him: he loued not blessing, & that shall be farre from him.

He clothed him selfe with cursinge lyke as with a rayment: yea it wente into his bowelles lyke water, and lyke oyle into his bones.

Let it be vnto him as ye cloke that he hath vpon him, and as the girdle that he is girded withall.

Let it thus happen frome the Lorde vnto myne enemyes, and to thole that speake euyl against my soule.

But deale thou with me, Oh Lorde God, accordynge vnto thy name, for swete is thy mercy.

O deliuer me, for I am helpelesse and poore, & my hert is wounded within me.

I goo hence lyke the shadowe that departeth, and am dryuen awaye as the grashoppers.

My knees are weake throughe fastinge, my flesh is dryed vp for want of fatnesse.

I am become a rebuke vnto them, they loke vpon me and shake their heades.

Helpe me, O Lorde my God, oh saue me for thy mercyes sake.

That they may know, how that this is thy hande, and that thou hast done it.

Though they curse, yet blesse thou: and let them be confounded, that ryse vp against me, but let thy seruaunt reioyse.

Let myne aduersaries be clothed with their owne shame, as with a cloke.

Certes, I will gyue thankes vnto ye Lord with my mouth, and prayse hym amonge the multitude.

For he standeth at the righthande of the poore, to saue him frome suche as condemne his soule.

THe Lorde sayde vnto my Lorde: Syt thou on my righthande, vntyll I make thyne ennemyes thy fotestole.

A Math.xxii.b 1.Corint.xv.d Hebru.i.d.x.c Act.ii.c

The Lorde shall sende the rodde of thy power out of Sion, be thou ruler euen in the myddest amonges thyne ennemyes.

In the daye of thy power shall thy people offre the freewyl offeringes with an holy worshyp, the dewe of thy byrth is of the wombe of the morninge.

The Lorde sware, and will not repente: Thou art a preast for euer after the order of Melchisedec.

The Lorde vpon thy righthande, shall smyte euen kynges in the daye of his wrath.

He shall be iudge amonge the heithen, he shall shall fyll them with dead bodyes, and smyte in sonder the heades ouer dyuerse countreyes.

He shall drynke of the brooke in the waye, therfore shall he lyft vp his hed.

After the Hebrues.cxi.

I Will gyue thankes vnto the Lorde with my hole herte: secretly amonge the faithfull, and in the congregacion.

The workes of the Lorde are great, sought out of all them that haue pleasure therin.

His worke is worthy to be praysed and had in honoure, and his righteousnesse endureth for euer.

The mercyfull and gracious Lorde hath so done his merueilous workes, that they ought to be had in remembraunce.

He gyueth meate vnto them, that feare him, he is euer myndfull of his couenaunt.

He sheweth his people ꝑ power of his workes, that he maye gyue them the heritage of the heythen.

The workes of his handes are verite and iudgemente, all his commaundmentes are true.

They stande fast for euer and euer, and are done in truth and equite.

He sent redemptio vnto his people, he hath commaunded his couenaunt for euer, holy & reuerent is his name.

* The feare of the Lord is the begynning of wysdome, a good vnderstandynge haue all they that do therafter: the prayse of it endureth for euer.

¶ Prayse the euerlastyng.

BLessed is the man that feareth the Lorde and hath greate delyte in his commaundmentes.

His sede shall be myghtye vpon earthe, the generacion of the vprightfull shall be blessed.

Ryches and plenteousnesse shall be in his house, and his righteousnesse endureth for euer.

Vnto the godly there ariseth vp lyght in ꝑ darcknesse: he is mercyfull, louinge & righteous.

Well is he that is mercyfull, and lendeth gladly, and ordreth his wordes with discrecion.

For he shall neuer be moued, the righteous shall be had in an euerlastynge remembraunce.

He will not be afrayed for any euyll tydinges, his herte standeth fast, and beleueth in the Lorde.

His herte is stablyshed, he will not shrink or fyll he se his desire vpon his enmemyes.

He hath sparsed abrode, and gyuen to the poore, his righteousnesse remayneth for euer, PSAL. CXII.

¶ Prayse the euerlastynge.

PRayse the Lorde (O ye seruauntes) o prayse the name of the Lorde.

Blessed be the name of the Lorde, for this tyme forth for euer more.

The Lordes name is worthy to be prayse frome the ryssinge vp of the Sunne vnto the goynge downe of the same.

The Lorde is hyghe aboue all heythen, & his glory aboue the heauens.

Who is lyke vnto the Lord our God, that hath his dwellynge so hygh, which humbleth him selfe, to beholde that is in heauen and earth?

Which taketh vp the symple out of ꝑ dust, and lyfteth the poore out of the myre.

That he maye set him amonge the Princes, euen amonge the Princes of his people.

Whiche maketh the barayn womā to kepe house, and to be a ioyfull mother of chyldren.

PSAL. CXIII.

WHen Israell came out of Egypte, and the house of Jacob frome amonge that straunge people.

Juda was his Sanctuary, Israel his dominion.

The see sawe that, and fled, Jordan turned backe.

The mountaynes skypped lyke rammes, & the lytle hylles lyke yonge shepe.

What ayled the, O thou see, that thou fledest? and thou Jordan, that thou turnedest backe?

Ye mountaynes, that ye skypped lyke Rammes: and ye lytle hylles, lyke yonge shepe?

The earthe trembled at the presence of the Lorde, at the presence of the God of Jacob.

Which turned the harde rocke into a standinge water, and the flynt stone into a springynge well.

NOt vnto vs, O Lorde, not vnto vs, but vnto thy name gyue the prayse, for thy louinge mercy and faythfulnes.

Wherfore shall the heythen saye: Where is now their God?

Our God, he is in heauen, he doth whatsoeuer it pleaseth him.

Their ymages are but syluer and golde, euen the worke of mens handes.

They haue mouthes, and speake not: eyes haue they, but they se not.

They haue eares, & heare not: noses haue they, but they smell not.

They haue handes & handle not, fete haue they, but they can not goo, neyther can they speake thorow their throtes.

They that make them, are lyke vnto them, and so are all suche as put their truste in them.

But let Israell trust in the Lorde, for he is their succoure and defence.

Let the house of Aaron put their truste in the Lorde, for he is their succoure and defence.

They that feare the Lorde, let them put their truste in the Lorde, for he is their succoure and defence.

The Lorde is mynded full of vs, and blesseth vs: he blesseth the house of Israel, he blesseth the house of Aaron.

Yea he blesseth all them that feare ꝑ Lorde, both small and great.

The Lorde encrease you more & more: both you, and your chyldren.

For ye are the blessed of the Lorde, whiche made heauen and earth.

All the hole heauens are the Lordes, but the earth hath he gyuen vnto the chyldren of men.

The ded prayse not the (O Lorde) neyther all they that go downe into sylence.

But we will prayse the Lorde, frome this tyme forth for euermore. Prayse the Lorde.

PSAL. CXIIII.

I am well pleased, that the Lorde hath herd the voyce of my prayer.

That he hath enclyned his eare vnto me therfore will I call vpon him as longe as I lyue.

The snares of death compased me rounde about, the paynes of hell gat holde vpon me, I found trouble and heuynesse.

Then called I vpon the name of the Lorde: O Lorde: delyuer my soule.

Gracious is the Lorde, and righteous, yea our God is mercyfull.

The Lorde preserueth the symple, I was brought downe, and he helped me.

Turne agayne then vnto thy reste, O my soule, for the Lorde hathe gruen the thy desire.

And why thou hast delyuered my soule frō death, myne eyes frome teares, and my feete frome fallynge.

I will walke before the Lorde, in the land of the lyuinge.

I beleued, and therfore haue I spoken, but I was sore troubled.

I sayde in my hast: All men are lyers.

What rewarde shal I gyue vnto the Lord for all the benefytes that he hathe done vnto me?

I will receyue the cuppe of saluacion, & call vpon the name of the Lorde.

I will paye my vowes in the presence of all his people, right deare in ꝑ sight of the Lorde is the death of his sayntes.

O Lorde, I am thy seruaunt, I am thy seruaunt, and the sonne of thy handmayde, thou hast broken my bondes in sonder.

I will offre to the, the sacrifice of thankesgyuynge, and will call vpon the name of the Lorde.

I will paye my vowes vnto the Lorde in the syghte of all his people, in the courtes of the Lordes house, euen in the myddest of the, O Jerusalem. Prayse the euerlastinge.

GIue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

Let Israel now confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer.

Let the house of Aaron now confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer.

Yea let them now that feare the Lorde confesse, that his mercy endureth for euer.

I called vpon the Lord in trouble, and the Lorde herde me at large.

The Lorde is my helper, I will not feare what man doeth vnto me.

Hebrey.xiii.

The Lorde is my helper, and I shall se my desire vpon myne enmemyes.

It is better to trust in the Lorde, then to put any confidence in man.

It is better to trust in the Lorde the to put any confidence in princes.

All heythen compased me rounde aboute but in the name of the Lorde will I destroye them.

They kepe me in on euerye syde, but in the name of the Lorde, I will destroye them.

They came aboute me lyke bees, and were as hote as the fyre in the thornes, but in the name of the Lorde I will destroye them.

They thrust at me, that I myght fall, but the Lorde was my helpe.

Exod.xv. Esaye.xii.a

The Lorde is my strength, and my songe, and is become my saluacion.

The voyce of ioye and myrthe is in the dwellynges of the righteous, for the righthande of the Lorde hathe gotten the victory.

The righthande of the Lorde hath the preeminence, the righthande of the Lorde hath gotten the victory.

I will not dye, but lyue, and declare the workes of the Lorde.

The Lorde hath chastened and correcte me, but he hathe not gruen me ouer vnto deth.

Open me the gates of righteousnesse, that I maye

I maye go to thee thorow, and gyue thankes vnto the Lorde.

This is the gate of the Lord, the righteous shall enter in thorow it.

I thanke the, that thou hast heard me, and art become my saluacion.

The same stone which the buylders refused is become the head stone in the corner.

This was the Lordes worke, and it is marueilous in our eyes.

This is the daye, whiche the Lorde hathe made, let vs reioyse and be glad in it.

Helpe now O Lorde, O Lorde send vs now prosperitie.

Blessed be he that commeth in the name of the Lorde, we wyshe you good lucke, ye that be of the house of the Lorde.

God is the Lorde, which hath shewed vs light: O garnysh the solemne feast with greene braunches, euen vnto the hornes of the aulter.

Thou art my God, and I will thanke thee: thou art my God, and I will prayse the.

O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

ALEPH.

After the Hebrues maner.

BLessed are those that be vndefyled in the waye: which walke in the lawe of the Lorde.

Blessed are they that kepe his testimonies, and seke him with their hole hert.

Which walke in his wayes, and do no wickednesse.

Thou hast geuen strayt charge to kepe thy commaundementes.

O that my wayes were stablysshed to kepe thy statutes.

So should I not be confounded, whyle I haue respect vnto all thy commaundementes.

I will thanke the with an vnfayned hert, because I am learned in the iudgemētes of thy righteousnesse.

I will kepe thy statutes, O forsake me not vtterly.

BETH.

Where withall shall a yonge man amende his waye? Euen by rulyng him self after thy worde.

With my hole hert to I seke the, O let me not go wronge oute of thy commaundementes.

Thy wordes haue I hyd within my hert, that I shulde not synne against the.

Praysed be thou, O Lord, O teache me thy statutes.

With my lyppes will I be tellynge out all the iudgementes of thy mouth.

I haue as great delyte in the waye of thy testimonies, as in all maner of ryches.

I will exercyse my self in thy commaundementes, and haue respecte vnto thy fotepathes.

My delyte shalbe in thy statutes, I will not forget thy wordes.

GIMEL.

O do well vnto thy seruaunt, that I maye lyue and kepe thy wordes.

Open thou myne eyes, and so shall I se out wonderous thinges in thy lawe.

I am a straunger vpon earthe, O hyde not thy commaundementes from me.

My soule breaketh out, for the very feruent desire that I haue allwaye vnto thy iudgementes.

Thou rebukest the proude, cursed are they that departe from thy commaundementes.

O turne from me shame and rebuke, for I kepe thy testimonies.

Princes also sit and speake against me, but thy seruaunt is occupyed in thy statutes.

In thy testimonies is my delyte, they are my counceilers.

DALETH.

My soule cleaueth to the dust, O quycken thou me accordinge to thy worde.

I knowleged my wayes, and thou herdest me, O teache me then thy statutes.

Make me to vnderstande the waye of thy commaundementes, and so shall I talke of thy wonderous workes.

My soule melteth awaye for very heuynesse, Oh set me vp accordynge vnto thy worde.

Take from me the waye of lyenge, and graunte me thy lawe.

I haue chosen the waye of truth, thy iudgementes haue I layde before me.

I stycke vnto thy testimonies, O Lorde confounde me not.

I will runne the waye of thy commaundementes, when thou hast comforted my hert.

HE.

Teache me O Lorde the waye of thy statutes, and I shall kepe it vnto the ende.

O gyue me vnderstanding, and I shall kepe thy lawe, yea I shall kepe it with myne hole hert.

Leade me in the path of thy commaundementes, for that is my delyte.

Enclyne myne hert vnto thy testimonies, and not to couetousnes.

Oh tourne awaye myne eyes, lest they behelde vanyte, and quycken me in thy waye.

O stablysh thy worde in thy seruaunt, that I maye feare the.

Take awaye the rebuke that I am afrayde of, for thy iudgementes are amiable.

Behelde, my delyte is in thy commaundementes, Oh quycken me in thy righteousnesse.

VAV.

Let thy louynge mercy come vnto me, Oh Lorde, and thy sauynge health accordyng vnto thy worde.

That I maye gyue answere vnto my blasphemers, for my trust is in thy worde.

O take not the word of truthe vtterly out of my mouthe, for my hope is in thy iudgementes.

So shall I allwaye kepe thy lawe, yea for euer and euer.

And I will walke at lybertie, for I seke thy commaundementes.

I will speake of thy testimonyes euē before kynges, and will not be ashamed.

My delyte shalbe in thy commaundemētes which I loue.

My handes also will I lyft vp vnto thy cōmaundementes which I loue, and my talking shalbe of thy statutes.

ZAIN.

Thinke vpon thy seruaunt as concerning thy worde, wherin thou hast caused me to put my trust.

For it is my comfort in my trouble, yea thy worde quyckeneth me.

The proude haue me greatly in derisiō, yet shunke not I from thy lawe.

I remembre thyne euerlastinge iudgementes, O Lorde, and am comforted.

I am horribly afrayed for the vngodly, for forsake thy lawe.

Thy statutes are my songes in the house of my pylgremage.

I thinke vpon thy name, O Lorde, in the night season, and kepe thy lawe.

It is myne owne, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

HETH.

Thou art my portyon, O Lord, I am purposed to kepe thy lawe.

I make myne humble petition in thy presence with my hole hert, O be mercyfull vnto me accordinge vnto thy worde.

I tell myne owne wayes to remembrance, and turne my fete into thy testimonies.

I make hast, and prolonge not the tyme, to kepe thy commaundementes.

The congregacions of the vngodly haue robbed me, but I forget not thy lawe.

At mydnyght I stande vp, to gyue thankes vnto the, for the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse.

I am a companion of all them that feare and kepe thy commaundementes.

The earthe, O Lorde, is full of thy mercy, O teache me thy statutes.

TETH.

O Lorde, thou hast dealt frendely with thy seruaunt, accordinge vnto thy worde.

O learne me thy kyndnesse, nourture and knowledge, for I beleue thy commaundementes.

Before I was troubled, I went wronge, but now I kepe thy worde.

Thou art good & frendly, O teache me thy statutes.

The proude ymagen lyes vpon me, but I kepe thy commaundementes with my hole herte.

Their hert is as fat as brawne, but my delyte is in thy lawe.

It is good for me that I haue bene in trouble, that I may lerne thy statutes.

The lawe of thy mouth is dearer vnto me then thousandes of golde and syluer.

IOD.

Gen. 1. d Iob. 5. a

Thy handes haue made me and fashyoned me, O gyue me vnderstandinge, that I maye learne thy commaundmentes.

They that feare the, wyll be gladde when they se me, because I put my trust in thy worde.

I know, O Lord, that thy iugementes are right, and that thou of very faithfulnesse hast caused me to be troubled.

O let thy mercyfull kyndnesse be my comfort, accordinge to thy promes that thou hast made vnto thy seruaunt.

O let thy louynge mercyes come vnto me, that I maye lyue, for thy lawe is my delyte.

Let the proude be confounded, which handle me so falsly.

But let suche as feare the, and knowe thy testimonies, be turned vnto me.

O let myne herte be vndefyled in thy statutes that I be not ashamed.

CAPH.

My soule longeth for thy sauinge helth, for my trust is in thy worde.

Myne eyes longe sore for thy worde, sayenge: O when wilt thou comfort me?

For I am become lyke a botel in the smoke, yet do not I forget thy statutes.

How many are the dayes of thy seruaunt? When wilt thou be auenged of myne aduersaries?

The proude haue dygged pytes for me, whiche are not after thy lawe.

All thy commaundmētes are true, they persecute me falsly, O be thou my helpe.

They haue almost made an ende of me vpon earth, but I forsake not thy commaundmentes.

O quycken me after thy louynge kyndnesse, and so shall I kepe the testimonyes of thy mouth.

LAMED.

Oh Lorde, thy worde endureth for euer in heauen.

Thy truth also remayneth from one generacion to another: thou hast layd the foundacion of the earth, and it standeth.

They continue this day according to thyne ordiordinaunce, for all thinges serue the.

Yf my delyte were not in thy lawe, I should perysh in my trouble.

I will neuer forget thy commaundementes for with them thou quickenest me.

I am thyne, Oh helpe me, for I seke thy commaundementes.

The vngodly laye wayte for me to destroye me, but I consydre thy testimonies.

I se that all thinges come to an ende, but thy commaundement is exceadinge broade.

M MEM.

O what loue haue I vnto thy lawe? all ye daye longe is my talkinge of it.

Thou throwest thy commaundement haste made me wyser then myne enemies, for it is euer by me.

I haue more vnderstandinge then all my teachers, for thy testymonies are my studyes.

Yea I am wyser then the aged, for I kepe thy commaundementes.

I refrayne my fete frome euery euyll waye, that I maye kepe thy wordes.

I wyncke not frome thy iudgementes, for thou teachest me.

Oh howe swete are thy wordes vnto my throte?

Yea more then hony vnto my mouth.

Through thy commaundementes I get vnderstandyng, therfore I hate all false wayes.

N NVN.

Thy worde is a lanterne vnto my fete and a lyght vnto my pathes.

I haue sworne and am stedfastly purposed, to kepe the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse.

I am troubled aboue measure, quicken me, O Lorde, accordinge vnto thy worde.

Let the free wyll offeringes of my mouthe please the, O Lorde, and teach me thy iudgementes.

My soule is alway in my handc, yet do not I forget thy lawe.

The vngodly haue layd a snare for me, but yet swarue not I frome thy commaundementes.

Thy testimonies haue I claymed as myne heritage for euer: and why? they are the very ioye of my herte.

I applye myne herte to fulfill thy statutes alwaye, euen vnto the ende.

S SAMECH.

I hate the vngodlye, but thy lawe do I loue.

Thou art my defence and shylde, my trust is in thy worde.

Awaye frome me ye wycked, I will kepe ỹ commaundementes of my God.

O stablysh me accordynge vnto thy worde, that I maye lyue, and let me not be disappointed of my hope.

Holde thou me vp, and I shall be safe: yea I shall euer be talkinge of thy statutes.

Thou treadest downe all them that depart frome thy statutes, for they ymagin but deceyte.

Thou puttest awaye all the vngodly of the earth lyke drosse, therfore I loue thy testimonies.

My flesh trembleth for feare of the, and I am afrayed of thy iudgementes.

A AIN.

I deale with the thinge that is lawful and ryght, O gyue me not ouer vnto myne oppressours.

Be thou suertye for thy seruaunt to his good, that the proude do me no wronge.

Myne eyes are wayted away with loking for thy health, and for the worde of thy righteousnesse.

O deale with thy seruaunt accordinge vnto thy louynge mercye, and teache me thy statutes.

I am thy seruaunte, O graunte me vnderstandinge, that I maye knowe thy testimonies.

It is tyme for the (Oh Lorde) to laye to thyne hande, for they haue destroyed thy lawe.

For I loue thy commaundementes aboue golde and precious stone.

Therfore holde I streyght all thy commaundementes, and all false wayes I vtterly abhorre.

P PHE.

Thy testimonies are wonderfull, therfore doth my soule kepe them.

When thy worde goeth forthe, it giueth lyght and vnderstandinge, euen vnto babes.

I open my mouthe and drawe in my breth, for I desire thy commaundementes.

O loke thou vpon me, and be mercyfull, as thou vsest to doo vnto those that loue thy name.

Ordre my goynges after thy worde that no wyckednesse raygne in me.

O delyuer me frome the wrongeous dealynges of men, and so shall I kepe thy commaundementes.

Shewe the lyght of thy countenaunce vnto thy seruaunt, and lerne me thy statutes.

Myne eyes gussh out with water, because men kepe not thy lawe.

Z ZADE.

Righteous arte thou, O Lorde, and true is thy iudgement.

The testimonies that thou hast commanded are exceadinge, righteous and true.

My zele hathe euen consumed me, because myne enemyes haue forgotten thy wordes.

Thy worde is tryed to the vttermost, and thy seruaunt loueth it.

I am small and of no reputacion, yet do not I forget thy commaundementes.

Thy righteousnesse is an euerlastinge righteousnesse, and thy lawe is true.

Trouble and heynesse haue taken holde vpon me, yet is my delyte in thy commaundementes.

The righteousnesse of thy testimonies is euerlastinge, O graunte me vnderstandinge, & I shall lyue.

K KOPH.

I call with my hole herte, heare me, O Lorde I will kepe thy statutes.

Yea euen vpon the to I call, helpe me, and I shall kepe thy testimonies.

Early in the morynge to I crye vnto the, for in thy worde is my trust.

Myne eyes preuente the nyght watches, ỹ I myght be occupyed in thy wordes.

Heare my voyce, O Lorde, accordynge vnto thy louynge kyndnesse, quicken me accordynge as thou art wont.

They drawe nygh that of malice persecute me, and are farre frome thy lawe.

Be thou nyghe at hande also, O Lorde, for thy promyses are faythfull.

As concernynge thy testimonies, I haue knowen euer sens the begynnyng, that thou hast grounded them for euer.

R RES.

Consydre myne aduersite, and delyuer me for I wot not forget thy lawe.

Maynteyne thou my cause and defende me quycken me accordinge vnto thy worde.

Health is farre frome the vngodly, for they regarde not thy statutes.

Great is thy mercy, O Lorde, quycken me as thou art wont.

Many there are that trouble me, and persecute me, yet do not I swarue frome thy testimonies.

It greueth me, when I se, that the transgressours kepe not thy lawe.

Consydre, O Lorde, howe I loue thy commaundementes, O quycken me with thy louynge kyndnesse.

Thy worde is true frome euerlastynge, all the iudgementes of thy righteousnesse endure for euermore.

S SIN.

The princes persecute me without cause, but my herte standeth in awe of thy wordes.

I am as glad of thy worde, as one that fyndeth great spoyles.

As for lyes, I hate and abhorre them, but thy lawe do I loue.

Seuen tymes a daye do I prayse the, because of thy righteous iudgementes.

Great is ỹ peax that they haue which loue thy law, and they are not offended at it.

Lorde, I loke for thy sauynge health, and leafter thy commaundementes.

My soule kepeth thy testimonies, and loueth them exceadyngly.

I kepe thy commaundementes and testimonies, for all my wayes are before the.

T THAV.

Let my complaynte come before the, Oh Lorde, gyue me vnderstandinge, accordinge vnto thy worde. V

O let my supplicacion come before the, delyuer me accordyng to thy promes.

My lyppes shall speake of thy prayse, seing thou hast taughte me thy statutes.

Yea my tongue shal synge of thy worde, for all thy commaundementes are ryght.

Let thyne hande helpe me, for I haue chosen thy commaundementes.

I longe for thy sauynge health, O Lorde, and in thy lawe is my delyte.

Oh let my soule lyue and prayse the, that thy iudgementes maye helpe me.

I go afraye, lyke a shepe that is lost: Oh seke thy seruaunt, for I do not forget thy commaundementes.

Therfore do I crye vnto the, O Lorde, and saye: thou art my hope and my portion in the lande of the lyuynge.

Consyder my complaynte, for I am brought very lowe.

O deliuer me fro my persecuters, for they are to stronge for me.

Bringe my soule out of prison, that I may geue thankes vnto thy name: whiche thinge yf thou wilt graunte me, then shall ỹ righteous resorte vnto my company.

PSAL. CXLI.

A Psalme of Dauid.

HEare my prayer, O Lorde, consyder my desire: answere me for thy truthe and righteousnesse sake.

And entre not into iudgement with thy seruaunt, for in thy sight shall no man lyuynge be iustified.

For the ennemye persecuteth my soule, he smyteth my lyfe downe to the grounde, he leyeth me in the darknesse, as the dede men of worlde.

Therfore is my spirite vexed within me, and my hert within me is desolate.

Yet do I remembre the tymes past, I muse vpon all thy workes, yea I exercyse my selfe in the workes of thy handes.

I stretche forth myne handes vnto the, my soule coueteth vnto the out of the thirsty lande. Selah.

Heare me, O Lorde, and that sone, for my spirite waxeth faynte: hyde not thy face fro me, least I be lyke vnto them that go downe into the graue.

O let me heare thy louyng kyndnesse by tymes in the morynyng, for in ỹ is my trust: shewe me the waye that I shulde walke in, for I lyft vp my soule vnto the.

Deliuer me, O Lorde fro myne ennemies, for I flie vnto the.

Teache me to do the thynge that pleaseth the, for thou art my God: let thy louyng spirite leade me forth vnto the lande of righteousnesse.

Quicken me, O Lorde for thy names sake, & for thy righteousnesse sake bringe my soule out of trouble.

And of thy goodnesse scatter myne ennemies abrode, & destroye all them that vexe my soule, for I am thy seruaunt.

PSAL. CXLII.

Of Dauid.

BLessed be the Lorde my refuge: whiche teacheth my handes to warre, and my fyngers to fight.

My hope and my castell, my defence and my deliuerer, my shylde in whome I trust: whiche gouerneth the people that is vnder me.

A LOrde what is man, that thou hast suche regard vnto him? or the son of man, that thou so regardest him?

Man is like a thing of naught, his time passeth awaye lyke a shadow.

Bowe thy heuens, O Lorde, & come downe touche the mountaynes, that they may smoke with all.

Sende forthe the lyghtenynge and scatter them: shoute oute thine arowes and consume them.

Sende downe thyne hande frome aboue, deliuer me and take me oute of the great waters: frome the hande of straunge chyldren.

Whose mouth talketh of vanitie, and their right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That I may synge a newe song vnto the, O God, and synge prayses vnto the, vpon a ten stringed lute.

Thou that geuest victory vnto kynges, and hast deliuered Dauid thy seruaunt from the perill of the swerde.

Saue me and deliuer me from the hande of straunge chyldren, whose mouthe talketh of vanitie, and their right hande is a right hande of falsehed.

That oure sonnes maye growe vp as the younge plantes: and that oure doughters maye be as the polyshed corners of the temple.

That our garners may be ful and plentious with all maner of store: that our sheepe maye bringe forth thousandes, and hundreth thousandes in our villages.

That our oxen maye be stronge to laboure, that there may be no mischaunce, no decay, & no complaynyng in our stretes.

Happy are the people that be in such a case: yea blessed are the people whiche haue ỹ Lord for their God.

C A prayse of Dauid.

I Wyll magnifie the, o God my kyng, I will prayse thy name for euer and euer.

A Euerye daye wyll I geue thankes vnto the: and prayse thy name for euer and euer.

Great is the Lorde, and marueylous worthy to be praysed, there is no ende of his greatnesse.

One generation shal prayse thy workes vnto an other, and declare thy power.

As for me I wyll be talkynge of thy worshyp, thy glorye, thy prayse, and wonderous workes.

So that men shall speake of the myghte of thy marueylous actes: and tell of thy greatnesse.

B The memoriall of thyne aboundaunt kyndnesse shall be shewed, and men shal synge of thy righteousnesse.

The Lorde is gracious and mercyfull, long suffering, and of great goodnesse.

The Lorde is louyng vnto euery men, & his mercy is ouer all his workes.

All thy workes prayse the, o Lorde, and thy saynctes geue thankes vnto the.

C They shewe the glory of thy kyngdome, and talke of thy power.

That thy power, thy glorye and myghtynesse, of thy kyngdome, might be knowen vnto men.

Thy kyngdome is an euerlastynge kyngdome: and thy dominion endureth throwe out all ages.

The Lorde vpholdeth all suche as shoulde fall: and lyfteth vp all those that be downe.

D The eyes of all wayte vpon the: and thou geuest theym their meate in due season.

Thou openest thyne hande, & fyllest al thinges liuing with plenteousnesse.

The Lorde is righteous in all his wayes: & holy in all his workes.

The Lorde is nye vnto them that call vpon hym: yea all suche as call vpon hym faythfully.

E He fulfylleth the desyre of theym that feare hym: he heareth their crye, and helpeth them.

The Lord preserueth al them that loue him, but scattereth abrode all the vngodly.

My mouthe shall speake the prayse of the Lorde: and let all flesshe geue thankes vnto his holy name for euer and euer. Prayse the euerlasting.

A Psalm.cxiii.a

PRayse the Lorde. O my soule: whyle I lyue will I prayse the Lorde: yea as long as I haue any being, I will synge prayses vnto my God.

Psal.cxviii.a ☞ O put not youre trust in Princes, nor in anye chylde of man, for there is no helpe in them.

For when the breth of man goeth forth, he shall turne agayne to his erth, and so all his thoughtes perysshe.

Act xiiii.e.and Apoca.xiiii.b. Blessed is he that hathe the God of Jacob for his help: and whose hope is in the Lord his God.

Whiche made heauen and earthe, the see, and all that therin is, whiche kepeth his promyse for euer.

B Whiche helpeth them to ryghte that suffre wronge, whiche fedeth the hongrye.

The Lord loseth me out of prison, the Lord sendeth light to the blynde.

The Lorde helpeth them vp that are fallen: the Lorde loueth the ryghteous.

The Lorde careth for the straungers; he defendeth the fatherlesse and wydowe: as for the waye of the vngodly, he turneth it vp syde downe.

The Lorde thy God, o Sion, is kyng for euermore, and throughout all generations.

THE PROVERBES OF SALOMON.

CAPI. I.

¶ THe Proverbes of Salomon the sonne of Dauid kynge of Israel: to lerne wysdome, instruction, understaundynge, prudence, ryghtousnesse, iudgement and equitie.

That the very babes might haue wit, & that yonge men myght haue knowlege and understaundynge.

By hearynge, the wyse man shall come by more wysdome: and by experience he shall be more apte to understaunde a parable, and the interpretacyon therof: the wordes of the wyse, and the darcke speaches of the same.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnynge of wysdome: but fooles despyse wysdom and instruction.

My sonne heare thy fathers doctrine, & forsake not the law of thy mother: for that shal bringe grace vnto thy heed, & shall be a cheyne about thy necke.

Psalme .cx. d Ecclesiast. b

My sonne, consent not vnto synners, if they entyse the, and saye: come with vs, lette vs laye wayte for bloude, and lurke priuely for the innocent without a cause: lette vs swalowe them vp lyke the helle, let vs deuoure them quycke and hole, as those that go downe in to the pyt.

So shal we fynd all maner of costly riches, and fyll our houses with spoyles.

Caste in thy lot amonge vs: we shall haue all one purse.

My son, walke thou not with them, refrayn thy foote from their wayes.

For their feete runne to euyll, and are hasty to shed bloude.

Ecclesiast. b

Ieut in vayne is the net layde for the before the byrdes eyes.

C Yea they them selues laye wayte one for an others bloude: and one of them weld slee an other.

Those are the wayes of all suche as be couetous: that one wolde rauysshe an others lyfe.

Wysdome.

Wysdom crieth without, and putteth forth her voyce in the stretes.

She calleth before the congregacion in the open gates, and sheweth her wordes thorowe the city, sayinge:

O ye children, how longe wyl ye loue childysshnesse? How longe wyll the scorners delite in scornynge, and the vnwyse be enaumpes vnto knowlege?

O turne you vnto my correction: lo I wyll expresse my mynde vnto you, and make you vnderstande my wordes.

Because I haue called, and ye refused it: I haue stretched oute my hande, and no man regarded it, but all my counsailes haue ye despysed, and lee my correccions at nought.

Therfore shall I also laughe in your destruction, and mocke you, when the thynge that ye feare commeth vpon you: euen when the thynge that ye be a frayde of, falleth sodeynly lyke a storme, and your mischefe lyke a tempest: yea when trouble and heuynesse commeth vpon you.

Then shal they call vpon me, but I will not heare: they shall seke me early, but they shall not fynde me.

And that because they hated knowlege: and receyued not the feare of the Lorde, but abhorred my counsell, and despyded my correction.

Therfore shal they eate of the frutes of their owne waye, and be fylled with their owne counsels.

For the turning away of the vnwyse shall slee them: and the prosperite of fooles shal bringe their owne destruction.

But who so harkeneth vnto me, shall dwell safely, and haue ynoughe without anye feare of euill.

CAPI. II.

MY sonne, yf thou wylt receyue my wordes, and kepe my commaundements by the: that eyne eare maye harken vnto wysdome, applye thyne herte vnto vnderstaundynge.

For yf thou cryest after wysdome, and callest for knowlege: yf thou seekest after her as after money, and dyggest for her as for treasure: then shalte thou vnderstande the feare of the Lorde, and fynde the knowlege of God.

For it is the Lord that geueth wysdom, out of his mouth commeth knowlege and vnderstaundynge.

He preserueth the welfare of the righteous, & defendeth them that walke innocently: he kepeth them in the right path, and preserueth the waye of his saynctes.

Then shalt thou vnderstande righteousnesse, iudgement and equitie, yea and euery good pathe.

Yf wysdome entre in to thyne herte, and thy soule delyte in knowlege: then shall counsell preserue the, and vnderstaundynge shall kepe the.

That thou mayst be deliuered from the euil waye, and from the man that speaketh frowarde thynges.

From suche as leaue the vpright stretes, and walke in the wayes of darcknesse: which reioyse in wicked euill, and delyte in wicked thynges: whose wayes are croked, & their pathes sclaundrous.

That thou mayst be deliuered also from the straunge woman, & from her that is not thyne owne: which pryueth sweete wordes, forsaketh the husbande of her youth, and forgetteth the couenaunt of her God.

For her house is enclyned vnto deth, & her pathes vnto hell.

All they that goo in vnto her, come not agayne, neither take they holde of the waye of lyfe.

That thou mayste walke in the good waye: and kepe the pathes of the righteous.

For the iuste shall dwelle in the lande, and the innocentes shall remayne in it: but the vngodly shall be rooted oute of the lande, and the wycked doers shall be taken oute of it.

CAPI. III.

¶ MY sonne, forget not my lawe: but se that thyne hert kepe my commaundementes.

For they shal prolonge the dayes and yeres of thy lyfe, and bring the peax.

Let mercy and faythfulnesse neuer go from the: bynde them about thy necke, and wryte them in the tables of thyne herte.

So shalte thou fynde fauoure and good vnderstaundynge in the syghte of God and men.

Put thy truste in the Lorde with all thyne herte: and leane not vnto thyne owne vnderstandynge.

In al thy wayes haue respect vnto him, and he shall ordre thy goinges.

Be not wyse in thyne owne conceyte, but feare the Lorde, and departe from euyll: so shall thy nauell be hole, and thy bones stronge.

Honoure the Lorde with thy substaunce, and with the fyrstlinges of all thyne increase: so shall thy barnes be fylled with plentcousnesse, and thy presses shall flowe ouer with swete wyne.

My sonne despyse not the chastening of the Lorde, neither faynt when thou art rebuked of him.

* For whom the Lorde loueth, him he chasteneth: and pet entirely in him euen as a father in his owne sonne.

Well is hym that fyndeth wysdome, and optayneth vnderstaundynge, for the getynge of it, is better then anye marchaundise of syluer, and the profyte of it is better then golde.

Wysdome is more worth then precious stones: and al the thynges that thou canst desyre are not to be compared vnto her.

Vpon her ryghte hande is longe lyfe: and vpon her lefte hande is ryches & honoure.

Her wayes are pleasaunt wayes, and al her pathes are peaceable.

She is a tree of lyfe to them that laye holde vpon her, and blessed are they that kepe her fast.

With wysdome hathe the Lorde layde the foundacyon of the earthe: and therowe vnderstaundynge he hathe stablysshed the heauens.

Thorowe his wysdome: the deapthes breake vp: and the cloudes drop downe of dewe.

My sonne, let not these thinges departe fro thyne eyes, but kepe my law and my counsel: so shall it be lyfe vnto thy soule, and grace to thy mouth.

Then shalt thou walke safely in thy way, and thy foote shall not stomble.

Yf thou slepest, thou shalte not be afrayd: but shalt take thy rest, and slepe swetely.

Thou nedest not to be afrayde of anye sodayne feare: neyther for the violente ruschynge in of the vngodlye, when it commeth.

For the Lorde shal beseige the, and kepe thy foote that thou be not taken.

Refuse not to do good vnto him that ought haue it: so longe as thyne hande is able to do it.

Saye not vnto thy neyghboure: goo thy waye, and come agayne, to morowe I will geue the: where as thou haste nowe to geue him.

Intende no hurt vnto thy neyghbour, seing he hopeth to dwell in rest by the.

Striue not lightly with any man, where as he hath done the no harme.

Folowe not a wycked man, and chose none of his wayes: for the Lord abhorreth the frowarde, but his secrete is amonge the righteous.

The curse of the Lord is in the house of the vngodly: but he blesseth the dwellynges of the righteous.

As for the scornefull, he shall laughe them to scorne: but he shall geue grace vnto the lowly.

The wyse shall haue honour in possession: but shame is the promocion that fooles shall haue.

CAPI. IIII.

HEare, o ye children the fatherly exhortacion: and take good hede that ye may lerne wysdome.

Yea I shall geue you a good rewarde, yf ye wyll not forsake my lawe.

For when I my selfe was my fathers dere sonne: and tenderly beloued of my mother, he taught me also, sayinge:

Lette thyne herte receyue my wordes: kepe my commaundementes, and thou shalte lyue.

Get the wysdome, get the vnderstaundynge forget not the wordes of my mouth, & swarue not from them.

Forsake not her, and she shall preserue the: loue her, and she shall kepe the.

The chefe poynte of wysdome is, that thou be wyllynge to obteyne wysdome, and before all thy goodes, to get the vnderstaundynge.

Make moche of her, & she shal promote the: yea yf thou imbrace her, she shal bringe the vnto honour.

She shall make the a gracyous heed: & garnisshe the nyshe the with a crowne of glorye.

Heare my sonne, and receyue my wordes: that the yeres of thy lyfe maye be many.

I will shewe the, the waye of wysdome, and lede the in the ryght pathes.

So that yf thou goest therin, there shall no straytenesse hynde the: and whē thou runnest, thou shalt not fall.

Take fast holde of doctryne, let her not go: kepe her, for she is thy lyfe.

Come not in the pathe of the vngodly, and walke not in the waye of the wicked.

Eschewe it, and go not therin: depart aside, and passe ouer by it.

For they can not slepe, excepte they haue fyrst wone some mischiefe: neither take they anye reste, excepte they haue lyfte wone some harme.

For they eate the breed of wickednesse, and drynke the wyne of robbery.

The pathe of the righteous shyneth as the light, and is euer brighter and brighter vnto the perfect daye.

But the waye of the vngodlye is as the darcknesse, wherin men fall or they be aware.

My sonne, marke my wordes, and enclyne thyne eare vnto my sayinges.

Let them not departe from thyne eyes: kepe them euen in the myddest of thyne herte.

For they are lyfe vnto all those that fynde them: and helthe vnto all theyr bodyes.

Kepe thyne hert with all diligence: for, therupon hangeth lyfe.

Put away from the a frowarde mouther and let the lyppes of slaunder be farre from the.

Let thyne eyes beholde the thynge that is ryght: and let thyne eye lyddes loke streyght before the.

Ponder the path of thy fete: so shal all thy wayes be sure.

Turne not a syde, neyther to the ryghte hande, ne to the lefte, but withholde thy fote from euyll.

CAPI. V.

My sonne, gyue hede vnto my wysdom, and bowe thyne eare vnto my prudence: that thou mayste regarde good counsell, and that thy lyppes may kepe nourture.

For the lyppes of an harlot are a droppynge honye combe, and her throte is softer then oyle.

But at the laste, she is as bytter as wormewod, and as sharpe as a two edged swerde.

Her fete go downe vnto deth, and her steppes pearse the rowme vnto hell.

She regarderh not the pathe of lyfe, so vnstedfast are her wayes, that thou canste not knowe them.

Heare me therfore (o my sonne) and departe not from the wordes of my mouth.

Kepe thy waye farre from her, and come not nye the dores of her house.

That thou gyue not thyne honour vnto an other, and thy yeres to the cruell.

That other men be not fylled with thy goodes: and that thy labours come not in straunge house.

Yea that thou mourne not at the last (when thou hast spent thy body and goodes) and then saye:

Alas, why hated I nourture? why did my herte despyse correction?

Wherfore was not I obedient vnto the voice of my teachers: and harkened not vnto them that informed me?

I am come almoost in to all mysfortune: in the myddest of the multitude and congregacion.

Drynke of the water of thyne owne welle: and of the ryuers that run out of thyne owne springes.

Let thy welles flowe out abrode, that them maye be ryuers of waters in the stretes: but let them be onely thyne owne, and not straungers with the.

Let thy well be blessed, and be glad with the wyfe of thy youth.

Louynge is the hynde, and frendly is the Roo: lette her breastes alwaye satisfye the, and holde the euer content with her loue.

My sonne, why wylte thou haue pleasure in an harlot, and imbrace the bosome of another woman?

For euery mannes wayes are open in the syght of the Lorde, and he ponderyth all their goynges.

The wyckednesses of the vngodly shal catche him self, and with the snares of his owne synnes shall he be trapped.

Because he wolde not be reformed he shall dye: and for his greate folyshnesse he shall be destroyed.

CAPI. VI.

My sonne, yf thou be surety for thy neyghboure, thou hast fastened thyne hande with an other man: yea thou art bounde with thyne owne wordes: & taken with thyne owne speche.

Therfore, my sonne, do this: discharge thy selfe, for thou arte come in to thy neyghbours daunger.

Goo thy waye then soone, and intreate thy neyghboure: let not thyne eyes slepe, ne thyne eye lyddes slomber.

Saue thy selfe as a Roo from the hande, and as a byrde from the hande of the fouler.

Go to the Pysmere (thou sluggarde) consydre her wayes, and learne to be wyse.

She hathe no guyde, no teacher, no leader: yet in the Sommer she prouydeth her meate, and gathereth her fode together in the haruest.

How longe wylte thou slepe thou sluggysshe man? When wylte thou aryse oute of thy slepe?

Yea slepe on lyl a litle slombre a lytle, folde thyne handes together yet a lytle, that thou mayst slepe.

So shal pouerte come vnto the, as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessitie lyke a weaponed man.

A dissemblynge person, a wycked man goeth with a frowarde mouth, he winketh with his eyes, he tokeneth with his fete, he poynteth with his fyngers, he is euer ymagenynge mischiefe and frowardnesse in his herte, and causeth discorde.

Therfore shall his distruction come hastely vpon him: sodenly shall he be all to broken, and not be healed.

There be sixe thynges whiche the Lorde hateth: and the seuenth he vtterly abhorreth.

A proude loke, a dissemblynge tonge, handes that shede innocent bloude, an herte that goeth aboute with wycked ymagynacions, fete that be swyfte in rennynge to do mischiefe, a false wytnesse that bryngeth lyes, and suche one as soweth discorde amonge brethren.

My sonne, kepe thy fathers commaundementes, and forsake not the lawe of thy mother.

Bynde them vp together in thyne herte: and bynde them aboute thy necke.

That they maye leade the where thou goest, preserue the when thou art a slepe, and that when thou awakest, thou mayste talke of them.

For the commaundement is a lanterne, and the lawe a lyght: yea chastenynge and nourture is the waye of lyfe, that they maye kepe the from the euil woman, and from the flatteryng tong of the harlot: that thou lust not after her beautye in thyne herte, and lest thou be taken with her fayre lokes.

An harlot wyll make a man to begge his breed: but a maryed woman wyll hunte for the precious lyfe.

Shall a man take fyre in his bosome, & his clothes not be burnt?

Or can one go vpon hote coles, and his fete not be burnt?

Euen so, who so euer goeth in to his neyghbours wyfe, and toucheth her, can not be vngylty.

Men do not vtterly despyse a theefe that stealeth to satisfye his soule, when he is hongrye: but yf he maye be gotten, he restoreth agayne seuen tymes as moche, or elles he muste recompence with all the good of his house.

But who so committeth aduoutrye with a woman, he is a foole, and bryngeth his lyfe to destruction.

He getteth him selfe also shame & dishonour, large as neuer shall be put out.

For the gelousye and wrathe of the man wil not be intreated: no thoughe thou woldest offre him greate gyftes to make amendes, he wyll not receyue them.

CAPI. VII.

My sonne, kepe my wordes, and laye vp my commaundementes by the.

Kepe my commaundementes, and my lawe euen as the apple of thyne eye: and thou shalt lyue.

Bynde them vpon thy fyngers: and wryte them in the table of thyne herte.

Saye vnto wysdome, thou arte my syster, and call vnderstandynge thy kynswoman: that she maye kepe the from the straunge woman, and from the harlot whiche gyueth swete wordes.

For oute of the wyndowe of my house I loked thorowe the trealesse, and behelde the symple people: and amonge other yonge folkes, I spyed one yonge foole gonge ouer the stretes: by the corner in the waye towarde the harlottes house in the twylyght of the euenynge, when it began nowe to be nyghte and darcke.

And beholde, there met him a woman in an harlots apparel (a disceptful woma, wanton & vnbrideled as woma, whose fete could not abide in the house: now is she without, now in the stretes, and lurketh in euery corner) she caught the yonge man, kyssed him, and was not ashamed, saying: I had a vow to paye, & this daye I performe it.

Therfore came I forthe to mete the, that I myght seke thy face: and so I haue founde the.

I haue decked my bed with couerynges and clothes of Egypt.

My bed haue I made to smell of Myrre, Aloes, and Cynamon.

Come let vs lye together, and take our pleasure tyll it be daye lyght.

For the goodman is not at hame: he is gone farre of.

He hathe taken the bagge of money with hym: who can tell when he commeth home?

Thus with many fayre wordes she ouercame him: and with her flatteryng lyppes she wan him.

Immediatly he folowed her, as it were an oxe ledde to the slaughter (and lyke as it were to the stockes where fooles are punysshed) so long tyll she had wounded his lyuer with her darte: lyke as yf a byrde hasted to the snare, not knowynge that the peryl of his lyfe lyeth therupon.

Heare me now therfore, o my sonne, & marke the wordes of my mouth.

Let not thyne herte wander in her wayes: be not thou deceyued in her pathes.

For many one hathe she wounded and caste downe: yea many a stronge man hathe she slayne.

Her house is the way vnto hell, where men go downe in to the chambres of death.

CAPI. VIII.

a Doth not wysdome crye? doth not vnderstandynge put forth her voyce?

Standeth she not in the hye places in the streetes and warrs? doth she not crye before the whole cite, and in the gates where men go out and in?

It is you, o ye men (sayth she) whome I call.

Vnto you (o ye children of men) lyfte I vp my voyce.

b Take hede vnto knowlege, o ye ignoraunt: be wyse in deede, o ye fooles.

Geue eare, for I will speake of great materes, and open my lyppes to tell thynges that be right.

For my throte shal be talking of the truthe, and my lyppes abhorre vngodlynesse.

All the wordes of my mouthe are righteous: there is no frowardnesse nor falsehed therin.

They are all playne to suche as will vnderstand: and right to them that fynde knowlege.

Receyue my doctryne therfore, and not syluer: and my knowlege, more then fyne golde.

For wysdome is more worth then precyous stones: yea all the thinges that thou canst desire, are not to be compared vnto it.

c I wysdome haue my dwellynge with knowlege: and prudente counsell is myne owne.

With me is the feare of the Lorde, and the eschewynge of euyll.

As for pryde, hyghe mynde, and euyl waye, and a mouth that speaketh wicked thinges, I vtterly abhorre them.

I can geue counsell and be a gyde: I haue vnderstandyng, I haue strength.

Thorow me, kynges reygne: thorowe me, princes make iust lawes

Thorow me, lordes beare rule: and all iudges of the erth execute iudgement.

I am louing vnto those that loue me: and they that seke me early, shall fynde me.

Ryches and honour are with me: yea excellent goodes and righteousnesse.

My frute is better then golde and precyous stone: my encrease more worth then fyne syluer.

I walke in the waye of righteousnesse: and in the streete of iudgement.

That I may fynde prosperitie to those that loue me: and to encrease their treasure.

Sapie. 8.b The Lorde him selfe had me in possession in the beginnyng of his waye, or euer he began his workes afore tyme.

I haue ben ordeyned from euerlasting: and from the begynnynge or euer the earthe was made.

When I was borne, there were neyther depthes nor spynges of water.

Before the foundacyons of the mountaynes were layde, yea before all hylles was I borne.

The earthe, and all that is vpon the earth was not yet made: no not the grounde it selfe.

For when he made the heuens, I was present, when he set vp the depthes in order: whē he hanged the cloudes above, when he fastned the spynges of the depe.

When he shut the see within certayne boundes, that the waters sholde not go ouer their markes.

When he layde the foundacyons of the earthe, I was with him, ordeynge all thynges: delyghtynge dayly, and reioysynge alwaye before hym.

As for the round compasse of his worlde, I make it ioyfull: for my delyte is to be among the children of men.

Therfore harken vnto me, o ye children, for blessed are they that kepe my wayes.

O geue eare vnto nourture, be wise, and refuse it not.

Blessed is the man þ heareth me, watching dayly at my gates: and gyuing attendaunce at the postes of my doores.

For who so fyndeth me, fyndeth lyfe: and shal obteyn fauour of the Lorde.

But who so offendeth agaynste me hurteth his owne soule.

All they that hate me, are the louers of deathe.

CAPI. IX.

Wysdome hath buylded her self an house, and hewē oute seuen pylers: she hathe killed her beastes, poured out her wine and prepared her table.

She hath sent forthe her maydens to crye vpon the hyest place of the cite: who so is ignoraunt, let him come hyther.

And to the vnwyse she said: O come and eate my breed, & drynke my wyne which I haue poured out for you.

Forsake ignoraunce, and ye shall lyue: and se that ye goo in the waye of vnderstandynge.

Who so reproueth a scornefull person, getteth hym selfe dishonoure: and he that rebuketh the vngodlye, blameth hym selfe.

Reproue not a scorner, lest he owe the: but reproue a wyse man, and he will loue the.

Giue a discrete man but an occasion, and he wyl be the wyser: teache a righteous man and he wil encrease.

The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome: and the knowlege of holy thynges is vnderstandynge.

For thorowe me thy dayes shall be prolonged: and the yeres of thy lyfe shall be manyfe.

If thou be wyse, thy wysdome shall do thy self good: but if thou thinkest scorne therof, it shall be thyne owne harme.

A foolyshe restlesse woman, full of wordes, and suche one as hath no knowlege, syteth in the doores of her house vpon a stoole, aboue in the cyty to cal suche as go by, & walke streyght in their wayes.

Who so is ignoraūt (sayth she) let him come hyther, and to the vnwyse she saith: stolen waters are swete, and the breed that is priuily eaten, hath a good taste.

But they consydre not that deth is there, and that her gestes go downe to hell.

CAPI. X.

The parables of Salomon.

a A Wyse son, maketh a glad father: but an vndiscrete sonne is the heuynesse of his mother.

Treasures that are wickedlye gotten, profyte nothyng, but righteousnesse, deliuereth from deth.

The Lorde wyl not let the soule of þ righteous suffre hongre: but he putteth the vngodly from his desire.

An vdle hande maketh poore: but a quycke labouring hand maketh ryche.

Who so gathereth in sommer, is wyse: but he that is sluggish in harueste bringeth him self to confusion.

b Lounge and fauourable is the face of the righteous, but the forehed of the vngodlye is full shame and presumptuous.

The memoryall of the iust, shal haue a good reporte, but the name of the vngodlye shall stynche.

A wyse man wyll receyue warnynge: but a foole wyll sooner be smytten in the face.

He that leadeth an innocent lyfe, walketh surely: but who so goeth a wrong waye, shall be knowen.

He that winketh with his eye, wyll be same harme: but he that hath a foolysh mouth, shal be beaten.

The mouth of a righteous man is a well of lyfe: but the mouthe of the vngodlye is full shame, and presumptuous.

Cyuyl wil stereth vp styfe, but loue couereth the multitude of synnes.

c Prouer. 15.a Eccles. 10.c In the lyppes of hym that hathe vnderstandynge a man shall fynde wysdome: but the rodde belongeth to the backe of the foolysshe.

Wyse men laye vp knowlege: but the mouthe of the foolysshe, is nyghe destruction.

The riche mans goodes, are his strong holde: but pouertie oppresseth the poore.

The righteous laboureth to doo good: but the vngodlye vseth his encrease vnto synne.

To take hede vnto the chastenyng of nouture, is the waye of lyfe: but he that refuseth to be reformed goeth wrange.

Dyssemblynge lyppes kepe hatred secretly: and he that speaketh any slaunder, is a foole.

Where moche babblynge is, there must nedes be offence: he that refrayneth his lyppes, is wyse of all.

An innocent tonge is a noble treasure: but the herte of the vngodlye is nothynge worthe.

The lyppes of the righteous fede a hole multytude: but fooles shal dye in their owne folye.

The blessynge of the Lorde maketh ryche men: as for carefull trauayle, it doth nothing therto.

A foole doothe wickedly, and maketh but a sporte of it: neuertheles it is wysdome for a man to beware of suche.

The thyng that the vngodly are afrayde of, shall come vpon them: but the righteous shall haue their desire.

The vngodly is lyke a tempest that passeth ouer, and is no more sene: but the righteous remayneth sure for euer.

As vynegre is to the teethe, and as smoke is vnto the eyes: euen so is a sluggysh person to them that sende him forth.

The feare of the Lorde maketh a longe lyfe: but the yeres of the vngodlye shall be shortened.

The pacient abydinge of the righteous shall be turned to gladnesse: but the hope of þ vngodly shal perysshe.

The waye of the Lorde geueth a courage vnto the godly: but it is a feare for wycked doers.

The righteous shall neuer be ouerthrowen: but the vngodly shall not remayne in þ lande.

The mouthe of the iuste wyll be talkynge of wysdome: but the tonge of the frowarde shall perysshe.

The lyppes of the righteous are occupied in acceptable thynges: but the mouth of the vngodly taketh them to the worst.

CAPI. XI.

A False balaunce is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but a true weyght pleaseth him.

Where pryde is, there is shame also, and confusion: but where as lowlynesse is, there is wysdome.

The innocent dealynge of the iust shal leade them: but the vnfaythfulnesse of the wicked shall be their owne destruction.

Prouer. 11.a * Ryches helpe not in the daye of vengeaunce: but righteousnesse deliuereth from deathe.

The righteousnesse of the innocent ordreth his waye: but the vngodly shall fall in his owne wickednesse.

The ryghteousnesse of the iust, shall delyuer them: but the delyuerers shal be taken in their owne vngodynesse.

Sapien. b. b

* When an vngodly man dyeth, his hope is gone: the confydence of ryches shall perysshe.

The ryghteous shall be delyuered oute of trouble: and the vngodlye shall come in his steed.

Therewe the mouthe of the dissembler is his neyghboure destroyed: but throwe knowlege, shall the iuste be delyuered.

When it goeth wel with the ryghteous, the citie is mery: and when the vngodly perysshe, there is gladnesse.

When the iuste are in welthe, the citye prosperith: but when the vngodly haue the rule it decayeth.

A foole bryngeth vp a sclaunder of his neyghboure: but a wyse man wyll kepe it secrete.

A dissemblynge person wyl discouer priuye thinges: but he that is of a faythful hert, will kepe counsel.

Where no good counsell is, there the people decaye: but where as manye are that can gyue counsell, there is welth.

L He that is suretye for a straunger: hurteth him selfe: but he that medleth not with suretyshyp is sure.

A gracyous woman mayntayneth honestye: as for the myghtye, they mayntayne rychesse.

He that hath a gentle lyberall stomacke: is mercyful: but who so hurteth his neyghboure is a tyraunt.

The labour of the vngodly prosphereth not: but he that soweth ryghtousnesse, shal receyue a sure rewarde.

Lyke as righteousnesse bringeth life: euē so to clene vnto euyll bryngeth deth.

The Lorde abhorreth a fayned herte: but he hathe pleasure in theym that are vndefyled.

Ye shall not helpe the wycked, though they laye all their handes together: but the seed of the ryghteous shall be preserued.

A fayre woman without discrete maners: is lyke a ryng of golde in a swynes snoute.

The iust labour for pease and tranquillitie: but the vngodly for disquietnesse.

Some man gyueth out his goodes, and is the rycher: but the nygard (hauyng ynough) will departe from nothynge, and yet is euer in pouertie.

He that is lyberall in gyuynge, shall haue D plentye: and he that watereth, shall be watered also hym selfe.

Who so hoordeth vp his corne, shal be cursed among the people: but blessing shal lyght vpon his heed that selleth it.

He that laboureth for honestie, fynderth his profyte: but who so seketh after myschiefe, it shall happen vnto hym.

He that trusteth in his rychesse, shall haue euyll: but the ryghtous, shal florysshe as the grene leafe.

Who so maketh disquietnesse in his owne house, he shall haue wynde for his heritage: and the foole shall be seruaunt to the wyse.

The frute of the ryghteous, is as the tree of lyfe: a wyse man also, wynneth mens soules.

* Yf the ryghteous be recompensed vpon earthe: howe moche more then the vngodlye and the synner?

CAPL. XII.

Who so loueth wysdome, will be content to be reformed: but he that hateth to be reproued, is a foole.

A good man is acceptable vnto the Lorde: but the wicked wil he condemne.

A man can not endure in vngodynesse: but the roote of the ryghteous shal not be moued.

A stedfast woman is a crowne vnto her husbande: but she that behaueth her selfe vnhonestly, is a corruption to his bones.

The thoughtes of the ryghteous are ryght: but the ymagynacion of the vngodly, are disceptfull.

The talkynge of the vngodly is howe they may laye wayte for bloude: but the mouth of the ryghteous wyll delyuer them.

Ouerthrow thou canst turne the about, the vngodly shall be ouerthrowen: but the house of the ryghteous shall stande.

A man shal be commended for his wisdome: but a foole shal be despised.

A symple man whiche laboureth and worketh: is better then one that is gorgious and wanteth breed.

A ryghteous man regardeth the lyfe of his catell: but the vngodlye haue cruell hertes.

He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plentousnesse of breed: but he that followeth pryuatnesse, is a verye foole.

The desire of the vngodly hunteth after mischefe: but the rote of the ryghteous bryngeth forth frute.

The wicked falleth in to the snare, throughe the malyce of his owne mouth: but the iuste shall escape out of perill.

Euerye man shall inioye good, accordynge to the innocencye of his mouthe, and after the workes of his handes shall he be rewarded.

Loke what a foole taketh in hand, he thinketh it well done, but he that is wyse, wyll be counselled.

A foole vttereth his wrath in all the haste: but a discrete man forgyueth wronge.

A iust man wyll tell the truthe: and shewe the thynge that is ryght: but a false witnesse disceyueth.

E A sclaunderous person pryeketh lyke a swerde: but a wyse mans tong is wholsome.

A true mouth is euer constaunt: but a lyenge tonge is soone chaunged.

The

They that ymagen euil in their mynde, will dissemble: but the counselloues of peax shall haue ioye folowynge them.

There shall no myschefe happen vnto the iust: but the vngodly shall be fylled with mysery.

The Lorde abhorreth disceptfull lyppes: but they that laboure for truthe, please him.

He that hath vnderstandynge, can hyde his wysdome: but an vndiscrete herte telleth out his folysshnesse.

A diligent hande shall beare rule: but the ydel shall be vnder tribute.

Heuynesse discouraged the herte of man: but a good worde maketh it gladde ageayne.

The ryghteous is lyberall vnto his neyghboure: but the waye of the vngodly will disceyue them selues.

A disceptfull man shall fynde no aduantage: but he that is content with that he hathe, is more worthy then golde.

In the waye of ryghteousnesse there is lyfe: as for anye other waye, it is the pathe vnto deathe.

CAPL. XIII.

A Wyse sonne wyll receyue his fathers warnynge, but he that is scorneful, wyl not heare when he is reproued.

A good man shall enioye the frute of his mouthe: but he that hath a frowarde mynde shall be spoyled.

He that kepeth his mouthe, kepeth his lyfe: but who so speaketh vnaduysed, fynderh hurme.

The sluggarde wolde fayne haue, and can not get his desire: but the soule of the diligēt shall haue plentye.

A ryghtous man abhorreth lyes: but the vngodlye shameth hymselfe and hym selfe.

Ryghtousnesse kepeth the innocent in the waye: but vngodlynesse shal ouerthrowe the synner.

Some men are ryche, though they haue nothynge: ageayne, some men are poore, haupyng great rychesse.

With goodes euerye man delyuereth his lyfe: and the poore wyll not be reproued.

The lyghte of the ryghtous maketh ioyfull: but the candle of the vngodlye shall be put out.

Amonge the proude there is euer stryfe: but among them that do all thinges with aduisement, there is wysdome.

Hastely gotten goodes are sone spent: but they that be gathered together with the hand shall increase.

Longe tarrynge for a thynge that is desired, greeueth the hert: but when the desire commeth, it is a tree of lyfe.

Who so despyseth the worde, destroyeth him selfe: but he that feareth the commaundemēt shall haue peax.

The lawe is a well of lyfe vnto the wyse: that it maye kepe hym frome the snares of deathe.

Good vnderstandynge gyueth fauour: but harde is the waye of the despisers.

A wyse man doeth all thynges with discressyon: but a foole wyll declare his folye.

An vngodlye messanger bryngeth mischefe: but a faythfull ambassadour is wholsome.

He that thynketh scorne to be reformed, commeth to pouerte and shame: but who so receyueth correction, shall come to honoure.

When a desyre is brought to passe, it delyteth the soule: but foules abhorre hym that eschueth euyll.

He that goeth in the company of wyse men, shall be wyse: but who so is a companyon of of fooles, shall be hurte.

Mischiefe folowyeth vpon synners, but the ryghtous shall haue a good rewarde.

Which theyr children shall haue in possession: for the richesse of the synner is layd vp for the iust.

There is plentousnesse of foode in the feldes of the poore: and shall be encreased out of measure.

He that spareth the rodde, hateth his sonne: but who so loueth him, holdeth him euer in nourture.

The ryghteous eateth, and is satisfyed: but the belye of the vngodlye hathe neuer ynough.

CAPI. XIIII.

A Wyse woman vpholdeth her house, but a foolysshe wyfe plucketh it downe. A Iob.xii.a

Who so feareth the Lorde, walketh in the ryght path: and regardeth not him that abhorreth the wayes of the Lorde.

In the mouth of the foolysshe is the beating of Lordshyp: but the lyppes of the wyse, will beware of suche.

Where no oxen are, there the cryb is empty: but where the oxen laboure, there is moche frute.

A faythfull witnesse will not dissemble, but a false recorde wyll make a lye.

A scornefull body seketh wysdome, and fyndeth it not: but knowlege is easy to come by, vnto hym that wyl vnderstande.

Go thy waye from a foole: and doo as thoughe thou hadest no knowlege.

The wisdome of hym that hath vnderstanding, is, to take hede vnto his waye, but the folysshnesse of fooles vnwyse disceyueth.

Fooles make but a sporte at synne, but there is fauourable loue among the ryghtous.

The herte of him that hath vnderstanding will neither beleue for loue folowe, ne be to presumptuous for any soden ioye.

The houses of the vngodly shall be ouer- B

thowen: but the tabernacles of the righteous shall flourish.

There is a waye, which some men thynke to be right, but the ende therof leadeth vnto death.

The herte is sorowfull, euen in laughter, & the ende of mirth is heuynesse.

An vnsaythfull person shal be filled with his owne wayes, but a good man wyll beware of him.

A ygnoraunt bodye byleueth all thynges: but wyse is hatye vnderstandynge, loketh well to his goynges.

A wyse man feareth, and departeth from euyll: but a foole goeth on presumptuously.

An vnpacyent man dealeth folyshely: but he that is well aduysed, bereth other wayes.

The ignoraunte haue folyshenesse in possession, but the wyse are crowned with knowlege.

The euyll shall bowe them selues before the good, and the vngodly shall wayte at the dores of the righteous.

The poore is hated euen of his owne neyghbours: but the ryche hathe manye frendes.

Who so despyseth his neyghbour, doth a mysse: but blessed is he that hathe pity of the poore.

They that ymagen wickednesse, shall be disappoynted: but they that muse vpon good thynges, vnto suche shall happen mercye and faythfulnesse.

Diligent labour bryngeth rychesse, and where many bayne wordes are, truly there is scarcenesse.

Rychesse is an ornament vnto the wyse: but the ignoraunce of fooles is verye folyshnesse.

A faythfull witnesse deliuereth soules, but a lyar bringeth them.

The feare of the Lorde is a strong hold, for vnto his he wyll be a sure defence.

The feare of the Lorde is a well of lyfe, to auoyde the snares of death.

The increase and prosperitie of the comens, is the kinges honoure: but the decaye of the people, is the confusion of the Prynce.

Pacyence is a token of wysdome: but wrathe and hasty displeasure is a token of folyshnesse.

A mery herte is the lyfe of the body: but rancour consumeth the bones.

He that doth oppresse the poore man wrongfully, blasphemeth his maker: but who so hath pitye of the poore, honoureth him.

The wicked shall be caste of in their owne perill: but the iust hathe a good hope euen in death.

Wysdome resteth in the herte of him that hath vnderstandynge, and he will teache them that are vnlearned.

Righteousnesse setteth vp the people: but vnrighteousnesse bringeth folke to confusion.

A discrete seruaunte is a pleasure vnto the kynge: but one that is not honest, prouoketh him vnto wrath.

CAPI. XV.

A Softe answere putteth downe displeasure: but frowarde wordes prouoke vnto angre.

A wyse tonge commendeth knowlege: a wylfull mouthe blabbeth out nothynge but folyshenesse.

The eyes of the Lord loke on euery place, both vpon the good and bad.

A holsome tonge is a tree of lyfe: but he that abuseth it, hath a broken mynde.

A foole despiseth his fathers correction: but he that taketh heede when he is reproued, shall haue the more vnderstandyng.

In the house of the righteous are greater treasures, but in the increase of the vngodly there is myslordre.

A wyse mouth poureth out knowlege: but the herte of the folysshe doth not so.

The Lorde abhorreth the sacrifice of the vngodly: but the prayer of the righteous is acceptable vnto him.

The waye of the vngodly is an abhominacion vnto the Lorde: but who so followeth righteousnesse, him he loueth.

He that forsaketh the right strete, shall be sore punished: and who so hateth correction, falleth into death.

The hell with her payne is knowen vnto the Lorde: how muche more then the hartes of men?

A scornefull bodye loueth not one that reproueth him: neyther wyll he come among the wyse.

A merye herte maketh a cheerefull countenaunce: but an vnquyet mynde maketh a heuy.

A wyse herte wyll seke after knowlege: but the mouthe of fooles medleth with folysshenesse.

All the dayes of the poore are myserable: but a quyete herte is as a continuall feast.

Better is a lytle with the feare of the Lord, then great treasure, for they are not without sorowe.

Better is a messe of potage with loue: then a fat oxe with hate.

An angrye man stereth vp strife, but he that is patient, stilleth debate.

The waye of the slouthfull is full of thornes: but the strete of the righteous is made cleane.

A wyse sonne maketh a gladde father: but an vnthryfte sonne shameth his mother.

A foole reioyseth in foolysshe thynges: but a wyse man loketh well to his owne goynges.

Vnadusted thoughtes shall come to nought: but where as men are that can vse counsell

The kynges displeasure is a messaynger of death, but a wyse man will pacifie him.

The cheerefull countenaunce of the kynge is lyfe, and his louynge fauoure is as the cloude dewe.

To haue wysdome in possession is better then golde, & to get vnderstandinge, is more worthy then siluer.

The path of the righteous eschueth euyll, and who so loketh well to his wayes, kepeth his owne soule.

Presumptuousnes goeth before destruction and after a proude stomake there followeth a fall.

Better is it to be of humble mynde with the lowlye, then to deuide the spoyles with the proude.

He that handleth a matter wysely, gyueth good: and blessed is he, that putteth his truste in the Lorde.

Who so hath a wyse vnderstandinge, is called to councell: but he that can speake fayre getteth more ryches.

Vnderstandinge is a well of lyfe vnto him that hath it, as for the chastenynge of fooles, it is but foly stuffe.

The herte of the wyse enstructeth his mouth, and amendeth the doctrine in his lyppes.

Fayre wordes are an honye combe, a refreshinge of the mynde, and healthe of the bones.

There is a way that men thinke to be right but the ende therof leadeth vnto death.

A troublous soule disquieteth her selfe, for her owne mouth hath wrought her therto.

An vngodly persone stereth vp euyll, and in his lyppes he is as an hote burninge fyre.

A frowarde body causeth strife, and he that is a blabber of his tongue, maketh diuision amonge princes.

A wycked man beguyleth his neighboure, & leadeth him the waye that is not good.

He that wynketh with his eyes, ymagineth myscheefe: and he that byteth his lyppes will do some harme.

Age is a crowne of worshyp, yf it be found in the waye of righteousnesse.

A patient man is better then one stronge: & he that can rule him selfe, is more worthy then he that wynneth a cyte.

The lottes are cast into the lappe, but their fall standeth in the Lorde.

CAPI. XVII.

BEtter is a drye morsell with quietnesse, then a full house and many sacrifices with stryfe.

A discrete seruaunt shal haue more rule then the sonnes that haue no discrecion, and shall haue lyke heritage with the brethren.

Lyke as syluer is tryed in the fyre, and golde in the fornace, euen so doth the Lorde proue the hertes.

A wycked doer beholdeth vnto falce lyppes, and a lyer geueth eare vnto a lewde tongue.

Who

counsell, there is stedfastnesse.

O how ioyfull a thinge is it, a man to gyue a conuenient answeare?

O how pleasaunt is a worde spoken in due season.

The waye of lyfe leadeth vnto heaue, that a man shulde beware of hell beneth.

The Lorde wyl breake downe the house of the proude, but he shal make fast the borders of the widow.

The Lord abhorreth the ymaginations of the wycked, but pure wordes are pleasaunt vnto him.

The couetous man roteth vp his owne house, but who so hateth rewardes, shal lyue.

A righteous man museth in his mynde how to doo good, but the mynde of the vngodly ymagineth, how he may do harme.

The Lorde is farre from the vngodly, but he heareth the prayer of the righteous.

Lyke as the clearnesse of the eyes reioyseth the herte, so doth a good name feede the bones.

The eare that harkeneth vnto a holsom warninge, and enclyneth therto, shall dwell among the wyse.

He that refuseth to be reformed, despyseth his owne soule: but he that submitteth him selfe to correction, is wyse.

CAPI. XVI.

THe feare of the Lorde is the right seate of wysdome, and lowlynes goeth before honoure.

A man maye well purpose a thinge in his herte, but the answere of the tonge commeth of the Lorde.

A man thinketh all his wayes to be cleane but it is the Lorde that fashioneth the myndes.

Committe thy workes vnto the Lord, and loke what thou deuysest, it shall prosper.

The Lorde doeth all thinges for his owne sake, yea and when he reproueth the vngodly for the daye of wrath.

The Lorde abhorreth all presumptuous & proude hertes, there maye neyther straunge nor power escape.

With louynge mercy and faythfulnesse synnes be forgyuen, and who so feareth the Lorde eschueth euyll.

When a mans wayes please the Lorde, he maketh his very enemyes to be his frendes.

Better it is to haue a lytle thinge with righteousnesse, then greate rentes wrongefully gotten.

A man deuyseth a waye in his herte, but it is the Lorde that ordreth his goynges.

When the Prophecye is in the lyppes of the kynge, his mouth shall not go wronge in iudgement.

A true measure and a true balaunce are the Lordes, he maketh all weyghtes.

It is a great abhominacion for kynges to commit wickednesse, for a throne is stablished by righteousnesse.

Righteous lyppes please kynges, and they loue him that speaketh the thinge

The hertes of kynges are in the hande of the Lorde, as the riuers of water: he turneth them whether so euer he lust.

Euery waye of a man semeth right in his owne eyes, but the Lorde pondereth the hertes.

To do iustice and iudgement is more acceptable to the Lorde then sacrifice.

An hye loke and a proude herte, and the lyght of the vngodly is synne.

The thoughtes of the diligent are alonely to plentie: but euery one that is hastye, commeth but to pouertie.

He that getteth treasures with a false tonge, is vayne and foolyshe, and shall fall into the snare of death.

The violence of the vngodly shall hurte them selues, because they refuse to do iudgement.

The waye of a man is wonderous and straunge: but as for the pure, his worke is right.

It is better dwell in the wyldernesse, then with a brawlynge and angrye woman in the house.

There is precious treasure and oyle in the habitacion of the wyse: but a foolyshe man deuoureth it vp.

He that followeth righteousnesse and mercye, findeth lyfe, righteousnesse and honoure.

A wyse man getteth the strength of the mightye, and casteth downe the confidence of his strength.

Who so kepeth his mouth and his tonge, kepeth his soule from trouble.

Proude and presumptuous is his name that worketh in the wrath of pryde.

The desyres of the slouthfull slee him, for his handes refuse to labour.

All the day long he coueteth greedely: but the righteous geueth and spareth not.

The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhominable: how much more when he offereth it wickedly?

A lyinge witnesse shall perish: but a man that heareth, may speake alwayes.

A wycked man hardeneth his face: but as for the righteous, he ordreth his waye aright.

There is no wysdome, nor vnderstandinge, nor counsell, that can preuayle against the Lorde.

The horse is prepared against the daye of battayle: but the helpe is of the Lorde.

A good name is more to be chosen then great riches, and louynge fauour is better then syluer and golde.

The riche and poore meete together: the Lorde is maker of them all.

A prudent man seeth the plague, and hydeth him selfe: but the foolysshe go forth and are punished.

The reward of humblenesse and the feare of the Lorde, is ryches, honoure and lyfe.

Thornes and snares are in the waye of the frowarde: he that kepeth his soule, shall be farre from them.

Teache a chylde his waye, and when he is olde he will not departe from it.

The riche ruleth ouer the poore, and the borower is seruaunte vnto the lender.

He that soweth wickednesse, shall reape vanitie, and the rod of his displeasure shall fayle.

He that hath a bountyfull eye, shall be blessed, for he geueth of his bread to the poore.

Cast out the skorner, and then shall the matter cease, and braulynge and shame shall be done away.

He that loueth pure hertes, for the grace of his lyppes, the kynge is his frende.

The eyes of the Lorde preserue knowlege, and he ouerthroweth the wordes of the vngodly.

The slouthfull sayeth, there is a lyon without, I shall be slayne in the streetes.

The mouth of a straunge woman is a deepe pytte: he that is abhorred of the Lorde, shall fall therin.

Foolysshenesse is bounde in the hert of a chylde: but the rod of correction shall put it farre from him.

He that oppresseth the poore to encrease his riches, and geueth to the riche, shall come to pouertie.

Bowe downe thyne eare, and heare the wordes of the wyse, and applye thyne hert vnto my doctrine.

For it is a pleasaunt thinge if thou kepe them within thee, and that they be all ready in thy lyppes.

That thy confidence may be in the Lorde, I haue shewed them vnto thee this day, euen vnto thee.

Haue not I written vnto thee excellent thinges of counsell and doctrine?

That I might shewe thee the certaintie of the wordes of trueth, that thou mightest answere the wordes of trueth to them that sende vnto thee?

Robbe not the poore, because he is poore, neyther oppresse the afflicted in the gate.

For the Lorde will defende their cause, and take away the soule of them that robbe them.

Make no frendshippe with an angrye man, and with a furious man thou shalt not go.

Lest thou learne his wayes, and get a snare to thy soule.

Be not one of them that stryke hande, or of them that become suretie for debtes.

If thou haue not wherewith to pay, why should he take thy bed from vnder thee?

Remoue not the olde bounde, which thy fathers haue made.

Seest thou a man diligent in his busynesse? he shall stande before kynges, he shall not stande before meane men.

When thou sittest to eate with a ruler, consider diligently what is before thee.

And put a knife to thy throte, if thou be a man geuen to appetite.

Be not desyrous of his delicates, for they are deceytfull meate.

Labour not to be riche, cease from thine owne wysdome.

Wylt thou set thyne eyes vpon that which is not? for riches make them selues wynges, and flye away as an eagle toward heauen.

Eate not the bread of him that hath an euyll eye, neyther desyre his delicates.

For as he thinketh in his mynde, so is he: eate and drynke, he will say vnto thee, but his hert is not with thee.

The morsell which thou hast eaten, shalt thou vomite vp, and lose thy swete wordes.

Speake not in the eares of a foole, for he will despyse the wysdome of thy wordes.

Remoue not the olde bounde, and enter not into the fyldes of the fatherlesse.

For their redemer is mighty, he shall defende their cause against thee.

Applye thyne hert vnto doctrine, and thyne eares vnto the wordes of knowlege.

Withdrawe not correction from the chylde: for if thou beate him with the rod, he shall not dye.

Thou shalt beate him with the rod, and shalt deliuer his soule from hell.

My sonne, if thyne hert be wyse, my hert shall reioyse, euen myne.

Yea my reynes shall be glad, when thy lyppes speake right thinges.

Let not thyne hert enuye synners, but be thou in the feare of the Lorde all the day long.

For surely there is a reward, and thyne hope shall not be cut of.

Heare thou my sonne, and be wyse, and gouerne thyne hert in the waye.

Be not among wyne bybbers, nor among riotous eaters of flesshe.

For the drunkarde and the glutton shall come to pouertie, and drowsynesse shall clothe a man with rotten rayment.

Heare thy father that begate thee, and despyse not thy mother when she is olde.

Get the trueth, and sell it not, wysdome, doctrine, and vnderstandinge.

The father of the righteous shall reioyse, and he that begate a wyse chylde, shall haue ioye of him.

Let thy father and thy mother be glad, and let her that bare thee, reioyse.

My sonne, geue me thyne hert, and let thyne eyes delyte in my wayes.

For a whore is a deepe dytche, and a straunge woman is a narrowe pytte.

She also lyeth in wayte as a thefe, and encreaseth the vngracious among men.

Who hath woo? who hath sorowe? who hath contencions? who hath complaynynge? who hath wounds without cause? who hath redde eyes?

Euen they that tarye long at the wyne, and they that go to seeke out drynke.

Loke not vpon wyne when it is redde, when it giueth his colour in the cuppe, when it goeth downe pleasantly.

For at the last it byteth like a serpent, and stingeth like an adder.

Thyne eyes shall beholde straunge women, and thyne hert shall speake frowarde thinges.

Thou shalt be as he that lyeth in the myddes of the sea, or as he that lyeth vpon the toppe of a mast.

They haue smytten me, shalt thou say, and I was not sicke: they haue beaten me, and I felte it not: when shall I awake? I will seeke it yet of drynke.

Enuye not euyll men, neyther desyre to be with them.

For their hert studieth destruction, and their lyppes talke of mischefe.

Through wysdome is an house buylded, and by vnderstandinge it is made stable.

And through counsell are the treasures filled with all precious and pleasaunt ryches.

A wyse man is stronge, and a man of knowlege encreaseth strength.

For by wyse counsell shalt thou make warre, and in the multitude of counsellers is health.

Wysdome is too hye for a foole, he openeth not his mouth in the gate.

He that imagineth to do euyll, shall be called a busye body.

The thought of foolysshenesse is synne, and the skorner is an abhominacion vnto men.

If thou faynte in the daye of aduersitie, thy strength is but small.

Deliuer them that are drawen vnto death, and withdrawe not them that are ready to be slayne.

If thou saye, behold we knewe not this: doth not he that pondereth the hertes consider it? and he that kepeth thy soule, doth not he knowe it? and shall not he rewarde euery man according to his workes?

My sonne, eate honye, for it is good, and the hony combe is sweete vnto thy mouth.

So shall the knowlege of wysdome be vnto thy soule: when thou hast found it, there is a reward, and thyne hope shall not be cut of.

Lye not in wayte, O vngracious man, against the habitacion of the righteous, destroye not his rest.

For a iust man falleth seuen times, and ryseth vp again: but the vngracious shall fall into myschefe.

Reioyse not when thyne enemye falleth, and let not thyne hert be glad when he stombleth.

Lest the Lorde see it, and it displease him, and he turne away his wrath from him.

Fret not thy selfe because of the euyll men, neyther be thou enuyous at the vngracious.

For there shall be no reward to the euyll man, the candle of the vngracious shall be put out.

My sonne, feare thou the Lorde and the kynge, and medle not with them that are geuen to change.

For their destruction shall arise sodenly, and who knoweth the plages of them both?

These also are sayinges of the wyse: it is not good to haue respect of persons in iudgement.

He that sayeth vnto the vngracious, thou art iust, him shall the people curse, and nations shall abhorre him.

But they that rebuke him, shall haue ioye, and vpon them shall come a good blessynge.

He that answereth right wordes, kysseth the lyppes.

Prepare thy worke without, and make it redy in the fylde, and afterwarde buylde thyne house.

Be not a false witnesse against thy neyghbour, and deceyue not with thy lyppes.

Say not, I will do to him as he hath done to me, I will rewarde euery man according to his workes.

I went by the fylde of the slouthfull, and by the vineyarde of the foolysshe man.

And lo, it was all ouergrowen with thornes, and nettles had couered the face therof, and the stone wall therof was broken downe.

Then I behelde, and considered it well, I sawe and receyued instruction.

A lytle slepe, a lytle slomber, a lytle folde of the handes to rest.

So shall thy pouertie come as a trauayler, and thy neede as a man that trauayleth.

CAPI. XXV.

THese are also prouerbes of Salomon, which the men of Ezechias king of Iuda gathered out.

It is the glorye of God to hyde a thinge: but the honour of kynges is to searche out a matter.

The heauen for hyghnesse, and the earth for depenesse, and the hert of kynges cannot be searched out.

Take away the drosse from the syluer, and there shall come a vessell for the fyner.

Take away the vngracious before the kynge, and his throne shall be stablished in righteousnesse.

Be not proude before the kynge, and stande not in the place of great men.

For it is better that it be sayde vnto thee, come vp hyther, then that thou shouldest be put lower before the prince, whom thyne eyes haue seene.

Go not forth hastely to stryue, lest thou knowe not what to do in the ende, when thy neyghbour hath put thee to shame.

Debate thy cause with thy neyghbour, and disclose not the secrete of another man.

Lest he that heareth it, reuyle thee, and thyne euyll name departe not away.

A worde spoken in due season, is like golden apples in syluer pyctures.

As a golden earynge and a iewell of fyne golde, so is a wyse reprouer vpon an obedient eare.

As the colde of snowe in the tyme of haruest, so is a faythfull messaynger vnto them that sende him: for he refresheth the soule of his maysters.

As clowdes and wynde without rayne, so is he that boasteth him selfe of his false gyftes.

By long forbearynge is a prince perswaded, and a soft tonge breaketh the bone.

Hast thou founde hony? eate so much as is sufficient for thee, lest thou be ouercharged therwith, and vomite it vp.

Withdrawe thy foote from thy neyghbours house, lest he be wery of thee, and so hate thee.

A man that beareth false witnesse against his neyghbour, is like a mace, a sworde, and a sharpe arrowe.

Confidence in an vnfaythfull man in the daye of trouble, is like a broken tothe, and a foote out of ioynt.

As he that taketh away a garment in colde weather, and as vynegre vpon nytre, so is he that singeth songes vnto a heuy hert.

If thyne enemye hunger, geue him bread to eate: and if he thyrste, geue him drynke to drynke.

For so shalt thou heape coles of fyre vpon his head, and the Lorde shall rewarde thee.

The north wynde driueth away rayne, and a sad countenaunce doth driue away backbytynge tonges.

It is better dwell in the wyldernesse, then with a brawlynge and angrye woman in the house.

As colde waters to a thyrstye soule, so is good tydynges from a farre countrey.

A righteous man falling before the vngracious, is like a troubled well and a corrupt spryng.

It is not good to eate much hony, so to search out their owne glorye is no glorye.

He that hath no rule ouer his spirite, is like a cyte that is broken downe, and without walles.

As snowe in sommer, and as rayne in haruest, so honour is not comely for a foole.

As the sparowe to flye, as the swallowe to go, so the curse causeth without a cause shall not come.

A whippe for the horse, a bridle for the asse, and a rod for the fooles backe.

Answere not a foole according to his foolysshenesse, lest thou be lyke vnto him thy selfe.

Answere a foole according to his foolysshenesse, lest he be wyse in his owne conceyte.

He that sendeth a message by the hande of a foole, cutteth of the feete, and drynketh damage.

As the lame goeth vnhandsomely with his legges, so is a parable in the mouth of fooles.

As he that bindeth a stone in a slynge, so is he that geueth honour to a foole.

As a thorne that commeth into the hande of a drunkarde, so is a parable in the mouth of fooles.

The great God that made all thinges, both rewardeth the foole and rewardeth transgressours.

As a dogge that turneth to his vomite, so a foole returneth to his folysshenesse.

Seest thou a man wyse in his owne conceyte? there is more hope of a foole then of him.

The slouthfull sayeth, there is a lyon in the waye, a lyon is in the streetes.

As the doore turneth vpon his hynges, so doth the slouthfull vpon his bed.

The slouthfull hydeth his hande in his bosome, and it grieueth him to bring it to his mouth.

The slouthfull is wyser in his owne conceyte, then seuen men that can geue a reason.

He that passeth by, and meddleth with the stryfe that belongeth not vnto him, is like one that taketh a dogge by the eares.

As a madde man that throweth firebrandes, arrowes and death.

So is the man that deceyueth his neyghbour, and saythe, am not I in sporte?

Where no wood is, there the fyre goeth out: and where no tale bearer is, there the contencion ceaseth.

As coles are to the burninge coles, and wood to the fyre: so is a contencious man to kyndle strife.

The wordes of a tale bearer are as wounds, and they go downe into the inwarde partes of the bely.

Burninge lyppes and a wycked hert, are like a potsheard couered with drosse of syluer.

He that hateth, dissembleth with his lyppes, and layeth vp deceyte within him.

When he speaketh fayre, beleue him not: for there are seuen abhominacions in his hert.

Though his hatred be couered with dissymulacion, yet his wickednesse shall be shewed before the congregacion.

Who so digge a pytte, shall fall therin: and who so rolleth a stone, it shall come vpon him.

A false tonge hateth those that are troubled with it, and a flatterynge mouth worketh ruyne.

Boast not thy selfe of to morowe, for thou knowest not what the daye will bring forth.

Let another man prayse thee, and not thyne owne mouth: a straunger, and not thyne owne lyppes.

A stone is heuy, and the sande weyghty: but a foolysshe mans displeasure is heuyer then them both.

Wrathfulnesse is cruell, and anger is a raginge thinge: but who is able to stande before enuye?

Better is open rebuke, then loue that is hydde.

Faythfull are the woundes of a louer: but the kysses of an enemye are deceytfull.

The full soule treadeth vnder fote the hony combe: but vnto the hungrye soule all bytter thinges are swete.

As a byrde that wandreth from her nest, so is a man that wandreth from his place.

Ointment and perfume reioyse the hert: so doth the swetenesse of a mans frende, which commeth of harty counsell.

Forsake not thyne owne frende, nor thy fathers frende, neyther go into thy brothers house in the daye of thy trouble: for a neyghbour that is nye, is better then a brother that is farre of.

My sonne, be wyse, and reioyse myne hert, that I may answere him that reproueth me.

A wyse man seeth the plague, and hydeth him selfe: but the foolysshe go forth and are punished.

Take his garment that becometh suretie for a straunger, and take a pledge of him for a straunge woman.

He that blesseth his neyghbour with a loude voyce early in the morninge, it shall be counted a curse vnto him.

A contencious woman and a droppynge in a colde daye are lyke.

Whosoeuer will refrayne her, refrayneth the wynde, and handleth ointment of the ryght hande.

Yron is sharpened with yron, and one man sharpeneth the countenaunce of another.

Who so kepeth the figtree, shall eate the fruite therof: and he that waiteth on his master, shall be honoured.

As in water face answereth face, so the hert of man answereth to man.

Hell and destruction are neuer full, so the eyes of man are neuer satisfied.

As the fyre trieth the syluer and golde, so doth a man his prayse.

Though thou bray a foole in a morter among wheate with a pestell, yet will not his foolysshenesse departe from him.

Be thou diligent to know the state of thy shepe, and loke well to thy flocke.

For ryches are not for euer, and the crowne endureth not from generacion to generacion.

The hay appeareth, and the grasse springeth, and the herbes of the mountaynes are gathered.

The lambes are for thy clothynge, and the goates are the price of the fylde.

And thou shalt haue goates mylke ynough for thy meate, for the meate of thy house, and for the liuynge of thy maydens.

The vngracious flyeth when no man pursueth him: but the righteous are bolde as a lyon.

For the synne of a lande many are the rulers therof: but by a man of vnderstandinge and knowlege the state therof shall be prolonged.

A poore man that oppresseth the simple, is like a sharpe reyne that leaueth no corne.

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngracious: but they that kepe the lawe, are angrye with them.

Euyll men vnderstande not iudgement: but they that seeke the Lorde, vnderstande all thinges.

Better is the poore that walketh in his vprightnesse, then he that is froward in his wayes, though he be riche.

Whoso kepeth the lawe, is a wyse sonne: but he that is a companion of ryotous persons, shameth his father.

He that encreaseth his substaunce by vsurye and vnlawfull gayne, gathereth for him that will be mercyfull vnto the poore.

He that turneth away his eare from hearynge the lawe, his prayer shall be abhominable.

Who so leadeth the righteous into an euyll waye, he shall fall himselfe into his owne pytte: but the vpright shall haue good thinges in possession.

The riche man is wyse in his owne conceyte: but the poore that hath vnderstandinge, searcheth him out.

When the righteous reioyse, there is great glorye: but when the vngracious ryse, men hyde them selues.

He that hydeth his synnes, shall not prosper: but who so confesseth and forsaketh them, shall haue mercye.

Blessed is the man that feareth alwayes: but he that hardeneth his hert, shall fall into myschefe.

As a roryng lyon and a hongrye beare, so is a wycked ruler ouer the poore people.

A prince that lacketh vnderstandinge, is a great oppressour: but he that hateth couetousnesse, shall prolonge his dayes.

A man that doth violence to the blood of any person, shall flye into the pytte, let no man helpe him.

Who so walketh vprightly, shall be saued: but he that is froward in his wayes, shall fall at once.

He that tilleth his lande, shall haue plentye of bread: but he that followeth vayne persons, shall haue ynough of pouertie.

A faythfull man shall haue many blessynges: but he that maketh haste to be riche, shall not be vnpunished.

To haue respect of persons is not good: for for a morsell of bread will a man leaue the trueth.

He that hasteth to be riche with an euyll eye, and knoweth not that pouertie shall come vpon him.

He that rebuketh a man, shall afterwarde fynde more fauour, then he that flattereth with the tonge.

Who so robbeth his father or his mother, and saythe it is no synne, the same is companion vnto a murtherer.

He that is of a proude mynde, stereth vp stryfe: but he that putteth his trust in the Lorde, shall be made fat.

He that trusteth in his owne hert, is a foole: but who so walketh wysely, he shall be delyuered.

He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not lacke: but he that hydeth his eyes, shall haue many a curse.

When the vngracious ryse, men hyde them selues: but when they perish, the righteous encrease.

CAPI. XXIX.

HE that hardeneth his necke when he is often rebuked, shall sodenly be destroyed, and that without remedy.

When the righteous are in authoritie, the people reioyse: but when the vngracious beare rule, the people mourne.

Who so loueth wysdome, reioyseth his father: but he that kepeth company with whores, destroyeth his substaunce.

The kynge by iudgement establisheth the land: but he that receyueth gyftes, ouerthroweth it.

A man that flattereth his neyghbour, spreadeth a net before his feete.

In the synne of the euyll is a snare: but the righteous doth synge and reioyse.

The righteous considereth the cause of the poore: but the vngracious vnderstandeth not knowlege.

Skorners bring a cyte into a snare: but wyse men turne away wrath.

If a wyse man haue to do with a foolysshe man, whether he be angrye or laughe, he shall haue no rest.

The bloudthirstye hate the vpright: but the iust seeke his soule.

A foole vttereth all his mynde: but a wyse man kepeth it in styll.

If a ruler geue eare vnto lyes, all his seruauntes are vngracious.

The poore and the deceytfull meete together: the Lorde lyghteneth both their eyes.

The kynge that iudgeth the poore faythfully, his throne shall be stablished for euer.

The rod and correction geueth wysdome: but a chylde that is geuen his owne mynde, bringeth his mother to shame.

When the vngracious are in authoritie, synne encreaseth: but the righteous shall see their fall.

Correct thy sonne, and he shall geue thee rest, and shall geue delyte vnto thy soule.

Where no vision is, there the people are dissolute: but who so kepeth the lawe, happy is he.

A seruaunte will not be corrected with wordes: for though he vnderstande, he will not answere.

Seest thou a man that is hasty in his wordes? there is more hope of a foole then of him.

He that delyteth his seruaunte from a chylde, shall haue him a sonne at the last.

A wrathfull man stereth vp stryfe, and a furious man is plentifully geuen to synne.

A mans pryde shall bring him low: but honour shall vphold the humble in spirite.

Who so is partaker with a thefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth the curse, and vttereth it not.

The feare of man bringeth a snare: but who so putteth his trust in the Lorde, shall be safe.

Many seeke the fauour of the prince: but euery mans iudgement commeth of the Lorde.

An vniust man is an abhominacion vnto the iust: and he that is vpright in his waye, is abhominable vnto the vngracious.

The wordes of Agur the sonne of Iake, euen the prophecye: the man spake vnto Ithiel, vnto Ithiel and Ucal.

Surely I am more foolysshe then any man, and haue not the vnderstandinge of a man.

I haue not learned wysdome, neyther haue I the knowlege of the holy.

Who hath ascended vp into heauen, and descended? who hath gathered the wynde in his fystes? who hath bounde the waters in a garment? who hath set all the endes of the earth? what is his name, and what is his sonnes name, if thou canst tell?

Euery worde of God is pure: he is a shylde vnto them that put their trust in him.

Adde not vnto his wordes, lest he reproue thee, and thou be founde a lyer.

Two thinges haue I required of thee, deny me them not before I dye.

Remoue from me vanitie and lyes: geue me neyther pouertie nor ryches, feede me with the foode that is conuenient for me.

Lest I be full and denye thee, and say, who is the Lorde? or lest I be poore and steale, and take the name of my God in vayne.

Accuse not a seruaunte vnto his maister, lest he curse thee, and thou be founde faulty.

There is a generacion that curseth their father, and blesseth not their mother.

There is a generacion that thinketh them selues pure, and yet are not washed from their filthynesse.

There is a generacion, O how proude are their eyes, and their eye lyddes lyft vp them selues.

There is a generacion whose teeth are as swerdes, and their cheke teeth as knyues, to deuoure the poore of the earth from among men.

The horsleche hath two daughters, crying, geue, geue.

There are three thinges that cannot be satisfied, yea foure that cannot be sayde, it is ynough.

The graue, the barren wombe, the earth that cannot be satisfied with water, and the fyre that neuer sayeth, it is ynough.

The eye that mocketh his father, and despyseth to obey his mother, the rauens of the valley shall pycke it out, and the yonge eagles shall eate it.

There be three thinges which I knowe not, yea foure which I vnderstande not.

The waye of an egle in the ayre, the waye of a serpent vpon a rocke, the waye of a ship in the myddes of the sea, and the waye of a man with a mayde.

Such is the waye of an adulterous woman, she eateth and wypeth her mouth, and saythe, I haue done no wickednesse.

For three thinges the earth is disquyeted, yea for foure which it cannot beare.

For a seruaunte when he reygneth, for a foole when he is full of meate.

For an odious woman when she is maryed, and for a handmayde when she is heyre to her mistresse.

There be foure thinges which are lytle vpon the earth, but they are exceedynge wyse.

The ants are a people not strong, and yet they prepare their meate in the summer.

The conies are but a feeble people, and yet they make their houses in the rocke.

The kynge hath no rule ouer the locustes, and yet they go forth all of them by bandes.

The lyzarde taketh hold with her handes, and is in kynges palaces.

There be three thinges which haue a comely going, yea foure which are comely in their pace.

A lyon which is strongest among beastes, and turneth not backe for any.

A greyhounde, a goate also, and a kynge against whom there is no rysynge vp.

If thou haue done foolysshely in lyfting vp thy selfe, or if thou haue thought wickednesse, lay thy hande vpon thy mouth.

For the churnynge of mylke bringeth forth butter, and the wrestynge of the nose bringeth forth bloude: so the forcynge of wrath bringeth forth stryfe.

CAPI. XXXI.

THese are the wordes of Lamuel the kynge, the prophecye that his mother taught him.

What my sonne? and what the sonne of my wombe? and what the sonne of my vowes?

Geue not thy strength vnto women, nor thy wayes to that which destroyeth kynges.

It is not for kynges, O Lamuel, it is not for kynges to drynke wyne, nor for princes to say, where is strong drynke?

Lest they drynke and forget the lawe, and chaunge the iudgement of any of the children of affliction.

Geue strong drynke vnto him that is ready to perish, and wyne vnto the bytter in soule.

Let him drynke and forget his pouertie, and remember his trouble no more.

Open thy mouth for the dumme, in the cause of all such as are appointed vnto destruction.

Open thy mouth, iudge righteously, and minister iustice vnto the poore and needy.

Who can finde a vertuous woman? for her prise is farre aboue rubyes.

The hert of her husbande may safely trust in her, so that he shall haue no nede of spoyle.

She wyll do him good and not euyll all the dayes of her lyfe.

She seeketh wolle and flaxe, and worketh willingly with her handes.

She is like the marchantes shippe, she bringeth her meate from farre.

She ryseth also while it is yet night, and geueth meate to her houshold, and their seruice to her maydens.

She considereth a fylde and buyeth it, and with the fruite of her handes she planteth a vineyarde.

She girdeth her loynes with strength, and strengtheneth her armes.

She perceyueth that her marchandise is good, her candle goeth not out by night.

She layeth her handes to the spyndle, and her fyngers to the distaffe.

She stretcheth out her hande to the poore, yea she reacheth forth her handes to the needy.

She feareth not the snowe for her houshold, for all her houshold are clothed with skarlet.

She maketh her couerynges of tapestrye, her clothynge is of fyne lynnen and purple.

Her husbande is knowen in the gates, when he sytteth among the elders of the lande.

She maketh fyne lynnen and selleth it, and deliuereth girdles vnto the marchaunte.

Strength and honour are her clothynge, and she shall reioyse in the latter daye.

She openeth her mouth with wysdome, and in her tonge is the lawe of grace.

She looketh well to the wayes of her houshold, and eateth not the bread of idlenesse.

Her children arise vp and call her blessed, her husbande also, and he prayseth her.

Many daughters haue done vertuously, but thou excellest them all.

Fayre speache is deceytfull, and beautye is vayne: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she shall be praysed.

Geue her of the fruite of her handes, and let her owne workes prayse her in the gates.

Pro.xxiiij.d. Iob.xxxi.c. Pro.xxiiij.c.

* Who so laugheth the poze to scorne, blas phemeth his maker, and he that is glad of an other mans hurte, shall not be unpunyshed.

Children chyldren are a worshype unto the elders, and the fathers are the honoure of the chyldren.

An eloquent speche becommeth not a foole a dissemblynge mouthe also becometh not a Prince.

Liberalitie is a precious stone unto him that hath it, for where so euer he becommeth, he prospereth.

Who so couereth an other mans offence, seketh loue: but he that discloseth the faute, set teth frendes at variaunce.

One reproue onely with more good to him that hathe vnderstandinge, then an hundred stripes unto a fole.

A seditious personne seketh mischefe, but a cruell messaunger shall be sent against him.

It were better to come against a the Beare robbed of her whelpes, then against a foole in his foolyshnesse.

Roma.xii.d. 1.Pet.iv.b. 1.Thes.v.d.

Who so rewardeth euyll for good, the plage shall not departe frome his house.

The beginnynge of strife is like one that dygged up a water brooke: but an open enemy is like the water that breaketh out and runneth abrode.

The Lorde hateth as well him that iustifieth the vngodly, as him that condemneth the innocent.

What helpeth it to geue a foole money in his hande, where as he hath no mynde to get wysdome?

He is a frende that all waye loueth, and in aduersitie a man shall knowe who is his brother.

Who so promyseth by the hande, and is surety for an other, he is a fole.

He that loueth stryfe, delyteth in synne: and who so setteth his doze to hyghe, seketh after a fall.

Who so hathe a frewarde hert optayneth no good: and he that hathe an ouerthwarte tongue, shall fall into mischefe.

A vnwyse body bringeth him self into sorowe, and the father of a foole canne have no ioye.

A merry hert maketh a lusty age, but a sorowfull mynde driueth by the bones.

Pro.xvii.d and xv.b. Ecclesiast.c. Ipocras.aphis.

The vngodly taketh gyftes out of the bosome to bowe the wayes of iudgement.

Wysedome shyneth in the face of him that hath vnderstandinge, but the eyen of fooles wander thorowe out all landes.

Ecclesiast.c and xx.b.

An vnthrifty sonne is a greife vnto his father, and a heuynesse vnto his mother that bare him.

To punysh the innocent, and to smyte the princes, to pyne from iudgement, are bothe euyll.

Iacob.iij.a.

He is wyse and discrete, that forbeareth his wordes, and is a man of vnderstandinge, that hath a swete of his spirite.

It is a mery worke when he ruleth his tongue, to commune wyse, and to have vnderstandinge, when he shutteth his lippes.

Who so hath pleasure to sowe discorde, he sheth a quarel in euery thinge.

A foole hathe no delyte in vnderstandinge, but onely in those thinges wherein his herte is opened.

Where vngodlynes is, there is also disdayne: and so there followeth shame and dishonour.

The wordes of a mans mouth are like depe waters, and the well of wysdome is like a swift ryuer.

It is not good to regarde the person of the vngodly, or to put backe the righteous in iudgement.

A foles lyppes are euer brawlinge, and his mouth prouoketh unto battayle.

A fooles mouthe is his owne destruccion, and his lyppes are the snare for his owne soule.

The wordes of a sclaunderer are beyng wounders, and go thorow unto the inmost partes of the body.

Who so is slouthfull and slacke in his labour, is the brother of him that is a waster.

The name of the Lorde is a stronge castell, the righteous fleeth unto it, and shall be sued.

But the ryche mans goodes are his stronge holde, yea he taketh them for an hyghe wall roundabout him.

After pryde commeth destruction, and honour after lowlynes.

He that geueth sentence in a matter before he heare it, is a foole, and worthy to be confounded.

A good stomacke dryueth away a mans sickenesse, but when the spirite is vexed, who may abyde it?

A wyse herte laboureth for knowlege, and a prudent eare seketh vnderstandinge.

Liberalitie bringeth a man to honour and worshyppe, and setteth him among gentlemen.

The righteous accuseth him self first of all: yf his neyghboure come he shall fynde him.

The lot pacifyeth the variaunce, & parteth the myghty a sunder.

The brittle of beehiues is stronger then a stell, and they that holde together are like the barre of a palace.

A mans belly shalbe satisfied with the fruite of his owne mouth, and with the increase of his lyppes shall he be fylled.

Death and lyfe standeth in the power of the tongue, he that loueth it, shal enioy the fruite therof.

Who so findeth a wyfe fyndeth a good thinge, and receyueth an holsome benefyte of the Lorde.

The poore maketh supplication and prayeth meekely, but the ryche aunswereth rough an swerre.

A frende that delyteth in loue, weth a man more frendshyp, and sticketh faster vnto him then a brother.

CAPI. XIX.

Better is the poze that liueth godly, the the blasphemer that is but a fole.

Where no discrecion is, there is foule is not well: and who so is swyfte on fote, sto bleth hastely.

Folyshnesse maketh a man to go out of his waye, and then is his herte vnpacient against the Lorde.

Ryches make many frendes, but the pooze is forsaken of his owne frendes.

A false wytnesse shall not remayne vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall not escape.

The multitude hangeth vpon great men, and euery man fauoureth him that geueth re wardes.

As for the poze, he is hated amonge all his brethren: yea his owne frendes forsake him, and he that geueth credence unto wordes, getteth nothynge.

He that is wyse, loueth his owne soule: and who so hathe vnderstandinge, shall prospere.

A false wytnesse shall not remayne vnpunyshed, and he that speaketh lyes shall perysshe.

Delicate eate becommeth not a fole, moche more vnsemely is it, a bonde man to haue the rule of princes.

A wyse man putteth of displeasure, and it is his honour to let some faultes passe.

The kynges displeasure is like the roaringe of a Lyon, but his frendeshyp is like the dew vpon the grasse.

An vndiscrete sonne is the heuynes of his father, and a braulynge wyfe is like the top of an house, where thorowe it is euer droppynge.

House and eyches maye a man haue by the heritage of his elders, but a discrete woman is the gyfte of the Lorde.

Slouthfulnes bringeth slepe, and an idell soule shall suffer honger.

Who so kepeth the commaundement, kepeth his owne soule: but he that regardeth not his waye, shall dye.

He that hath pytie vpon the poze, lendeth unto the Lord: and loke what he layeth out it shalbe payed him agayne.

Chasten thy sonne whyle there is hope, but let not thy soule be moued to slepe him.

For great wrath bringeth paeme, therfore let him go, & so mayst thou teache him more nurroure.

O geue eare vnto good councell, and be cō sented to be refourmed, that thou mayst be wyse hereafter.

There are many deuyses in a mans herte, ne uertheles the councell of the Lorde shall stande.

It is a mannes worshyppe to do good, and better it is to be a poore man, then a dissembler.

The feare of the Lorde preserueth the lyfe

yea it geueth plenteousnes, without the visitation of any plage.

A slouthfull bodye shuteth his hande into his bosome, so that he can not put it to his mouth.

Yf thou smyte a scornefull personne, the ignorant shall take better hede, and yf thou reprouest one that hathe vnderstandinge, he will be the wyser.

He that hurteth his father or shuteth oute his mother, is a shamefull and an vnworthy sonne.

My sonne, heare no more the wordeine that leadeth the awaye frome the wordes of vnderstandinge.

A false witnesse laugheth iudgement to scorne, and the mouth of the vngodly eateth vp wyckednes.

Punyshmentes are ordened for the scornefull, and stryppes for foles backes.

CAPI. XX.

Wyne is a voluptuous thinge, and dronkennes causeth sedition: who so delyteth therin, shall neuer be wyse.

The kynge ought to be feared as the roarynge of a lyon, who so prouoketh him unto anger, offendeth against his owne soule.

It is a mans honoure to kepe him selfe frome stryfe, but they that haue pleasure in braulynge, are foles euery one.

A slouthfull body will not go to plowe for colde, therfore shall he go a beggynge in Sōmer, and haue nothynge.

Wyse counsell in the herte of man is like a water in the depe of the earth, but he that hath vnderstandynge, bryngeth it forth.

Many there be that are called good men, but where shall one fynde a true faythfull man?

Who so leadeth a godly and an innocente lyfe, happy shall his children be whom he leaueth behynde him.

A kynge that sitteth in iudgement, and looketh well aboute him, dryueth awaye all euyll.

Who can saye: my herte is cleane, I am innocent frome synne?

To vse two maner of weyghtes, or two maner of measures, both these are abominable unto the Lorde.

A childe is knowen by his conuersacō, whether his workes be pure and right.

As for the heringe of the eare and the syght of the eye, the Lorde hath made theym both.

Delyte not thou in slepe, least thou come unto pouerte: but open thyne eyes, and thou shalt haue bred ynough.

It is naught, It is naught (saye men) whē they haue it, but when it is gone, they geue it a good worde.

A mouth of vnderstandinge is more worth then golde, many precious stones, and costely Iewels.

Bread eaten with the hand that is gotten by vnryghte, but at the last his mouth shal

Who so curseth his father and mother, his

The heritage that commeth so hastely at ꝑ

Saye not thou: I will recompence euell,
but put thy trust in the Lorde, and he shal re

The Lorde abhorreth two maner of weygh

The Lorde ordreth euerye mans goynges, for what is he, that vnderstandeth his owne
wayes?
It is a snare for a man to blaspheme that which is holye, and then to go about with

A wyse kynge destroyeth the vngodly, and bryngeth the whele ouer them.
The lanterne of the Lorde is the brethe of Mercy and faithfulnes preserue the kynge,

CAPI. XXI.

The kynges herte is in the hande of the Lorde, lyke as are the ryuers of water:
he maye tourne it whither so euer he will.
Every man thinketh his owne waye to be right, but the Lorde iudgeth the hertes.
To do righteousnesse and iudgement is more acceptable to the Lorde then sacrifice.
A proude loftynesse, a proude stomacke,
and the lanterne of the vngodly is synne.
The counsels of one that is diligent, bringe
plenteousnesse: but he that is vnadvised, co

The robberies of the vngodly shal be their owne destruction, for they wolde not do the thynge that was right.
The wayes of the frowarde are straunge,
but the workes of him ꝑ is cleane, are right.
It is better to dwell in a corner vnder the house toppe then with a braulynge woman
in a wyde house.
The soule of the vngodly wysheth euell, &
hath no pitie vpon his neyghbour.
When the scornefull is punysshed, the ygn
raunt take the better hede: and whan a wyse man is warned, he will receyue the more vn derstandinge.
The righteous enkourmeth the house of ꝑ vngodly, but the vngodly go on styll after their owne wyckednesse.
Who so stoppeth his eare at the crienge of the poore, he shall crye him selfe and not be herde.
A prieuy rewarde pacifieth displeasure, and a gyfte in the bosome stilleth cruelon nesse.
The iust delyteth in doynge the thinge that is right, but the workers of wyckednesse ab horre the same.
The man that wandreth out of the waye of wysdome, shall remayne in the congregacion
of the dead.
He that hath pleasure in banketting, shalbe
a poore man: Who so delyteth in wyne and delicates, shall not be riche.
The vngodly shalbe gyuen for the righte ous, and the wycked for the iust.
It is better to dwell in a wyldernesse, the
with a chydinge and an angry woman.
In a wyse mans house there is great trea sure and plenteousnesse, but a folysshe boy spendeth vp all.
Who so foloweth righteousnesse and mer cy, fyndeth both lyfe, righteousnesse and ho nour.
A wyse man wynneth the cytie of the migh ty, and as for the strength that they trust in,
he bringeth it downe.
Who so kepeth his mouth and his tonge,
the same kepeth his soule frō troubles.
He that is proude & presumptuous, is cal led a scornefull man, whiche in wrathe dare worke malitiously.
The voluptuousnesse of the slouthfull is his owne deathe, for his handes will not la bour.
He coueteth and desireth all the daye longe
but the righteous is alwaye gyuinge and ke peth nothinge backe.
The sacrifice of the vngodly is abhomina cion, for they offre the thinge that is gotten with wyckednesse.
A false wytnesse shall perysh, but he ꝑ will be content to heare, shall alway haue power to speake him selfe.
An vngodly man goeth fayth lessly, but ꝑ
iust reformeth his owne waye.
There is no wysdome, there is no vnder standinge, there is no counsell against the Lorde.
The horse is prepared against the daye of battayle, but the Lorde giueth the victo rie.

CAP. XXII.

It goeth downe softly, but at the last it byteth lyke a serpent, and styngeth as an adder.

So shal thyne eyes leke vnto straunge women, and thyne herte shall muse vpon frowarde thinges.

Yea thou shalte be as though thou sleptest in the myddest of the see, or vpon the top of the mast.

They wounded me (shalt thou saye) but it hath not hurt me, they smote me, but I felte it not.

When I am well wakened, I will go to the dronche agayne.

CAPI. XXIIII.

BE not thou gelous ouer wycked men, & desire not thou to be amonge them.

For their herte ymagineth to do hurt and their lyppes talke of myschefe.

Through wysdome an house shalbe buylded, and with vnderstandinge it shall be set vp.

Through discretion shall the chambers be fylled with all costly and pleasaunt ryches.

A wyse man is stronge, yea a man of vnderstandinge is better then he that is myghty of strength.

For with discrecion must warres be take in hande, and where as are many that can geue counsell, there is the victory.

Wysdome is an hyghe thinge, yea euen to the fole, for he darre not open his mouth in the gate.

He that ymagineth myschefe, may well be called an vngracious personne.

The thought of the folyshe is synne, and the skornefull is an abomination vnto men.

If thou be ouercome and negligent in tyme of nede, then is thy strength but small.

Delyuer them that go vnto death, and are led awaye to be slayne, and be not negligent therin.

If thou wilt saye: I knewe not of it, thinke not that he which made the hertes, doth not consider it? and that he which regarded the soule, kepeth it not?

Shall not he recompence euery man accordinge to his workes?

My son, thou eatest hony and the swete hony combe, because it is good and swete in thy mouth.

Euen so shall the knowledge of wysdome be vnto thy soule, as sone as thou hast gotten it.

And there is good hope, yea thy hope shall not be in vayne.

Lape no priuye wayte wickedly vpon the house of the righteous, and disquiete not his restinge place.

For a iust man falleth seuen tymes, and ryseth vp agayne, but the vngodly fal in to wickednes.

Reioyce not thou at the fall of thyne enmye, and let not thyne herte be glad whenne he stombleth.

Lest the Lorde (when he seeth it) be angry and turne his wrathe frome him vnto the.

Let not thy wrathe and gelousy moue the, to folow the wycked and vngodly.

And why? the wycked hathe nothinge to hope for, and the candle of the vngodly shall be put out.

My sonne, feare thou the Lorde & the kyng and hepe no compayne with the sclaunderous: For their destruction shall come sodenly, and who knoweth the fall of them both?

These are also the sayenges of the wyse.

It is not good, to haue respect of any person in iudgement.

He that sayth to the vngodlye: thou art righteous, him shall the people curse, yea the comenalte shall abhorre him.

But they that rebuke the vngodly shall be commended, and a good blessynge shall come vpon them.

He maketh him selfe to be well louede, that geueth a good answere.

First make vp thy worke that is without, & loke wel vnto that which thou hast in the felde then buylde thyne house.

Be no false wytnes against thy neyghbour, and hurt him not with thy lyppes.

Saye not: I will handle him, euen as he hath deale with me, and will rewarde euery man accordinge to his dedes.

I went by the felde of the slouthfull, and by the vynyardes of the folysh man.

And lo, it was all couered with nettels, & stode full of thistels, and the stone wall was broken downe.

This I sawe, and considered it well: I loked vpon it, and toke it for a warnynge.

Yea slepe on styll a lytle, slomber a lytle, folde thyne handes together yet a lytle: so shall powerte come vnto the as one that trauayleth by the waye, and necessite lyke a weyned man.

CAPI. XXV.

THese also are the sayenges of Salomon, whiche the men of Ezekiah kyng of Juda gathered to gether.

IT is the honour of God to kepe a thynge secrete, but the kynges honour is to searche out a thing.

The heauen is hye, the earth is depe, and the kynges herte is vnsearcheable.

Take the drosse from the syluer, and there shalbe a cleane vessell therof.

Take awaye vngodlynesse from the kyng, and his seate shall be stablysshed with rygh-teousnes.

Put not forthe thy selfe in the presence of the kynge, and preace not in to the place of greate men.

Better is it that it be sayde vnto the: come vp hyther, then thou to be sette downe in the presence of the prynce whome thou seyst with thyne eyes.

Be not hasty to go to the lawe, lest happly thou wonder thy selfe so at the laste, that thy neyghbour put the to shame.

Handle thy matter with thy neyghbour hym selfe, and discouer not another mans secrete, lest when men heare therof, it turne to thy dishonoure, and lest thyne euell name do not passe.

A worde spoken in due season, is lyke apples of golde in a syluer sylle.

The correction of the wyse is to an obedient eare, a golden cheyne and a Jewell of golde.

Lyke as the wynter coole in the haruest, so is a faythfull messaunger to hym that sent hym, and refresheth his maysters mynde.

Who so maketh great bostes and geueth nothynge, is lyke cloudes and wynde without rayne.

With patience maye a prynce be pacifyed, and with a softe tonge maye sygnyfeunesse be broken.

If thou fyndest hony, eate so moche as is sufficient for the: lest thou be ouer full, & perchaunce it out agayne.

Withdrawe thy foote frome thy neyghbours house, lest he be weery of the, and so abhorre the.

Who so beareth false wytnesse agaynste his neyghbour, he is a very speare, a swearde, and a sharpe arowe.

The hope of the vngodlye in tyme of nede is lyke a rotten tothe and a slypperye foote.

Who so syngeth a songe to a wycked hert, clotheth hym with raggyes in the colde, and poureth vynegre vpon woalde.

If thyne enemye hunger, fede hym: yf he thyrste, geue hym drynke: for so shalte thou heape coles of fyre vpon his heade, and the Lorde shall rewarde the.

The North wynde dryueth awaye the rayne, euen so doth an angrie lokynge countenaunce a backbyters tonge.

It is better to sytte in a corner vnder the rofe, then with a braulyng woman in a wyde house.

A good reporte out of a farre countree, is lyke colde water to a thyrstie soule.

A righteous man fallynge downe before the vngodlye, is lyke a troubled well and a spryngе that is destroyed.

Lyke as it is not godd to eate to moch hony, euen so he that wyll searche out hye thynges, it shall be to heuy for hym.

He that can not rule hym selfe, is lyke a cytie whiche is broken downe, and hathe no walles.

CAPI. XXVI.

LYke as snowe is not mete in sommer, & nor rayne in haruest: euen so is worshyp vnseemely for a foole.

Lyke as the byrde and the swalowe take theyr flyghte and flee here and there, so the curse that is geuen in vayne, shall not lyghte vpon a man.

Vnto the horse belongeth a whyppe, to the asse a bridle, and a rodde to the fooles backe.

Geue not the fole an answere after his folyshnesse, lest thou become lyke vnto hym: but make the foole an answere to his foolyshnesse, lest he be wyse in his owne conceate.

He is lame of his fete, yea dronken is he in vayne, that committeth any thynge to a foole.

Lyke as it is an vnseemely thynge to haue legges, and yet to halte, euen so is a parable in the fooles mouth.

He that setteth a foole in hye dignite, that is euen as yf a man dyd caste a pretious stone vpon the galous.

A parable in a fooles mouthe is lyke a thorne that pyercheth a dronken man in the hande.

A man of experience discerneth all thynges well, but who so hyreth a foole, hyreth soche one as wyll take no rede.

Lyke as the dogge turneth awaye to his vomyte, euen so a foole begynneth his folyshnesse agayne a freshe.

If thou seest a man that is wyse in his owne conceate, there is more hope in a foole then in hym.

The slouthfull sayeth: there is a leoparde in the waye, and a lyon in the myddest of the stretes.

Lyke as the dore turneth aboute vpon the thresholde, euen so doth the slouthfull wekar hym selfe in his bedde.

By The

Prouer.xxvi.

* The slouthfull body thrusteth his hand into his bosome, and it greueth hym to put it ageyne to his mouth.

The learned thynketh hym selfe wyser, then vij. men, that lyt and teache.

Who so goeth by and medleth with other mens byssie, he is lyke one that taketh a dog by the eares.

Lyke as one shooteth deadly arowes and dartes out of a preuy place, euen so doth a disceyuer with his neyghboure.

And then sayth he: I dyd it but in sporte.

Where no wood is, there the fyre goeth oute, and where the backbyter is take awaye, there the matter ceaseth.

Ecclesiast.vi.b

* Coles kyndle heate, and wod the fyre: euen so doth a braulynge felowe stere up debate.

A slaunderers wordes are lyke flatterye, but they pearce the inwarde parties of the body.

Clenymous lyppes and a wycked herte, are lyke a potsherde couered with syluer dosse.

An ennemye dissembleth with his lyppes, and in the meane season he ymagineth myschefe: but when he speaketh fayre, beleue hym not, for there are seuen abhominations in his herte.

Who so kepeth euell wyll, secretlye to be hurte, his malyce shall be shewed before the whole congregacion.

Eccle.xx.b. Eccle.xxvii.d

* Who vnpyggeth vp a pyt, shall fall therin: and he that welleth a stone, shall stomble vpon it vnwitte.

A dissemblynge tonge hateth one that rebuketh hym, and a flatterynge mouthe worketh mischefe.

CAPI. XXVII.

MAke not thy boost of to morowe, for thou knowest not what maye happen to daye.

Let an other man prayse the, and not thyne owne mouthe, yea other folkes lyppes, and not thyne.

The stone is heuye, and the sande weyghtye, but a fooles wrathe is heuyer then they bothe.

Wrath is a cruell thynge, and furiousnesse is a breye tempest: yea who is able to abyde enuye?

An open rebuke is better then a secrete loue.

Faythfull are the wounded of a louer, but the kysses of an ennemye are deceytfull.

He that is full, abhorreth an honye combe, but vnto hym that is hongrye, euerye sowre thynge is sweete. Iob.vi.b

He that ofte tymes fleeteth, is lyke a birde that forsaketh her nestе.

The eyer is glad of a sweete ointment and fauoure, but a stomache that can geue good counsell, reioyseth a mans neyghboure.

Thyne owne frende and thy fathers frende forsake not, but go not into thy brethers house in tyme of thy trouble.

Better is a frende at hande, then a brother farre of.

My sonne, be wyse, and thou shalte make me a glad herte: so that I shal make answere vnto my rebukers.

A wyse man seynge the plage, wyll hyde hym selfe, as for fooles they go on styll, and suffer harme.

* Take his garmente that is suertye for a straunger, and take a pledge of hym for the vnknowen mans sake.

He that is to hastye to prayse his neyghboure aboue measure, shall be taken as one that geueth hym an euell reporte.

A braulynge woman and the rofe of the house droppynge in a rayny daye, maye well be compared together.

He that refrayneth her, refrayneth the wynde, and holdeth oyle fast in his hande.

Lyke as one yron whetteth another, so doth one man comforte another.

Who so kepeth thy frygge tre, shall enioye the fruites therof: he that waiteth vpon his maister, shall come to honoure.

Lyke as in one water there appeare diuerse faces, euen so diuerse men haue diuerse herttes.

Lyke as hell and destruccion are neuer full, euen so the * eyes of men can neuer be satisfyed. Prouer.xxvii.c

Syluer is tryed in the moulde, and golde in the fornace, and so is a man, when he is openly prayed to his face.

Though thou shuldest braye a fole with pestell in a morter lyke otemele, yet wyll not his foolysshnesse go from hym.

Se that thou know the nombre of thy catell thy lesse, and loke well to thy flockes.

For ryches abyde not allway, & the crowne endureth not for euer.

The hey groweth, the grasse commeth by, and herbes are gathered in the mountaynes.

The lamb shall clothe the, and for the gotes thou shalte haue money to thy gouernaunce.

Thou shalt haue gotes mylke ynough to fede the, to bysholde thy housshold, and to susteyne thy maydens.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THe vngodlye fleeth no man chasynge hym, but the righteous standeth sure as a lyon.

Because of synne the lande bothe often chaunge her prynce: but throwe menes vnderstandynge and wysedome a realme endureth longe.

One poore man oppressynge an other by violence, is lyke a continuall rayne that destroyeth the frute.

They

They that forsake the lawe, prayse the vngodlye, but suche as kepe the lawe, abhorre them.

Wycked men discerne not the thynge that is ryght, but they that seke after the Lorde, vnderstande all thynges.

A poore man iedynge a godlye lyfe, is better then the ryche that goeth in frowarde wayes.

Who so kepeth the lawe, is a childe of vnderstandynge: but he that feedeth ryotous me, shameth his father.

Who so increaseth his ryches by vsauntage and vnrighte, let hym gather them to helpe the poore withall.

He that turneth away his eare from hearynge the lawe, his prayer shall be abhorred.

Who so leadeth the righteous into an euell waye, shall fall in to his owne pytte, but the vnsound haue the good in possession.

The riche man thynketh hym selfe to be wyse, but the poore that hath vnderstandynge, can perceaue hym well ynough.

When righteous men are in prosperitie, then doth honoure flourysshe: but when the vngodly come vp, the state of men chaungeth.

He that hydeth his synnes, shall not prosper: but who so knowledgeth them and forsaketh them, shall haue mercy.

Well is hym that standeth alway in awe: as for hym that hardeneth his harte, he shall fall in to myschefe.

Lyke as a rorynge lyon and an hongery beare, euen so is an vngodly prynce ouer the poore people.

Where the prynce is withoute vnderstandynge, there is greate oppression and wrong: but yf he be soch one as hateth couetousnesse, he shall longe raygne.

He that by violence wedeth any mannes blode, shall be a rennagate vnto his graue, and no man shall be able to succoure hym.

Who so leadeth a godly and an innocente lyfe, shalbe safe: but he that goeth frowarde wayes, shall ones haue a fall.

* He that tylleth his lande, shall haue plenteousnesse of breade: but he that followeth ydelnesse, shall haue pouerte ynough.

A faythfull man is greatly to be commended, but he that maketh to moche haste for to be ryche shall not be vngylte.

To haue respecte of persones in iudgemente is not good.

And why? he wyll do wronge, yee euen for a pece of breade.

He that wyll be ryche all to soone, hath an euell eye, and considereth not, that pouerte shall come vpon hym.

He that rebuketh a man, shall fynde more fauoure at the laste, then he that flatereth hym.

Who so robbeth his father and mother, and sayeth it is no synne: the same is lyke vnto a murtherer.

He that is of a proude stomache, stereth vp stryfe, but he that putteth his trust in the Lorde, shalbe well fedde.

He that trusteth in his owne herte, is a foole: but he that dealeth wysely, shalbe safe.

He that geueth vnto the poore, shall not wante: but he that turneth awaye his eyes from soch as be in necessite, shall suffer greate pouerte hym selfe.

When the vngodly are come vp, men are fayne to hyde them selues: but when they perysshe, the righteous increase.

CAPI. XXIX.

HE that is styffnecked and wyll not be reformed, shall sodeynly be destroyed without any helpe.

Where the righteous haue the ouerhand, the people are in prosperitie: but where the vngodlye beareth rule, there the people mourne.

Who so louyth wysedome, maketh his father a glad man, * but he that kepeth harlotes, spendeth awaye that he hath. *Prou.v.a Luke.xv.c

With true iudgement the kynge setteth vp the lande, but yf he be a man that taketh gyftes, he turneth it vtterly downe.

Who so flatereth his neyghboure, layeth a nette for his fete.

The synne of the wycked is his owne snare, but the righteous shall be glad and reioyse.

The righteous consydereth the cause of the poore, but the vngodly regardeth no vnderstandynge.

Wycked people bringe a cytie in decaye, but wyse men set it vp agayne.

Yf a wyse mā go to law with a foole (whether he beate with hym frendly or roughly) he getteth no rest.

The bloud thyrstie hate the righteous, but the iust seke his soule.

A foole powreth oute his spyrite all together, but a wyse man kepeth it in tyll afterwarde.

Yf a prynce delyte in lyes, all his seruauntes are vngodly.

The poore and the lender mete together, the Lorde lyghteneth bothe their eyes.

The seate of the kynge that faythfully iudgeth the poore, shall contynue sure for euermore.

The rodde and correction mynistre wysdome, but yf a childe be not loked vnto, he bringeth his mother to shame.

When the vngodly come vp, wyckednesse increaseth, but the righteous shall se their fall.

Nurture thy sonne with correction, and he shall comfort the, yea he shall do the good at thyne herte.

Where no prophete is, there the people perysshe: but well is hym that kepeth the lawe.

A seruaunt wyll not be the better for wordes, for though he vnderstande, yet wyll he not regarde them.

Yf thou seyst a man that is hastye to speake vnaduysed, thou mayst trust a fole more then hym.

D He that delycately bringeth vp his seruaunt from a childe, shall make hym his master at length.

Job.xxii.b An angry man stereth vp strife, and he that beareth euyll wyll in his mynde, doeth moche euyll.

After pryde commeth a fal, but a lowly spirite bringeth great worshyp.

Who so keepeth company with a theefe, hateth his owne soule: he heareth blasphemies and telleth it not forth.

He that feareth men, shall haue a fall: but who so putteth his trust in the Lorde shall come to honoure.

Many there be that seke the Princes fauoure, but euery mans iudgement commeth from the Lorde.

The righteous abhorreth the vngodly: but as for thofe that be in the right waye, ỹ wycked hate them.

CAPI. XXX.

¶ The wordes of Agur the sonne of Jakeh.

A The prophecie of a true faythfull man, whome God hathe helped, whome God has comforted and nourished.

For thoughe I am the leest of all, and haue no mans vnderstandynge (for I neuer learned wysdome) yet haue I vnderstandynge, and am well instructed in godly thynges.

Who hathe clymmed vp in to heuen? Who hath come downe from thence? Who hathe holden the wynde faste in his handes? Who hath comprehended the waters in a garment? Who hathe sette all the endes of the worlde? What is his name, or his sonnes name? Canst thou tell?

*Psal.xviii.c Deut.iii.a.c.xii.d. Pro.xxx.c *All the wordes of God are pure & cleane, for he is a shyld vnto all them, that put their truste in hym.

Put thou not hynge therfore vnto his wordes, leste he reproue the, and thou be founde a lyar.

Two thynges I requyre of the, that thou wylt not denye me before I dye.

Remoue fro me vanite and lyes: geue me neither pouerte nor ryches, onely graunte me a necessary lyuynge.

B Leste yf I be to full, I denye the, and saye: what is owre is thy Lorde?

And leste I poynge constrayned thorow pouerte, fall vnto stealynge, and forswere the name of my God.

Accuse not a seruaunte vnto his master, leste he speake euell of the also, and thou be hurte.

He that bringeth vp an euell reporte vpon the generation of his father and mother, is not worthy to be commended.

The generation that thynke themselues cleane, shal not be clensed from their filthynesse.

There are people that haue a proude loke, and cast vp their eye lyddes.

This people teethe are swearedes, and with their chaftbones they consume and deuoure the symple of the earth, and the poore from amonges men.

This generation (whiche is lyke an horseleche) hath two daughters: the one is called, feech hyther, and the other, bynge hyther.

There be thre thynges that are neuer satisfyed, and the fourth sayth neuer hoo.

The hell, a womans wombe, and the earth hath neuer water ynough.

As for fyre, it sayeth neuer, hoo.

Who so laugheth his father to scorne, and setteth his mothers commaundement at naught: the rauens pycke out his eyes in the valleye, and deuoured be he of the ponge Aegles.

There be thre thynges to hye for me, and as for the fourth, it passeth my knowledge.

The waye of an Aegle in the ayre, the way of a serpent ouer a stone, the waye of a shyppe in the see, and the way of a man with a yong woman.

Soch is the waye also of a wyfe that breaketh wedlocke, which wypeth her mouth lyke as when she hath eaten, and sayeth: I haue done no harme.

Thorowe thre thinges the earth is disquieted, and the fourth maye it not beare.

Thorow a seruaunt that beareth rule, thorowe a foole that hath great ryches, thorowe an yll houswyfe, and thorowe an handmayden that is heyre to her maisters.

D There be foure thynges in the earthe, the which are verye lyttle: but in wysdome they excede the wyse.

The Pysmyres are but a weake people, yet gather they their meate to gether in the harueste.

The Conyes ar but a feble folke, yet make they their couches amonge the rockes.

The grethoppers haue not a gide, yet go they forth together by heapes.

The spyder laboureth with her handes, & that in the Kynges palace.

There be thre thynges that go stylly, but the goynge of the fourthe is the goodlyest of all.

A Lyon, whiche is stronge of beastes, and geueth the place to no man: A Cocke readye to fyght: A ramme and a kyng that goeth forth with his people.

If thou be so folysh to magnifie thy selfe, or medlest with any soche thynge, then laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth.

Who

Who so chyrneth myelke, maketh butter: he that rubbeth his nose, maketh it bleede: and he that rayseth wrathe, bryngeth forthe strife.

¶ The wordes of kynge Lamuel / and the Prophecye that his mother taught hym.

Kynges ought to iudge iustly. The propertyes of an honest maryed wyfe.

CAPI. XXXI.

My sonne, thou sonne of my body: O my moste beloued sonne, geue not ouer thy substaunce & myght vnto women, which are the distruction euen of kynges.

O Lamuel, geue kynges no wyne, geue kynges and princes no stronge drinke: leaste they drynge dronken forget the lawe, and regarde not the cause of the poore, and of all suche as be in aduersitie.

Geue stronge drinke vnto suche as are consumed to nauth, & wyne vnto those ỹ mourne that they maye drynke it, and forget their myserye and necessite.

Be thou an aduocate, and stande in iudgement, selfe, to speake for all suche as be domme and succourles.

Vnlyke thy mouth defende the thinge that is lawfull and right, and the cause of the poore and helpelesse.

ALEPH.

Who so fyndeth an honest faythfull woman, she is moche more worthe then perles.

BETH.

The herte of her housbande maye safely trust in her, so that he shall haue no nede of spoyles.

GIMEL.

She will to him good and not euyll al the dayes of her lyfe.

DALETH.

She occupyeth woll and flaxe, and laboureth gladly with her handes.

HE.

She is lyke a marchauntes shyp, that bringeth her victayles from a farre.

VAV.

She is vp in the nyghte season, to prouyde meate for her houshoulde, and fode for her maydens.

ZAIN.

She considereth lande, and byeth it, and with the fruite of her handes she planteth a vyneyarde.

HETH.

She gyrdeth her loynes with strength, and couragyth her armes.

TETH.

And yf the percepue that her housewyfery is good, her candle goeth not oute by nyght.

IOD.

She layeth her fingers to the spyndle, and her handes taketh holde of the rocke.

CAPH.

She openeth her hande to the poore, yea she stretcheth forth her handes to suche as haue nede.

LAMED.

She feareth not that the colde of wynter shall hurt her house, for all her houshoulde folkes are double clothed.

MEM.

She maketh her selfe fayre ornamentes, her clothynge is wyght silcke and purple.

NVN.

Her housbande is moche set by in the gates, when he syteth amonge the rulers of the lande.

SAMECH.

She maketh clothe of silke and selleth it, and deliuereth a girdle vnto the marchaunt.

AIN.

Strength and honour is her clothinge, and in the latter daye she shall reioyse.

PHE.

She openeth her mouth with wysdome, & in her mouth is the lawe of grace.

ZADE

She laketh well to the wayes of her housholde, and eateth not her bred with ydlines.

KOPH.

Her children aryse, and call her blessed: and her husbande maketh mocke of her.

RES.

Many daughters there be that gather riches together, but thou goest aboue them all.

SIN.

As for fauoure, it is deceiptfull, and beautye is a vayne thinge: but a woman that feareth the Lorde, she is worthy to be praysed.

THAV.

Geue her of the frute of her handes, and let her owne workes prayse her in the gates.

¶ The ende of the Prouerbes of Salomon.

CALLED ECCLESIASTES.

All that is in this worlde is vanitie.

CAPI. I.

THese are the wordes of the Preacher, the sonne of Dauid, kynge of Jerusalem. All is but vanitie (sayth the preacher) all is but playne vanite: for what els hath a man, of all his laboure that he taketh vnder the Sunne? One generacion passeth awaye, an other commeth, but the earth abydeth styll. The Sunne ariseth, the Sunne goeth downe, and returneth to his place, that he maye there ryse vp agayne. The wynde goeth towarde the South, and fetcheth his cõpase about vnto the North, and so turneth in to him selfe agayne. All floudes run into the see and yet the see is not fylled: for loke vnto what place the waters run, thence they come agayne. All thinges are so harde, that no man can expresse them. The eye is not satisfyed with sight, the eare is not fylled with hearinge.

The thinge that hath bene, commeth to passe agayne: and the thinge that hath bene done, is done agayne, there is no new thinge vnder the Sunne. Is there any thinge wherof it may be sayde: lo, this is newe? For it was longe ago in the tymes that haue bene before vs.

The thinge that is past, is out of remembraunce: euen so the thinges that are for to come, shal no more be thought vpon amonge them that come after. I the selfe the Preacher, beynge kynge of Israel and Jerusalem, applyed my mynde to seke out and searche for the knowledge of all thinges that are done vnder heauen. Suche trauayle and labeure hathe God geuen vnto the children of men, to exercyse them selues therin.

Thus I haue considered all the thinges that come to passe vnder the Sunne, and lo, they are all but vanitie and veracion of mynde.

The croked can not be made straight, and the lackes can not be nombred. I cõmoned with myne owne hert, sayenge: lo, I am come to a great estate, and haue gotten more wysdome, then all they that haue bene before me in Jerusalem. Yea my hert had great experience of wysdome and knowledge, for there vnto I applyed my mynde, that I might know what were wysdome & vnderstandinge, what were madnes and folysshenes. And I perceyued that this also was but a veracion of mynde: for where moche wysdome is, there is also great trauayle and displeasaunce: & the more knowledge a man hath, the more is his care.

Aboundaunce of riches, of pleasure, and of buildinge, are vayne thinges.

CAPI. II.

THen sayd I thus in my hert: Nowe go to, I will take myne ease & haue good dayes. But lo, that was vanite also: in so moche that I sayde vnto laughter: thou art mad, and to mirth: what helpest thou?

So I thought in my hert, to withdrawe my flesh from wyne, to applye my mynde vnto wysdome, and to comprehende folysshnes vntyll the tyme that (among al the thinges which are vnder the sunne) I might se what were best for men to do, so long as they lyue vnder heauen. I made gorgious fayre workes. I buylded me houses, & planted vyneyardes. I made me orchardes and gardens of pleasure, and planted trees in them of all maner frutes. I made poles of water, to water the grene and frutefull trees withall. I bought seruauntes and maydens, and had a great housholde. As for catell and sheepe, I had more substaunce of them, then all they that were before me in Jerusalem. I gathered siluer and golde together, euen a treasure of kynges and landes.

I prouyded me singers and women withe coulde playe of instrumentes, to make men mirth & pastyme. I gat me drinkinge cuppes also and glasses. (Shortly) I was greater & in more worshyp, then all my predecessours in Jerusalem. For wysdome remayned with me and toke what so euer myne eyes desired, I let them haue it: and wherin so euer my hert delyted or had any pleasure, I withholde it not from it. Thus my herte reioyced in all my labour, and this I toke for the portion of all my trauayle. But when I considered all the workes that my handes had wrought, and all the laboures that I had taken therin: lo, all was but vanite and veracion of mynde, and nothing of any value vnder the Sunne. Then turned I me to consider wysdome, errours & folysshnesse (for what is he amonge men, that might be compared to me the kynge in suche workes?) and I saw that wysdome excelleth folysshnesse, as farre as lyght doth darknes. For a wyse man beareth his eyes about in his head, but the fole goeth in the darcknesse. I perceyued also that they both had one ende.

Then thought I in my mynde: Yf it happen vnto the fole as it doth vnto me, what neweth me then to labour any more for wysdome? So I cõfessed with my hert, that this also was but vanite. For the wyse are euer as lytle in remembraunce as the folysh, and al the dayes for to come shalbe forgotten, yea the wyse mã dyeth as well as the fole. Thus began I to be weery of my lyfe, in so moche that I could alway vñ nothing that is done vnder the Sun for al was but vanite & veracõ of mynde. Yea I was weery of all my labour, which I had taken vnder the sunne, because I shulde be fayne to leaue the vnto an other mã, y cõmeth after me, for who knoweth, whether he shall be a wyse mã or a fole? & yet shal he be lorde of al my labours, which I vñ such wysdom haue taken vnder y Sũne. Is not this a vayne thing?

So I turned me to refrayne my mynde frõ all suche trauayle, as I toke vnder the sunne for so moche as a man shoulde merry him selfe with, frome, with vnderstandinge and ouer curiste, and yet be sayne to leeue his labours vnto an other, this ought to be knowen for the. This is also a verye fyne thinge and a great mysterye.

For what getteth a man of all the labour and trauayle of his mynde, that he taketh vnder the Sunne, but heuynes, sorowe and disquietnes al the dayes of his lyfe? In so moch that his herte can not rest in the nyght Is not this also a vayne thinge? Is it not better for a man to eate and drinke, and his soule to be merry in his labour? Yea I sawe that this also was a gyfte of God: For who may eate dunke, or bringe any thinge to passe without him? And why? he giueth vnto man, what it pleaseth him: whether it be wysedome, vnderstandinge, or gladnesse. But vnto the synner he giueth wearynes and sorowe, that he maye gather and heape together the thinge, that afterwarde shalbe gyuen vnto him whome it pleaseth God. This is now a vayne thinge, yea a very disquietnesse & vexation of mynde.

¶ All thynges come in theyr tyme and passe away in theyr tyme.

CAP. III.

EVery thinge hath a tyme, yea all that is vnder the heauen, hathe his conuenient season.

There is a tyme to be borne, and a tyme to dye.

There is a tyme to plante, and a tyme to pluckе vp the thinge, that is planted

A tyme to slay, and a tyme to make hole.

A tyme to breake downe, and a tyme to buylde vp.

A tyme to wepe, and a tyme to laughe

A tyme to mourne, and a tyme to daunce.

A tyme to cast awaye stones, and a tyme to gather stones togither.

A tyme to embrace, and a tyme to refrayne frome embracynge.

A tyme to wynne, and a tyme to lese.

A tyme to spare, and a tyme to spende.

A tyme to cut in peces, and a tyme to sowe togither

A tyme to kepe silence, and a tyme to speake.

A tyme to loue, and a tyme to hate.

A tyme of warre, and a tyme of peace.

What hath a man els (that doth any thing) but werynesse and laboure? For as touching the trauayle & carefulnesse which God hathe gyuen vnto men, I se he hath gyuen it them to be exercysed in it. All this hath he ordened maruelous goodly, to euery thinge his due tyme. He hath planted ignoraunce also in the hertes of men, that they should not fynde out the grounde of his workes, which he doth frō the begynnynge to the ende. So I perceyued, that in these thinges there is nothinge better for a man, then to be merry and to do well so longe as he liueth. For all that a man eateth and drinketh, yea what so euer a man enioyeth of all his laboure, that same is a gyfte of God. I cōsidered also that what so euer God doth, it continueth for euer, and that nothing can be put vnto it nor taken frome it: and that God doth it to the intente, that men shoulde feare him. The thinge that hath bene, is now and the thinge that is for to come, hath bene afore tyme, for God requyreth agayne that thing that was past. Moreouer, I sawe vnder the Sunne vngodlynesse in the stede of iudgement and iniquite in stede of righteousnesse. Then thoughte I in my mynde: God shall separate the righteous frome the vngodly, and then shalbe the tyme and iudgement of all counsels and workes. I commened with myne owne herte also concerninge the children of men: howe God hath chosen them, and yet letteth them apeare: as thoughe they were beastes: for that happeneth vnto men as it doth vnto beastes, and as the one dyeth, so dyeth the other: yea they haue both one maner of dyeth, so that in this) a man hath no preemynence aboue a beast but all are subdued vnto vanitie. They go all vnto one place, for as they be all of dust, so shall they all turne vnto dust agayne. Who knoweth the spirite of man that goeth vpwarde and the breth of the beaste that goeth downe into the earth? Wherfore I perceyue, that there is nothing better for a man, then to be ioyful in his laboure, for that is his portion. But who will bringe him to se the thinge that shall come after him?

¶ The mysteryes of the innocent. The superfluous laboures of men. The chyld that is poore and wyse.

CAPI. IIII.

SO I turned me, and considred all the violent wronge that is done vnder the Sunne and beholde the teares of suche as were oppressed, and there was no man to comforte them or that would deliuer and defende them from the violence of their oppressours. Wherfore I iudged those that are dede, to be more happy then suche as be a lyue: yea him that is yet vnborne to be better at ease then they both, because he seeth not the myserable workes that are done vnder the sunne.

Agayne, I sawe that all trauayle and diligence of labour was hated of euery man This is also a vayne thinge, and a vexation of mynde.

The fole folbeth his handes togither, and eateth vp his owne flesh. One handfull (sayth he) is better with rest, then both the handes full with labour and trauayle.

Moreouer, I tourned me, and beholde yet an other vanitie vnder the Sunne.

There is one man, no mo but him selfe alone, hauynge neither childe nor brotherne: of whom there is no ende of his carefull trauayle, his eyes canne not be satisfied with ryches, yet doeth he not remembre him selfe, and sayth: For whome do I take suche trauayle? in whose pleasure do I thus consume away my lyfe? This is also a vayne and myserable thinge. Therfore two are better then one, for they maye well enioye the profyt of their laboure. If one of them fall, his compayn helpeth him vp agayne. But woo is him that is alone, for yf he fall, he hathe not an other to helpe him vp. Agayn, when two slepe togither they are warm: but how can a body be warm alone? One may be ouercome, but two maye make resistence: a thre folde cable is not lightly broken. A poore childe being wyse, is better then an olde king that doteth, and can not be warned in tyme to come. Seme one cōmeth out of prysone to be made a king: and an other which is borne in the kingdome, cōmeth vnto powerte. And I perceyued that all men lyuing vnder the Sunne, go with the seconde chyld, that cōmeth vp in the stede of the other.

As for the people that haue ben before him, and that come after him, they are innumerable: yet is not their ioye the greater therin him. This is also a vayne thinge, and a vexation of mynde. When thou commest in to the house of God, kepe thy fote, & drawe nye, that thou mayste heare that is better then the offringes of fooles. for they know not what euill they do.

¶ A mention to be ware of euil. The communication. We ought not to marueill at the oppression of the poore. The couetous is not satisfyed & his ryches.

CAPI. V.

BE not hasty with thy mouth, and let not thyne herte speake any thynge rashly before God. For God is in heuen, and thou vpon earth, therfore let thy wordes be few. For where moche carefulnesse is, there are manye dreames: and where many wordes are, there are many heare fooles. * Yf thou make a vowe vnto God, be not slacke to performe it. As for folysshe vowes, he hath no pleasure in them. Yf thou mynyste any thynge, pay it: for better it is that thou make no vowe, then yf thou shouldest promyse and not paye. Vse not thy mouthe to cause thy flesshe for to synne, that thou saye not before the aungell: my folysshnesse is in the fault. For then God wil be angry at thy voyce, and destroye all the workes of thyne handes. And why? where as are many dreames and many wordes, there are also diuers vanities: but loke that thou feare God. Yf thou seest the poore to be oppressed, & wrongfully dealte withall, so that equitie and the right of the law is wrested in the lande: marueil not then at suche iudgement, for one great man keperth vnder an other, & the mighty helpe them selues togither. The whole land also with the feldes, and all that is therin, is in subiection and bondage vnto the kynge. He that loueth money, wil neuer be satisfied with money: and who so delyteth in ryches, shall haue no profyte therof. Is not this also a vayne thyng? Where as moche ryches is, there are many also that spende them awaye. And what pleasure more hath he that possesseth them, saue that he maye looke vpon them with his eyes? A labouring man sleepeth swetely, whether he eate litle or moche: but the aboundaunce of the ryche will not suffre him to slepe.

Yet is there a sore plage, which I haue sene vnder the sunne (namely) ryches kepte to the hurt of him that hath them in possession. For ofte tymes they perishe with his great misery and trouble: and if he haue a childe, it getteth nothinge. * Lyke as he came naked out of his mothers wombe, so goeth he thither agayne, & carieth nothing away of him of all his labour. This is a miserable plage, that he shall go awaye euen as he came. What helpeth it him then, that he hath laboured in the wynde? All the dayes of his lyfe also muste he eate in the darcke, with great carefulnesse, sickenesse and sorowe. Therfore me thynke it a better and a fayrer thynge, a man to eate and drynke, and to be refreshed of all his labour, that he taketh vnder the sunne all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God giueth him, for this is his portion. For vnto whome so euer God giueth ryches, goodes and power, he giueth it him to enioye it, to take it for his portion, and to be refreshed of his labour: this is now the gyfte of God. For he thinketh not moche how long he shall liue, for so moche as God fylleth his herte with gladnesse.

¶ The mysery of the ryche and couetous. The difference of a foole and a wyse man.

CAPI. VI.

THere is yet a plage vnder the sunne, and it is a generall thyng among men: where God giueth a man ryches, goodes and honour, so that he wanteth nothyng of al that his herte can desire: and yet God giueth him not leue to enioye the same, but an other man deuoureth them. This is a vayne thynge, and a miserable plage. Yf a man begat an hundred children, & liue many yeres, so that his dayes are many in nombre, and yet can not enioye his good, neither be buried: as for him I say, that an vntymely byrth, he is better then he. For he commeth to nought, and goeth his waye in to darcknesse, & his name is forgotten. Moreouer he seeth nor the sunne, and knoweth of no rest neither here ne there. Yea though he lyued two thousande yeres, yet hath he no good life. Come not al to one place? All the labour that a man taketh, is for him selfe, & yet his desire is neuer filled after his wynde. For what hath the wyse more then the fole? What helpeth it the poore what he knoweth to walke before the liuing? The sight of the eyes is better, then that the soule should so depart awaye. How be it this is also a vayne thing, & a disquietnesse of wynde. What is more excellent then man? yet can he not in the lawe get the victorye of him that is mightyer then he. A vayne thing is it to rayse out many wordes, but what hath a man els?

¶ That whiche passeth our strengthes and wyttes ought we not to seke after.

CAPI. VII.

FOr who knoweth what is good for man in ye synne, in the dayes of his vayne lyfe, whiche is but a shadowe? Or who will tell a man a man by that shall happen after him vnder the sunne? A good name is more worth then a pre-Prouerb. 22. Eccle. 7. cious ointment, and the day of death is better than the day of birth. It is better to go into B an house of mourninge, then in to a bankettynge house. For there is the ende of all men, and he that is lyuynge taketh it to hert. It is better to be sorye then to laugh, for when the countenaunce is heuy, the hert is ioyful. The hert of the wyse is in the mourning house, but the hert of the folysh is in the house of myrth.

It is better to gyue eare to the chastening of a wyse man, then to heare the song of fooles. For the laughyng of fooles is lyke the crackynge of thornes vnder a pot. And that is but a vayne thing. Who so doeth wronge, maketh a wyse man to goo oute of his wyt, and destroyeth a gentle hert. The ende of a thyng is better the the beginninge. The patient of spirite is better then the hye mynded. Be not hastely angry in thy mynde: for wrath resteth in the bosome of a foole. Saye not thou: what is the cause that the olde tyme were better then they be now: for that were no wise question. Wysdome is better than ryches, yea moche more C then eyen the eye sighte. For wysdome defendeth as well as money, and the excellent knowlege of wysdome giueth life vnto him that hath it in possession. Consider the worke of God how that no man can make the thynge straighte, which he maketh croked. Vse wel the tyme of prosperite, and remembre the tyme of miserie D as wel: for God maketh the one by the other, to that a man can fynde nothyng els.

These two thinges also haue I considered in the time of vanitie: that the iust man perisheth
for his righteousnesse sake, and the vngodly pro-spereth in his wickednesse. Therfore be thou neither to righteous ne ouer wyse, that thou perishest not: be neither to vngrghtous also, ne to foolyshe, lest thou dye before thy tyme. It is good for the to take holde of this, and not to let that go from thy hande. For he that feareth God, shal escape them all.

E Wysdome giueth more courage vnto the wyse then ten mightye men of the citye: for Eccle. 7. Iohn. 8. there is not one iust vpon erth that doth good, and synneth not. Take not hede vnto euery word that is spoken, lest thou heare thy seruaunte curse the: for thyne owne herte knoweth that thou also hast oft times spoken euil by other. All these thinges haue I proued by wysdome: for I thought to be wise, but it was farre from me then the was before,
and to deepe that I must not reache vnto her.
F Agayne I turned me also vnto knowlege, and to the vnderstondinge, wysdome and vnderstan-dinge: to knowe the folyshnesse of the vngod-lye, and the errours of dotynge fooles. And I found that a woman is bytterer then death:
for she is a snare angle, her herte is a net, and her handes are fetters. Who so pleaseth God, shall escape her: but the synner wyll be taken of her.

Beholde (saith the preacher) this haue I discouered, counting one and another, that I might come by knowlege: which as yet I seeke, & finde
not. Among a thousande men I haue founde one, but not one woman amonge all. Lo, this onely haue I founde, that God made man right, but they seke vnto many subtelties, whereas no man hath wysdome and vnderstanding to gyue an answere therunto.

¶ The lyuinges commaundment ought to be obeyed. Gladnes is one of the chefe thinges vnder the sun.

CAPI. VIII.

WYsdome maketh a mannes face to shyne,
and maketh him bolde in his countenaunce.
I kepe the kynges commaundement (I meane
the) and the othe þ thou hast made vnto God.
Be not hastye to go out of his sighte, & stonde
not in no euill thinge: for what so euer he pleaseth him, that doth he. Lyke as when a kynge speaketh a charge, his commaunde-ment is mighty: Euen so who may saye vnto him: what doest thou? Who so keepeth
the commaundement, shall fele no harme:
but a wyse mannes herte discerneth tyme and maner. For euery thynge hath his oportunitie and iudgement, and this is the thynge that maketh men full of carefulnesse and so-rowe. And why? a man knoweth not what is for to come, for who wyll tell him? Neither is there any man that hathe power ouer
the spirite, to kepe in the spirite, ne to haue any power in the tyme of deathe: ne is ther
also that can make an ende of the battayle, neither may vngodlynesse deliuer him that mis-lyueth withall.

All these thynges haue I considered, and applied my minde vnto euery worke that is vnder
the sunne: how one man hathe lordshyp vpon an other to his owne harme. For I haue oft seene the vngodly brought to their graues, & fallen downe from the hye and glorious place: in so moche þ they were forgotten in the citie, where they were dalt in so hye and great reputacion.
This is also a vayne thing. Because now that euil workes are not hastely punished, the hert
of man gruntz him self ouer vnto wickednes.
But though the an euyll person offende an hundred tymes, and haue a longe lyfe: yet am I sure that it shall go well with them that feare
God, bycause they haue him before their eyen.
Agayne, as for the vngodly, it shall not be wel
with him, neither shal he prolonge his dayes:
but euen as a shadow, so shall he be that feareth not God.

Yet is there a vanitie vpon earthe: There be iuste men, vnto whome it happeneth, as though they hadde the workes of the vngod-
ly. Agayne, there be vngodly, with whome it goeth as though they had the workes of the righteous. This me thynche also a vayne thynge. Therfore I commende gladnesse, because a man hathe no better thynge vnder the sunne, then to eate and drynche, and to be merye: for that shall he haue of his labour all the dayes of his lyfe, whiche God giueth him vnder the sunne. When I applyed my mynde to learne wysdome, and to knowe the trauayle that is in the worlde (and that of suche
a man
taken in the perilious tyme, when it meeteth sodenly vpon them.

This wysdome haue I seene also vnder the sunne, and me thought it a great thynge. There was a litle citie, and a fewe men therin, and there came a great king, and beseged it, and great bulwarkes agaynste it. And therin there was founde a poore man (but he was wyse) which with his wysdome deliuered the citye: yet was there no body that had any spech vnto suche a symple man. Then I sayd:
wysdome is better then strength. Neuertheles a symple mans wysdome is despysed, and his wordes are not herde. A wyse mans counsel that is followed in silence, is farre aboue the crienge of a capitayne among fooles. Wysdodome is better then harnesse: but one sinner alone destroyeth moche good.

¶ The difference betwyxt a sole and a wyse man. Fortunate and happye is that realme which hath a wyse prynce.

CAPI. X.

DEed flyes that corrupt swete ointment
and make it to stynke, are come by rage
more worthy then the wysdome and honour of a foole. A wise mans hert is vpon the right hande, but a fooles hert is vpon þ left.
A dotyng foole dyscouereth that euery man is as folysshly as him selfe. Yea a prynce (if he be ouer the to beare rule, be not negligent) if thou in thyne office: for so that great offences shal be put downe as it were with a medicine. There is another plage is there, whiche I haue seene vnder
the sunne: namely the ignorance that is chomely among princes: in that a foole setteth
in great dignitie, and the ryche are set belowe them: I se seruauntes ryde vpon horses, & the princes going vpon their feet as it were bondagers. But he that diggeth by a pit, shall fall therein him selfe: and who so breaketh downe
the hedge, a serpent shal byte him. Who so remooueth stones, shal haue trauayle therwith: &
he that heweth wod, shal be hurt therwith.

When an yron is blont, and the poynt not sharpened, it must be wher agayne, and þ with might: Euen so doth wysdome helpe in diligence. A babler of his tonge is no better than a serpent þ stingeth without hyssing. The wor-des of a wise mans mouthe, are gracious, but the lyppes of a foole will destroye him selfe.
The begynnyng of his talking is foolyshe, &
the last word of his mouth is great madnesse.
A foole is so full of wordes, that a man can not tell what ende he will make: who will the warne him to make a conclusion? The labour of the fonish is greuous vnto them, while they know not how to go in to the cyty.

Wo be vnto the (o thou realme and lande)
whose kyng is but a chylde, and whose princes are early at their bankettes. But well is the (o thou realme and lande) whose kynge is come of nobles, and whose princes eate in due season, for strength and not for lust. Therbe-slouthfulnesse the balkes fal downe, and rosowe vyle handes it raynyth in at the house.

Meate

a fashon, that I suffred not myne eyes to slepe neither daye ne nyght) I vnderstode of all the workes of God, that it is not possible for a mã to attayne vnto the workes that are done vnder the sunne: & though he bestow his labour to seke them out, yet can he not reach vnto the:
yea though a wyse man wolde vndertake to know them, yet might he not fynde them.

¶ A man woteth not, by the righteousenesse of his owne workes, whether he be worthy of loue or hate. A man ought to lyue merely with his wife. A prayse of wysdome.

CAPI. IX.

FOr all these thynges purposed I in my mynde to seke out. The righteous & wyse, yea and their workes also, are in the hand of God: and there is no man that knoweth either þ loue or hate of the thing that he hath before him. It happeneth vnto one as vnto an other: It goeth with the righteous as with þ vngodly: with the good and clene, as with the vncleane: with him that offereth, as with him that offereth not: lyke as it goeth with þ ver-tuous, so goeth it also with the synner: As it happeneth vnto the periured: so happeneth it also vnto him that is afrayde to be forswore.
Amonge all thynges that come to passe vnder
the sunne, this is a mischefe, that it happeneth vnto all alyke. This is the cause also that the hertes of men are ful of wicke malice, and mad foolyshnesse is in their hertes as long as they liue, and yet they dye.

And why? As longe as a man liueth, he is carefull: for a quycke dog (saye they) is better then a dead lyon: for they that be liuing, know they shall dye: but they that be dead, knowe nothynge, neither deserue they any more. For their memorye all is forgotten, so that they be neither loued, hated, ne enuyed: neither haue they any more part in the worlde, in all that is done vnder the sunne. Go then thy way the rate thy breed with ioye, and drynke thy wine with gladnes, for thy workes please God. Let thy garmentes be alwayes whyte, and let thy hed want none ointment. Lyue thy life in liue ryfully with thy wyfe whom thou louest, all the dayes of thy lyfe, which is but vayne, that God hath geuen the vnder the sunne all the dayes of thy vanitie: for that is thy portion in this life, of all thy labour and trauayle that thou takest vnder þ sunne. What so euer thou takest in hande to do, that do with all thy power: for among the dead where thou goest vn
to, there is neither worke, counsel, knowlege, ne wysdome.

So I turned me vnto other thynges vnder
the sunne, and I sawe that in runnyng, it hel-peth not to be swyft: in battell, it helpeth not to be stronge: to fetchyge it helpeth not to be wyse: to rychesse, it helpeth not to be sobrie:
to be had in fauoure, it helpeth not to be cun-
nyng: but that all lyeth in tyme and fortune.
For a man knoweth not his tyme, but lyke as the fysshe are taken with the engle, and as the birdes are catched with the snare: Euen so are

Meate maketh men to laugh, & wyne maketh them merye: but vnto money are all thynges obedient. Wish the kyng no cull in thy thought and speake no hurte of the ryche in thy priuye chambre: for a byrde of the ayre shall betraye thy voyce, and with her fethers shall she bewraye thy wordes.

¶ Wycheffe ought to be destroyed vnto the ende.

CAPI. XI.

Sende thy vytayles ouer the waters, and Eccles. xi. ye shalte thou fynde them after many yeres. Dyue it awaye among seuen or eight, for thou knowest not what misery shall come vpon earthe. When the cloudes are full, they poure out rayne vpon the earthe. And when the tree falleth (whether it be towarde the southe or northe) in what place so euer it fall, there it lyeth. He that regardeth the wynde, shall not sowe: and he that hath respect vnto the cloudes shal not reape. Now lyke as thou knowest not the waye of the wynde, ne how the bones are fylled in a mothers wombe: Euen so knowest not the workes of God, whiche is the workemaister of all.

Cease not thou therfore with thy handes to sowe thy seed, whether it be in the morning or in the euenyng: for thou knowest not whether this or that shall prosper, and yf they bothe take, it is the better. The syght is swete, and a pleasaunt thynge is it for the eyes to loke vpon the sunne. Yf a man lyue many yeres, & be glad in them all, let him remembre the daies of darcknesse, which shall be many: and when they come, all thinges shal be but vanitie. Reioyce then (o thou yonge man) in thy youthe, and let thyne hert be merye in thy yong dayes: folow the wayes of thyne owne hert, and the lust of thyne eyes: but be thou sure that God shall bringe the in to iudgement for all these thynges.

¶ From our youth ought we to conforme and regarde the godnesse of God.

CAPI. XII.

Put awaye displeasure out of thyne herte, and remoue cull from thy body: for childhode and youthe is but vanitie. Remembre thy maker in thy youthe, or euer the dayes of aduersitie come, and or the yeres drawe nye when thou shalte saye: I haue no pleasure in them before the sunne, the lighte, the moone & sterres be darckned, and or the cloudes comme agayn after the rayne: when the keepers of the house shall tremble, and when the stronge men shal bow them selues whe the millers flamme B stil, because they be so few and when the syght of the wyndowes shall wexe dymme: when the dores in the stretes shal be shut, and when the voyce of the myller shall be layde downe: when men shal rise vp at the voyce of the byrde, and when al the doughters of musyke shall be broughte low: when men shal feare in preyses, and be afrayde in the stretes: when the almonde tree shall be despised, the grashopper borne out: and when great ponerte shal brike in: when man goeth to his longe home, & the mourners go about the stretes. Or euer the siluer lace be taken awaye, & or the golden bande C be broken: or the pot be broken at the well, & the whele vpon the cesterne: or dust be turned agayne vnto the erth from whence it came, & or the spirite returne vnto God, whiche gaue it. All is but vanitie (sayth the Preacher) all is but playne vanitie.

The same Preacher was not wyse alone, but taught the people knowlege also: he gaue good hede, sought out the grounde, and set forth many parables. His diligence was to fynd out D acceptable wordes, eyght scripture, & true wordes of truthe. For the wordes of the wyse are lyke pryckes & nayles that go thorowe, wherwith men are kept togither: for they are geuē of one shepheerde onely. Therfore beware (my sonne) that aboue these thou make the not many and innumerable bokes, nor take diuers doctrines in hand, to weery thy body withall.

Let vs heare the conclusion of all thinges: feare God, and kepe his commaundements, For that toucheth all men: for God shal iudge all workes and secrete thynges, whether they be good or cull.

THE BALLET OF BALLETES OF SALOMON: CALLED IN LATYNE, Canticum Canticorum.

¶ Mystically denies of the spirituall and godly loue betwene Chryste the spouse, and the churche or congregacion his spousesse. Salomon made this Balade of longe by hym selfe and his wyfe the doughter of Pharao, vnder the shadowe of hym selfe figurynge Chryst, and vnder the person of his wyfe the church.

CAPI. I.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

That thy mouth wold

gyue me a kysse, for thy brestes are more pleasaunt then wyne, and that bycause of the good and pleasaunt fauoure. Thy name is a swete smellyng oynt mēt, therfore A the maydens loue the: yea that same moueth me also to runne after the.

☞ The spousesse to her companyons.

The kynge hath brought me in to his priuy chambre. We will be glad and reioyce in the, we thynke more of thy brestes then of wyne: well is them that loue the.

☞ The voyce of the church in persecucion.

I am blacke (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) B like as the tentes of the Cedarenes, and as the hangynges of Salomon: but yet am fayre and beautyfoured withal. Marueil not at me that I am so blacke, and why? the sun hath tyned vpon me.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

For when my mothers childrē had cull wyl at me, they made me the kepar of the vineyarde. Thus was I fayne to kepe a vineyard, which was not myne owne.

☞ The voyce of the churche to Chryste.

Tell me (o thou whō my soule loueth) where thou feedest, where thou restest at the none day: lest I go wrong, and come vnto the flockes of thy compantons.

☞ Chryst to the churche.

C If thou knowe not thy selfe (o thou fayrest amōg women) then go thy waye forth after the foteskeppes of the shepe, as thoughe thou wouldest fede the gotes beside the shepeherdes tētes. There wil I tary for the, my loue, to myne host and with my charettes, whiche shal be no fewer then Pharaos. Then shall thy cheekes & thy neck be made fayre, and hanged with spāgs and goodly iewels: a neckbande of golde wyl we make the, with siluer botons.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

When the kyng sytteth at the table, he shal smel my Nardus: for a bundel of Myrre (o my beloued) lyeth betwixt my brestes. A cluster of D grapes of Cypres, or of the vineyardes of Engaddi art thou vnto me, o my beloued.

☞ Chryst to the churche.

O how fayre arte thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes.

☞ The churche to Chryst.

O how fayre arte thou, my beloued, howe welfauoured art thou? Our bed is decke with floures, the stinges of our houses are of Cedre tree, and our balkes of Cypresse.

CAPI. II.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

I Am the floure of the felde, and lyly of the va- A leys: as the rose amonge the thornes, so is my loue among the doughters.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Lyke as the apple tree amonge the trees of the wod, so is my beloued among the sonnes. My delite is to syt vnder his shadowe, for his frute is swete vnto my throte. He bringeth me in to his wyne seller, and loueth me specially well. Refreth me with grapes, comforte me with apples, for I am sycke of loue. His lefte hande lyeth vnder my heed, and his ryght hand embraceth me.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

I charge you (o ye doughters of Jerusalem) B by the Roes and hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue, nor touche her, tyl she be content her selfe.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Me thinke I heare the voyce of my beloued: lo, there commeth he hopping vpon the mountaynes, and leaping ouer the litle hylles. My beloued is lyke a roo or a yong hart. Beholde he standeth behynde oure wall, he loketh in at the wyndowe, and pepeth thorowe the grate. My beloued answered and sayd vnto me.

☞ The voyce of Chryste.

D Aund vp my loue, my doue, my beautiful, and come: for lo the wynter is now past, and the rayne is awaye and gone. The floures are come vp in the felde, the twisting time is come, the voyce of the turtle doue is herd in our lāde. the fig tree bryngeth forth her frygges, the vynes beare blossoms, and haue a good smell. O Aund vp my loue, my beautifull, and come (o my doue out of the caues of the rockes, out of the holes of the wall: O let me se thy countenaunce, and heare thy voyce: for swete is thy voyce, and fayre is thy face.

☞ The voyce agaynste the heretykes.

Get vs the foxes, yea the lytle foxes that hurt the vines, for our vines beare blossomes.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

My loue is myne, & I am his, which fedeth among the lilyes vntyl the daye breke, and tyl the shadowes be gone. Come againe priuyly (o my beloued) lyke as a Roo or a yong hart, vnto the mountaynes.

CAPI.

CAPI. III.

☞ The voyce of the churche whiche is chosen out of the Heathen.

A BY nyght in my bed I sought him whome my soule loueth: yea I diligently sought him, but I founde him not. I will get vp (thought I) and go about the city, vpon the market, and in all the stretes will I seke hym whom my soule loueth: but when I sought him, I found him not. The watchmen that go about the city, founde me.

B Sawe ye not him whome my soule loueth? So when I was a litle past them, I found him whome my soule loueth. I haue gotten holde vpon him, & wil not let him go, vntil I bringe him in to my mothers house, and in to her chābre that bare me.

☞ The voyce of Christ.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, by the Roes and Hyndes of the felde, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, tyl she be content her selfe.

☞ The voyce of the Synagog, marueylynge in her selfe at the churche of Christe.

C Who is this that commeth out of the wildernesse like pilers of smoke, as it were a smel of Myrre, frankencense, and all maner spices of the Apotecary?

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Beholde, aboute Salomons bedde there stand .lx. valeaunt me of the mighty in Israel. They holde swordes euery one, and are expert in warre. Euery mā hath his swerde vpon his thygh, because of feare in the night. King Salomon hathe made him selfe a bedde of the wod of Libanus, the pylers are of syluer, the couerynge of golde, the seate of purple, the ground pleasauntly paued for the doughters of Jerusalem.

☞ The churche speakynge of Christ.

Go forth, o ye doughters of Sion, & beholde king Salomon in the crowne wherwith his mother crowned him in the daye of his mariage, and in the daye of the gladnesse of his hert.

CAPI. IIII.

☞ The voyce of Christe.

A HOw fayre art thou, my loue, how fayre art thou? thou hast doues eyes, besyde that which lyeth hyd within. Thy heery lockes are like vnto a flocke of shepe that be clypped, whiche go forth vp from the washynge place: where euery one beare two twynnes, and not one vnfruteull amonge them. Thy lippes are like a rose coloured ribande, thy wordes are louely: thy cheks are like a pece of a pomegranet, besides that whiche lyeth hyd within. Thy necke is like the tower of David buylded with bulwarkes, wherupon there hang a thousande shyldes, yea all the weapons of the gyauntes.

B Thy two brestes are lyke two twyns of yong Roes which fede among the lylyes.

☞ The spouse speaketh to hym selfe.

O that I myght goo to the mountayne of Myrre, and to the hyll of frankencense: vntil the daye breake, and tyll the shadowes be put awaye.

☞ The voyce of Christe speakynge to the church.

Thou art al fayre, o my loue, and no spot is there in the. C come to me from Libanus, o my spouse, come to me from Libanus: come fro the next waye from the top of Amana, frō the top of Sanir and Hermō, from the lyons dennes, & from the mountaynes of the leopardes. Thou hast wounded my hert, o my syster, my spouse, thou hast wounded my hert with one of thyne eyes, and with one cheyne of thy necke. D how fayre and louely are thy brestes, my syster, my spouse? Thy brestes are more pleasaūt then wyne, and the smell of thyne ointmētes passeth all spices. Thy lippes, o my spouse, drop as the hony combe, yea my lyke and hony is vnder thy tonge, and the smell of thy garmentes is lyke the smell of frankencense. Thou art a E well kepte garden, o my syster, my spouse, thou art a well kepte watersprynge, a sealed well. The frutes that spioute in the, are lyke a very Paradise of pomegranettes, with sweete frutes: as Cypresse, Nardus, Saffron, Calmus, and all the trees of Libanus: Myrre, Aloes, & all the best spices. Thou art a well of gardins, a well of liuynge waters, whiche ren downe from Libanus.

☞ Christ calleth the Heythen.

Up thou north wynde, come y south wynde, & blowe vpon my garden, that the smel therof may be caried on euery syde: yea that my beloued may come in to my garden, and eate of the frutes and apples that growe therin.

CAPI. V.

☞ Christe speaketh to the churche.

COme in to my garden, o my syster, my spouse: I haue gathered my Myrre with my spyce. I wyll eate my hony, and my hony combe, I wyll drynke my wyne and my mylke.

☞ Christe speaketh to the Apostles.

Eate, o ye frendes, drynke and be mery, o ye beloued.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

Es I was a slepe and my herte wakynge, I herde the voyce of my beloued, whyche knocked.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Open to me (sayd he) o my syster, my loue, my doue, my doctrynge, for my hed is full of dewe, and the lockes of my heere are full of the night droppes.

☞ The voyce of the spouselesse.

I haue put of my cote, how can I doo it on agayne?

BALLET. CCXXX.

agayne? I haue washed my fete, how shall I fyle them agayne?

B ☞ The voyce of the churche speakynge of Christe.

But when my loue put in his hande at the hole, my hert was moued towarde him: so y I rose vp to open vnto my beloued. My handes dropped with Myrre, and the Myrre ran downe my fyngers vpon the locke. Neuerthelesse, when I had opened vnto my beloued, he was departed and gone his waye.

Now like as a faynte eyme when he spake, my hert could not longer refrayne: Euen so now I sought hym, but I could not fynde him: I cryed vpon him, neuertheles he gaue me no answere.

☞ The churche complaynyth of her persecutours.

So the watche men that went aboute the cyty found me, smote me, and wounded me, yea they that kepte the walles, toke away my garment fro me.

☞ The spouselesse speaketh to her companions.

I charge you therfore, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, yf ye fynd my beloued, that ye tell him C how that I am sicke for loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Who is thy loue aboue other louers, o thou fayr among women? Or what can thy loue do more then other louers, that thou charyest vs so sharply?

☞ The christe, answeryng of Christe.

As for my loue, he is whyte and red coloured, a syngular person amonge many thousandes: his hed is the most fine golde, the lockes of his heere are bushed, blowne as the ravē: his eyes are as yē eyes of doues vpō yē rēnet brokes, that when they make, & remayne in a plenteous place: his cheks are like a garden bed, where the swete pottaryes plante all maner of swete odoures: his lyppes drop D as the flowres of the moost principall Myrre, his handes are full of golde ringes & precious stones, his body is as the pure yuery, set ouer with Saphirs: His legges are as the pylers of marble, set vpon sockettes of golde. His face is as Libanus, and as the beaute of the Cedre trees: His throte is swete, yea he is all together louely. Such one is my loue, o ye doughters of Jerusalem, suche one is my loue.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge speakynge to the churche.

What is thy loue gone then, (o thou fayrest among women) wyther is thy loue departed, that we may seke hym with the.

CAPI. VI.

☞ The voyce of the churche.

A MY loue is gone down in to his garden, vnto the flowry sanctifyinge beddes, that he maye refreshe him selfe in the gardens and gather flowres. My loue is myne and I am his, whyche feedeth amonge the lylyes.

☞ Christe to the churche.

Thou art pleasaunt (o my loue) euē as loue-lynesse it selfe, thou art fayre as Jerusalē, glorious as an army of men with their banners. (Turne away thyne eyes fro me, for they make me to proude) Thy heery lockes are lyke a flok of goetes vpon the mount of Galaad. Thy teth B are like a flocke of shepe that be clipped, which go out of y washing place: where euerye one beareth two twynnes, and not one vnfruteful amonge them. Thy chekes are lyke a pece of a pomegranet, besides that which lieth hid within. There are thre score quenes, fourē score concubynes, and yong womē without nombre. But one is my doue, my derlinge. She is the onely C beloued of her mother, and dere vnto her that bare her. When the doughters sawe her, they sayd she was blessed: yea the quenes and concubynes praysed her.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge

What is she this that peepeth out as y morninge? fayre as the moone, excellent as the sunne, glorious as an armye men with theyr banners.

☞ Christe to the Synagoge.

I went do wne in to the nutte garden, to se what grew by the brokes, to loke yf the vineyard flourished, and if the pomegranettes were shot forth.

☞ The voyce of the Synagoge.

Then the charettes of the prynce of my people, made me sodeynly afrayde. D

☞ The voyce of the churche callynge agayne the Synagoge.

Turne agayne, turne agayne, o thou Sulamite: turne agayn, turne agayn, that we may loke vpon the.

CAPI. VII.

☞ Christe to the Synagoge

WHat pleasure haue ye more in the Sulamite, then when she daunseth among the A men of warre?

☞ Christe to the churche.

O how pleasaunt are thy treadinges with thy shoes thou princes doughter? thy thighes are like a fayre iewell, which is wrought by a cunning workmaister: thy nauel is lyke a round goblet whiche is neuer without drynke: Thy wombe is lyke an heep of whete, set about with lylyes: thy two brestes are lyke two twynnes of yonge Roes: Thy necke is as it were a to- B wer of yuery: thyne eyes are lyke the water poles in Hesebon, besyde the port of Bathrabbim: Thy nose is lyke the tower of Libanus, which toketh towarde Damascus: That heed that stondeth vpon the, is lyke Carmel: the heere of thy heed is lyke the kynges purple folden vp in plates.

O how fayre & louely art thou, my derling, in pleasures? Thy stature is like a date tree, & C thy brestes lyke the grapes.

☞ The spouse speakynge of the crosse.

I sayde

I sayd: I wyl clym vp in to the date tree, & take hold of his braunches.

☞The spouse speakynge to the spouselle.

Thy brestes also shal be as the vine grapes, the smell of thy nostrels lyke the smell of appies, and thy throte lyke the best wyne. This shall be pure and clere for my loue, his lyppes and tethe shall haue their pleasure. There wil I turne me vnto my loue, and he shall tourne him vnto me.

☞The churche speakynge to Christ.

O come on my loue, let vs go forth in to the felde, and take our lodgynge in the villages. In the mornyng wil we ryse betymes, and go se the vineyarde, yf it be sprongē forthe, yf the grapes be growen, and yf the pomegranettes be shot out. There wyl I gyue the my brestes: there shal the Mandragoras gyue their smell beside oure doores: there, o my loue, haue I kepte vnto the all maner frutes, bothe newe and olde.

CAPI. VIII.

☞The voyce of the Patriarches speakynge of Christe.

O That I might fynde the without & kisse the, whom I loue as my brother whiche sucked my mothers brestes: and yt thou woldest not be offended, if I toke the & brought the in to my mothers house: yt thou myghtest teache me, and that I might gyue the drinke of spyced wyne, & of the sweete sape of my pomegranettes. His left hand lieth vnder my heed, and his right hand embraceth me.

☞The voyce of Christe.

I charge you, o ye doughters of Ierusalem, that ye wake not vp my loue, ne touche her, til she be content her selfe.

☞The Synagog speakyng of the churche.

What is he this that commeth vp frō the wildernesse, and leaneth vpon her loue.

☞The voyce of the spouse, before the speselle.

I am the same that waked the vp among the appie trees, where thy mother bare the, where thy mother brought the in to the worlde.

☞The churche speakynge to Christ.

O set me as a seale vpon thyne hert, and as a seale vpon thyne arme: for loue is myghtye as the deth, and gelously as the hell. Her coles are of fyre, and a very flame of the Lorde: for many waters are not able to quenche loue, neither may the stremes drowne it. Yea if a man wolde gyue all the good of his house for loue, he sholde count it nothyng.

☞Christ speakyng of the churche to the Synagog.

When oure louers talde, oure yonge sister whose brestes are not yet growen, what shall we do vnto her?

☞The answere of Christe for the churche.

Yf she be a wall, we shal buyld a syluer house vpon her: yf she be a tower, we shal hange her with bordes of Cedre tree.

☞The churche answereth to the Synagoge.

Yf I be a wall, and my brestes lyke towres, then am I as one that haue founde fauour in his sight.

☞The Synagog speakynge to the churche

Salomon had a vineyard at Baal Hamon, this vineyarde delyuered he vnto the kepers: that euery one for the frute therof sholde gyue him a thousand peces of syluer.

☞The voyce of Christe.

But my vineyard, o Salomon, pyseth the a thousande, and two hundred to the kepers of the frute. Thou that dwellest in the gardens, o let me heare thy voyce, that my companions may harken to the same.

☞The voyce of the churche, speakynge to Christ.

O get the awaye, my loue, as a Roo or a yonge hart vnto the swete smelynge mountaynes.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ESAYE.

¶ Esaye prophecyeth that the anger of God shall come vpon Ierusalem because of theyr sinnes

CAPI. I.

THe vysyon of Esay the son of Amos, which he sawe vpon Juda and Jerusalem. In the tyme of Ozias, Joathā Achas, & Ezechias kynges of Juda. Heare, o heauens, harken, o erth, for the Lord speaketh: I haue nourysshed and brought vp chyldren, and they are fallen awaye fro me. An oxe knoweth his Lorde, and an asse his masters stal, but Israel knoweth nothyng, my people haue no vnderstanding. Wo be to this synfull people, whiche are expert in blasphemyes, a frowarde generacion, vnnaturall chyldren. They haue forsaken the Lorde, they haue prouoked the holy one of Israel vnto angre, and are gone backewarde. Wherefore shoulde ye be plaged anye more? For ye are euer fallynge awaye. The hole heed is sycke, and the herte is very heuye. From the sole of the foote vnto the heed, there is no hole parte in all youre bodye: but all are woundes, botches, sores and styppes, whiche can neither be helped, bounde vp, mollified, ne eased with anye oyntment.

Youre lande lyeth waste, youre cityes are brenne vp, youre enemyes deuoure youre lande, and ye muste be fayne to stande, and loke vpon it: and it is desolate, as it were with enemyes in a batell. Moreouer the doughter of Sion is lefte alone lyke a cotage in a dyneyarde, lyke a watchehouse in tyme of warre, lyke a besieged city. And except the Lorde of hoostes had left vs a fewe alone: we shulde haue ben as Sodoma, and like vnto Gomorra.

Heare the worde of the Lorde ye tyraūtes of Sodoma, and harken vnto the lawe of oure God, thou people of Gomorra.

Why offre ye so many sacrifices vnto me? I am stuffe with the brent offerynges of wethers, and with the fatnesse of fed beestes. I haue no pleasure in the bloude of bullockes, lambes and gotes. When ye appeare before me, who requyreth these thinges of youre handes, that ye shulde walke in my courtes. Offre me no mo oblacyons, for it is but lost laboure. I abhorre youre incense. I maye not awaye with youre Newe moones, youre Sabbothes and solemne dayes. Youre assemblees are also in vayne. I hate youre newe holydayes and festynges, euen fro my verye herte. They make me werye, I can not abyde them. Thoughe ye holde out youre handes, yet courne I myne eyes fro me you. And thoughe ye make manye prayers, yet heare I nothynge at all, for youre handes are full of bloude.

Washe you, make you cleane, put awaye youre euyll cyoughtes out of my sight, ceasse fro me to synge of euyll and vnclennes. Learne to do eyght, applye youre selues to equitie, delyuer the oppressed, helpe the fatherlesse to his eyght, defende the widowes complaynte come before you. Nowe go to (sayth the Lorde) we wyll talke togyther. Is it not so? Though youre synnes be as redde as skarlet, shall they not be whyte then snowe? And though they were like purple, shall they not be lyke whyte wolle? Is it not so? If ye be louynge and obedient, ye shall eatoye the beste thynge that groweth in the lande. But if ye be obstinate and rebellious, ye shal be deuoured with the swerde: for thus the Lorde hathe promysed with his owne mouth.

How happeneth it then that the eyghtous cite (whiche was full of equitie) is become vnfaythfull as an hoore? eyghtousnes dwelte in it, but nowe murtherers. Thy syluer is tourned to drosse, and thy wyne myxed with water. Thy princes are traytours and companyons of theues. They loue gyftes all to gyther and folowe rewardes. As for the fatherlesse, they helpe him not to his eyght, neyther wyl they let the widowes causes come before the. Therefore speaketh the Lorde God of hoostes, the myghty one of Israel: Ah, I muste ease me of myne ennemyes, and auenge me vpon them. And therfore that I laye my hand vpon the, and burne out the drosse fro me the synne and pureste, and put out all the leade, and let thy iudges agayne as they were somtyme, & thy senatours as they were from the begynnynge. Then shalte thou be called the eyghtous cite, the faythfull cite. But Sion shall be redemed with equitie, and her captiuite with eyghtousnesse. For the transgressiours & vngodly, and suche as are become vnfaythfull vnto the Lorde, must all togyther be vtterly destroyed.

Ano onlesse ye be ashamed of the offences wherin ye haue so delyted, and of the gardens ye haue chosen: ye shall be an oke, whose leaues are fallen away, and as a garde that hath no moysture. And the glory of these thinges shall be tourned in to dyse strawe, and he that made them to a sparke. And they shall bothe burne togyther, so that no man shal be able to quenche them.

¶ Of the comynge and deth of Christ: and of the callynge of the Heathen.

CAPI. II.

MOreouer this is the worde that was opened vnto Esaye the sonne of Amos, vpon Juda and Jerusalem. It wyll be also in the last dayes: That the hyll where the house of the Lorde is buylded, shall be the chyefe amonge hylles, and exalted aboue all hyls hylles. And all the heathen shal preasse vnto him, and the multitude of ꝑ people shall go vnto him, speakynge ei̇ one to an other: saynge, let vs goo to the hyll of the Lord, and to the house of the God of Jacob: that he may shewe vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shal come out of Syon, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall gyue sentence amonge the heathen, and shall reformme the multytude of people: So that they shall breake their swerdes and speres, to make sythes, sickles and sawes therof. From that time forth shall not one people lyft vp weapen agaynste an other, neither shall they learne to fyghte hereafter. It is to the that I crye (o house of Jacob) saye, let vs walke in the lyghte of the Lorde. But thou arte scattered abrode with thy people (o house of Jacob) for ye goo farre beyonde youre fathers, wherfor ye be in sorceres (whome ye haue as the Philistines habde) or in calkers of mennes byrthes, wherof ye haue to manye. As soone as your lande was full of syluer and golde, and no ende of youre treasure: so soone as youre lande was full of strange horses, and no ende of youre charetes: Immediatly was it full of vyolles, also, euen workes of youre owne handes, whiche ye youre selues haue facyoned, and youre fyngers haue made. There knieleth the man, there falleth the man downe before them, so that thou canste not forgyue hym awaye thence.

And therfore gette the soone in to some rathe, and hyde the in the grounde from the fyght of the fearefull iudge, and from the glory of his maiestye: Which taketh awaye the vyghte lokes of the presumptuous persones, and bryngeth lowe the pryde of man, and he only shall be exalted in that daye. For the daye of the Lorde of hoostes shall goo ouer all pryde and presumption, vpon all them that exalte them selues, and shall bryngе them all downe: vpon hygge and stoute Cedre trees of Libanus, and vpon all the okes of Basan, vpon all hygge hylles, and vpon all stoute mountaynes, vpon all costly towres, and vpon all stronge walles, vpon all shyppes of the see, and vpon euery thyng that is glorious and pleasaunt to loke vpon.

And it shall bryngе downe the pryde of man, and laye mans presumption full lowe, and the Lorde shall onely haue the victorye in that daye. But the vyolles shall vtterly be rooted out. Then shall creepe in to holes of stone, and to caues of the earthe, from the fyght of the fearfull iudge, and from the glory of his maiestye: what tyme as he shall arise to make the earth Then shall man cast away his idoles of syluer & golde, (which neuertheles he made him to worshippe) to the to worshippe the moldy walles, and the rotten caues of the earthe, for the feare of the fearfull iudge, and for the glory of his maiestie.

The vision therein that at the commynge of Christe all strength and power shall be put forth of Jury.

CAPI. III.

EUerye man can eschewe a person moued in angre, for what bothe he wiselye? Euen so shall the Lorde of hoostes take awaye from Jerusalem and Juda all possessions and power, all meate and drynke, the capitayne and the souldyour, the iudge and the prophete, the wyse and the aged man, the worshypful of fyftie yeres olde, and the honorable: the senatours & men of vnderstanding: the maisters of craftes and orators. and I shall gyue you chyldren to be youre princes (saythe the Lorde) and babes shall haue the rule of you. One shall euer be doing violence and wronge to another. The boye shall presume agaynste the elder, and the vyle person agaynst the honourable. Yea one shall take a frend of his owne kynred by the bosome, and saye: thou hast clothynge, thou shalte be our heed, for thou mayste kepe vs frome this fall and perill.

Then shall he sweare and saye, I can not helpe you. Moreouer there is neither meate ne clothynge in my house, make me no ruler of the people. For Jerusalem and Juda muste decaye, bycause that bothe their wordes and counsels are agaynste the Lorde, their prouoke the presence of his maiestie vnto angre. The chaungynge of their countenaunce witnesseth them, yea they declare their synnes them selues, as the Sodomites, and hyde them not. Wo be vnto their soules, for they shal be vtterly rewarded. Then shall they saye: O happye are the godly, for they muste enioye the frutes of their studyes. But woo be to the vngodly and vnrighteous, for they shall be rewarded after their workes. O my people, ye vnbaudes oppresse the, and women haue rule of the.

O my people, thy leaders disceyue the, and treade out the waye of thy fotesteppes. The Lorde is here to common of the matter, and standeth to gyue iudgement with the people. The Lorde shall come forthe to reason with the senatours and princes of his people, and shal saye thus vnto them: Ye is yet that haue burnt vp my vynеyarde, the robberye of the poore is in your house. Wherfore doo ye oppresse my people, and marre the faces of the innocentes? thus shall the God of hoostes vnyte them.

Moreouer thus saythe the Lorde: Seynge the doughters of Syon are become so proude, and goo in with stretched out neckes, and with wanton eyes: seynge they come in cryppynge so nesely with their feete: Therfore shall the Lorde shaue the heedes of the doughters of Sion, and make them bare. In that day shall the Lorde take awaye the gorgeousness of their apparell and spanges about their neckes, and their chaynes, and bracelettes and hoodes, the goodly tyres, wyde and brode garmentes, bracelettes, purses, rynges and garlandes, holy daye clothes and vailes, brechues and pynnes, glasses and smockes, bonettes and fannes.

And in stede of good smell there shall be stynche amonge them. And for their gyrdles there shall be loose bandes. And for well set heere, there shal be baldnesse. In stede of a stomacher, a sake cloth, and for their beauty withered nesse and sunneburnyng. Their husbandes, and their mightye men shall perysh with the swerde in battell.

Of want of men seuen women desyre to haue one man.

CAPI. IIII.

AT that tyme shall their gates mourne and complayne, and they shall syt as desolate folke vpon the earthe. Then shal seuen wyues take holde of one man and saye: we wyll laye all oure meate and clothynge together in common, onely that we may be called thy wiues, and that this shame full reproffe may be taken from vs. After that time shal the braunche of the Lorde be beautyfull and myghtye, and the frute of the erth shall be fayre and pleasaunt for those Israelites that shall spryngе therof. Then shal the remnaunt in Syon and the remnaunt at Jerusalem be called holy: namely all suche as are wrytten amonge the lyuynge at Jerusalem: what tyme as the Lorde shall washe awaye the defolacion of the doughters of Sion, and pourge the blood out frō Jerusalem with the wynde of his smoke and fyre. Yea sure vpon all the dwellynges of the hyll of Hion, and vpon their hole congregacion, shal the Lord prouyde a cloude and smoke by daye, and the shynynge of a flamyng fyre by nyght: for all their glorye shall be protected. And Jerusalem shall be a tabernacle for a shadowe, drawne of heate in the daye tyme, a place and refuge where a man maye kepe hym for wether and rayne.

Of Christ and his vnеyarde, with an execrable reuertoullencle and of vnrighteuenes.

CAPI. V.

NOw well then, I wyll synge my beloued frende a songe of his vnеyarde. My beloued frende hathe a vnеyarde in a very frutefull plentyous grounde. This he hedged, this he walled rounde about, and and planted it with goodly grapes. In the myddest of it buylded he a towre, and made a wynе presse therin. And afterwarde when he loked that it shoulde bryngе him grapes, it brought forth thornes. I shewe you now my mynde (o ye enhabitauntes of Jerusalem and hole Juda:) Judge I praye you betweene me and my vnеyarde. What more coulde haue ben done for it, that I haue not done? Wherefore then haue it grutche thornes, where I loked to haue had grapes of it?

Well I shall tell you howe I wyll do with my vnеyarde: I wyll take the hedge frome it, that it maye perysshe, and breake downe the wall, that it maye be troden vnder foote. I wyll laye it waste, that it shall neyther be twysted nor cut, but beare thornes and brieres. I wyll also forbyd the cloudes, that they shall not rayne vpon it. As for the vineparde of the Lorde of hoostes, it is the house of Israell, and hole Juda his fayre plantynge. Of these he loked for equitie, but se there is wronge: for righteousnesse, loo, it is but mislepe.

Woo be vnto you that ioyne one house to an other, and bynge one londe so nygh vnto an other, tyll ye can gette no more grounde. Wyll ye dwell vpon the earthe alone? The Lord of hoostes commeth me thus in the eare: that not manye greatter and more gorgyous houses be so waste, that no man shal dwell in them? And ten akers of vynes shal gyue but a quarte, and thirty bushels of seed shal gyue but thre.

Woo be vnto them that ryse vp earlye to dryncke themselues in dronckennesse, and yet at nyghte are more superfluous with wyne. In their companyes are harpes and lutes, tabrettes and pypes, and wyne. But they regarde not the worke of the Lorde, and consyder not the worke of his handes. Therfore commeth my folke also in captiuitie, bycause they haue no vnderstandynge. Their glorye shall be myrthe with hunger, and their pryde shall be marred for thyrste. Therfore gapeth hell, and openeth her mouth maruelous wyde: that pryde, iollyng and wilsome witty suche as reioyse therin, may descende in to it.

Thus shall man haue a fall, he shall be broughte lowe, and the hyghe lookes of the proude layd downe. But the Lord of hoostes, that holy God, shall be exalted, and vntouched, when he shall declare his equitie and righteousnesse at certe this maner: Then shall the lambes eate their appoynted fodder, and shall fede plentcously in the mountaynes. Woo be vnto vayne persons that draw wickednesse vnto them, as it were with a coorde, and synne, as it were with a cart rope, which vse to speake on this maner: lette hym make haste now, and go forth with his worke, that we may se it. Let the counsel of the holy one of Israel come and drawe nye, that we maye knowe it.

Woo be vnto them that call euyl good, and good euyll: whiche make darckenesse lyghte, and lyghte darckenesse: that make sower swete, and swete sower. Woo be vnto them that are wise in their owne sight, and thynke them selues to haue vnderstandynge. Woo be vnto them that are cunnynge men to suppe out wyne, and expert to set vp drunkennesse. These gyue sentence with the vngodly for rewardes, but condemne the righteous of the righteous.

Therfore lyke as fyre lycketh vp the stubble, and as the flame consumeth the chaffe: euen so (when their rootes is rotte) their blossome shall vanysshe away lyke dust or smoke: for they despise the lawe of the Lorde of hostes, and blaspheme the worde of the holy maker of Israel.

Therfore is the wrathe of the Lorde kindled also agaynst his people, and he stretcheth his hande at them: yea he shal smyte, so that the hylles shall tremble. And their carkases shall lye in the open stretes lyke myre. After all this, the wrathe of God shall not cease, but he shall stretche his hande wider. And he shall prynce a token vnto a straunge people, & call vnto them in a farre countrey: and behold they shall come hastely & spedely. There is not one feynt nor feble amonge them, no not a sluggish nor slipperey person. There shal not one of them put of the gyrdle from his loynes, ne lose his latchet of his shoo. Their arowes are sharpe, and their bowes bente. Their horses hoves are lyke flynt, and their cart wheles lyke a stormye wynde. Their cry is as it were of a lyon, and the rorynge of them lyke lyons whelpes. They shall raze & hunt the vp the payre, and no man shall recouer it, or get it from them. In that daye they shall be so fearce vpon them as the see. And yf we loke vnto the lande, beholde it shal be all darcknesse and sorowe. Yf we loke to heuen: beholde, it shall be darcke with carefull desperation.

¶ Esay sawe the glorye of the Lorde, and was sent to Prophecye the desolation of Iurye.

CAPI. VI.

IN the same yere that kynge Osiah dyed, I sawe the Lorde sytteng vpon an hygh and glorious seate, and his traine fylled the palace. From about fathe-d the Seraphins, wherof euery one hadde sixe wynges. With twayne eche couered his face, with twayne his fete, and with twayne dyd he flye. They cried also eche one toother on this maner: holy holy, is the Lorde of hostes. The hole worlde is ful of his glory. Yea the gates and dorestedes moued at theyr cryenge, and the house was full of smoke. Then I sayde: O wo is me, for I was astonyed: that I (seynge am a man of vncleane lyppes, and dwell amonge people that haue vncleane lippes also) behelde se the kynge and Lorde of hostes with myne eyes.

Then flew one of the Seraphins vnto me hauynge a hote cole in his hande, whiche he had taken from the aulter with the tonges, and touched my mouthe, and sayd: loo, this hath touched thy mouth, and thyne vnrighteousnesse is taken awaye, and thy synne forgiuen. After this I herd the voyce of ℣ Lorde sayeng, whome shall I sende, and who wyll be oure messenger? Then I sayd: here am I, send me. And he sayd: go and tell this people: ye shal heare in dede, but ye shall not vnderstande, ye shall playnely se, and not perceyue. Harden the herte of this people, stoppe their eares, and shute their eyes: that they se not with their eyes, heare not with their eares, and vnderstande not with their hertes, and conuert and be healed.

Then spake I: Lorde, how longe? then answered he vntyll the cytyes be vtterly without inhabitours, and the houses without men, & yl the land be also desolate, and lye vnhabyted. For the Lorde shall take the men farre away, so that the lande shall lye waste. Yet nerthelesse, the tenth part shal remayne therin, for it shall conuerte and be fruteful. And lyke vnto as the Terebynthes and okeres dyenge forth their frutes, so shal the holy seede haue frute.

¶ The Syrians moue battayle agaynst Ierusalem. A tyrany shall beare a chylde.

CAPI. VII.

IT happened in the time of Achaz the sonne of Ioatham, whiche was the sonne of Oziah kynge of Iuda: that Rezin the kyng of Syria, and Phaketh the sonne of Romelias kynge of Israel, wente vp towarde Ierusalem to besiege it, but wanne it not. Now when the house of David (that is Achaz) herde worde therof, that Syria and Ephraim were confederate togyther: his hert quaked (yea, and the hertes also of his people) lyke as a tree in the felde that is moued with the wynde.

Then sayd God vnto Esay: go mete Achaz (thou and thy sonne Sear Iasub) at the pype of the ouer pole, in the fote pathe by the fullers grounde, and saye vnto him, take hede & kepe thy selfe, and be stil, but feare not, neither be fayne hetted, for these two tables, that is, for these two smokynge fyre brandes, the wrath and furiousnesse of Rezin the Syrian, and Romelias sonne: because that the kyng of Syria Ephraim and Romelias sonne haue wickedly conspired agaynst the, saying: We wyll go downe in to Juda, vexe them, & bynge them vnder vs, and set a kyng there, euen the sonne of Tabeel. For thus sayth the Lorde God thereto: It shall not so go forth, neither come to passe: for the heed citye of the Syrians is Damascus, but the heed of Damascus is Rezin. And after fyue and thre score yere, shal Ephraim be no more a people. And the cheefe citye of Ephraim is Samaria, but the heed of Samaria is Romelias sonne. And yf ye beleue not, there shall no prophete be kept with you.

Moreouer, God spake vnto Achas, saying: requyre a token of the Lorde thy God, whether it be towarde the depth beneethe, or towarde the heygth aboue. Then sayde Achaz: I wyll requyre none, neyther wyll I tempte the Lorde. The Lorde answered: Then ear to ye of the house of David: Is it not inough for you that ye be greuous vnto men, but ye muste greue my God also? And therfore the Lorde shall geue you a token of hym self: Beholde, a virgin shall conceyue and bere a sonne, and shall call his name ℣ Emanuel. Butter and honye shall he eate, that he may knowe the cuyll and chose the good. For ere ehe that chylde come to knowledge, to refuse the euell and chose the good. The lande (that thou art so afeayde for) shalbe desolate of both her kynges.

The Lorde also shall sende a tyme vpon the, vpon thy people, and vpon thy fathers house (such as neuer came ether the tyme that Ephraim departed from Juda,) euen owe the kynge of the Assirians. For at the same tyme shall the Lorde whistle for the flies that are about the water of Egipt, and for the Bees in the Assirians lande. These shall come, and shall lyght all in the valleyes, in the dawtes of stone, vpon all grene thynges, and in all corners.

At the same tyme shall the Lorde shaue the heare of the heade and the fete and ℣ beerde cleane of, with the rasoure that he shall paye them withall beyonde the water, namelye, with the kynge of the Assirians. At the same tyme shall a man lyue with a cowe, and two shepe. Then because of the aboundaunce of mylke, he shall make butter and eate it. So that euery one whiche remayneth in the land shall eate butter and honye. For the same tyme all vyneyardes (though there be a thousande vynes in one, and were solde for a thousande shekelynges.) shall be turned to briers and thornes. Lyke as they shall come in to the land with arowes and bowes, so shall all the lande become briers and thornes. And as for all hylles that nowe are hewen downe, thou shalt not come vpon them, for feare of briers and thornes. But the catell shalbe dryue thyther, and the shepe shall feede there.

¶ The deliueraunce of the land by Emanuel. The sonne of offence, at whiche many shall stomble.

CAPI. VIII.

MOreouer the Lorde sayde vnto me: Take the a great leaf, and wryte in it, as men do with a penne, that ye spede hye to robbe, and haste vpon to spoyle. And immediatly I called vnto me tayethfull witnesses: Uriah the preste, and Zacharias the sonne of Barachias. After that went I vnto the Prophetisse, that nowe had conceyued & borne a sonne. Then sayde the Lorde to me: geue hym this name: Maher schalal hasbas (that is: a spedy robber, an hasty spoyler.) For why, or euer the chylde shall haue knowledge to saye: Abi and Imi, (that is father and mother,) shall the ryches of Damascus and the substaunce of Samaria be taken awaye, thorowe the kynge of the Assirians.

The Lorde spake also vnto me, saying: for so moche as the people refuseth the styll renninge waters of Silo, and put their delyte in Rezin and Romelias sonne. Beholde, the Lorde shall bringe vpon them, namelye, the kynge of the Assirians with all his power. Whiche shall powre oute his furiousnes vpon euery man, and renne ouer all their bankes. And shall breake in vpon Juda, increasynge in power, tyll he get hym by the throte. He shall fyll also the wydenesse of thy lande with his brode wynges, O Emanuel. Go together ye people, and gather you, herken to all ye of farre countrees. Gyrde you, and gather your muster you, and gather you, take youre counsell together, yet must youre counsell come to nought: go in hande withall, yet shall it not prospere. Except Emanuel, (that is God) be with vs. For the Lorde chastised me, and toke me by the hande, and warned me, sayenge vnto me: that I shulde not walche in the waye of this people. He sayde moreouer: rounde with none of them, who so euer saye: ponder people are bound together. Neuertheles feare them not, neyther be afrayd of them, but sanctifye the Lorde of Hostes, let hym be youre feare and drede. For he is the sanctifyeng, and stone to stomble at ✳ the rocke to fall vpon, a snare and net to both the houses: to Israel, and the inhabitours of Jerusalem. And many shall stomble, fall, and be broken vpon hym: yea they shalbe snared and taken. Luc.ii.e Roma.ix.g 1.Pet.ii.b Nowe laye the wytnesses together (sayde the Lorde) and seale the lawe with my disciples. Thus I wayte vpon ℣ Lorde that hath turned his face from the house of Jacob, and I loke vnto hym. But lo, as for me, and the children which the Lorde hath geuen me: we are a token and a wonder in Israell, for the Lorde of Hostes sake, whiche dwelleth vpon the hyll of Syon. Hebreu.ii.b ℣

And therfore yf they saye vnto you: aske counsell at the sothesayers, wytches, charmers and conjurers, then make them this answere: Is there a people any where, that asketh not counsell at his God, whether it be counsell vpnge the dead, or the lyuynge. Yf any man wante lyght, let hym loke vpon the law and testimony, whether they speake not after this meanyng: Yf he do not this, he stombleth and suffreth hunger. And yf he suffre hunger, he is out of patience, and blaspheneth his kynge & his God. Then loketh he vpwarde, & downe warde to the earth, and beholde there is trouble and darkenesse, vexacion is rounde about hym, and the cloude of errour. And oute of soche aduersite, shall he not escape.

¶ The prophecyeth of Christes natiuytye and dominyon.

CAPI. IX.

EVen lyke as in tyme paste it hathe bene well sene, that the lande of Zabulo and the lande of Nephtalim (whiche thorowe the see waye goeth ouer Jordane in to ℣ land of Galilee) was at the fyrst in yele trouble, but afterwarde sore vexed. ℣

Neuertheles the people that haue dwelte in darkenesse, shall se a great lyght. Yis for they that dwell in the lande of the shadowe of death, vpon them shal the lyght shyne. Shalt thou multiplye the people, and not increase the ioye also? They shal reioyse before the as men make merry in harnest, and as me that haue gotten the victory, when they deale the spoyle. For thou shalt breake the yocke of the peoples peoples brethren: the staf of his holder and the rod of his oppressoure, as in the + daye at Madian.

Moreoure all temerations and seditious power, (yea where there is but a cote spred with bloude) shalbe burnt, and fede the fyre. For vnto vs a childe shalbe borne, and vnto vs a sonne shalbe geuen: Upon his shoulder shall the kyngdome lye, and he shalbe called with his owne name. The wonderous geuer of counsell, the mighty God, the euerlasting father, the prynce of peace, he shall make no ende to encrease the kyngdome and peace, and shall sye vpon the state of Dauid and in his kyngdome, to set vp the same, to stablyshe it with equite and righteousnesse, frome thence forth for euermore. This shall the gelousy of the Lorde of hoostes dyngge to passe.

The Lorde sente a worde in to Jacob, the same is come into Israell. And the people also of Ephraim, and they that dwell in Samaria, can saye with pryde and hye stomachs, on this maner. The tyle worke is fallē down, but we wyll buylde it with harder stones. The Mulberey trymbe is broken, but we shall sette it vp agayne with Cedre. Neuertheles, the Lorde shall prepare Rezin the enemye agaynst them, and so ethre their aduersaryes, that the Assirians shall saye holde vpon them before, and the Philistines behynde, and so deuoure Israell with open mouth.

After all this, the wrath of the Lorde shall not ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched oute styll. For the people turneth not vnto hym, that chastysyth them, neyther doo they seke the Lorde of hoostes. Therfore the Lord shall rote oute of Israell bothe heade & tayle, braunche and twigge in one daye.

By the head, is vnderstande the Senatour and honorable man, and by the tayle, the prophete that preacheth lyes. For all they which entourme the people that they be in a righte case, such be disceyuers. Suche as men thynke also to be perfecte amonge these, are but caste awaye.

Therfore shall the Lorde haue no pleasure in their younge men, neyther fauoure their fatherlesse and widowes. For they are all togeather hypocrites and wycked, & all their mouthes speake folye. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet his hande shall be stretched out styll. For the vngodly burne, as a fyre in the bryers and thornes. And as it were out of a fyre in a wod or a rodde bushe, so ascendeth the smoke of their pryde.

For this cause shall the wrath of the Lorde of hoostes fall vpon the lande, and the people shalbe consumed, as it were with fyre, no mā shall spare his brother. If a mā do turne hym to the right hande, he shall fayntly, or to the lefte hande to eate, he shal not haue ynough. Euery man shall eate the fleshe of his owne arme, Menasses shall eate Ephraim, and Ephraim Manasses, and they bothe shall eate Juda. After all this shall not the Lordes wrath ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched out styll.

The threatneth the oppressoures of the poore, and prophesyeth agaynste Sennacherib.

CAPI. X.

WO be vnto you that make vnrighteous lawes, and deuyse thynges, which be harde for to kepe: whereby thorow ‖ power are oppressed on euery syde, and the innocentes of my people are therwith robbed of iudgement, that widowes maye be your praye, and that ye may robbe the fatherlesse. What wyll ye do in tyme of the visitation and destruction, that shall come from farre? To whō wyll ye resorte for helpe, or to whome wyll ye geue your honoure, that he maye kepe vnder ye come not amonge the presoners, or ye amonge the deade? After all this shall not the wrath of the Lorde ceasse, but yet shall his hande be stretched oute styll.

‖ Or

Wo be also vnto Assur, whiche is a staf of my wrath, in whose hand is the rod of myne indygnacion. For I shall sende hym amonge those spyteffull people, amonge the people that haue deserued my displeasure, shall I sende hym, that he maye vtterly robbe them, spoyle them, and treade them downe lyke the myre in the strete. Howbe it, his meanynge is not so, neyther thynketh his herte of this fashyon. But he imagyneth onely, how he maye ouerthrowe and destroye moch people, for he sayeth yet are not my princes all kynges. Is not Calno as calne as Carchamis? Is it harder to conquere Antiochia then Arpad? Or is it lyghter to ouercome Damascus then Samaria? As who saye: I were able to wynne the kyngdome of the Idolaters and their goddes, but not Jerusalem and Samaria. Shall I not do vnto Jerusalem and their ymages as I dyd vnto Samaria and their ymages?

Wherfore the Lorde sayeth: As soone as I haue performed my hole worke vpon the hyll of Syon and Jerusalem, then wyll I also vyset the noble and stoute kynge of Assiria, with his wysdome and pryde. For he thynketh thus in his owne conceyte. This do I, thorowe the power of myne owne hande, and thorowe my wysdome. For I am wyse, I am he that remoue the landes of the people, I robbe their princes, and (lyke one of the worthyes) I driue them frome their seates. My hande hath founde out the goodes of the people, as it were a nest. And lyke as egges that were layde here and there, are gathered together. So do I gather all countrees. And there is no man, that darre be so bolde, as to touche a feather, that darre open his mouth, or ones whysper.

But doth ‖ axe boast it selfe, agaynste hym that heweth therwith, or doeth the sawe make any brackynge, agaynste hym that ruleth it? That were euen lyke, as yf the rod shulde exalte it selfe agaynste hym that heueth it, or as thoughe the staf shulde magnifye it selfe, as who sayeth were no wod. Therfore shall the Lorde of hoostes sende hym pouerte in his riches, and burne vp his power, as it were

The prophecyeth of the ruine of Chryste and of his people: of the remnaunt of Israell, and of the ende of the Assirians, &c.

CAPI. XI.

AFter this there shall come a rod forth of the kynrede of Jesse, and a blossome out of his rote. The Spirite of the Lord shall lyght vpon it, the spirite of wysdome & with a fyre. But the lyght of Israel shall be that fyre, & his Sanctuary shalbe the flamme and it shall kyndle, and burne vp his thornes and breres in one day, yea all the glory of his woddes and feldes shalbe consumed with body and soule. As for hymself, he shalbe as one clene awaye. The trees also of his forde shal not serue anombre, that a childe maye tell them.

After that daye shall the remnaunt of Israell, and suche as are escaped out of the house of Jacob, stike no more vpon hym that smote them, but shal cōfort themselues with faythfulnesse and trouth in the Lorde, the holy ‖ one of Israell. The remnaunt, yea and the prynces of Jacob, shall conuerte vnto God the mighty one. For thoughe thy people (O Israell) be as the sande of the see, yet shall but the remnaunt of them onely conuerte vnto hym. Perfect is the iudgemēt of hym that dwelth in righteousnesse, and therfore the Lorde of hoostes shall perfectlye fulfyll the mynde, that he hath determined in the myddest of the hole worlde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God of hoostes: Thou my people, that dwellest in Sion, be not afrayed for the lyght of the Assirians, he shall wag his staf at the, yea and beate the with the roo, as the Egyptians dyd some tyme. But soone after, shall my wrath and myne indignacion be fulfylled agaynst their blasphemyes.

Moreoure the Lorde of hoostes shall prepare a skourge for hym, lyke as was the punyshment of Madian vpon the mount of Oreb. And he shall lyfte vp his rod ouer the see, as he dyd somtyme ouer the Egyptians. Then shall his burthen be taken fro thy shoulders, his yocke fro thy necke, yea the same yocke shall be corrupte for deep fatnesse. He shall come to Aiath, and go thorowe toward Migron. But at Machmas shall be muster his folke, & goo ouer the foorde. Gabaah shall be their resynge place, Ramah shall be afrayed, Gabaah Saul shall ne awaye. The doyre of the noyse of thy hostes (O daughter Gallim) shalbe herde vnto Lais and to Anathoth, which also shalbe in trouble. Madmena shall tremble for feare, but the cytezins of Gebim are mighty, yet shall he remayne at Nob that daye. After that, shal he lyft vp his hand agaynste the mounte Syon, and agaynste the hyll of Jerusalem. But se, the Lorde God of hoostes shal take away the proude frō their high force. He shall hewe downe the proude and kill the hye mynded. The thornes of the wod shalbe rooted out with yron, and Libanus shall haue a mighty fall.

The prophecyeth of the kyngdome of Christe, and of the gyftes of the Spirite, &c. and of the ingathering of the Iewes, &c.

CAPI. XII.

A SO that then thou shalt saye: O Lorde, I thanke the, for thou wast displeased at me, but thou hast refrayned thy wrath, & hast mercy vpon me. Beholde, God is my healthe, in whom I trust, and am not afrayde. For the Lorde is my strength, and my prayse, he also shall be my refuge. Therefore with ioye shall ye drawe water out of the welles of the Sauioure, and then shall ye saye: Lette vs geue B thankes vnto the Lorde, and call vpon his name, and declare his counceiles amonge the people, and kepe them in remembraunce, for his name is excellente. O synge prayses vnto the Lorde, for he doth greate thynges, as it is knowen in all the worlde. Crye oute, and be glad, thou that dwellest in Sion, for great is thy prynce, the holy one of Israell.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruction of Babilon, the captyuyte, and the comming agayne of the people.

CAPI. XIII.

A THis is the heuye burthen of Babylon, which Esay the sonne of Amos dyd se. Shake some tokens to the hye hylles, call vnto them, holde vp your hande, that the prynces maye go in at the doze. For I wyll sende for my debites and my graunges (sayth the Lorde) and in my wrathe I wyll call for suche, as triumphe in my gloyre.

With that, me thought I hearde in the mountaynes a noyse, lyke as it had bene of a greate people: and a tumynge, as thoughe the kyngdomes of all nacions had come together. (And the Lorde of hostes was the Captayne of the hole armye.) As they had come not only out of farre countrees, but also from the endes of the heauens. Euen the Lorde hymselfe with the ministers of his wrath, to destroye the hole lande. Mourne therfore, for the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer frome the Almyghtye. Then shall all handes be letten downe, and all mens hartes shall melte awaye, they shall stande in feare, carefulnesse and sorowe shall come vpō them, and they shall haue payne, as a woman that trauayleth with chylde. One shall euer C be abashed of another, and theyr faces shall burne lyke the flamme.

For lo, the daye of the lorde shall come, terrible, full of indignacion and wrath, to make the lande waste, and to roote oute the synne therof. For the starres and planetes of heauē shall not geue theyr lyght, the sunne shall be quenched in the rysynge, and the moone shall not shyne with his lyght. And I wyll punysh the wickednesse of the worlde, and the synnes of the vngodly, sayeth the Lord. The hye stomaches of the proude wyll I take awaye, and wyll laye downe the boastynge of tyrauntes. I wyll make a mā dearer then fyne golde, and a man to be more worthe, then a golden wedge of Ophir. Therfore I wyll shake the heauen, that the earth shall remoue oute of her place.

Thus shall I go with Babylon, in the wrath of the Lorde of hostes in the daye of his fearce full indignacion. And Babylon shall be as a hunted or chased doe, & as a flocke without shepeherde. Euery mā shal turne to his owne people, and flee eyther in to his owne lande. Who so is founde alone, shalbe thrust thorow. And who so gather together, shalbe destroyed with the sworde. * Theyr chyldren shalbe slayne before theyr eyes, theyr houses spoyled, and theyr wyues rauyshed. For lo, I shall dyrynge vp the Medes agaynste them, whyche shall not regarde syluer, nor be delyghted in golde. Then shall yong mens bowes be knapped asunder. The Medes shall haue no pytie vpon women with chylde, & theyr eyes shall not spare the chyldren. * And Babylon (that glorye of kyngdomes and dewrye of the Caldees honoure) shalbe destroyed, euen as God destroyed Sodome and Gomorra. It shall neuer be more inhabited, neyther shall there be any more dwellynge there, frome generacion to generacion.

The Arabians shall make no mansions there, neyther shall the shepeherdes make theyr foldes there any more, but wylde beastes shall lye there, and the houses shalbe full of greate Oules. Estriches shall dwell there, & Apes shall daunce there: the lytle Oules shall crye in the palaces, one after another, & Dragons shalbe in the pleasaunte parlours. And as for Babylons tyme it is at hande, and her dayes maye not be longe absent.

¶ The returne of the people from captiuitye. The prosperytye of the people of God, and affliccion of theyr ennemyes. The pryde of Babilon.

CAPI. XIIII.

BVt the Lorde wyll be mercyfull vnto Jacob, & wyll take vp Israell agayne, & set them in theyr owne lande. Straungers shall cleaue vnto them, and get them to the house of Jacob. They shall take the people, and carye them home with them. And the house of Israell shall haue them in possession for seruauntes and maydens in the lande of the Lorde. They shall take those captyues, & whose captyues they had bene afore, & rule those that hadde oppressed them. Whenne the Lorde nowe shall bringe the to rest, from the trauayle, feare, and harde bondage that thou wast laden withall, then shalt thou vse this mockage vpon the kynge of Babylon, & saye: Howe happeneth it that the oppressour ceaseth? Is the golde tribute come to an ende? Doubteles the Lorde hath broken the staffe of the vngodlye, and the sceptre of the lordes. Whyche when he is wroth, smyteth the people with durable strokes, and in his wrathe he persecuteth them, and tamely them continually. And therfore the hole worlde is now at reste and quyetnesse, and men synge for ioye.

Yea euen the fyrre trees and Cedres of Libanus reioyce at thy fall, sayenge: Sence that thou arte layde downe, there come no more to destroye vs. Hell also trembleth at thy cō mynge, all myghtye men and princes of the earth, Exechi. xxxii. Math. xx. iii. & March. xiii. Luce. xx.

earthe, steppe forth before the. All kynges of the earthe stande vp from theyr seates, that they maye all (one after another) synge and speake vnto the: Arte thou wounded also as wel arte thou become lyke vnto vs? Thy pompe and thy pryde is gone downe to hell. Wormes shalbe layd vnder the, and wormes shalbe thy couerynge.

How art thou fallen from heauen (O Lucifer) thou fayre morynge chylde? hast thou gotten a fall euen to the grounde, thou that (not withstandyng) dyddest subdue the people? And yet thou thoughtest in thyne herte: I wyll clyme vp into heauē, & make my seate D about the starres of God, I wyl syt vpon the glorious mounte towarde the North, I wyll clyme vp aboue the cloudes, and wylbe lyke the vyghest of all. Yet darre I say, that thou shalte be brought downe to the depe of hell. They that se the, shall narowlye loke vpon the, and thynke in them selues, sayenge: Is this y man, that brought all landes in feare, and made the kyngdomes afrayde? Is this he that made the worlde in a manner waste, and layde the cyties to the ground, which let not his prysoners go home?

Howe happeneth it, that the kynges of all people lye, euery one at home in his owne palace, with woe, dyp, and thou art cast oute of thy graue lyke a wylde braunch, lyke as dead E mens rayment that are thot downe with the sworde, as they that go downe to the stones of the depe, as a deade coarse that is trodden vnder fete, & art not buried with them? Euen because that thou hast wasted thy lande, and destroyed thy people. For the generation of the wycked shalbe vtterly without honour, for euer. There shal a waye be sought to destroy theyr children, for theyr fathers wyckednes, they shal not come vp agayne to possesse the land, and fyll the worlde full of castels & townes.

I wyll stande vp agaynst them (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) & roote out the name and generacion of Babylon (sayeth the Lorde) and F wyll geue it to the Otters, and wyll make water poddels of it. And I wyll swepe them out with the besome of destruccō, sayeth the Lorde of hostes. The Lorde of hostes hath sworne an othe, sayeng: It shall come to passe as I haue determined, and shalbe fulfylled, as I haue deuysed. The Assirians shalbe destroyed in my lande, and vpon my mountaynes will I treade them vnder fote. Whereuppon this yoke shall come frome vpon, and his burthen shalbe taken frō your shoulders. This deuyse hathe God taken thorowe the hole worlde, and thus is his hande stretched out ouer all people. For yf the Lorde of hostes determen a thynge, who wyll dysanulle it? And yf he stretch forth his handes, who wyll holde it in agayne?

The same yere that kinge Achaz dyed, God threatened by Esaye on this maner: Reioyse not (thou hole Palestyna) as though the rod of hym that beateth the were broken, for out of the serpentes rote, there shall ware a cockatrice, and the frute shalbe a fyne worme. But the poore shall fede of the best thynges, and the symple shall dwell in safetye. Thy rotes wyll I destroye with hongre, and it shall slaye thy remnaunt. Howle ye porters, wepe ye cyties, & feare thou (O hole Palestyna) for there shal com frō the North a smoke, whose power no man maye abyde. Who shall then manteyne the messages of the Gētyles? But the Lorde stablysheth Sion, and the poore of my people shall put theyr trust in hym.

CAPI. XV.

THis is the heuye burthen vpon Moab, A Ar of Moab was destroyed, (as me thought) in the nyght season. The walles of Moab perysshed in the nyght, and were wyped awaye. They went to Bayth and Dibon in the hye places, for to wepe. Moab dyd mourne frome Nebo to Medba. * all theyr heades were rolled, and all theyr beardes shauen. In theyr stretes were they gyrded about with sackcloth. In all the toppes of theyr houses and stretes was there nothynge, but mournynge and weppynge. Hesebon and Esseale cryed, that theyr voyce was hearde vnto Jahas. The worthyes also of Moab blesed and cryed for verye sorowe of theyr wombes. Who is my herte for Moabs sake? Mine eyes shal vnto Zoar, vnto Oronaim, as vnto a fearefull bullock, they wente vp to Luhith, C weppynge. The way towarde Horonaim was full of lamentacion for the hurte. The waters of Nimrim were dryed vp, & grasse was wythred, the herbes deuoured, and what necessarye grene thynge there was before. In lyke maner the thynge that was left them of theyr substaunce, they caryed it by water to Araby. The crye went ouer the hole lande of D Moab, frome Eglaim vnto Beer, was there nothynge but mournyng. The waters of Dimon were full of bloude, for the enemye hath sent eyther a bonde of men, which as a lyon laye a wayte for the remnaunt of the lande, and for them that were escaped.

¶ The destruccion of Moab.

CAPI. XVI.

THen sent the Lordes of the lande a ram A of warre, frome the rocke that lyeth toward the desert, vnto the hyll of the daughter Sion. (For as for the daughters of Moab they were as it had bene a fearefull thyng by the, that is put oute of her nestes by the ryuer of Arnon,) whiche wyll geue no counsell, nor helpe, [illegible] your counsell, nor declare, [illegible] your shadowe in the myddes [illegible] both: hyde the chased, [illegible] that are fled, [illegible] dwel among you, be [illegible] the destroyer, for the [illegible] robber vnder the, & the [illegible] eth vs out of oure lande. [illegible] of your kyngdome is [illegible] that sytteth [illegible] and trouthe in the house of Dauid, knowe the thynge, and do his diligence to helpe hostly, accordynge to equite and rygh tousnes. As for Moabs pryde (shall they answere) it is well knowen. And all thoughe they be excellent, proude, arrogant, and hye mynded, yet is their strength nothynge lyke. And therfore Moab complayneth vnto Moab, where thorowe they come all to mourne, and now that they be smytten, they take their deuyce benethe by the birchwall, and make their complaynte.

Ieremi.xlviii. c

The suburbes also of Helebon were made E wast, and the Pynces of the Gentyles hewed downe the vynyardes of Sibma, whiche were planted with noble grapes, and spred vn to Jazer, and wente vnto the ende of the desserte, whose braunches stretched their selues forthe beyonde the see. Therfore I mourned for Jazer, and for the vynyardes of Sibma with greate sorowe I poured my teares vpon Helebō and Eleale, for all their songes were layde downe, in their harueste and gatherynge of their grapes. Ioyfulnes and chere was gone out of the felde and vnyardes, in so moche, that no man was glad nor songe. There wer D no treaders into the wynepresse, their merye chere was layde downe. Wherfore my belye troubled (as it had bene a lute) for Moabs

Jere.xlviii.c. walles sake, & myne inward membres, for the brickwalles sake. For it happened thus also, when Moab sawe that he was turned vpsyde downe, he wēt vp an hye in to her Sanctuarye, to make her prayer there, but he myght not be holpen. This is the deuyce, whiche the Lorde toke in hande at that tyme agaynste Moab. But nowe the Lorde sayth thus: In three yere shal the power of Moab with their pompe (which is greate) be minished, lyke as the burthen of an hyred seruaunt. And as for the remnaunt of them, they shalbe lefte ryght a fewe, and not reckened moch worth.

CAPI. XVII.

A THis is the heuy burthen vpon Damascus. Beholde, Damascus shall be no more a cytie, but an heape of broken stones. The cytes of Aroer shalbe waste: the cattell shall lye there, & noman shall raye them awaye. Ephraim shall no more be strong, and Damascus shall no more be a kyngdom. And as for the glorye of the remnaunt of the Syrians it shalbe as the glory of the children of Israell, saith the Lorde of Hostes. At that tyme shall the glorye of Jacob be verye poore, & the fatnes of his flesh shall waxe leane. It shall happen as when the harueste is gathered in harueste, & the eares are full with the sickle, and they gather the eares together with their armes, & he reapeth the eares in the valley of Rephaim. Yet there remayneth B yet some eares ouer. Or as when men beate their olyue tree, wherin there remayne two or three berryes aboue in the toppe, and fyue or sixe in the braunches. Thus saith the Lorde God of Israell, the holy one.

Then shall man conuerte agayne vnto his maker, and turne his eyes to the holy one of Israell. And shall not turne to ꝑ aultres that are the worke of his owne handes, neyther shall he loke vpon groues and ymages, which his fyngers haue wrought. At the same tyme C shall their stronge cyties be desolate, lyke as were ones the forsake plowes & coms, which they forsoke, for feare of ꝑ thy lorde of Israell.

So shalt thou (O Damascus) be desolate, because thou hast forgotten God thy Sauyour, and hast not called to remembraūce the rocke of thy strength. Wherfore thou shalt also set a fayre plāt, & grafted a straūge braūch. In the daye when thou dyddest plante it, it was great, & gaue soone the frute of thy sede. But in the daye of harueste, thou shalt reape an heape of sorowes and miseryes.

Woe be to the multitude of moche people, D that ruth in lyke ꝑ sea, & to the preace of folke, that renne ouer all lyke greate waters. For though so many people increase as ꝑ flowing waters, & though they be armed, yet they flye fare of, and vanysh away lyke the dust with the wynde vpon an hyll, and as the whyrle wynd thorow a storme. Though they be fear full at nyght, yet in the morynge it is gone with them. This is their portion, that do vs harme, and heritage of them, that robbe vs.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XVIII.

WOe be to the lande of sprenge wynges, E which is of this syde ꝑ floude of Egypte, which sendeth her message ouer the see in vessels of reedes vpon the water, and sayth: goo soone, and doo youre message vnto a straunge and harde folke, to a fearful people, and to a people that is further then this, to a desperate and pylled folke, whose landes be ouer flowen from vs with ryuers of water. Ye all ye that syt in the compasse of the worlde, and dwell vpon the earth, when the token shalbe geuen vpon the mountaynes, then loke vp, & when the horne bloweth, then herken to, for thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me. I sayde me downe, & pondred the matter in my house, at the Noone daye when it was hote. And there fell a myldynge showre, lyke a dewe, as it happeneth in Harueste. But the frutes were not yet rype cut of, and the grapes were but yonge and grene. Then one smote of the grapes with an hoke, yea he hewed downe also the boughes and the braunches, and vpd cast them awaye. And thus they were layd waste, F for the foules of the mountaynes, and for the beastes of the earthe togyther. So that the foules sat therupon, and all the beastes of the earthe wintered there. Then shall there be a present broughte vnto the Lorde of Hostes: euē that harde folke, that fearefull folke and that further is then this: that desperate and pylled folke, whose landes is houyded in to riuers of waters, vnto the place of the name of the Lorde of Hostes: euē vnto the hyll of Sion.

¶ Prophecyeth Egypt agaynste Egypte.

CAPI. XIX.

A THis is the heuy burthen vpon Egypte. Beholde, the Lorde wyll ryde vpon a swyfte cloude, & come into Egypte. And the goddes of Egypte shall tremble at his comynge, & the herte of Egypt shal quake within her. For thus sayth the Lorde: I will sette ye the Egyptiās one agaynst another among them selues, so that one shalbe euer agaynste his brother & neyghboure, yea one cyte agaynst another, & one kyngdō agaynst another. And Egypt shalbe choken in her selfe. When they all counsell of their goddes, of their prophetes, & their sothsayers and wytches, then will I brynge their counsell to naught.

I wyll deliuer Egypte also in to the handes of greuous rulers, and a cruell kyng shall haue the rule of them. The water of the see shalbe drawen out. Fluus shall ryuke awaye, and be dronken vp. The ryuers also shall be drawen oute, the welles shall decrease & drye awaye. Rede and rusy shall fayle, the grasse B by the waters syde, or vpō the ryuers banke, yea and whatsoeuer is sowen by the waters, shalbe wythered, destroyed, and broughte to naught. The fyshers shall mourne, all suche as cast angles in the water, shall complayne, & they that spredde their nettes in the waters, shalbe sore vexed. Suche as laboure vpon fyne and thick, shall come to confusion, and they also that weue fyne workes. All ꝑ poundes of Egypte, all the paith eye of their waters and dyches shall come to naught.

Yea the vnwyse Pynces of Zoan, the counsell of the wyse Senatours of Pharao, shall come to sooly counselle. Howe that darre ye bable and say of Pharaos behalf, I am come of wyse people, I am come of the olde regall progenye. But where are now thy wyse men? Let them tell the & shewe the, what the Lord of Hostes hath take in hande agaynst Egypt. Fooles are those Pynces of Zoan, & proude are the pynces of Noph, yea they deceyue Egypte with the nobilitie of their stocke. For C the Lorde hath made Egypte dronken with the thinne of errours, & they shall vse it in all maners, euen lyke as a dronken man goeth spynge about. For Egypte shall lacke good counsell, so that they shall not knowe what to do, neyther begynnyng nor ende, neyther vpon the lande ne water. Then shal the Egyptians be lyke vnto women, afrayde and abasshed, at the lyfting vp of the hand, which the Lorde of Hostes shall lyft vp ouer them. The land of Iuda also shall make the Egyptians afrayde, who so euer but speake vpon it, shall put them in feare. And that because of the counsell, which the Lord of hostes hath decreed agaynste them. Then shall the fyue cytes of Egypte speake with the Canaanytes tonge, and sweare by the Lorde of Hostes, & Heliopolis shall be one of them. At the same tyme shall the Lorde of Hostes haue an aulter in the middest of the lande of Egypt, with this title thereby: Vnto the Lorde. This shal D be a token or testimony vnto the Lorde of Hostes in the lande of Egypte, when they shall crye vnto hym, because of those that oppresse them, that he shall sende them a sauyaue & a Sauioure to deliuer them.

Moreouer, Egypte shall be broughte vnto the Lorde, & the Egyptyans also shall knowe the Lorde at the same tyme, they shal do him reuerence with meate offrynges, & with meate offrynges, they shall promyse hym offrynges, yea & paye hym also. Thus the Lorde shall smyte Egypt, & brake it agayne, & so shal they turne to the Lorde, & he also shall haue mercy vpō them, & saue them. Then shall there be a cōmen waye out of Egypte in to Assyria. The Assyriā & shall come into Egypte, & the Egyptyans into Assyria. The Egyptians also and the Assyrians shall both haue one Gods seruice. Then shall Israell with honoure be the thyrde to Egypte & Assur. And ꝑ Lorde of hostes shall bleesse them, sayenge: Blessed is my people of the Egyptyās, Assur is the worke of my hādes, but Israell is myne enheritaunce.

¶ Agaynste Egypt and Ethiopia.

CAPI. XX.

IN the same yere that Tharthan came to A Asdod, where Sargon the kyng of the Assyrians sent hym, what tyme as he also besieged Asdod, & wanne it the same season. Then spake the Lorde vnto Esaye the sonne of Amoz, sayenge: go & lose al that sack from thy lopnes, & put of thy shoes frō thy fete. And so he dyd, goynge naked & barefote. Then sayde the Lorde: where as my seruaūt Esaye goeth naked & barefote, it is a token & signifyeng of the thyng, that after three yere shall come vpō Egypte and Ethiopia. For euen thus shal the kynge of the Assyrians dryue both yonge and olde, as prisoners naked and barefote, out of B Egypte and Ethiopia. And shall discouer the shame of Egypte. They shalbe also at their wittes ende, and ashamed one of another, the Egyptyans of the Morians, and the Morians of the Egyptyans, at the lyghte of their glorye. Moreouer they that dwell in the Iles shall se euen the same daye: beholde, this is our hope, to whom we fled to seke helpe, that we myght be deliuered from the kyng of the Assirians. Howe wyll we escape?

¶ Agaynst Babylon, Idumea, and Arabia.

CAPI. XXI.

THis is the heuy burthē of the waste see. A A greuous vysō was shewed vnto me, lyke as when a storme of wynde and rayne rusheth in from the wyldernesse, that terrible lande. Who so maye disceyue (sayde the voyce) let hym disceyue. Who so may destroye, let hym destroye. Vp Elam, besege it O Medai, for I wyll stylle all their grounynges. With this, the eyenes of my harte were full of payne. Paynes came vpon me, as vpon B a woman in her trauayle. When I herde it

I was

I was abasshed: and whē I loked vp, I was afrayed. Myne herte panted, I trembled for feare. The darkenesse made me fearfull in my mynde.

Yea soone make ready the table (sayde this vo, &) kepe the watche, eate and drynke. Vp ye captaynes, take youre youre shylde, for thus the Lorde hath charged me, go thy way, and set a watchman, that he maye tell what he seeth. And whē he had wayted diligently, he sawe two horsmen, the one rydynge vpon an asse, the other vpon a Camel. And I lyon cryed: Lorde, I haue stande waytynge all the hole daye, and haue kepte my watche all the nyght. With that came there one rydyng vpō a charet, which answered, and sayde: Babylon is fallen, she is turned vpsyde downe, and all the ymages of her goddes are smytten to the grounde. This (O my felowe threshers and fannes) haue I hearde of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell, to shewe vnto you.

Jeremye.li.a Apoca.xviii.a

¶ The heuy burthen of Duma.

D One set vpon me: Watche man, what haste thou espyed by nyght, watche ma, what hast thou espyed by nyght? The watchmen answered: The day breaketh on, and the nyght is commynge. If youre request be earnest, turne ye, and come agayne.

¶ The heuy burthen of Arabia.

At euen ye shal abyde in the wod, in the way toward Dedanim. Mete the thurst with water (O ye cytesyns of Thema) mete thate with breade that are fled. For they shal runne away from the weapen, from the drawen swearde, from the bent bowe, and from the greate battell. For thus hath the Lorde spoke vnto me, ouer a yere shall all the power of Cedar be gone, lyke as when the office of an hyred seruaunte goeth out. And the remnaunte of the good archers of Cedar, shalbe very fewe. For the Lorde God of Israell hath spoken it.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXII.

A The heuy burthen vpon the valleye of visions. What hast thou there to doo, that thou clymmest vp into the house toppe, O thou cyte of myracles, stepeyous & wylcull? Ieuye thy slayne men are neyther kylled with swearde, nor dead in battell? For all thy Captaynes gat them to theyr horses from the ordynaunce, yea they are all together vnbden awaye, and fled farre of. When I perceyued that, I sayde: awaye fro me, that I maye wepe bytterly. Take no labour for to comforte me, as touchynge the destruccion of my people. For this is the daye of the Lord of hostes, wherin he wil plage, treade down, B and weste out the valley of visions, & breake downe the walles, with suche a crasshe, that it shall geue a sounde in the mountaynes.

Jsaye.xxi.a

I sawe the Elampytes take the quyuers to caste and to horse, and that the walles were bare from barnesse. The goodly valleys were full of charettes, the horse men made them soone to besege the gates. Then was the couerynge of Juda put from thence, & thou sawest the sege of the cytye bout. Thou hast ye cyttes in the walles of the cyte of Dauid, wherof there shall be many. Ye shall gather together the waters of the lowe pole, and tell the houses of Jerusalem, and breake of some of them to kepe the walles. And ye shall make a pyt betwyxt the two walles of the water of the olde pole, & nothyng regarde hym, that toke it in hande, and made it. But at the same tyme shall the Lorde of hostes call men to weppynge, mournyng, to balduesse and puttyng on of sacke cloth. But they to wilfull theyr lustes & wyfulnes, slaughter ensue, they kyll shepe, they eate coshy meate, and drynke wyne, + let vs eate & drinke, for to morow we shall dye. Neuertheles whē the Lorde of hostes heareth of it, he sayde: yea, if this wyckednes of yours shalbe remitted, tyll ye dye. This hath the Lorde God of hostes spoken.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of hostes vnto the treasurye vnto Sobna the gouernour, and saye vnto hym: What haste thou here? and from whence comest thou? that thou hast made the a graue here? For he had caused a coshy tombe of stone to be made for hym selfe, and a place to lye in to be hewen out of a rock. Beholde, the Lorde shall take the out by violence, he will breake the of another fashyon, and put vpon the a straunge cloth. He shall cary the into a farre countre, lyke a ball with his handes. There shalt thou dye, there shal the pompe of thy charettes haue an end, thou dyshonour of the house of the Lorde. I will thrust the out of thyne office, and put the from thyne estate.

After this will I call my seruaunte Eliakim, the sonne of Helkias, & araye hym with thy cote, and gyrde hym with thy girdle, and I will geue thy power in to his hande. He shalbe a father of the cytesyns of Jerusalem, and of the howse of Juda. I will also lay the + keye of Dauids house vpon his shulders, and yf he open, no man shall shut, & yf he shut, no man shall open. I will fasshen hym as a nayle in the place of the most vnstedfast fulnesse, & he shalbe vpon the glorious seate of his fathers house. They shall hange vpon hym all the glory of his fathers house, of the children & children children, all smale and great, all instrumentes of musicke & musyke. This shall come to passe (sayth the Lorde of hostes,) when the nayle that is fastned in the place of the vnstedfast fastfulnesse, shalbe plucked of. And when the weyght that hanged vpon it, shall fall, be broken, and brused in peces. For the Lorde hym selfe hath spoke it.

¶ A prophecye agaynste Tyrus, and agayne to reioyce it agayne.

CAPI. XXIII.

A An heuy burthen vpō Tyrus. Howle ye shippes of Tharsis, for the is clene wowen downe to the grounde, & ouerlayed of them that are come from Cethi. Le

Ye inhabiters of the Flandes, the marchaūtes of Sidon, and they that occupye the see, (whome thou wast full sometyme) are at a poynte. For by see were there frutes brought vnto the, and all maner of corne by water. Then was the comen market of all people. Sidon is sory for it, yea and all the power of the see complayneth, and sayeth: O that I had neuer trauyled with shyppe, that I had neuer borne any, that I had neyther norysshed vp boye, nor brought vp daughter. As soone as Egypte perceyueth it, she will be as sorye as Tyrus is. Go ouer the see, mourne ye that dwell in the Iles. Is not that the glorious cyte, whose dayes were of longe antiquite? whose nauters dwellynge farre of, commended hir so greatly? Who hath deuised such thynges vpon Tyrus the crowne of all cytes, whose marchauntes and captaynes were the lyghtes and principall of the worlde? Euen the Lorde of hostes hath deuysed it, that he might put downe all pompe, and mynisshe all the glory of the worlde. So throwe thy land (O thou daughter of the see) as men go ouer the water, and there is not a girdle more.

Thus the Lorde that remoueth the kyngdomes, and hath taken in hande agaynst that mighty Canaan to rote it out, hath stretched out his hande ouer the see, and sayde: From hence forth shalte thou make no more myrth (O thou daughter of Sidon,) for thou shalte be put downe of the Cethens. Stand vp then and go, and go where the enemye will cary the, where thou shalt also haue no rest. Beholde, (for thyne ensample.) The Chaldees were fyrste people, that no man was lyke them, Assur builded them, he let vp his castels and palaces, and brake them downe agayne. And therfore mourne (ye shippes of the see,) for your power shalbe throwen downe.

Euen that, shall the. lxx. yeres of Tyrus (euen as longe as theyr kynges lyke was) be forgotten. And after. lxx. yeres, it shall happē to Tyrus as with an harlot that playeth vpō a lute. Take thy lute (saye men to her) & go about the cyte, thou arte yet an vnknowen wenche, make pastyme with diuerse balettes, diuerly thou mayst come in to acqueyntaūce. Thus shall it happen after. lxx. yeres. The Lorde shall visyte the cyte of Tyrus, & it shal come agayne to her marchaundyse, & shal occupye with all the kyngdomes that be in the worlde. But all her occuppeng and wynnynge shall halowed vnto the Lorde. For then shal they laye vp nothynge beside them nor vpō heapes, but the marchaundyse of Tyrus shall belonge vnto the cytesyns of the Lord, to the fyllynge and sufferynge of the hongrye, and to the clothynge of the aged.

¶ A prophecye vpon the tribulacion that shall fall vpon the worlde, because of synne.

CAPI. XXIIII.

B Beholde, the Lorde shall waste & plage the worlde, he shall make the face of the earth desolate, and scatter abrode the in habitoures therof. Then shall the preste be as the people, the master as the seruaunte, the dame lyke the mayde, the sealer lyke the byer, he that lendeth vpon vsarye, lyke vnto hym that borowyth vpon vsury, the creditoure, as the debtor. Yea myserably shall the worlde be wasted & clene destroyed. For the Lorde hath so determined in hym selfe. The earth shalbe heuye and desolate. The face of the earth shall perysh and fall awaye, the proude people of the world shal come to naught. For the earth is corrupte of her inhabiters.

For why? they haue offended the law, chaūged the ordinaunces, and make the euerlastynge testamente of none effecte. And therfore shall the curse deuoure the earth, for they that dwel theron haue synned, wherfore they shalbe brent also, and those that remayn shal be very fewe. The swete wyne shall mourne, the grapes shall be weake, and all that haue bene mery in herte, shall syghe. The myrth of tabretes shalbe layd downe, the cheere of the ioyfull shall cease, and the pleasure of lutes shall haue an ende, there shall no more wyne be dronke with myrth, the beere shalbe bytter to them that dronke it, the wycked cytes shalbe broken downe, all houses shalbe shut, that no man maye come in.

In the stretes shall there be lyfte vp a crye because of wyne, all mens cheere shall vanysh awaye, and all ioye of the earthe shall passe. Desolacion shall remayne in the cytes, and the gates shalbe smytten with wastnesse. For it shall happē vnto all landes and to all people, lyke as when a man smyteth downe the olyues, that are left vpon the tree, or seketh after grapes, when the wyne gatheryng is oute. And those same (that remayne) shall lyfte vp theyr voyce, and be gladde, and shall magnifye the glorye of the Lorde, euen from the see, and praise the name of the Lord God of Israell, in the valeys and Flandes. We haue longes longe to the prayse of the ryghteous, from all the endes of the worlde. Therefore I must speake: O myne vnfruitfulnesse, O my powerte. Woe is me, all is full of synnes, whiche offende of purpose and malyce. And therfore (O thou that dwellest vpon the earth) there is at hande for the, feare, pyt, and snare. Who so escapeth the terrible crye, shall fall into the pyt. And yf he come oute of the pyt, he shall be taken with the snare. For the wyndowes above shalbe opened, and the foūdacion of the earthe shall moue. The earthe shall geue a greate crack, it shall haue a sore ruyne, and take an horrible fall. The earth shall stacker lyke a dronken man, and be taken awaye lyke a tente. Her myserie shall lye so heuye vpon her, that she muste fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne. At the same tyme shall the Lorde muster together the hye hoostes on hoge, and the kynges of the worlde vpon the earth. These shalbe coupled together as myserables be, and shall be shut in ouerwardes and punyshed innumerable dayes. The Moone & the Sunne shalbe ashamed, when the Lord of hostes shall raise the at Jerusalē vpō the mount Sion, before his wurshipfull councell.

Jerem.xxxii.a

XXV. ¶ A thanc-

¶ Thankesgyuynge to god for his workes.

CAPI. XXV.

1 O Lorde, thou arte my God, I wyll prayse the, and magnify thy name. For thou byngeste marueilous thynges to passe, accordyng to thyne olde counsels, trueiye and stedfastlye. Thou makest of townes, heapes of stone, and of stronge cyties, broken walles. The palaces of the wycked destroyest thou out of the cytie, that they shall neuer be buylded agayne. Therfore the very rude people must magnifye the, and the cyties of the cruell Hethen muste feare the. For thou arte the poore mans helpe, a strength for the nedefull in his necessitie.

Thou art a defence agaynste euell weather, 2 a shadowe agaynst the hete. But vnto the prowde sumptuous, thou arte lyke a stronge wynde wynde, that calleth downe the boldynge of the vngodly, thou kepest men frō heate, with the shadowe of the cloudes, thou cuttest of the braunches of tyraunts.

Moreouer the Lorde of Hostes shall ones prepare a feast for all people vpon the hyll. A 4 plenteous, costly, pleasaunte feast, of fat and well fed beastes, of sweete & most pure thynges. Vpon the hyll shall he take awaye the vaile that hangeth before the face of all people, and the couerynge wherwith all Gentyles are couered. As for death, he shall vtterly consume it. The Lorde God shall wype awaye the teares frō all faces, & take awaye the contuilon of his people thorowe the hole worlde. For the Lord hym selfe hath layd it. Dpere.viii.d and.xxxvi.d

At the same tyme shall it be sayde: lo, this 5 is our God in whome we put oure trust, and he hath healed vs. This is the Lord that we haue waited for. Let vs reioyce and be glad in his healthe. For the hande of the Lord resteth vpon this hyll. But Moab shall be thrust them downe vnder hym, lyke as the straw is trodē vnder fote in a donge hyll. For he shall stretch oute his handes vpon hym, lyke as a swymmer doth to swymme. And with the power of his handes shall he caste downe hys hye pompe. As for his stronge holdes and hye walles, he shall bowe them, caste them downe, & fell them to the grounde in to dust.

¶ A songe for the deliuerauuce of the people.

CAPI. XXVI.

1 THen shall this songe be songe in the lande of Juda: We haue a stronge cytie, the walles and the ordinaunce shall kepe vs. Open the gates, that the good people may go in, which laboureth for trouth. And thou, which art the dore, & hast the matter in hande, shalt prouyde for peace, euen the peace that men hope for in the. Hope styll in the Lord, for in the Lord God is euerlastinge strength. For why, it is he, that bryngeth low the hye mynded cytezens, & casteth downe the proude cities. He casteth them to the ground, yea euen into the myre, that they may be trodden vnder the fete of the symple, & with the steppes of the poore. Thou (Lorde) constitute 2 the path of ꝓ rightwous, whether it be right, whether ꝓ way of ꝓ righteous be right. Therfore (Lord) we haue a respecte vnto the way of thy iudgemētes, thy name and thy remembraunce reioyse the soule. My soule lusteth after the all the nyght longe, and my mynde to stedly lyeth to the. For as soone as thy iudgement is knowen to the worlde, then the inhabitours of the earthe lerne righteousnesse. But the vngodly (thoughe he haue receiued grace) yet lerneth he not righteousnesse, but in that place where he is punyshed, he offendeth, and feareth not the glory of the Lorde.

Lord, they wyll not se thyne hye hand, but 3 they shall se it, & be confounded, when thou hast deuoured them with ꝓ wrath of thy people, & with the fyre of thyne enemyes. But as to vs, O Lorde, prouyde for peace, for thou worckest in vs all our workes. O Lorde oure God, though suche lordes haue dominacion 4 vpō vs as knowe not the, yet graunte that we may hope onely in the, & kepe thy name in remembraunce. The malicious tyraunts when they dye, are neyther in lyfe nor in the resurrection, for thou vysytest them & rootest them oute, & destroyest all the memoriall of them. Agayne, thou increasest the people, (O Lord) thou encreasest the people, thou shalt be praysed and magnified in all the endes of the world. The people that seke vnto the in trouble, that same aduersite whiche they cōplayne of is vnto them a chastening before the. Lyke as a wyfe with chylde (when her trauayle cōmeth vpō her) is ashamed, cryeth, & suffereth the payne. Euen so are we, O Lorde, in thy syght. We are with chylde, we trauayle, and 5 heare, & with the spyrete we bryng forth health where chorowe the earth is vndestroyed, and the inhabitours of the worlde perysshe not.

But as for thy dead men & ours, that be departed, they are in lyfe & resurrection. Thy lye in the earthe, they wake, & haue ioye, for thy dew is a dew of lyfe and lyght. But the place of the malicious tyraunte is fallen away. So go nowe my people into thy chambre, and shut the doze to the, & suffre nowe the twynckleyng of an eye, tyll the wrath be ouerpast. For behold, the Lord wyll go out of his habitacīō, and dyspet the wyckednesse of them 21 that dwell vpon earth. He wyll discouer the bloude that the hath deuoured, the shall neuer hyde them, that the hath murthered.

¶ The prophecyeth that all realmes shal be destroyed as ouer the coūtreynge of Egypte.

CAPI. XXVII.

1 THen the Lorde with his heuy, great, & 1 long swearde shall visit Leuiathā that inuincible serpēt, euen Leuiathan that crooked serpente, and shall slaye the whalish serpente in the see. At the same tyme shall men synge of the vyneyerde of Rubicatell. I the Lorde kepe it, and water it in due season. I watche daye and nyght, that no man breake into it. I beare no cruell wyll in my mynde. Who wyll compell me, that I greatly forgettynge all all kynde kyndnesse, shulde burne it vp at ones with thornes and bushes? Or who wyll enforce me to kepe or make peace? It wyll come to this poynt, that Jacob shalbe rooted agayne and Israell shalbe greene, and beare flowres, and they shall fyll ꝓ hole worlde with theyr fruite. Smyteth he not his smyter, as cruell as he is smyten hymselfe. Destroyeth he not the murtherers, as he is murthered? Euery man recompenseth with the measure that he receiueth: he mysuseth vpon his foe wynde, as vpō the dayes of extreme heate. And therfore shal 1 the iniquite of Jacob be thus reconcyled. And to shall he take away all the frute of his synnes.

As for auncient flowres, he shall make them al as stones beaten to pouldre, the groues and Idols shall not stande. The stronge cyties shalbe desolate, and the kayre cyties shall be lefte lyke a wyldernes. The calfe shall fede and lye there, and the thepe shall race it vp. Theyr harnesh shall be vsente, theyr wyues 2 whiche were theyr bewtie when they came forth, shalbe despised. For it is a people without vnderstandyng, & therfore he that created them, shall not fauoure them & he that made them shall not be mercyfull to them. In that tyme shall the Lorde shute frō the fyrste water of Euphrates, vnto the ryuer of Egypte. And there shal the children be chosen out one by one. Then shal ꝓ great trompet be blowē, so that those which haue ben destroyed in the Assirians lande, and those that be scatred a broade in Egypt, shall come & worshyp ꝓ Lord at Jerusalem, vpon the holy mounte.

¶ Agaynste the pryde of Ephraim, and agaynste false Prestes and preachers.

CAPI. XXVIII.

1 WO be to the crowne of pryde, to the 1 dronken Ephraemytes, and to the fadyng floure, to the glory of his pompe, that is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valleye, whiche men be ouerladen with wyne. Behold, the strength and power of the Lord shall breake into the lande on euery syde, lyke a tempest of hayle, that beareth downe stronge holdes, and lyke an horrible, myghtye, & ouerflowynge water. And the proude crowne of the dronken Ephraemites, shall be troden vnder fote. And as for the fadynge floure, the glorye of his pompe, whiche is vpon the toppe of the plenteous valley, it shal happen vnto him, as to an vntymely frute before the 3 haruelle come. Whiche as soone as it is sene, is by and by deuoured, or euer it come well in a mans hande.

And then the Lorde of Hostes shall be a ioyfull crowne, and a glorious garlande vnto the remnaunte of his people. Vnto the lowly, he shalbe a spyrete of iudgemente, and vnto them that dryue away the enemyes frō the gates, he shalbe a spyrete of strength. But 2 they go wronge by the reason of wyne, they fall and stacker because of strong drynke. Yea euen the prestes and prophetes them selues go amysse, they are dronken with wyne, and weake bycause thorowe strōge drynke. They erre in sepnge, & in iudgemēt they fayle. For 2 all tables are so full of vomite & fylthynes, that no place is cleane. What is he amonge them, that can teache, instruct or enfourme the chyldren, which are weaned frō suck or taken frō the brestes, of any other fashion then. Cōmaunde that maye be cōmaunded, byd that may be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbydden, kepe backe that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle. And therfore the Lorde also shall speake with lispyng lyppes & with a straung language vnto this people, to whō 1. Corin. xiiii.d he spake afore of this maner. This shal bring reste, yf one refreshe the weery, yea this shall bryngе reste. But they had no wyll to heare. And therfore the Lorde shall answere theyr stubbournes. (Cōmaunde that maye be commaunded, byd that maye be bydden, forbyd that maye be forbyddeu, kepe backe that maye be kept backe, here a lytle, there a lytle) That they may go forth, fall backward, be dasshed, snared & taken. Wherfore heare the worde of 2 the Lorde, ye mockers that rule the Lordes people, which is at Jerusalē. For ye comforte your selues thus: Tush, death & we are at a poynt, & as for hell, we haue made a condicīō with it, as though there breake oute any sore plage, it shal not come vpon vs. For with dis- Psalme. xl. Matth. xxvi.d ceite wyll we escape, & with nymbleues wyll Acts viii.d we defende oure selues. Wherfore sayeth the 1. Regum. ii. & Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll laye a stone in Sion, a greate stone, a costly corner stone for a sure foundacion, that who so putteth his trust in hym, shall not be confounded. Righ- 2 tousnes wyll I set vp agayne in ꝓ balaunce, and iudgemēt in the weyghtes. The tempest of hayle shall take away your refuge, that ye haue to deceaue withall, & the ouerflowynge waters shall breake downe your stronge holdes of dissimulaciō. Thus the appoyntmente that ye haue made with death, shalbe done away, & the condicion that ye made with hel, shall not stand. When the greate destruction goeth thorowe, it shall all to treade you. It shall take you quyte awaye before it. For it shall go forth early in the mornyng, & cōtynue onely that daye and that nyght. And the very feare onely shall teache you, when ye heare it. For the bed shalbe so narowe that a man can not lye vpō it. And ꝓ couering to small, that a man maye not wynde hym selfe therin. For the Lorde shall steppe forthe as he dyd vpon the mount * Perazim, & shall take on as he did f Ii. Regum. v. vpō the * dale of Gabaō, that he may bryng forth his deuyce, his straung deuyce, & fulfyll Esaie. xxviii. his worke, his wonderfull worke. And therfore make no mockes at it, that your captiuite increase not, for I haue herde the Lorde of Hostes saye, that there shall come a soden destructiō & plage vpō ꝓ hole earth. Take heede, & heare my voyce, ponder & marke my wordes well. Doeth not the husbande man ere in due season earnestly to his lande? he moweth & plowēth his grounde to sowe. And when he hath made it playne, he soweth it in fetches or cumyn. He soweth the wheate and Bar- G

lyre in their place, Cillium & Rye also in their place. And that he maye do it right, his God teacheth him and sheweth him. For he reweth not the fytches out with a wayne, neither draweth he the carte here & there ouer the comin but he threscheth the fitches out with a flayle and the comyn with a rod. But the whete he grindeth to make breed therof: In as much as he can not bring it to passe with treadyng out. For neither the droffing that ſ cart wheles make, ne his beastes can grynde it. This and suche lyke thinges come of the Lorde of hostes, whiche is marueylous in counsell, and great in ryghteousnesse.

¶ The destruction of Jerusalem. Agaynste the commaundementes of men.

CAPI. XXIX.

A WO be vnto the, o Ariel, thou cyte that Dauid wan. Take yet some yeres, and let some feastes yet passe ouer: ye shal Ariel be distreged, so that she shall be heuye & sorowful, and shall be vnto me cut as a lyon. For I wyll lay siege to the rounde about, & kepe the in with towres, and graue vp dykes agaynste the. And thou shalte be brought lowe, and speke out of the erth, and thy wordes shal go humbly out of the grounde. Thy voyce shal come out of the erth, like ſ voyce of a wytche, and thy talking shall grone out of the myre. For the multitude of thyne ennemies shal be like small dust, and the nombre of tyrauntes shal be as the dust that vanyshe awaye sodenly. Thou shalt be visited B taketh awaye sodenly. Thou shalt be visited of the Lord of hostes with thonder, erthquake, and with a great crasshe, & the whirle winde, tempest, and with the flame of a consumynge fyre. But now the multitude of all the people that warre out agaynst Ariel, ye hole house, the strong holdes and syege, is lyke a dreme which appeareth in the nyght. It is lyke as when an C hungry man dreameth ſ he is eating, and whē he awaketh, he hath nothyng: lyke as when a thirsty man dreameth that he is drinkynge, & when he awaketh, he is faynt, and his soule vnpacient.

So is the multytude of all people that muster them selues agaynst the hyll of Sion. But ye shall be at youre wyttes ende, ye shall be abashed, ye shall wacker and rele to & fro. Ye shall be dronken, but not of wyne. Ye shal stall, but not through ſ drunkennesse. For the Lorde shall graue you an harde sleepynge spirite, & holde downe your eyes: namely youre Prophetes and heades which holde fe, them shall he couer. And all visions shall be vnto D you, as the wordes that stande in a sealed letter, when one offereth it to a man that is lerned, and sayth: rede vs this letter. Then he answereth: I can not rede it, for it is shut. But E if it be gyue to one that is not lerned, & sayd vnto him: rede this letter: Then sayeth he: I can not rede.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For as Matth.xv.a Marth.vii.b moche as this people draweth nye me with their mouth, and honoreth me with their lyppes (where as their herte nevertheles is farre fro me, and ſ feare which they owe vnto me, that turne they to mens lawes and doctrines) therfore wyll I also shewe vnto this people a marueylous terrible & great thynge. (Namely this:) I will destroye the wysdome of their wise, and the vnderstanding of their learned men shall perysshe. Wo be vnto them F that seke so depe, to hyde their ymagination Esa.xlvii.c before the Lorde, whiche reherse their counsels in the darcknesse, & saye: who seeth vs, & who knoweth vs? Whiche ymaginacyon of yours is euen as whē the potters clay taketh aduysement, as though the worke might saye to the workmaster: make me not, or as when an erthen vessell sayeth of the potter: he vnderstandeth not. Or ye not that it is done by, that Libanus shalbe turned into Charmell, and that Charmell shall be taken as a wod? Then shall deaf men vnderstande the G wordes of the boke, and the eyes of the blynd shall se without any cloude or darkenes. The oppressed shal reioyse in the Lord, and the poore people shall reioyse in the holy one of Israell.

Then shall the furyous people cease, and the mockers shall be put awaye, and all they that do wrongs shalbe plucked out, suche as laboure to draw men vnto synne, and that lay sceare hym, which reprooued them in the gate and make as farre good prechynge to vanite. And therfore the Lorde (euen the defender H of Abraham) sayeth thus vnto the house of Jacob. Nowe shall not Jacob be ashamed, nor his face confounded, when he seeth amonge his chyldren (whome my handes haue made) such as halowe my name amonges them, that they maye sanctifie the holy one of Jacob, and feare the God of Israell, & that they which afore tyme were of an erroneous spirite, shall now vnderstandynge, and that tache as before coulde not speake, are now lerned in my lawe.

¶ A Curse agaynste them that forsake the counsell of God and take vnto the counsel of men. Of them neth the rest of the people, vnto the after the destruction of Jerusalem went into Egypte.

CAPI. XXX.

WO be to those shrynkynge chyldren (sayth the Lorde) which take counsell, but not of me, which take a webbe in hande, but not after my wyll, that they may heape one synne vpon another. They go downe into Egypte, (and aske me no counsell) to seke helpe at the power of Pharao, and comforte in the shadowe of the Egyptians. But Pharaos helpe shall be youre confusion, and the comforte in the Egyptians shadowe shal be youre owne shame. Your rulers haue ben at Zoan, and youre messaungers came vnto Hanes. But ye shall al be ashamed of the people that maye not helpe you, which shall not bringe you strength or comforte, but shame and confusion.

Youre beastes haue borne burthens vpon I their their backes towarde the south, thorowe the waye that is full of perill and trouble, because of the lyon and lyonesse, of the cockatrice and thorynge dragon. Yea the Mules bare youre substaunce, & the Camels brought your treasure vpon their croked backes, vnto a people that can not helpe you. For the Egyptians helpe shall be but vayne and losse. Therfore I tolde you also that youre pryde shoulde haue an ende. Wherfore goo hence and wryte them this in their tables, and note it in a boke: that it maye remayne by their posterite, and be syll kepte. For it is an obstinate people, vnfaythfull chyldren, chyldren that wyll not heare the lawe of the Lorde.

They dare say to the Prophetes: Meddle with nothyng, and vnto the sothsayers, tell vs of nothyng for to come, but speake frendly wordes vnto vs, and preache vs false thynges. Trede out of the waye, go out of ſ path, name the holy one of Israel vtō vs. Therfore thus sayth the holy one of Israel: forasmoch as ye haue cast of youre beaute, and comforte your selues with power and nimblenesse, and put youre confidence therin: therfore shal ye haue this mischiefe agayne for youre destruction and fall, lyke as an hygh wal that falleth because of some cyte (or blast) whose breaking commeth sodenly.

And your destruction shall be as an erthen pot, whiche breaketh, no man tourneth it, yea and breaketh so soore, that a man shall not fynde a shrue of it to fetche fyre in, or to take water therwith out of the pyt. For the Lorde God, euen the holy one of Israel hath promysed thus: With syll sytting and reste shall ye be healed, in quietnesse and hope shal your strengthe lye. Notwithstandynge ye re- D garde it not, but ye wyll saye: No, for thus are we constrayned to flee vpon horses. And therfore shal ye flee, we must ryde vpon swyft beastes, and therfore your persecuters shal yet be swifter. A thousande of you shall flee for one, or at the most for syue, which do but onbynde you evil wordes: till ye be desolate as a hyll maye vpon an hye mountayne, and as a token vpon an hyll.

Yet standeth the Lorde waytynge, that he maye haue mercye vpon you, and lyfteth himselfe vp, that he maye receyue you to grace. For the Lorde God is righteous, happy are all they that wayte for him. For thus (o thou people of Syon, and ye cityzens of Jerusalem) shall ye neuer be in be- E ynesse, for doubtlesse he wyll haue mercye vpon the. As soone as he heareth the voyce of thy crye, he wyll helpe the. The Lorde gyueth you the breed of aduersitie, and the water of trouble. But thyne instructer keth not farre frome the, ye thyne eyes loke vnto thyne instructer, and thyne eares harken to his worde, that cryeth after the, and sayeth: this is the waye, goo this, and turne neyther to the ryght hand neyther to the lefte.

Moreouer ye shall destroye the syluer workes of your ydolles, and caste awaye the golden copes that ye deck them with (as fylthynesse) and saye, get you hence: Then wyll he gyue rayne to the sede that ye shall sowe in the earthe, and gyue you breed of the increase of the earthe, so that all shall be plentyous and aboundaunt. Thy catell also shall he fede in the brode medowes, yea thyne oxen and Mules that eyll the grounde shall eate good fodder, whiche is pourged with the fanne. Goodly ryuers shall flowe oute of F all his mountaynes and hylles. In the daye of the greate slaughter when the towres shall fall, the moone shall shyne as the sunne, and the sunne shyne shall be seuen fold and haue as moche shyne as in seuen dayes beside.

In that daye shall the Lorde bynde vp the brooseth sores of the people, and heale their wounde. Beholde, the glorye of the Lorde shall come frome farre, his rage shall burne that no man shall be able to abyde it, his lyppes shall wagge for deepe indignation, and his tonge shall be as a consumynge fyre. His brethe lyke a behement floude of water, whiche goeth vp to the eares. That he maye take awaye the people, wherin they haue tourned them selues to vanitie, and for dyspite of ernoure, that ryseth in other folkes chawes.

But ye shall synge, as the vse is in the nyght of the holy solemnitie. Ye shall reioyse from youre hert, as they that come with the pype, when they goo vp to the mounte of the Lorde, vnto the roche of Israell. The Lorde also shall settle vp the power of his voyce, and declare his terrible arme, with his angrye countenaunce, yea and the flame of the consumynge fyre, with earthequake, tempest of wynde and hayle stones. Then shall the Assirians feare also, because of the voyce of the Lorde, whiche shall smyte them with the rodde. And the same rod wherin the Lorde wyll sende vpon him, shall moue the hole foundacion: with tromper, with nolse of warre and battayle to destroye. For he hath prepared the fyre of payne from the begynning, yea euen for kynges also. This hath he made depe & wyde, the nourishing therof is fyre and wod innumerable, which ſ breche of the Lorde kyndleth as it were a matche of brymstone.

¶ He curseth them that forsake God, and seke for the helpe of men.

CAPI. XXXI.

WO be vnto them that goo downe into Egypte for helpe, and trust in horses, & comforte them selues in charettes, because they be many, and in horsemen, because they be lustye and stronge. But they regarde not the holy one of Israell, and they aske no question at the Lorde. Where as he neuertheles plageth the wycked, and yet wyll not from his worde, when he stepperth forthe and taketh the victorye agaynst the houshold of the frowarde, and agaynst the helpe of euil

doers

doers. Now the Egyptians are men, and not God, and their horses flesshe, and not spirite. And as soone as the Lorde stretcheth out his hande, then shall the helper fall, and he that holde haue ben helped, and shall all togyther be destroyed. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vnto me: Lyke as the lyon or lyons whelpe roreth vpon the praye that he hathe gotten, and is not afrayde, thoughe the multitude of shepherdes crye oute vpon him, neither abaished for all the noyse of them: So shall the Lorde of hostes come downe from the mounte of Sion, and defende his hyll. Lyke as birdes flutter about their nestes, so shall the Lorde of hostes kepe, saue, defende and deliuer Jerusalem. Therfore, O ye children of Israel, turne agayne, lyke as ye haue erred in your goynge backe. For in that day euery man shall caste oute his ydolles of syluer and golde, whiche ye haue made with youre synnefull handes. Assur also shall be slayne with the swerde, not with a mannes swerde. A swerde shall deuoure hym, but not a mannes swerde. And he shall flee from the swerde. And his seruauntes shall be taken prisoners. He shall go for feare to his strong holdes, and his princes shall flee from his badge. This hath the Lorde spoken, whose lyghe burneth in Sion, and his fyre in Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXXII.

Beholde, the kynge shall gouerne after the rule of rygteousnesse, and the princes shal rule accordyng to the ballaunce of equitie. He shall be vnto men as a defence for the winde, & as a refuge for the tempest, lyke as a ryuer of water in a thursty place, & the shadow of a great rok in a dry land. The eyes of them that beare, shal take diligent hede. The eare of the vnwyse shal attayn to knowlege, and the tongue of the stammerers shall speke playnely & distinctly. Then shal the nyggarde be no more called gentle, ne the churle ryberall. But the churle wyll be churlysshly mynded, and his hert wyl work, be cruel and playe the hypocrite, and maynteyn abhominacions against God, to make the hungrye leane, and to withholde drynke from the thyrsty: These are the perylious weapons of the couetous, these be his shamefull counsels: that he maye begyle the poore with disceytfull wordes, yea euen there as he sholde gyue sentence vp the poore. But the lyberal plon ymagineth honest thynges, and commeth vp with honestly.

Lyse (ye ryche and ydle ones) harken vnto my voyce. Ye careles ones, marke my wordes. After yeres and dayes shall ye be brought in feare, O ye careles ones. For harueste shall be oute, and the grape gatheryng shall not come. O ye ryche ydle ones, ye that feare no peryll, ye shall be abaished and remoued; when ye se the barennesse, the naked nesse and preparynge to warre. Ye shall knocke vpon your brestes, because of the pleasaunt felde, and because of the fruitfull vineyarde. My peoples felde shall bringe thornes and thystles, for in euery house is dissolutenousnesse, and in the cityes wyluinesse. The palaces also shall be broken, and the greatly occupyed cityes desolate. The towres and bulwarkes, shall become dennes for euermore, the pleasure of mules shall be tourned to pasture for sheepe: vnto the tyme that the spirite be powred vpon vs from aboue.

Then shall the wyldernesse be a fruitfull felde, and the plenteous felde shall be reckened for a wode. Then shall equite dwell in the deserte, and rygh tousnesse in a fruitfull lande. And the rewarde of rygh tousnesse shall be peace, and her fruite, rest, and quietnesse for euer. And my people shall dwell in the Innes of peace, in my tabernacle and pleasure where there is ynoughe with all. And when the hayle falleth, it shal fal in the wod and in the cite. O howe happye shall ye be when ye shal safely sowe your sede by all waters, and dryue thither the fete of your oxen and asses.

¶ The ruyne agaynste the Assyrians. Desolacyon of them that ¶ all is the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXIII.

Therfore wo be vnto the, o robber, shalt not thou be robbed also? and vnto the that layest wayte, as who saye, there sholde no wayte be layde to thy the? Woo vnto the which doest putte, euen so shalte thou be putte also. And as thou layest wayte, so shall wayte be layde for the also.

Lorde be mercyfull vnto vs, we wayte for the. Thyne arme is at a poynte to ryghte vs, but be thou our helth in the tyme of trouble. Graunt that the people maye flee at the noyse of thy voyce, and that at thy vplaunsyng the Gentyles maye be scattered abrode, and that their spoyle maye be gathered, as the grasshoppers are commenly gathered together in to the pyt. Stand by Lorde, thou that dwellest on hye. Let Sion be fylled with equite and rightousnesse. Let trueth and faythfulnesse be in her tyme: power, helth, wisedome, knowlege, and the feare of God are her treasure. Beholde, their aungels crye without, the messingers of peace wepe bytterly. The streetes are waste, there walketh no man that in, the appoyntment is broken, the cityes are despysed, they are not regarded, the desolate earthe is in sorowfulnesse. Libanus taketh it sore for a spyte, that it is hewen downe: Saron is lyke a wyldernesse: Basan and Carmel are turned vpsyde downe. And therfore saith the Lorde: I wyll vp, nowe wyll I get vp, now wyll I aryse. Ye shall conceyue stubble and beare breame, and youre spyryte shall be the fyre, that it maye consume you: and the people shall be burnte lyke lyme, as bushes thornes burne that are hewen of, and set in the fyre.

Now harken to ye that are farre of, howe I do with them, and consydre my glorye, ye that be at hande. The synners at Sion are afrayde, a sodeyne fearfulnesse are come vpon the ypocrites. What is he amonge vs, saye they, that wyll dwelle by that consumynge fyre? Which of vs maye abyde that euerlastynge heate? He that leadeth a godlye lyfe (saye I) and speaketh the truthe: He that abhorreth to doo violence and discepte: he that kepeth his hande that he touche no rewarde: whiche stoppeth his eares fro heare no counsell agaynst the innocent: which holdeth downe his eyes that he se none euyll. He is that shall dwell on hye, whose sauegarde shall be in the true rocke, to him shall be gyuē the ryght true meat and drynke. His eyes shal se the kynge in his glorye: and in the wyde worlde, and his herte shal delyte in the feare of God. * What shall then become of the Senatour? What of him that teacheth chyldren? There shalt thou not se a people of a straunge tonge to haue so dissolued a language that it maye not be vnderstande: neyther so straunge a speche, but it shall be perceyued.

There shall Sion be sene, the heed cityе of oure solemne feastes. There shall thyne eyes se Jerusalem, that glorious habytacyon: the tabernacle that neuer shall remoue, whose nayles shall neuer be taken out world without ende, whose cordes euerychone shal neuer corrupte: for the glorious maieste of the Lorde shall there be presente amonge vs. In that place where large brode ryuers and streames are, shall neyther Galy rowe, ne greate shyppe sayle. For the Lorde shall be oure Lapptayne, the Lorde shall be oure lawe gyuer. The Lorde shall be our kynge, and he hym selfe shall be oure Sauyoure. There are the cordes so layde abrode, that they can not be better. The maste set vp of suche a facion, that no banner nor sayle hangeth theron: but there is maked great spoyle, yea lame men runne after the praye. There lyeth no man that sayethe: I am sycke, but all euyll is taken away from the people that dwell there.

¶ The laste destruction of the Synagoge, in which the kingdome and preesthode of that people was translated to the Churche and congregacyon of Christe.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

Come ye heathen and heare, take hede ye people. Harken thou earth and all that is therin: thou rounde compasse of all that groweth thereupon, for the Lorde is angry with all people, and his displeasure is prouoked against all the multetude of them, to cruelle them, and to slay them. So that their slayne shall be caste oute, and their bodyes drynke: that euen the very hylles shal be wet with the blood of them. All the sterres of heuen shall be consumed, & the heuen shall folde together lyke a roll, and all the sterres therof shall fall, lyke as the leaues fall from the vines and tygge trees. For my swearde (sayeth he) shall be bathed in heauen, and shall immediatly come downe vpon Idumea, and vpon the people whiche I haue cursed for my vengeaunce.

And the Lordes swearde shall be full of bloude, and be ruddye with the fatnesse and blood of lambes and gotes, with the fatnesse of the kydneys of wethers. For the Lorde shall kyll a great offeryng in Bozra, and in the lande of Idumea. There shall the Vnicornes fall with the Bulles, (that is with the ygnaunces) and their land shall be washed with bloude, and their grounde corrupte with fatnesse. Vnto the also (O Syon) shall come the daye of the vengeaunce of God, and the yere when thyne owne iudgementes shall be recompensed. Thy floudes shall be tourned to pytche, and thyne earth to brymstone, and therwith shall the lande be kyndled, so that it shall not be quenched day nor nyght: But smoke euermore, and so forth to lye waste. And no man shall goo thorowe thy lande for euer: But Pellycanes, Storkes, great owles, and Rauens that haue it in possession, and dwell therin.

For God shall spredde out the lyne of desolacion vpon it, and wey it with the stones of emptynesse. When kynges are called vpon, there shall be none, and all princes shall be awaye. Thornes shall growe in their palaces, nettles and thistles in their stronge holdes, that the dragons maye haue their pleasure therin, and that they maye be a courte for Ostriches. There shall straunge bulles and and monstruous beastes meete one an other, and the wylde kepe company togyther. There shall the Lampaye, and haue her lodgyng. There shall the hedgehog bylde, brygge, be there at home, and bringe forthe his ponge ones There shal the kites come togither eche one to his lyke.

Seke forowe the scripture of the Lorde, and rede it. There shall none of these thynges be lefte out, there shall not one (ne suche lyke) fayle. For what his mouthe commaundeth, that same dothe his spirite gather together (or fulfylleth.) Vpon whome so euer the lot falleth, vnto whome he deuideth it with the lyne: those shall possesse the enheryteaunce from generacion to generacyon, and dwell therin.

¶ Of the tyme and kyngdome of Christe.

CAPI. XXXV.

But the wyldernesse shall reioyse, the waste grounde shall be gladde, and florysshe as the lylye. She shall florysshe pleasauntly, and be ioyfull, and euer be gyuynge of thankes more and more. For the glorye of Libanus, the beautye of Carmel and Saron shall be geuen her. These shall shall knowe the honoure of the Lorde, and the maieste of our God. And therfore strengthen the weake handes, and comforte the feble knees.

Saye vnto them that are of a fearefull herte: be of good chere and feare not. Beholde your God commeth to take vengeaunce and to rewarde, God commeth his owne self, and will deliuer you. Then shall the eyes of the blynde be lyghtened, and the eares of the deafe opened. Then shal the lame man leape as an harte, and the domme mans tong shall geue thankes.

Math.xv.c

In the wylderne shall welles springe, and floudes of water in the deserte. The dry grounde shall turne to ryuers, and the thurstye to springes of water. Where as dragons dwelt afore, there shal growe swete floures and grene rushes. There shal be fote pathes and common stretes, this shall be called the holye waye. No vncleane personne shall goo thorowe it, for the Lorde him self shall goo with them that waye, and the ignoraunte shall not erre. There shall be no lyon, and no rauysshynge beest shall come therin, nor be there, but men shall goo there free and safe. And the redemed of the Lorde shall conuert, and come to Syon with thanksgeuynge. Euerlastynge ioye shall they haue, pleasure and gladnesse shall be among them. And all sorowe and heuynesse shall vanysshe awaye.

¶ Ierusalē is assieged by Sennacherib in the tyme of kynge Ezechias.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A In the fourtenth yere of kynge Ezechias, came Sennacherib kyng. of the assirians downe, to fayre fyght vnto all the strong cyties of Juda. * And the kynge of the Assirians sent Rabsakeh from Lachis towarde Ierusalem agaynst kynge Ezechias, with a greuous hoste, whiche set hym by the condyte of the ouerpoole, in the waye that goeth thorowe the fullers lande. And so there came forth vnto him Eliakim Helkiahs son, the President, Sobna the Scribe, and Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary.

2.Reg.xviii.c

2.Par.xxxii.a

And Rabsakeh sayd vnto them: Tell Ezechias that the greate kynge of Assiria sayth thus vnto him: What presumption is this that thou trustest vnto? Thou thynkest peraduenture, thou hast counsell and power ynough to maynteyn this warre: or els whom to trustest thou, that thou rebellest thy selfe of fro me? lo, thou puttest thy truste in a broken staffe of reed (I meane Egypte) whiche he that leaneth vpon, it goeth in to his handes, & pearceth him thorow.

B Euen so is Pharao the kynge of Egypte, vnto all them that truste in him. But yf thou wolest saye to me: we trust in the Lorde our God: Is not he God in deede? whose hye places and aulters Ezechias hath put downe, and cōmaunded Juda and Ierusalem to worshyp onely before the aulter. Abyde the, thou hast made a condition with my Lorde the kynge of the Assyrians, that he wolde geue the two thousande horsses: are thou able to set men vpon them? Seynge nowe that thou canste not resyste the power of the smallest prynce that my Lorde hath, how darest thou truste in the charettes and horsemen of Egypte? Moreouer, thynkest thou I am come downe hyther to destroye this land without the Lordes will? The Lorde sayd vnto me, go downe in to the land, that thou mayst destroye it.

Then sayd Eliakim, Sobna and Joah vnto Rabsakeh: Speake to vs thy seruaunte (we praye the) in the Syrians language, for we vnderstande it well: And speake not a vs in the Iewes tonge, leest the folke heare, which syteth vpon the wall. Then answered Rabsakeh: Thynke ye that thy kynge sent me to speake this onely vnto you? Hath he not sent me to them also that sye vpō the wall: that they be not cōpelled to eate their owne donge, and drynke their owne stale with you?

C And Rabsakeh stode vpright, and cryed with a lowde voyce in the Iewes tonge, and sayd, Howe take hede howe the greate kynge of the Assirians gyueth you warnynge. Thus sayth the kynge: Lette not Ezechias deceyue you, for he shall not be able to deliuer you. Moreouer let not Ezechias comfort you in the Lorde, when he sayth: The Lorde without doubte shall defende vs, and shall not geue ouer this cyte in to the hande of the kynge of the Assirians, byleue hym not. But thus sayth the kynge of Assiria: Obserue my fauoure, enclyne vnto me: so may euery man enioye his vyneyarde and figge tree, and drynke the water of his cesterne: vnto the tyme that I come my selfe, and bringe you in to a lande that is like yours owne: wherin is wheate and wyne, it is bothe sowen with seede, and planted with vyneyardes. Let not Ezechias deceyue you, when he sayth vnto you: the Lorde shall deliuer vs.

D Myght the goddes of the Gentyles kepe euerye mannes lande fro the power of the kynge of the Assirians? Where is the God of Hemath and Arphad? Where is the God of Sepharuaim? And who was able to defende Samaria out of my hande? Or which of all the Goddes of the landes, hath preserued their countrey out of my power, so that the Lorde shold deliuer Ierusalem fro my hand? Vnto this Ezechias messengers helde their tonges, and answered not one worde: for the kyng had charged them that they shulde geue him none answere. So came Eliakim Helkiahs sonne the President, Sobna the Scribe, & Joah Asaphs sonne the Secretary, vnto Ezechias with rēt clothes, and told him the wordes of Rabsakeh.

¶ Ezechias humbleth hym selfe before the Lorde, the armye of Sennacherib is slayne of the Lorde: and he hym selfe is slayne of his owne sonnes.

CAPI

CAPI. XXXVII.

1 Reg.xix.a

When Ezechias herde that, he rente his clothes, and put on a sackcloth, & went into the temple of the Lorde. But he sent Eliakim the President, Sobna the Scribe with the eldest preestes clothed in sack vnto the Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amos, and they sayd vnto him: Thus sayth Ezechias: This is the day of trouble, of plage, and of wyckednesse as when a chylde commeth to the byrth, but the woman hathe no power to bringe it forthe. The Lorde thy God, no doubte, hath well consydered the wordes of Rabsakeh, whome his lorde the kynge of Assirians hath sent, to defye and blaspheme the lyuynge God: with suche wordes as the Lorde thy God hath herde ryght well. And therfore lifte vp thy prayer for the remnaunte that yet are lefte. So the seruauntes of kynge Ezechias came to Esaye.

3 And Esaye gaue them this answere: Say thus vnto your Lord: thus sayth the Lorde: Be not afrayde of the wordes that thou hast herde, wherewith the kynge of the Assyrians seruauntes haue blasphemed me. Beholde, I wyll cause a wynde goo ouer him, as soone as he heareth it, he shall go agayne into his countrey, there wyll I destroye him with the swerde. Nowe when Rabsakeh returned, he founde the kynge of Assiria layenge syege to Lobnah, for he hadde vnderstande, that he was departed from Lachis. For there came a rummour, that Tharhakah kynge of Ethiopia was come forth to warre agaynst him.

4 And when the kynge of Assiria herde that, he sent other messengers to kynge Ezechias, with this commaundement: Saye thus to Ezechias kynge of Juda: Let not thy God deceyue the in whome thou hopest, and sayest: Ierusalem shall not be geuen in to the handes of the kynge of Assiria. For thou knowest well howe the kynges of Assyria haue handled all the landes that they haue subdued, and hopest thou to escape? Were the people of the Gentyles (whome my progenytours conquered) delyuered at anye tyme thorowe their goddes? As namely, Gozan, Haran, Reseph, and the chyldren of Eden, whiche dwelle at Thalassar. Where is the kynge of Hemath, and the kynge of Arphad, & the kynge of the cyte of Sepharuaim, Ena and Iua?

Nowe when Ezechias hadde receyued the letter of the messengers, and redde it, he wente vp into the house of the Lorde, and opened the lettre before the Lorde. And Ezechias prayed before the Lorde, on this maner: O Lorde of hostes, thou God of Israel, which dwellest vpon Cherubyn. Thou art the God that onely is God of all the kyngdomes of the worlde, for thou onely hast created heuen and erth. Enclyne thyn eare, Lorde, and consyder, open thyne eyes, o Lorde, and se and ponder all the wordes of Sennacherib, whiche hath sente his embassage to blaspheme the lyuynge God.

It is true, O Lorde, that the kynges of Assiria haue conquered all kyngdomes & landes, and cast their gods in the fyre. Notwithstandyng those were no gods, but the workes of mens handes, of wod & stone, & therfore haue they destroyed them. Deliuer vs then, O Lorde our God, from the handes of Sennacherib, that all kyngdomes of the erth maye knowe that thou only arte the Lorde. Then Esaye the sonne of Amos, sent vnto Ezechias, saying: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: where as thou hast made thy prayer vnto me, as touchynge Sennacherib this is the aunswere, that the Lorde hathe geuen concernynge him:

Despysed arte thou and mocked, o doughter of Syon, he hath shaken his heed at the, o doughter of Ierusalem. But thou Sennacherib, whom hast thou defyed and blasphemed? and agaynst whome thou hast lyfted vp thy voyce, and exalted thy proude lokes? euē agaynst the holye one of Israell. Thou with thy seruauntes hast blasphemed the Lorde, and thus boldest thou of thy selfe: I couer the hye mountaynes and sydes of Libanus with my horsemen.

And there wyll I cutte downe the hygh Cedre trees, and the fayrest fyrre trees. I wyll vp in to the heygth of it, and in to the chyefe of the cymbre woddes. Yet there be no waters, I wyll graue and drynke. And as for waters of defence, I shal drye them vp with the sole of myne foote. Yea (sayest thou) hast thou not herde what I haue taken in hande, and brought to passe of old tyme? That same wyll I doo nowe also: waste, destroye, and bringe stronge cityes vnto heapes of stones. For their inhabitoures shall be lyke lame men, broughte in feare and confounded. They shall be lyke the grasse and greene herbes in the felde, lyke the haye vpon house roppes, that withereth afore it be growē vp.

I knowe thy wayes, thy goynge forth, and thy comming home, yea and thy madnesse agaynst me. Therfore thy furiousnesse agaynst me, and thy pryde is come before me. I wyll put a ryng in thy nose, and a bytle byt in thy chawes of the, and turne the aboute euen the same waye thou camest. I wyll geue the also this token, O Ezechias, this yere shalte thou eate that is kepte in store, and the nexte yere suche as groweth of him selfe, and in the thyrde yere ye shall sowe and repe, yea ye shall plante vyneyardes, and enioye the frutes therof.

And suche of the house of Juda as are escaped, shall come together, and the remnaunt shall take roote beneithe, and bringe forthe frute aboue. For the escaped shall go out of Ierusalem, and the remnaunt from the mount Syon.

And this shall the gelousye of the Lorde of hostes bringe to passe. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde, concernynge the kynge of the Assyrians: He shall not come in to the city, and shall shoute no arowe in to it, there shall no shylde hurt it, neither shall they bygge about it. The same waye that he came, shall he re-

turne

tourne, and not come at this citye, sayethe the Lorde. And I wyll kepe and saue the citye (sayth he) for myne owne, and for my seruant Dauids sake.

4.Reg.xix.g Ecclesiasti.d Tobye.i.d 1.Mach.vii.f 2.Mach.viii.e

* Thus the aungell went forth, and slewe of the Assirians hoste, an hundred foure score and fyue thousande. And when men arose vp earlye (at Jerusalem,) beholde all laye full of deed bodyes. So Sennacherib the kynge of the Assirians brake vp and dwelt at Ninive. Afterwarde it chaunced, as he prayed in the temple of Nesrah his God, and Adramaleth and Hasazer his owne sonnes, slewe hym with the swerde, and fledde in to the lande of Ararat. And Asar Hadon his sonne raygned after hym.

The deeth of Ezechias.

¶ Ezechias is sycke vnto the death, but is yet reuyued by the Lorde, and lyueth.xv. yeares after: for whiche benefyte he giueth thankes.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

A 4.Reg.xx.a 2.Par.xxxii.f

NOt long after this, was Ezechias sycke vnto the deathe: and the Prophete Esaye the sonne of Amoz came vnto hym, and sayde: Thus commaundeth the Lorde: Set thyne houle in ozoze, for thou muste dye, and shalte not escape. Then Ezechias tourned his face towarde the wall, and prayed vnto the Lorde, and sayde: Remembze, O Lorde, that I haue walked before the in trouthe, and stedfastly herte, and haue doone the thynge that is pleasaunt to the. And Ezechias wepte sore.

Then sayde God vnto Esaye: Goo and speake vnto Ezechias: the Lorde God of Dauid thy father sendeth the this wozde: I haue herde thy prayer, and considzed thy teares: beholde I wyll put fyftene yeres mo vn to thy lyfe, and delyuer the and the citye also, from the hande of the kynge of Assyria, for I wyll defende the citye. And take the this token of the Lorde, that he wyll doo it, as he hathe spoken: Beholde I wyll retourne the shadowe of Achaz dyall, that nowe is layde out with the sunne, and bying it tenne degrees backwarde. So the sunne tourned tenne degrees backwarde, the whiche he was descended afore.

¶ A thankesgyuinge, whiche Ezechias kyng of Juda wrote, whan he hadde bene sycke and was recouered.

I Thought I wold haue gone to the gates of hell in my best age, and haue wanted the residue of my yeres.

I spake within my selfe: I shall neuer beholde the Lorde God in this lyfe: I shall neuer se man amonge the dwellers of the worlde.

Myne age is folden vp together, and taken awaye fro me lyke a shepeherdes tente: my lyfe is hewen of, lyke as a weuer cutteth of his webbe.

Whyle I was yet talkynge my rede, he hewed me of, and made an ende of me in one daye.

I thought I wold haue lyued vnto the morowe: but he brosed my bones lyke a lyon, & made an ende of me in one daye.

Then chatred I lyke a swalowe: and syke a crane, and mourned as a doue.

I lyfte vp myne eyes in to the deyth: O Lorde (sayd I) violence is wrong vnto me, be thou surety for me.

What shall I speake or saye, that he myght this do? that I may lyue out all my yeres, yea in the bytternesse of my lyfe?

Verely (Lorde) men shoulde lyue in bitternesse: and all my lyfe maste I passe ouer therin, for thou raisest me vp, & wakest me.

But loo, I wyll be well content with this bytternesse.

Neuertheles my conuersacion hath so pleased the, that thou wouldest not make an ende of my life, so that thou hast cast al my synnes behynde thy backe.

For hell prayseth not the, death dothe not magnifye the.

They that goo downe in to the graue prayse not thy trouthe: but the lyuynge, yea the lyuynge knowlege the, lyke as I do this daye.

The father telleth his children of thy layth fulnesse.

Delyuer vs (O Lorde) and we wyll synge prayses in thy house, all the dayes of our lyfe.

And Esaye sayde: take a playster of figges, and laye it vpon the soore, so shall he hele.

Then sayde Ezechias: O what a greate thynge is this, that I shall goo vp in to the house of the Lorde.

¶ Ezechias is reproued of Esaye, because he shewed his treasure vnto the Embassadours of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXIX.

AT the same tyme Merodach Baladam, Baladams sonne kynge of Babylon, sent letters and presentes to Ezechias. For he vnderstode how he had ben syeke, and was recouered agayne. And Ezechias was glad therof, and shewed them the cõmodities of his treasure, of syluer, of golde, of spyces and rootes of precyous oyles, al that was in his cupbordes and treasure houses. There was not one thynge in Ezechias house, and so thorowe out all his kyngdome, but he let them se it.

Then came Esaye the Prophete to kynge Ezechias, and sayde vnto him: What sayde the men sayde, and frome whence came they vnto the? Ezechias answered: they came oute of a farre countrey vnto me, out of Babylon. Esaye sayde: what haue they loked vpon in thyne house? Ezechias answered: All that is in myne house haue they sene: and there is nothing in my treasure, but I shewed it them.

Then sayd Esaye vnto Ezechias: Vnderstande the wozde of the Lorde of hoostes. Beholde the tyme wyll come that euery thynge whyche is in thyne house, and all that thy progenytoures haue layde vp in stoze vnto this daye, shall be caryed to Babylon, and no thynge lefte behynde. This sayth the Lorde. Yea, and parte of thy sonnes that shall come of the, and whom thou shalt get, shall be caried hence, and become gelded chamberlaynes in the kyng of Babylons courte: Then said Ezechias to Esay: Nowe God prospere his owne wozde, whyche he hath spoken. He sayd moreouer: so there be peax and fayth fulnesse in my tyme.

CAPI. XL.

BE of good chere my people, be of good chere (sayth your God) comfort Jerusalem, and tell her that her trauayle is at an ende, that her offence is pardoned, that she hath receyued of the Lozdes hande sufficient correction for all her synnes. A voyce cryeth: Prepare the waye for the Lorde in the wildernesse, make streyght the pathe for our God in the desert. Let all valeys be exalted, and euery mountayne and hyll be layde lowe. What so is croked, let it be made streight, and let the rough places be made playne feldes. For the glory of the Lorde shall appere, and all fleshe shal se it, for why? the mouth of ỹ Lozde hath spoken it.

The same voyce spake: Nowe crye. And I sayd: what shall I crye? Then spake it: that all fleshe is grasse, and that all the beautye therof, is as the flour of the felde. The grasse is withered, the floure falleth awaye. Euen so is the people as grasse, when the breethe of the Lord blowyth vpon them. The grasse wyther, or the flowre fade awaye: But the wozd of our God endureth for euer. Whereuer the voyce cryed thus: Go vp vnto the hyll (o Sion) thou that bryngest good tydynges, lyft vp thy voyce with power, o thou preacher Jerusalem. Lyft it vp without feare, and say vnto the cytyes of Juda: behold your God, behold the Lorde, euen the almighty shall come with power, and beare rule with his arme. Behold he bryngeth his treasure with him, & his wozkes goo before hym. He shall fede his flocke lyke an herdman. He shall gather the lambes together with his arme, and cary them in his bosome, and shall kyndly entreate those that beare yonge.

Who hath holden the waters in his fyste? Who hath measured heuen with his spanne, and hath comprehended all the earthe ỹ the worlde in thre fyngers? Who hathe weyed the mountaynes and hylles? Who hath tesourmed the mynde of the Lorde? Or who is of his counsell to teache him? At whom hath he asked counsell, to make him vnderstande, and to lerne him the waye of iudgement: to teache him science: and to instruct him in the waye of vnderstandyng? Beholde, all people are in comparison of him, as a droppe to a boket full; and are counted as the lesse thynge that the balaunce weyeth. Behold, the Iles are in comparison of him, as the shadowe of the sunne beame. Libanus is not sufficient to mynistre fyre for his offeryng, and all the beastes therof are not ynoughe to one sacrifyce. All people in comparison of him, are tekened as nothynge, yea vayne vanitie and emptynesse.

D Romano.xi.b 1.Corinth.ii.a Sapien.x.e

To whom then will ye lyken God? or what similitude will ye set vp vnto him? Shal ỹ carpenter make him a carued ymage? and shall the goldsmyth couer him with golde, or caste hym in to a forme of syluer plates? Moreouer that the ymage maker (that the poore man whyche is disposed maye haue some thynge to set vp also) seke oute and chose a tree, that is not rotten, and caue of it an ymage that moueth not? Know ye not this? Herde ye neuer of it? Hathe it not ben preached vnto you from the beginning? Haue ye not ben informed of this sithens the foundacion of the erth was layde: that he sitteth vpon the circle of the worlde, and that all the inhabitauntes of the worlde are in comparison of him but as grashoppers: That he spreadeth oute the heauens as a couering: that he stretcheth them out, as a tent to dwell in: that he bryngeth princes to nothyng, and the iudges of the erth to nought: so that they be not planted nor sowen agayne, neither their stocke roted agayne in the erth: For as soone as he blowyth vpon them, they wither and fade awaye, lyke the strawe in a whyrlwynde.

E Esa.xvii.d

To whom now will ye lyken me, and who shal I be like, saith the holy one? Lift vp your eyes on hye, and cõsider. Who hath made those thinges, whiche come out by so greate heapes? and he can call them all by their names. For there is nothyng hyd vnto the greatnesse of his power, strengthe, and myghte. How maye then Jacob thynke, or howe maye Israell saye: My wayes are hydde frome the Lorde, and my God knoweth not of my iudgements. Knowest thou not, or hast thou not herd, that the euerlastyng God, the Lorde whyche made all the corners of the earth, is neyther weryed nor fayne: and that his wysedome can not be comprehended: but that he giueth strength vnto the weryed, and power vnto the fayne? Children are wery and fayne and the strongest men fall: But vnto them that haue the Lorde before their eyes, shall strengthe be encreased. They shall growe vpon them: When they goo, they shall not fall: and when they goo, they shall not be weryed.

¶ Of the goodnesse and mercy of God towarde the people.

CAPI. XLI.

A BEholde (ye Ilandes) and harken vnto me. Be stronge ye people: Come ye vpon and heare your cause, we will goo to the lawe together. Who raysed vp the iuste from the ryssinge of the sunne, and calleth him to goo forthe? Who casteth downe the people, and subdueth the kynges before him: that he maye throwe them all to the grounde with his swearde, and scatter them lyke stubble with his bowe? He followeth vpon them, and goeth safely him selfe, and commeth in no foote paths with his feete. Who hathe made, created, and called the generations frome the beginninge? Euen I the Lorde, whiche am the firste, and with the laste.

B Beholde ye Iles, that ye maye feare, and ye endes of the erth, that ye maye be astonished, drawe nye, and come hyther. Euery man helpeth his neyghboure, and bydeth his brother be stronge. The smyth comforteth the moulder, and the plosh smyth the hammer man, sayinge: It shall be good that we fasten this caste worke: & then they fastened it with nayles, that it shoulde not be moued. And thou Israel my seruaunte: Jacob my chosen seed of Abrahaam my beloued, whom I fet de from the endes of the earthe by the hande: for I called the frome farre, and sayde vnto the: Thou shalte be my seruaunte, I haue chosen the, and will not caste the awaye: be not afrayde, for I will be with the. Loke not behynde the, for I will be thy God to strengthe the, helpe the, and to kepe the with this right hande of myne.

Beholde, all they that withstande the, shal come to confusion and shame: and thyne aduersaries shall be destroyed and broughte to naught. So that whoso seketh after them, shall not finde them. Thy destroyers shal perish, and to shall they that vndertake to make bataple against the. For I thy Lord and God will take holde of thy right hande. Euen I that saye vnto the, feare not. I will helpe the. Be not afrayde thou lytle worme Jacob, & thou dispised Israel, for I will helpe the, sayeth the Lorde and the holy one of Israel thyne auenger. Beholde, I will make the a treading carte, and a newe sharpe, that thou mayst thresh and grynde the mountaynes, and bringe the hylles to powder. Thou shalt fan them, & the wynde shall carye them awaye, and the whyrlwynde shall scatter them. But thou shalte reioyse in the Lorde, and shalt delite in prayfing the holy one of Israel.

When the thrifte and poore seke water and fynde none, and when they tonge is drye of thyrste: I grue it them, sayeth the Lorde. I the God of Israell forsake them not. I bringe forth floudes in the hylles, and welles in the playne feldes. I tourne the wyldernesse to ryuers, and the drye lande to fountaines of water. I plante in the wilde groundе trees of Cedre, Boxe, Myrte, and Olyues. And in the drye, I set fyrre trees, Elmes and hawthornes togither. All this do I, that they all together maye se and marke, perceyue with their hertes and consider, that the hande of the Lorde maketh these thinges, and that the holy one of Israel bringeth them to passe. & tarie at your cause, sayth the Lorde, & bringe forth your strongest grounde, counseileth the king of Jacob. Let the goddes come forth the selues, and shew vs the thinges that are past what they be: let them declare them vnto vs that we maye take them to herte, and knowe them hereafter. Either tell them shewe vs thinges for to come, and tel vs what shal be woont hereafter: so shall we know that they be goddes. Shewe some thynge, either good or bad: so will we both knowege the same and tell it out.

Beholde, ye goddes are of nought, and your makinge is of nought, but abhominacion hathe chosen you. Neuertheles, I haue wekked vp one from the north, & he shal come. And an other from the East, will be shall call vpon my name, and shal come to the princes, as the potter to his clay, and as ỹ potter treadeth downe the myre: Who tolde that afore? So wil we confesse and saye, that he is righteous. But there is none that sheweth or telleth any thinge, there is none also that heareth youre wordes. Beholde, I will first graunte them of Syon and Jerusalem to be Euangelistes. But when I consider: there is not one amonge them that propheseyeth, neyther (when I aske him) that answereth one worde. Lo, wycked are they and vayne, with the thinges also that they take in hande yea wynd are they, and emptinesse, with their ymages togither.

CAPI. XLII.

BEholde, nowe therfore, this is my seruaunt, whome I will kepe to my selfe, myne electe. In whome my soule shall be pacified. I will geue him my spirite, that he maye shewe forthe iudgement and equite amonge the Gentyles. He shal not be an outcryer, nor an vyle mynded person. His voice shall not be herde in the stretes. A broked reed shall he not breake, and the smokynge flaxe shall he not quenche: but faythfully and truely shal he geue iudgement. He shal neyther be outerlye ne vnfaythfull, that he maye stablesshe righteousnes vnto the erth: and the Gentyles also shall kepe his lawes. For thus sayeth God the Lorde vnto him (euen he that made the heauens, and spredde them abroade, and set forth the earthe with her increase: whiche geueth breathe vnto the people that is in it, and to them that dwell therin) I the Lord haue called the in righteousnesse, and lede the by the hande. Therefore will I also defende the, and geue the for a couenaunt of the people, and to be the lyght of ỹ Gentyles. That thou mayst open the eyes of the blynde, let out the prisoners, and them that sit in darknesse, out of the dongeon house. I my selfe, whose name is the Lorde, whiche geue my power to none other, neyther myne honour to the Goddes: Beholde your thinges are nowe chaunged, and tell you newe thynges, and tell you them or they come, for olde thynges also are come to passe.

Synge therfore vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of thankes gyuynge: blowe out his prayse vnto the ende of the worlde. They that vpon the see, and all that is therin, prayse him, the Iles, and they that dwell in them. Let the wyldernesse with her cityes lyfte vp her voyce, the townes also that be in Cedar. Let them be glade that sytte vpon rockes of stone, and let them crye downe from the hygh mountaynes: & geue prayse almightynesse vnto the Lorde, and magnifieng him among ỹ Gentyles. The Lord shal come forth as a giaunt, and take a stomak to him lyke as a stirring man of warre. He shall roze and crye, & ouercome his ennemies.

I haue longe holden my peax (sayethe the Lorde) shoulde I therfore be styll, and kepe silence for euer? I will crye lyke a trauelyng woman, and anon will I destroye and deuoure. I will make waste both mountaynes and hyll, and drye vp euery grene tryng that groweth theron. I will drye vp the floudes of water, and drinke vp the ryuers. I will bringe the blynde in to a streete that they knowe not: and lede them in to a sotepath, that they are ignorant in. I shall make darknesse lighte before them, and the thyng that is croked to be streyght. These thynges will I doo, and not forsake them. And therfore let them conuerte, and be ashamed earnestly, that hope in grauen, and saye to factioned ymages: ye are our goddes.

Heare, o ye deafe men, and harken youre eyes to se, o ye blynde. But who is blynde then my seruaunte? Or so deafe as my messengers whome I sende vnto them? For who is so blynde as my people, and they that haue the rule of them? They are lyke as ỹ that vnderstandeth moche, and kepeth nothing: or ỹ one herde well, but were not attent. The Lorde be mercyfull vnto them for his righteousnesse sake, and that his worde might be magnified and prayfed. But it is a wicked wyes and wicked people. Their goodes may belong all to the spoare, and shall be shut in prysō houses. They shal be caryed away captiue, & no man shall lose them. They shall be troden vnder foote, and no man shal labour to bringe them agayne. But who is he among you that pondreth this in his mynde that considereth it, and taketh it for a warning in time to come.

Who suffred Jacob to be troden vnder foote, and Israel to be spoyled? Did not the Lorde? How haue we synned against him, and haue had no delyte to walke in his wayes, neither been obedient vnto his lawe. Therfore hathe he powred vpon vs his wrathful displeasure, and stronge bataple, whiche maketh vs haue to do on euery syde, yet wyll we not vnderstande: He burneth vs vp, yet synketh it not in to our hertes.

¶ God promyseth to send his Christ, whiche shal deliuer his people. He forgyueth synnes for his owne sake.

CAPI. XLIII.

BVt nowe the Lorde that made the, o Jacob, and he that factioned the, o Israel sayeth thus: Feare not, for I wyl defende the. I haue called the by name, thou art myne owne. When thou wentest in the water, I was by the, that the stronge floudes shoulde not plucke the away. When thou walkest in the fyre, it shall not burne the, and the flame shal not kyndle vpon the. For I am the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israel, thy sauiour. I gaue Egypte for thy deliuerance, the Morians and the Sabees for the: because thou was deare in my syght, and because I set by the, and loued the. I pylled all men for the, and deliuered vp all people for thy sake, that thou shouldest not feare, for I was with the. I will bringe thy seede frome the Easte, and gather the together from the Weste. I will saye to the Northe, let goo. And to the Southe, kepe not backe: but bringe me my sonnes from farre, and my doughters from the endes of the worlde: Namely all those that be called after my name: For them haue I created, facioned, and made for myne honour.

Bringe forthe that people, whether they haue eyes, or be blynde, deafe, or haue eares. All nations shall come in one, and be gathered in one people. But whiche amonge yonder goddes shall declare suche thynges, and tell vs what is to come? Lette them bringe there witnesses, so shall they be seen: for then men shal heare it, and saye it is trouthe. But I bringe you witnesses (sayethe the Lorde) euen those that are my seruaunte, whome I haue chosen: to thintent that ye myghte be certyfyed, and geue me faythfull credence: yea and to consyder, that I am he, before whome there was neuer anye God, and that there shall be none after me. I am onely the Lorde, and without me is there no sauioure. I geue warnynge, I make bole, I teache you that there shoulde be no straunge God among you. And this recorde muste ye beare me youre selues, sayth the Lorde that I am God. And euen he am I from the begynnynge. and there is none that can take anye thynge oute of my hande. And what I wo, can no man chaunge.

Thus sayethe the Lorde, the holye one of Israell youre redemer: For youre sake I will sende to Babylon, and bringe all the strongest of them frome thence: Namely the Chaldees that boste them of their shyppes: Euen I the Lorde youre holye one which haue made Israell, and am youre kynge. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde, euen he that maketh a waye in the see, and a foote pathe in the mysdtye waters: whiche dryngeth forth the chargettes and horses, the hoste and the power, that they maye fall a slepe, and neuer ryse, and be extincte, lyke as towe is quenched.

Remembre not thynges of olde, and regarde not thynge that is passe. Therefore beholde, I shall make a newe thynge, and shortly shall it appere: ye shall well knowe it, I haue told it you before, but I wyll tell it you agayne. I wyll make stretes in the wyldernesse, and ryuers of waters in the wyldernesse. The wylde beestes shall worshyp me: the dragon and the Estriche. For I shall gyue water in the wyldernesse, and stremes in the wyldernesse: that I maye gyue drynke to my people, whō I chose, this people haue I made for my selfe, and they shall shewe forthe my prayse. For thou (Jacob) wouldest not call vpon me, but thou haddest an vnlust towarde me, o Israel.

Thou gauest me not thy yonnge beastes for burnt offerynges, neyther honoredst honoure me with thy sacrifyces. Thou boughtest me no deare spices with thy moneye, neyther powredst the fatte of thy sacrifyces vpon me. Now be it I haue not ben chargeable vnto the in offerynges, neyther greuous in incense.

But thou hast laden me with thy synnes: and weryed me with thyne vngodlynesse.

Where as I yet am euen he onely, that for myne owne sakes take away thyne offences, and forget thy synnes: to that I wyl neuer thynke vpon them. Put me now in remembraunce (for we wyll reason togyther) and shewe what thou haste for the to make the quyte. Thy fyrst father offended sore, and thy rulers haue synned agaynst me. Therfore I eyther suspended, or slewe the chiefest prynces: I dyd curse Jacob, and gaue Israel in to reproffe.

¶ Christ promyseth to deliuer his churche, whiche he hath redemed. Idolatrye and kneling vnto Images &c. are confuted.

CAPI. XLIIII.

SO heare nowe, o Jacob my seruaunt, and Israell, whome I haue chosen. For thus sayth the Lorde that made the, facioned the, and helped the euen frome thy mothers wombe: Be not afrayd, o Jacob my seruaunt, thou ryghteous, whome I haue chosen. For I shall powre water vpon the dry ground, and ryuers vpon the drye. I shall powre my spirite vpon my seed, and myne encrease vpon thy stocke. They shall grow togyther lyke as the grasse, and as the wyllowes by the waters syde: One wyll saye I am the Lordes. Another wyll call vnder the name of Jacob. The thyrde shall describe with his hand vnto the Lorde, and gyue him selfe vnder the name of Israel.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde spoken: euen the kynge of Israell, and his auenger, the Lorde of hostes: I am the fyrst and the laste, and without me is there no God. For what is he that euer was lyke me, whyle am frome euerlastynge? Lette hym shewe his name, and wo where therofore he maye be lykened vnto me. Let him tell you forth playnly, thynges yf are past, and for to come: yea and that wythoute anye feare or flappe. For haue not I euer tolde you byfore, and warned you? Ye can beare me recorde youre selues. Is there anye God except me? or anye maker that I shoulde not knowe hym?

Wherfore all caruers of ydolles are but vayne, and their labour lost. They must beare recorde them selues, that (seyng they can not eyther se nor vnderstande) they shall be confounded. Who shoulde nowe make a God, or fasshon an ydoll, that is profytable for nothyng? Beholde, all the felowshyp of them must be brought to confusion. Let all the workmaysters of them come and stande togyther from amonge men: they must be abashed and confounded one with an other. The smith taketh yron, and tempre it with woote coles, and facyoneth it with hammers, and maketh it with all the strengthe of his armes: yea sometyme he is faynte for verye hunger, and so forsaketh that he hathe no more power. The carpenter (or ymage caruer) taketh mete of the tymbre: and spredeth forth his lyne: he marketh it with some colloure: he playneth it, he squareth it, and maketh it after the ymage of a man, and accordyngely the beautie of a man: that it maye stande in the temple.

Moreouer, he goeth out to hewe downe Cedre trees: he dryngeth home Elmes and Okes, and other tymbre of the wodde. He eyther setteth fyrre trees whiche he planted hym selfe, and suche as the rayne hathe swelled, whiche wodde serueth for men to burne. Of this he taketh and warmeth hym selfe withall: he maketh a fyre of it to bake breed. And afterwarde maketh a God therof to worshyp it: and an ydoll to knele before it. One parte he burneth in the fyre, with an other he rosteth flesshe, that he maye eate roste his belye full: with the tyrde he warmeth him selfe, and sayth: Aha, I am well warmed, I haue ben at the fyre. And of the resydue he maketh him a God and an ydoll for him selfe. He kneleth before it, he worshyppeth it, he prayeth vnto it, and sayth: deliuer me for thou art my God.

Yet men neyther consydre ne vnderstande, because their eyes are stopped, that they can not se: and their hertes, that they can not perceyue. They ponder not in their myndes, for they haue neyther knowledge ne vnderstandynge, to thynke thus: I haue burned one parte in the fyre: I haue bred with the coles therof. I haue rosted flesshe withall, and eaten it: shall I now of the resydue make an abhominacion, and fall downe before a stocke of wodde? Their hertes are geuen vnto blyndnesse, so that they can not vnderstande. The eyes can not se, and their vnderstandynges can not perceyue. And no man remembreth, neyther is there knowledge ne vnderstandynge in him to saye: I haue burned one parte in the fyre, and haue bred vpon the coles therof. I haue rosted flesshe and eaten it: and of the residue shall I make an abhominacion? Shall I fall downe before a stocke of wodde? He feedeth vpon asshes, a deceyued hert hathe turned him aside, so that he can not deliuer his soule, ne saye: Is not a lye in my ryght hande?

Consydre this, O Jacob and Israel, for thou art my seruaunt. I haue made the, that thou myghtest serue me. O Israell, forget me not. As for thyne offences, I dryue them away lyke the clowdes, and thy synnes as the myst. Turne the agayne vnto me: for I will deliuer the.

Reioyse ye heuens whom the Lorde hathe made, lette all that is here beneethe vpon the yerth be ioyfull. Reioyse ye mountaynes and woodes, with all the trees that are in you: for the Lorde shall redeme Jacob, and shewe his glorye vpon Israell. For thus sayth the Lorde thy redemer, euen he that fashioned the frome thy mothers wombe: I am the Lorde, whyche do all thynges my selfe alone. I onely haue spredde oute the heauens, and I onely haue layde the foundacyon of the earthe. I destroye the tokens of wytches, and make the southsayers goo wronge. As for the wyse, I turne them backwarde, and make their cunnynge folysshnesse.

But I set vp the purpose of my seruaunte, and fulfyll the counsell of my messengers. I saye to Jerusalem: tourne agayne. And to the cyties of Juda: be ye buylded again: and I repayre theyr decayed places. I saye to the grounde: be drye. And I dryye vp thy waterflouddes. I saye to Cyrus: thou art myne herdman: so that he it all fulfyll all thynges after my wyll. I saye to Jerusalem: be thou buylded, and to the temple: be thou fall grounded.

¶ The deliuerannce of the people by Cyrus. The destruccyon of Babylon and rallynge of the Gentyles

CAPI. XLV.

THus sayth the Lorde vnto Cyrus his anoynted, whom he ledeth by the ryght hande: that the people may fal downe before him: I wyll loose the gyrdle of kynges: that they shal open the gates before thy face, and not be shut theyr doores. I wyll goo before the, and make the croked streaygth: I shall breake the brasen doores, and burste the yron barres. I shal gyue the the hyd treasure, and the dyrke whiche is secretly kept: that thou mayst knowe that I the God of Israell haue called the by name: and that for Jacob my seruaunts sake, and for Israel my chosen.

For I called the by thy name, and ordeyned the or euer thou knewest me: Euen I the Lorde, before whome there is none other: for without me ther is no God. I haue prepared the or euer thou knewest me: that it myght be knowen from the ryssynge of the sonne, to the goynge downe of the same, that all is nothynge without me. For I am the Lorde, and there is elles none. Je is I that created the lyght and darknesse: I make peace and trouble: yea euen I the Lorde do all these thynges. The heauens aboue shall droppe downe, and the clowdes shall rayne righteousnesse. The earthe shall open it selfe, and dryngе forthe helpe, and thereby shall ryghteousnesse floryssh. Euen I the Lord shall bring it to passe.

Wo be vnto him that chydeth with his maker, the potsherde with the potter: Saith the clave to the potter, what makest thou? or thy worke ceaseth for nothyng? Wo be vnto him that sayth to his father: why begettest thou? And to his mother: why trauelest thou? Thus sayth the Lorde, euen the holy one and maker of Israel: Aske me of thynges for to come, concernynge my sonnes: and put me in remembraunce, as touchyng the workes of my handes: I haue made the erthe, and created man vpon it. With myne handes haue I spred forth heuen, and geuen a commaundement for all the host therof. I shal wake him vp with ryghteousnesse, and order all his wayes. He shall buylde my cyty, and let out my prysoners, and that neyther for gyft nor rewardes, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

The Lorde hathe sayde moreoure: The occupyers of Egypte, the marchaunts of the Sothraens and Sabees, shall come vnto the: with tryoute, they shall be thyne, they shall folowe the, and go with chaynes vpon theyr feete. They shall fall downe before the, and make supplicacion vnto the. For God (without whom there is none other God) shall be with the. O how profounde art thou, o God, thou God and sauyour of Israel? Confounded be ye, and put to dishonoure: goo hence togyther with shame, all ye that be worke-maysters of errour: (that is worshyppers of ydols.) But Israel shall be saued in the Lorde, whyche is the euerlastynge saluacion: They shal not come to shame nor confusion, worlde without ende.

For thus sayth the Lorde: euen he that created heuen, the God that made the earth, that facioned it and set it forth: I haue not made it for nought, but I made it to be inhabyted. Euen I the Lorde, without whome there is none other. I haue not spoken secretly, neyther in darke places of the earthe. It is not for nought, that I sayde vnto the seed of Jacob: seke me. I am the Lorde, whyche when I speake, declareth the thynge that is ryghtous and true. Let them be gathered and come togyther, let them drawe nye hyther that are escaped of the people: Haue they anye vnderstandynge that serue vp the stocke of theyr ydolles, and praye vnto a God that can not helpe them? Lette men drawe nye, let them come hyther, and take counsell one at an other, and shewe forth: What is he, that tolde this before? or who spake of it, euer sence the begynnyng? Haue not I the Lorde done it: without whom there is none other God? the true God and sauioure, and there is els none but I? And therfore tourne you vnto me (all ye endes of the erth) so shall ye be saued, for I am God, and there is elles none. I swere by my selfe: oute of my mouth commeth the worde of righteousnesse, and that may no man tourne: but all knees shall bowe vnto me, and all tunges shall sweare

by me, sayinge: Verely in the Lorde is my ryghteousnesse and strengthe. To hym shall men come: but all they that dyenke scorne of hym shall be confounded, and the hole sede of Israell shall be iustified and praysed in the Lorde.

¶ Idolatrye is reproued. The helth that commeth of Christe is prophecyed.

CAPI. XLVI.

NEuertheles Bell shall fall, and Nabo
shalbe broken, whose ymages are a bur
then for the beastes and catteell to vnder take them, and to make them werye. They shal synke downe, and fall together, for they may not ease them of theyr burthen, therfore must they go in to captiuitie.

Harken vnto me, O house of Jacob, and all ye that remayne yet of the household of Israel, whome I haue borne from youre mo thers wombe, and brought you vp from your byrthe, tyll ye were growen: I whyche shall beare you vnto your laste age: I haue made you, I wyl also nourysshe you, beare you and saue you. Whome wyll ye make me lyke in fascyon or ymage, that I maye be lyke hym?
Ye rosiers (no doubte) wyll take oute syluer
and golde oute of youre purses, and weye it,
and hyre a goldesmyth to make a God of it,
that men maye kneele downe and worshyp it.
Yet must he be taken on mennes shoulders and borne, and set in his place, that he maye stande and not move. Alas that men shoulde crye vnto him whyche gyueth no answere: &
deliuereth not the man that calleth vpō him
from his trouble.

Consyder this well and be ashamed. Go in to youre owne selues (O ye transgressors.)
Remembre the thynges whyche are past sence
the begynnynge of the worlde: that I am God, and that there is elles no God, yea and that there is nothynge lyke vnto me. In the begynnynge of a thyng, I shewe the ende thereof: and I tell before, thynges that are not yet come to passe. Myne owne counsel my dearyste accomplysshed, and fulfilleth all my pleasure. I cal a byrde out of the East, and all that I take in hande, oute of farre coun
treys, as soone as I commaunde, I brynge it hyther: as sone as I thynke to doo it, a thyng
I do it.

Heare me, O ye that are of an hye sto macke, but farre from ryghteousnesse, I shall brynge forth my ryghteousnesse. It is not far,
and my helpe shall not tarye longe awaye.
I wyll laye helpe in Sion, and gyue Israel
my glorye.

¶ The woorde of the Lorde agaynst Babilon.

CAPI. XLVII.

BUt as for the (O doughter, thou vir gin Babylon.) Thou shalte sytte in the ould, thou shalt sytte vpō the ground, and not in a throne (O thou mayden of Chaldea) Thou shalte no more be called tender and pleasaunte. Thou shalte bynde to the the querne and grynde meele, put downe thy kombrebe, make bare thy knees, and shalte wade throughe the waters ryuers. Thy shame shall be discouered, and thy punyshyng shall be sene. For I wyll auenge me of the, and no man shall let me, sayeth our redemer, whiche is called the Lorde of hoostes, the holye one of Israel.

Sytt styll, holde thy tonge, and get the in to some darcke corner, O doughter Chal
dea, for thou shalte be no more called ladye of kyngdomes. I was so wrothe with my people, that I pulyshed myne inheritaunce, and gaue them in to thy power. Neuertheles thou shewedest them no mercye, but euen the very aged men of them hast thou oppressed ryght sore with your yoke, and thou thoughtest thus: I shall be ladye for euer.
And beside all that, thou hast not regarded these thynges, neyther cast what shalde come after. Heare nowe therfore thou wylfull, that sattest so carelesse, and speakest thus in thyne herte: I am alone, and without me there none: I shall neuer be wydowe, nor be solate agayne. And yet bothe these tokayne shal come to the vpon one daye, in the twin klynge of an eye: namely wydowehed and desolacion.

They shall myghtyly fall vpon the for the multitude of thy wyckednes, and for the great heape of thy coniurers. For thou hast confyd ded thy selfe in thy wickednesse, and hast sayde: No man seeth me. Thyne owne wy dome and connynge hathe deceyued the. In that thou hast sayd: I am alone, and without me there is none. Therfore shal trouble come vpon the, and thou shalte not knowe from whence it shal aryse. Mischefe shal fal vpon the, whiche thou shalt not be able to put of.
A sodeyn myserye shall come vpon the, of the thou be aware.

Nowe goo to thy coniurers, and to the multytude of thy wytches (whome thou hast ben acquynted withall from thy youthe) yf they maye helpe the, or strengthen the. Thou hast hytherto hadde many counsellers of them: se lette the deuengasers, and the be holders of sterres come on nowe and helpe
the: yea and let them shewe when thise newe thynges shall come vpon the. Behalde they shall be lyke strawe, whiche yf it be kyndled with fyre, no man maye vnder stande no spendere to warme a man by, ne clere fyre to sytt by. Euen so shall they be vn to the, whome thou hast vsed and occupyed from thy youthe. Euerye one shall drawe for his erroneous waye, yet shall none of them deliuer the.

¶ The hypocrysye of the Jewes is reproued. The Lorde alone worthy to be worshipped, whiche is sene by, and which foreseeth vs for the tyme to

CAPI. XLVIII.

HEare this, O thou house of Jacob, ye that are called by the name of Israell,
and are come out of one flocke with Ju da, which sweare by the name of the Lorde, and make mencyon of the God of Israel (but not with trouth and ryght) whiche are called of men of the holy cyte, as they that loke for comforte in the God of Israell, whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes.

The thinges that I shewed you euer sence the begynnyng. Yea I not brought them to passe, immediatlye as they came out of my mouthe, & declared them? And they are come.
Nowbeit I knewe that thou arte obstynate, and that thyne necke hath an yron veyne, and that thy browe is of brasse. Neuertheles I haue euer sence the begynning shewed the of thinges for to come, and declared them vnto
the, or euer they came to passe, that thou shal not saye: myne Idoll hathe done it, my carued or calle ymage hath shewed it. Heare and consydre all these thynges whether it was not that prophecyed them: But as for me, I shewe the before of the begynnynge, newe and straunge thinges, that thou knewest not of. And were done nowe not of olde tyme, whereof thou neuer herdest, before they were brought to passe, that thou canst not saye: I knewe of them. Moreouer there be some wyttes vpon the, that eyther herde not nowe, neyther haue
they ben opened vnto thyne eares afore tyme.
For I knewe that thou wouldest maliciously
offende, therfore haue I called the a trans
gressour, euen from thy mothers wombe.

Neuertheles for my names sake, I haue dyssawed my wrath, and for myne honours sake I haue ouersene the, so that I haue not rooted the out. Beholde, I haue pourged the,
and not for money. I haue chosen the in the fyr of pouerte. And that only for myne owne sake, for I gene myne honoure to none other, that thou shalte not despyse me. Harken vn to me O Jacob, and Israell whome I haue called. I am euen he that is, I am the fyrste and the last. My hande is the foundacion of the earth, and my ryght hande spanneth ouer the heauens. As soone as I called them they were there. Gather you all together, and her ken: Whyche of yonder goddes hath declared this, that the Lorde wyll do by the kynge of Babylon (whome he loueth and fauoureth) and by the Caldees his arme? I my self alone haue tolde you this before. Yea I shall call hym, and brynge hym forth, and gene hym a prosperous iourneye. Come nye, and heare this: haue I spoken any thynge darkly sence
the begynnyng: when a thynge begynneth, I am there.

Wherfore the Lorde God with his spirite hath sent me. And thus sayeth the Lorde God thyne auenger, the holy one of Israell: I am the Lorde thy God, which teache the profita ble thynges, and leade the the way, that thou shalest go. If thou wylte nowe regarde my commaundements, thy welthynes shall be as the waters streame, & thy aduersaries as the drops & wynne in the see. Thy sede shall be lyke as the sande in the see, and the frute of thy body, lyke the grauell stones therof. Thy name shall not be rooted out, nor destroyed be fore me. Ye shall go awaye from Babylon, and escape the Caldees with a merye voyce.
This shalbe spoken of, declared abrode, and go forth vnto the ende of the worlde, for that is shalbe sayde: The Lorde hath deliuered his seruaunte Jacob, that they suffred no thurst, Exod.xvii.b
when they trauayled in the wyldernesse. He Numer.xx.b
clane the roches a sunder, and the water gus Esaye.lviii.b shed oute. As for the vngodlye, they haue no peace, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ Christe shall gather to gether all nations be they neuer so farre o..

CAPI. XLIX.

YE Iles, herken vnto me, and take hede ye people from farre. The Lorde hath called me fro my byrth, and made men cyon of my name fro my mothers wombe, he hath made my mouth lyke a sharpe swearde, vnder the shadowe of his hande hathe he de fended me, & vpō me in his quyuer, as a good arowe, and sayde vnto me: Thou art my ser uaunte Israell, I wylde honoured in the. The Esaye.li.a answered I: I shall lese my labour, I shall spende my strength in vayne. Neuertheles, I wyll committe my cause and my worke vnto
the Lorde my God. And nowe sayeth the Lorde: b euen he that fashyoned me fro my mothers
wombe to be his seruaunte, that I may bryng
Jacob agayne vnto hym, howbeit, Israel wyl not be gathered vnto hym agayne. In whose syght I am greate, whereof also is my Lorde, my God, & my strength. Let it be but a small thinge, that thou arte my seruaunte, to set vp the kynredes of Jacob, and to restore the de struction of Israel, yf I make the not also the lyght of the Gentyles, that thou mayest be Esaye.xlii.b
my health vnto the ende of the worlde. Actu.xiii.g

Moreouer thus sayeth the Lorde the auen c gere and holy one of Israell, because of the ab
horryng & despysyng amonge the Gentyles, concernyng ‡ seruaunte of all them that beare rule. Kynges and Prynces shall se, and aryse and worshyp, because of the Lorde that he is fayethfull, and because of the holy one of Is rael, whiche hath chosen the.

And thus sayth the Lorde: *In the tyme *xli.Cant.b.a appoynted wyll I be present with the. *And Jeremye.xv.a in the houre of health wyll I helpe the, and *Esay.xlvi.a defyuer the. I wyll make the a pledge for the people, to that thou shalt vpryse vp the earth ageyne, and chalenge agayne the scatred he ritages. That thou mayest saye to the pryson ners: go forth, and to them that are in darke nesse: come into the lyght, that they may fede
in the hye wayes, and get their fyrynge in all places. There shal neyther hunger nor thurst, heate nor sunne hurte them. For he that fa youreth them, shall leade them, I gene them Iper.a.bu.b drynke of the sprynge welles. I wyll make wayes vpon all my mountaynes, and my vile d pathes shalbe exalted. And beholde, they shall come from farre: lo, some from the North and Weste, some from the Southe. *Reioyse ye Esaye.xxxv.a heauens,

heauens, and synge prayse thou earthe. Take ouer ye hylles, for God wyll comforte his people, and haue mercye vpon his, that be in trouble.

Then shal Syon saye: God hath forsake me, and the Lorde hath forgotten me. Doth a wyfe forget the chylde of hyr wombe, and the sonne whom she hath borne? And though she do forget, yet wyll not I forget the. Beholde, I haue written the vpon my handes, thy walles are euer in my syghte. They that haue broken the downe, shall make haste to build the vp agayne, and they that made the waste, shall dwell in the. Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke about the, all these shall gather them togethere, and come to the. As truely as I lyue (sayth the Lorde) thou shalt put them al vpō the, as an apparell, and gyrde them to the, as a bryde with her Jewels. As for thy land that lyeth desolate, wasted and destroyed, it shalbe to narowe for them, that shall dwell in it. And they that would deuoure the, shalbe farre awaye. Then the chylde whom the baren shall bring forth vnto the, shall saye in thyne eares: this place is to narowe, sit nye together, that I may haue rowme. Then shalt thou speake by thy selfe: Who hathe begotten me these? seinge I am baren and alone, a captyue and an outcaste. And who hath norysshed them vp for me? I am desolate and alone, but frome whence come these?

And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll stretch aume myne handes to the Gentyles, and set vp my token to the people. They shall bryng the thy sonnes in theyr lappes, and carye thy daughters vnto the vpō theyr shoulders. For kynges shalbe thy norysshynge fathers, and Quenes shalbe thy norysshyng mothers. They shal fall before the with theyr faces flat vpon the earthe, and lycke vp the dust of thy fete, that thou mayest knowe, howe that I am the Lorde. *And who so put eth his truste in me, shal not be confounded. Who spoyleth the gyaunte of his praye? or who taketh the prisonne frome the myghtye? And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: The prisoners shalbe taken from the gyaunte, & the spoyle delyuered from the violent, for I wyl maynteyne thy cause agaynst thyne aduersaryes, & saue thy sonnes. And wyll fede thyne enemyes with theyr owne fleshe, and make them dronk of theyr owne bloud, as of swete wyne. And all fleshe shall knowe (O Jacob) that I am the Lorde thy Sauyoure, & strong aumyger.

¶ The Jewes are reproued, and also called.

CAPI. L.

THus sayth the Lorde: Where is the byll of youre mothers denorcement, that I sent vnto her, or who is the dettor, to whome I solde you? Beholde, for your owne offences are ye solde, & because of youre transgression is youre mother forsaken. For why whose no man receyue me, when I came? and when I called, no man gaue me an answere. Was my hand clene smyten of, that it might not helpe? or had I not power to deliuer it, at a worde I dyrye vp the see, and of warm floudes I make dry lande, so that for want of water, the fysh corrupte and dye of thurst. As for heauen, I clothe it with darknesse, and put a sack vpon it.

The Lorde God hath geuen me a wel learned tunge, so that I can comfort them which are troubled, yea and that in due season. He waketh myne eare vp by tymes in the mornynge (as the scolemaisters do) that I myght herken. The Lorde God hath opened myne eare, therfore can I not saye nay, nor withdrawe my selfe, but I offre my backe vnto the smyters, and my cheekes to the nippers. I hyde not my face from shame and spittyng, for the Lorde God helpeth me, therfore shall I not be confounded. I haue hardened my face lyke a flynte stone, for I am sure, that I shall not come to confusion. Myne aduocate speaketh for me, who wyll then go with me to lawe? Let vs stande one agaynste another, yf there be any that wyl reason with me, let him come here forthe to me. Beholde, the Lorde God standeth by me, what is he that can condemne me? lo, they shalbe all lyke as an olde cloth, which the mothes shall eate vp.

Therfore who so feareth the Lord among you, let him heare the voyce of his seruaunt. Who so walketh in darknesse, and no light shyneth vpon him, let him hope in the Lord, and holde him by his God. But take hede, ye haue all kyndled a fyre, and gerded your selues with the flame. Ye walke in the light of your owne fyre, and in the flame that ye haue kyndled. This cometh vnto you fro my handes, namelye that ye shall lye in sorowe.

¶ Consolacion and comforte is promysed vnto the faythfull

CAPI. LI.

HErken vnto me, ye that holde of righteousnes, ye that seke the Lorde. Take hede vnto the stone, whereout ye are hewen, and to the graue whereout ye are digged. Consyder Abraham your father, and Sara that bare you, howe that I called him alone, prospered him wel, and encreased him, howe the Lorde comforted Syon, and repayred all her decaye, making her desert as paradyse, and her wyldernesse as the garden of the Lorde. Myrth and ioye was there, thankesgeuynge and the voyce of prayse. Harken vnto me then, O my people, and laye thyne eare to me, for a lawe shall go forth from me, & I shall set my iudgement for a light of the Gentyles. Anone, that my righteousnesse shall go forthe, and my saluacion shall be shewed with myne arme.

The Iles (that is the Gentyles) shall hope in me, and put their trust in myne arme. Lyft vp your eyes towarde heauen, and looke vpon the earth beneth. For the heauens shall vanysh awaye lyke smoke, and the earth shall waxe lyke a clothe, & they that dwell therin, shall perysshe in lyke maner. But my healthe endureth for euer, and my righteousnes shall not fayle. Therfore herken vnto me, ye that haue pleasure in righteousnes, thou people that beareth my lawe in thyne herte. Feare not the taunte of men, be not afrayde of their blasphemyes and reuylynges, for wormes and mothes shall eate them vp lyke cloth & wooll. But my righteousnesse shall endure for euer, and my sauynge healthe frome generacion to generacion. Wake vp, wake vp, and be strōg, O thou arme of the Lorde, wake vp, lyke as in tymes paste, euer and euer the worlde begonne.

Art not thou he, that hast wounded that proude Lucifer, and hewen the dragon in peces? Art not thou euen he, whiche hast dryed vp the deepe of the see? which hast made playn the grounde, that the deliuered myght go ouer? That the redemed of the Lorde, which turned agayne, myght come with ioye into Syon, there to endure for euer? That mirthe and gladnesse myght be with them, & sorowe and wo myght flie frome them? For I, I am euen he, that in all thynges geue you consolacion. What arte thou then, that feareste a mortall man, the chylde of mā, which goeth awaye as doeth the floure? And forgettest the Lord that made the, that spred out the heauens, and layde the foundacion of the earthe. But thou arte euer afrayde for the wyght of thyne oppressoure, which is ready to do harme. Where is the wrathe of the oppressoure? It commeth on fast, it maketh hast to appeare. It shall not perysh, that it hath not be able to destroye, neyther shall it fayle for lacke of nourysshynge. I am the Lorde thy God, that make the see to be styll, and rage, whose name is the Lorde of hoastes. I shall put my worde also in thy mouth, and defende the with the couerynge of my hande, that thou mayest plante the heauens, and laye the foundacions of the earthe, and saye vnto Syon: thou arte my people.

Awake, awake, and stande vp, O Jerusalē, stonde vp from the hande of the Lorde that hast dronken oute the cuppe of his wrathe, thou that hast supped of, and sucked oute the dronkynge cuppe to the bottome. For amonge all the sonnes whome thou hast begotten, there is not one that maye holde the vp, & not one to leade the by the hande, of all the sonnes that thou hast norysshed. Borde these thynges are happened vnto the, but who is sorye for the? Destruction, wastyng, hunger, & swearde, but who hath cōforted the? Thy sonnes lye consumed at the heade of euery streete, lyke a taken bryrdon, and are full of the terrible wrath of the Lorde, and punyshmente of thy God. And therfore thou miserable and dronken (howbe it not with wyne.) Heare this: Thus sayth the Lorde: thy Lorde and God, thy defender of his people: Beholde, I wyll take the dronkynge cuppe out of thy hande, euen the cuppe with the dregges of my wrath, that frome hence forth thou shalt neuer drynke more, and wyll putte it in theyr hande that trouble the, whiche haue spoken to thy soule: stoupe downe, that we maye go ouer the, make thy body euen with the grounde, and as the strete to go vpon.

¶ Consolacion and comforte to the people of God.

CAPI. LII.

VP vp, vp, take thy strength vnto the, put on thyne honest rayment, O Jerusalem, thou cyte of the holye one. For from this tyme forth, there shall no vncircumcysed nor vncleane person come in the. Shake the from the dust, aryse, and stande vp, O Jerusalem. Plucke out thy necke fro the bonde, O thou captyue daughter Syon. For thus sayth the Lorde: ye are solde for nought, therfore shall ye be redemed also without any money.

For thus hath the Lorde sayde: My people went downe afore tyme in to Egypte, there to be straungers. Afterwarde dyd the kyng of the Assyrians oppresse them, for naught. And nowe what profyte is it to me (sayth the Lord) that my people is freely caryed awaye, and brought in to bondage by their rulers, & my name euer styll blasphemed? sayth the Lorde. But that my people maye knowe my name, I my selfe wyll speake in that daye. Behold, here am I. O howe beautyfull are the fete of the Embassadour, that bryngeth the message from the mountayne, and proclaymeth peace, that bryngeth the good tydynges, and proclameth health, and sayth vnto Syon: Thy God is the kynge. Thy watchmen shall lyfte vp their voyce, with loude voyce shall they preach of hym for they shall se hym present, when the Lorde shall come agayne to Syon.

Be glad, O thou desolate Jerusalem, and reioyce together, for the Lorde wyll comforte his people, he wyll deliuer Jerusalem. The Lorde wyll make bare his holy arme, & shew it forth in the syght of all the Gentyles, and all the endes of the earth shall se the sauynge healthe of oure God. Away, away, get you out from thence, and touch no vncleane thyng. Go oute frome amonge suche. And be cleane, ye that beare the vessell of the Lorde. But ye shall not go out with sedition, nor make haste as they that fle awaye, for the Lorde shal go before you, and the God of Israel shall kepe the watch.

Beholde, my seruaunt shall deale wyselye, therfore shall he be magnifyed, exalted, and greatly honoured. Lyke as the multitude shal wonder vpon hym, because his face shalbe so deformed, and not as a mans face, and his bewte lyke no mans. Euen so shall he make nacions of the Gentyles lyke vnto hym, and the kynges shall shut their mouthes before him. For they that haue not bene tolde of hym, shall se hym, and they that herde nothyng of hym, shall beholde hym.

CAPI. LIII.

A *Who geueth credence vnto oure preachynge? Or to whome is the arme of the Lorde knowen? He shall growe before the Lord lyke as a braunch, & as a rote in a drye ground, he shall haue neyther beawte nor fauoure. When we loke vpon hym, there shalbe no fayrnesse, we shall haue no lust vnto hym. He shalbe the most symple, and despysed of all, whiche yet hath good experience of sorowes and infirmities. We shall reken hym so symple and so vyle, that we shall hyde oure faces from hym. Now be it (of a trouth) he only taketh awaye oure infirmitie, and beareth oure payne. Yet we shall iudge hym, as though he were plaged & cast downe of God, where as he (notwithstandyng) shalbe wounded for oure offences, and smytten for oure wyckednes. For the payne of our punyshmēt shalbe layde vpon hym, and with his stryppes shall we be healed.

*Romā.x.c Iohan.xii.f

Marke.ix.b

B As for vs, we go all astraye (lyke sheepe) euery one turneth his awne waye. But the lorde hym, the Lorde pardoneth all oure synnes. He shalbe payned and troubled, and shall not open his mouth. He shalbe ledde a sheepe to be slayne, yet shal he be as styll as a lambe before the shearer, and not open his mouthe. He shall be had awaye, his cause not herde, and without any iudgement. Whose generacion yet noman maye nombre, when he shalbe cut of from the ground of the lyuyng. Which punyshment shall go vpon hym, for the transgression of my people. His graue shalbe geuen hym with the condemned, and his crucyfyenge with the theues. Where as he dyd neuer violence nor vnryght, neyther hath there bene any deceatfulnesse in his mouth.

C Matth.xiii.c 1.Petri.ii.d Apoc.v.b

D Yet hath it pleased the Lorde to smyte him with infirmite, that when he had made his soule an offrynge for synne, he myght se long lastynge sede. And this deuyce of the Lorde shall prospere in his hande. With trauayle & laboure of his soule, shall he obtayne greate ryches. My ryghtous seruaūt shall with his wysdome iustifye and deliuer the multitude, for he shall beare awaye theyr synnes. Therefore wyll I geue hym the multitude for his parte, and he shall deuyde the stronge spoyle, because he shall geue ouer his soule to death, & shalbe rekened amonge the transgressours, whiche neuertheles shall take awaye the synnes of the multitude, and make intercession of the mysdoers.

*Marc.xv.c Luc.xxii.d

¶ Of the great dominyon of Chryst. The indignacion of God endureth but a short space, but his mercye is euerlastynge.

CAPI. LIIII.

A Therfore be glad now, thou baren that bearest not, Reioyce, synge and be merry, thou that art not with chylde. For the desolate hath moo chyldren, then the mayed wyfe, sayth the Lorde. Make thy tente wyder, and sprede out the hangynges of thyne habitacion, spare not, laye forth thy cordes, & make fast thy stakes, for thou shalt breake out on the ryght syde and on the lefte, thy sede shall haue the Gentyles in possession, & dwell in the desolate cyties. Feare not, for thou shalt not be confounded. Be not ashamed, for thou halte not come to confusion. Yea thou shalt forget the shame of thy youth and shalt not remembre the dishonour of thy wedowhead. For he that made the, shalbe thy Lorde and husbande, (whose name is the Lorde of hostes,) and thyne auenger shall be euen the holy one of Israell, the Lorde of the hole worlde. For the Lorde shall call the, beynge as a desolate sorowfull woman, and as a yonge wyfe that hathe broken her wedlocke, sayth thy God.

Galath.iiii.d Luke.xxiii.d

B A lytle whyle haue I forsake the, but with greate mercyfulnes shall I take the by vnto me. When I was angry, I hyd my face from the for a lytle season, but thorow euerlastyng goodnes shall I pardon the, sayth the Lorde thyne auenger. * And this muste be vnto me, as † water of Noe, for lyke as I haue sworne that I wyll not bynge the water of Noe any more vpon the worlde, so haue I sworne that I wyll neuer be angry with the, nor rebuke the. The mountaynes shall remoue, and the hylles shall fall downe, but my louyng kyndnesse shall not moue, & the bonde of my peace shal not fall downe from the, sayth the Lorde thy mercyfull louer. Beholde thou poore, troubled, and despysed. I wyll make thy walles of precyous stones, and thy foundacion of Saphyres, thy wyndowes of Chrystall, thy gates of fyne cleare stone, and thy borders of pleasaūt stones. * Thy chyldren shall all be taught of God, and I wyll geue them plentyousnes of peace. In ryghtousnes shalte thou be grounded, & be farre from oppression, for thou nedest not be afrayed, neyther for terrour, for it shall not come nye the. Beholde, the aleaunte that was farre from the, shall dwell with the, and he that was sometyme a straunger vnto the, shalbe ioyned with the. Beholde, I make the smyth that bloweth the coles in the fyre, and he maketh a weapon after his handy worke. I make also the waster to destroye, but all the weapons that are made agaynste the, shall not prospere. And as for all tunges, that shall resiste the in iudgement, thou shalte ouercome them and condemne them. This is the heritage of the Lordes seruaūtes, & the ryghtousnes that they shall haue of me, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Consolacion and comforte to the people. Of fruite and profyt of the worde of God.

CAPI. LV.

C Come to the waters all ye that be thirsty, and ye that haue no money. Come hyther, that ye maye haue to eate. Come, hyre wyne and mylke, without any money, & money worth. Wherfore do ye laye out your money, for the thynge that feedeth not, and spende youre labour aboute the thynge that satisfyeth you not? But hearken rather vnto me, and ye shall eate of the beste, and youre soule shall haue her pleasure in plentousnes. Encline your eares, and come vnto me, take hyde, and youre soule shall lyue. For I wyll make an euerlastynge couenaunte with you, euen the sure mercyes of David.

Beholde, I shall geue hym for a wytnesse among the folke, for a Prynce and Capitayne vnto the people. Lo, thou shalte call an vnknowen people, and a people that hadde no knowlege of the, shall runne vnto the, because of the Lorde thy God, the holy one of Israell, which glorifyeth the. Seke the Lord, while he maye be founde, and call vpon hym while he is nye. Let the vngodlye man forsake his wayes, and the vnryghtous his ymaginacions, and turne agayne vnto the Lorde, & shall he be mercyfull vnto hym and to our God, for he is ready to forgyue. For thus sayth the Lorde: my thoughtes are not youre thoughtes, & youre wayes are not my wayes, but as farre as the heauens are hyer then the earth, so farre do my wayes exceade youre, & my thoughtes yours. And lyke as the rayne and snow commeth downe from heauen, and returneth not thyther agayne, but watereth the earth, maketh it frutefull, and grene, that it maye geue corne and bread vnto the sower. So the worde also that commeth oute of my mouth shal not turne agayne vnto me, but shall accomplyth my wyll and prospere in the thynge, wherto I sende it. And ye shall departe forthe with ioye, and be led with peace. The mountaynes and hylles shall synge with ioye for ioye, and all the trees of the felde shall clappe theyr handes. For thornes, there shall growe fyrre trees, and the Myrre tree in the stede of bryers. And this shall be done to the prayse of the Lorde, and for an euerlastynge token, that shall not be taken awaye.

¶ An exhortacion to iudgement and rightousnesse, and to the spirituall keping of the Sabboth. Against Shepherdes that deuoure theyr flocke.

CAPI. LVI.

1 Thus sayth the Lorde: Kepe equite, and do ryght, for my sauynge healthe shall come shortly, and my ryghtousnes shall be opened. Blessed is the man that doth this, and the mans chylde which keepeth the same. Be that taketh hede, that he vnhalowe not the Sabboth, (that is) be that keepeth hym selfe that he do no euell. Then shall not the straunger, which cleaueth to the Lorde, saye: Alas, the Lord hath shut me cleane out from his people. Neyther shall the gelded mā saye: Lo, I am a drye tree. For thus sayth the Lorde, vnto † gelded that keepeth my Sabboth: Namely, that holdeth greatly of the thynge that pleaseth me, and keepeth my couenaunte. Vnto them wyll I geue in my house and within my walles, a better heritage & name then if they had bene called sonnes & doughters. I wyll geue them an euerlastynge name, that shall not perysshe. Agayne, he sayth vnto the straungers that are disposed to hyche to the Lorde, to serue hym, and to loue his name. That they shalbe his seruaūtes, euery one that kepeth the Sabboth, namely, that they hallowe not the Sabboth, namely, that they fulfyll my couenaunte. Them wyll I bringe to my holy mountayne, and make them ioyfull in my house of prayer. Their burnte offrynges and sacrifices shall be accepted vpon myne aulter, for my house shall be called house of prayer for all people.

Matthei.b Marcus Luce.xix.b

D Thus sayth the Lorde God which gathereth together the scatered of Israell. I wyll bynge yet another congregacion to hym. All the beastes of the felde, and all the beastes of the wood, shall come to deuoure hym. For his watchemen are all blynde, they haue all vnderstanding, they are all domme dogges, not beynge able to barcke, they are sleepye, sloggysh are they, and lye inwardynge, they are shamelesse dogges, that be neuer satisfyed. The shepherdes also in lyke maner haue no vnderstandynge, but euery man turneth his owne way, euery one after his owne couetousnes with all his power. Come (sayd they) I wyll fetch wyne, so shall we fyll our selues, that we maye be dronken. And to morowe, lyke as to daye, yea † moch more.

¶ The Iewes are rebuked for theyr euyll doynge to Chryst.

CAPI. LVII.

A But in the meane season the ryghtous perysheth, and no man regardeth it in his herte. Good godly people are taken awaye, and no man considereth it. Namelye, that the ryghtous is couered awaye for sorow the wycked, that he vpon selfe myghte be in rest, lye quyetly vpon his bed, and lyue after his owne pleasure. Come hyther therfore ye charmers chyldren, * ye sonnes of the aduoutrer and the whore. Wherin take ye youre pleasure? Vpon whom gape ye with your mouth, and bleare out youre tonge? Are ye not chyldren of aduoutry, and a sede of dissimulatiō? Ye take your pleasure vnder the okes, and vnder all grene trees, the chylde bynge slayne in the valleys and denues of stone. Your part shalbe with the stony rockes by the ryuer. Yea euen these shall be thy parte. For vnto them hast poured meate and drynkoffrynges vnto them. Shulde I ouerse that? Thou hast made thy bed vpon hye mountaynes, thou wentest vp thyther, and there haste thou slayne sacrifices. Behynde the dores and postes, hast thou set vp thy remembraunce.

* Math.xiii.d

B When thou haddest discouered thy selfe to another then me, when thou wentest downe and made thy bed wyder (that is) when thou hyredest earne the certayne of yonder Idols, and louedest theyr couches, where thou sawest them. Thou wentest strayght to kynges with oyle and dyuerse oyntmentes, (that is) thou hast sente thy messengers farre of, and yet art thou fallen into the pyt therby. Thou hast had trouble for the multitude of thyne owne wayes, yet sayedest thou neuer: I wyll leaue of. Thou thynkest to haue lyfe (or health) wealth) of thy selfe, and therfore thou beleuest not that thou arte sycke. For when wylt thou be abashed or feare, seyng thou hast broken thy promyse, and remembrest not me, nether hast me in thyne herte? Thynkest thou, that I also wyll holde my peace, (as afore tyme) that thou feares me not? Yea verely I wyll declare thy goodnes and thy workes, but they shall not profyte the when thou cryest, let thy chosen heape helpe the. But the wynd shall take them all awaye, and carye them in to the ayre. Neuertheles, they that put their trust in me, shall inherete the lande, and haue my holy hyll in possession.

And therfore thus he sayethe: Make ready, make ready, and caste the strete, take vp what so euer oute of the waye that leadeth to my people. For thus sayeth the hye and excellent, euen he that dwelleth in euerlastyngnesse, whose name is the holye one. * I dwell hye above and in the Sanctuary, and with hym also, that is of a contrite and humble spirite, that I maye reuyue the spirite of the humble, and the herte of the contrite. For I chyde not euer, and am not wroth without ende. But the blastynge goeth fro me, thoughe I make the breath. I am wroth with hym for his couetousnes and lust, I smyte hym, I hyde me, and am angry, when he turneth him selfe, and followeth the lewde waye of his owne herte. But yf I maye se his ryght waye agayne, I make hym whole, I lede hym and restore hym vnto them whome he maketh hopfull, & that were sory for hym. I make the frutes of thankesgeuynge. I geue peace vnto them that are farre of, & to them that are nye, saye I the Lord, that make him whole. But the wycked are lyke the ragynge see, that can not rest, whose water fometh with the myre & grauell. Euen so the wycked haue no peace, sayeth my God.

Jeremy.xiii.a

And therfore crye nowe, as loude as thou canst. Leaue not of, lyfte vp thy voyce lyke a trumpet, and shewe my people their offences, and the house of Jacob their synnes. For they seke me daply & wyll knowe my wayes, euen as it were a people that dyd ryght, and had not forsaken the statutes of their God. They argue with me ouernyght iudgement, and wyll pleate at the lawe with their God. Wherefore saye we (saye they) and thou seest it not? we put our lyues to vnrighteousnesse, and thou regardest it not.

Beholde, when ye fast, youre lust remayneth styll, for ye do no lesse violence to youre debtors, lo, ye fast to stryfe and debate, and to smyte hym with your fyste that speaketh vnto you. Ye fast not (as some tyme) that youre voyce myght be heard above. Thynk ye this fast pleaseth me, that a man shulde chasten hym selfe for a daye, and to wrythe his heade aboute lyke an hoke in an hearry clothe, & to lye vpon the earth? Shulde that be a fastynge, or a daye that pleaseth the Lorde? But this fastynge pleaseth not me, (syth ye) but be thou lose hym out of bondage, that is in thy daunger, that thou breake the rule of wycked bargaynes, that thou let the oppressed go fre, and take from them all maner of burthens. It pleaseth not me, (syth they) that thou deale thy bread to the hongry, and bryng the poore fatherlesse home into thy house, when thou seest the naked that thou couer hym, and hyde not thy face from thyne owne flesh.

Then shall thy lyght breake forthe as the morowtyde, and thy health florysh ryght hastely, thy righteousnesse shall go before the, and the glory of the Lorde shall embrace the.

Then yf thou callest, the Lorde shall answere the: yf thou cryest, he shall saye: Here I am. Yea yf thou layest awaye thy burthen, and holdest thy fyngers, and ceasest from blasphemous talkynge, yf thou hast compassion vpon the hongry, and refreshest the troubled soule. Then shall thy lyght spryng out in the darkenesse, and thy darkenesse shalbe as the none daye. The Lorde shal euer be thy gyde, and satisfye the desyre of thyne vnte, & fyll thy bones with marye. Thou shalt be lyke a fresh watred garde, and lyke the fountayne of waters, that neuer leaueth runnynge. And the places that haue euer bene waste, shalt thou buylde vp the, euen shalt thou laye a foundacion for many ages. Thou shalt be called the maker vp of hedges, and the restorer agayne of the waye of the Sabboth.

Yea ye thou turne thy fete from the Sabboth, so that thou do not the thynge that pleaseth the in my holy daye, then shalt thou be called vnto the pleasaunt, holy, and glorious Sabboth of the Lorde, wherin thou shalt be in honoure, so that thou do not after thyne owne imaginacion, nether seke thyne owne wyll, no, speake thyne owne wordes. Then shalt thou haue thy pleasure in the Lord which shall cary the aboue the earth, and fede the with the heritage of Jacob thy father, for the Lordes owne mouth hath so promysed.

¶ The Lorde is myghtye to saue, and redy to heare our requestes.

CAPI. LIX.

BEholde, the Lordes hande is not so shortened that it can not helpe, nether is his eare so stopped that it maye not heare. But youre mysdedes haue seperated you fro youre God, and your synnes hyde his face from you, that he heareth you not. For youre handes are defyled with bloude, & youre fyngers with vnrighteousnesse. Your lyppes speake leasynges, and your tonge fetched out wyckednes. No man regardeth righteousnes, and no man iudgeth truely. Euery man hopeth in vayne thynges, and ymagyneth deceyte, conceyueth wickednesse, and bryngeth forth euell. They hyde cockatrice egges, and weue the spyders webbe. Who so eateth of their egges, dyeth. But yf one treade vpon them, there cometh vp a serpent. Their web maketh no clothe and they maye not couer them with their labowres. Their dedes are the dedes of wyckednesse, and the worke of robbery is in their handes. Their fete runne to euil, and thy make haste to shed innocet blood. Their counsels are wycked counsels, harme and destruction are in their wayes. But the waye of peace they knowe not. In their goinges is no equite, their wayes are so croked that whosoeuer goeth therin, knoweth no thinge of peace.

And this is the cause that equite is so farre from vs, and that the righteousnesse cometh not nygh vs. We loke for lyght, lo, it is darkenesse: for the mornyng shyne, se, we walke in the darcke. We grope like the blynde vpon the wall, we grope euen as one that hathe none eyes. We stomble at the none day, as though it were towarde night: in the fatnesse places, lyke men that are halfe dede. We rore all lyke Beares, & mourne styll lyne Doues. We loke for equite, but there is none: for health, but it is farre fro vs. For our offences are many before the, and our sinnes testify against vs. Yea we muste confesse & knowleage the we offende & transgresse, and departe agaynste the Lorde, & talk away from our God: thynge presumptuous and traytorous imaginacions, & casting false matters in our heades. And therfore is equite gone abyde, & righteousnesse standeth farre off: truth is fallē downe in the strete, & the thing that is playne and open may not be shewed. Yea the truth is layde in prysō, & he that departeth from euel muste be spoyled.

When the Lorde sawe this, it displeased him sore, that there was no where ayne equite. He sawe also that there was no man, wherby bad myght be ouercome, or was greued at it. And he helde him by his owne power, and cleued to his owne righteousnesse. * He put righteousnesse vpon him for a brest plate, & set the helmete of healthe vpon his heade. He put on wrath in stede of clothing, & tooke gelousye about him for a cloke (lyke as when a man goeth forthe wrothfully to recompence his enemyes, & to be auenged of his aduersaryes) Namely, that he myght recompence & reward the Ilandes where thorow the name of the Lorde myght be feared, from the rysinge of the Sunne, and his magestye, vnto the goynge downe of the same.

For he shall come as a violent waterestreame, which the wynde of the Lorde hath moued. But vnto Sion there shall come a redemer, & vnto them in Jacob that turne from wickednes, sayeth the Lorde. I will make this couenaunte with them (sayeth the Lord) My spirite that is come vpon the, and the wordes which I haue put in thy mouthe, shall neuer go out of thy mouthe, nor out of the mouth of thy children, from this tyme forth for euermore.

¶ Consolation and comforte to Jerusalem.

CAPI. LX.

AND therfore gette the vp betymes, for thy lyght commeth, and the glorye of the Lorde shall ryse vp vpon the. For lo, whyle the darcknesse and cloude couereth the earthe and the people, the Lorde shall shewe the lyght, and his glory shal be seen in the. The Gentyles shal come to thy lyght, & kynges to the bryghtnes of thy rysynge. Lyft vp thyne eyes, & loke rounde about the. All these gather them selues, & come to the. Sonnes shall come vnto the from farre, and doughters shall gather them selues to the on euery syde. Whe thou seest this thou shalte marueyle exceadyngly, and thyne herte shalbe opened: when the power of the se shalbe conuerted vnto the (that is) when the strength of the Gentyles shal come vnto the. The multitude of Camels shal couer the, the dromedaries of Madian and Epha: all they of Saba shall come, bryngyng golde & incense, & shewing the prayse of the Lord. All the catel of Cedar shalbe gathered vnto the, the rammes of Nabaioth shall serue the, & be offred vpon mine aulter, which I haue chosen, and in the house of my glorye wyche I haue garnysshed. But what are these that flye here lyke the cloudes and as the Doues flyenge to their wyndowes?

Esaye.xxxv.d

The Iles also shall gather them vnto me, and specially the shyppes of the se: that they maye bringe the sonnes from farre, and their syluer and their golde with them, vnto the name of the Lorde thy God, vnto the holye one of Israel, that hath glorifyed the. Straūgers shall buylde vp thy walles, and their kynges shall do the seruice. For when I am angrye, I smyte the: when it pleaseth me, I pardon the. Thy gates shall stande open styll both daye and nyght, and neuer be shut: that the host of the Gentyles may come, and that their kynges may be brought vnto the. For euerye people and kingdome that serueth not the, shall perysshe, & be destroyed with the swerde. The glorye of Libanus shall come vnto the: The fyrre trees Boxes & Cedres together to garnysshe the place of my Sanctuary, for I will glorify the place of my fete.

Moreouer those shall come knelynge vnto the, that haue vexed the: & all they that despised the, shall fall downe at thy fote. Thou shalt be called the cyte of the Lorde, the holy Sion of Israel. Because thou hast ben forsaken and hated, so that no man wēt thorow the: I will make the glorious for euer and euer, and ioyful thorow out all posterities. Thou shalt suck the mylke of the Gentyles, and kynges breastes shal fede the. And thou shalt knowe that I the Lorde am thy sauiour and defender, the mighty one of Jacob. For brasse, will I gyue the golde, and for syluer I for wod brasse, and for stones yron. I will make peace thy ruler, and righteousnesse thyne offycer. Violence and robberye shall neuer be herde of in thy lande, nether harme and destruction within thy borders. Thy walles shall be called helthe, and thy gates the prayse of God.

Ipete.xxij.g. * The sonne shall neuer be thy daye lyght, & the lyght of the Moone shall neuer shyne vnto the: but the Lord him self shal be thine euerlastynge lyght, and thy God shall be thy glorye.

Ipete.xxij.b. * Thy sonne shal neuer go downe, and thy Moone shall not be taken awaye, for the Lorde him selfe shal be thy euerlastyng lyght and thy sorowfull dayes shall be rewarded the. Thy people shall be all godly, and possesse the lande for euer: the floure of my plantyng, the worke of my handes, wherof I wil reioyce. The youngest and leest shall growe into a thousand, and the symplest into a stroge people. I the Lorde shall hastly bringe this thynge to passe in his tyme.

¶ The Prophecyeth that Christe shalbe annoynted and sent to preach.

CAPI. LXI.

Luke.iiij.c. ¶ * The spirite of the Lorde God is with me, for the Lorde hath anoynted me, & sent me, to preache good tydynges vnto the poore, that I myght bynde vp the woũded hertes, that I myght preach deliueraũce to the captyue, and open the prison to them that are bounde: that I myght declare the acceptable yere of the Lord, and the day of vengeaunce of oure God: that I myght cõforte all them that are in peynefulnesse, that I myght geue vnto them that mourne in Sion beautye in the steade of asshes, ioyfull oyntment for lyghtnesse, pleasaunt rayment for an heuy mynde: That they myghte be called trees of excellent in rygtousnesse, a plantynge of the Lorde for him to reioyce in.

¶ They shall buylde the long roughe wyldernesse, and set vp the olde tyrest. They shal repayre the waste places, and suche as haue bene vorde tyme out of mynde. Straungers shall stande and feede youre cattell, and the Alleauntes shall be youre plowmen and reapers. But ye shall be named the prestes of the Lorde, and men shall call you the seruauntes of oure God. Ye shall enioye the goodes of the Gentyles, and reioyce in their substaunce. For your great reproche & shame, shal they haue ioye that ye may haue parte with them. For they shall haue double possessiõ in their land, and euerlastyng ioye shal be with them. For I the Lord, whiche loue ryght and hate robberye (though it were offred me, shall make their workes full of faythfulnes, and make an euerlastynge couenaunte with them.

Their sede also and their generation shalbe knowen among the Gentyles, and amõge the people. All they that se thẽ, shall knowe þ they are the vyrgyn blessed seed of the Lorde. And therfore I am ioyfull in the Lorde, and my soule reioyseth in my God. For he hath put vpon me the garment of helth, and couered me with the mantell of rygtousnesse. He shal decke me lyke a bridgrome, and as a bryde þ hath her apparell vpon her. For lyke as the ground bryngeth forth frute, and as the garden fruteth forth sede: So shall the Lorde God cause rightousnes, & the feare of God to florysshe forthe before all the heathen.

FOr Syons sake therfore wyll I not holde my tonge, and for Jerusalems sake I wyll not cease: vntyl their rightwisnes breake forth as the shynynge lyght, and their helthe as a burnynge lampe. Then shall the Gentyles se thy rightousnesse and all kinges thy glorye. Thou shalt be named with a newe name, which the mouth of þ Lord shal shew. Thou shalte be a crowne in the hande of the Lorde, and a glorious garlande in the hande of thy God. From this time forth thou shalt neuer be called þ forsaken, and thy lande shal no more be called þ wyldernesse. But þ shalte be called Hephzibah, & thy lande Beula: for the Lorde loueth the, & thy lande shalbe inhabited. And lyke as a yong mã taketh a daughter to marryage, so shall God marry him selfe vnto thy sonnes. And as a bridegrome is glad of his bryde, so shall God reioyse oure the.

I wil set watchmẽ vpon thy walles, O Jerusalem) whiche shall neither cease daye nor nyght to preache the Lorde. And ye also shall not kepe him close, nor leue to speake of him vntyll Jerusalem be set vp, & made the prayse of the worlde. The Lorde hath sworne by his ryght handes & by his strong arme, that from hẽce forthe he wyll not geue thy corne to be meat for thine enemyes, ne thy wyne which thou hast laboured, to be dronke for the straungers. But they that haue gathered it, shal eate it, & geue thankes to the Lord: and they that haue borne in the wyne, shall drinke it in the court of my Sanctuarye.

Stande backe, and departe a sunder, ye þ walke vnder the gate: make cõmon ye people repayre the strete, and take away the stones, & set out a token for the people. Beholde, the Lord proclaymeth in the endes of the worlde: tell the daughter of Sion: Se, thy saluation cometh: beholde, he bringeth his treasure with him, and his workes go before him. & they shall call them the holy people: the redemed of the Lorde: and as for the, thou shalt be named þ greatly occupyed, and not the forsaken.

CAPI. LXIII.

WHat is he this, that commeth from Edom, in stayned reade clothes of Bosra? (which is so costly cloth) & commeth so nymbly with his strength: I am he þ teacheth rightousnes & am of power to helpe. Wherfore then is thy clothing red, & thy rayment lyke his þ treadeth in þ wine presse? I haue troden downe the people in my wrathe, and bathed them in my displeasure: I am he that haue shedde their blouds vpon the earthe.

I wyll declare the goodnesse of the Lorde, yea and the prayse of the Lorde for all that he hath geuen vs, for the greate good that he hathe done for Israel: whiche he hath geuen them of his owne fauour, and according to the multytude of his louynge kyndnesses. For he sayde: These no doubte wyll be my people, and no chaungynge chyldren, and so he was their sauyoure. In their troubles he for sooke them not, but the angell that went before them from his presence deliuered them: Of very loue & kyndenesse that he had vnto Jacob, redemed he them. He hathe borne them, & caryed them vp euer sence the world began. But after they prouoked hym to wrathe and vexed his holy mind, ye was their enemy, & fought agaynste them him selfe. Yet remembred he þ olde tyme of Moses and his people: How he brought them frome the waters of the see, as a shepeherde doth with his shepe: how he had geuen his holy spirite amonge them: how he had led Moses by the righte hande with his glorious arme: how he had deuyded the water before them (whereby he gate him a lyke an euerlastynge name) howe he led them in the depe, as an horse is led in the playne, þ they shulde not stumble. The spirite of the Lorde led them, as a tame beaste goeth in the vale.

Thus, O God) hast thou led my people, to make thy selfe a glorious name with all. Loke downe then: frome heaven, and beholde the dwellynge place of thy sanctuarye and thy glorye. How is it, that thy gelousye, thy strength, the multytude of thy mercyes and thy louynge kyndnesse, wyl not be intreated of vs. Yet arte thou oure father: For Abraã knoweth vs not, neither is Israel acquaynted with vs. But thou Lorde art oure father and redemer, & thy name is euerlastynge. O Lord wherfore haste thou led vs out of thy waye? wherfore hast thou hardened oure hertes, that we feare the not? Ret at one with vs agayne, for thy seruauntes sake that are of the generation of thyne heritage. Thy people hathe had but lytle of thy Sanctuarye in possessiõ, for oure enemyes haue taken it in. And we are become euen as we were from the begynnynge: but thou arte not their Lorde, for they haue not called vpon thy name.

¶ The Prophete (vnder the person of the Jewes) complayneth their cryme and vnrighteousnesse. & shewes their punysshe is lyke a cloth dyed with the flowers of a woman.

CAPI. LXIIII.

O That thou woldest cleue the heuen in sondre, and come downe: that the mountaynes myght melte awaye at thy presence, lyke as at an hote fyre, & that the malicious myght burne, as the water doth vpon þ fyre: Whereby thy name myght be knowen amonge thyne enemyes, and that the Gentyles myght tremble before the. That þ myghtest come down vi thy wõderous straunge waykes, then shulde thy hylles melte at thy presence. For sence the begynnynge of the world there was none (excepte thou O God) that hearde or perceyued, * neither hathe any eye sene what thou oughe for them, that put their trust in the.

Thou helpest hym that doth ryghte with cherefulnesse, and them that thynke vpon thy wayes. But lo, thou arte angery, for we offend and haue bene cursed in synne, * and there is not one hole. We are all as an vncleane thynge, and all oure ryghtousnesses are as þ clothes stayned with the floures of a woman: we fall euerycone as the leafe, for oure synnes cary vs awaye lyke the wynde. There is no man that calleth vpon thy name, that stadeth vp to take holde by the. Therfore turnest thou thy face frome vs, and consumest vs, be cause of oure synnes.

But nowe O Lorde, thou father of oures: * we are the claye, and thou arte oure potter & we all are the worke of thy hand. & Be not so sore displeased (O Lord) and kepe not our offences to longe in thy remembraunce, but consyder that we al are thy people. The cities of thy Sanctuary are wast, Sion is a wyldernesse, and Jerusalem a desert. Our holy house whiche is oure beautye, where oure fathers praysed the, is vtterly vp: yea all our commodities and pleasures are wasted away. Wylt thou not be intreated (Lorde) for all this? Wylt thou hold thy peace, and scourge vs in sore?

¶ The felicytie of Jerusalem, and the callynge of the heathen.

CAPI. LXV.

¶ * They shal seke me, that hytherto haue not asked for me: they shall fynde me, that hytherto haue not sought me. The shall I say immediately to the people that were called vpon my name: I am here, I am here. For thus long haue I euer holden oute my handes to an vnfayethfull people, that go not the right way, but after their owne imaginations: Eo a people that is euer defying me to my face. * They make their oblations in gardens, and offer smoke vpon altares of bryche, they lurke among the graues and lye in the dênes all nyght. They eate swynysshly & vncleane broth is in their vessels. If thou commest nye them, they say: touch me not, for I am holyer then thou.

All these men when I am angry shall be turned to smoke and fyre, that shal burne for euer. Beholde it is wryten before my face, & shal not be forgotten, but recompensed. I shal

Esay.lvi.a. & Ecclesy.xx.d. rewarde it them in to theyr bosome: I mean youre myslædes, and the mislædes of youre father cogether (sayth the Lord) which haue made theyr smokes vpon the mountaynes, and blaspheamed me vpō the hylles: therfore wyll I measure theyr olde dedes in to theyr bosome agayne. Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde: lyke as when one wold gather holy grapes, men saye vnto him: breake it not of, for it is holy: euen so wyll I do also for my seruauntes sakes, that I wyll not destroy the all: But I wyll take a sede out of Jacob, and oute of Juda one, to take possession of my hil. My chosen shall possesse these thynges, and My seruauntes shall dwell there. Saron shal be a shepcotsde, and the valleye of Achor shal serue the shallynge for the catell of my people that seare me. ✠ But as for you, ye are they, that haue forsaken the Lorde, & forgotten my holy hyll. Ye haue set vp an aultare vnto fortune, and gyuen vnto drynckofferynges vnto treasure. Therfore wyll I nombre you with the swearde, that ye shall be destroyed all togyther. For when I called, no man gaue me answere: when I spake ye harkened not vnto me, but dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, & chose the thynge that pleased me not.

Esay.lvi.c. Jeremy.vii.c

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde my seruauntes shall eate, but ye shall haue honger. Beholde, my seruauntes shall drincke but ye shall suffre thurste. Beholde, my seruauntes shal be merye, but ye shal be confounded. Beholde, my seruauntes shall reioyse for ioye of herte, and complayne for vexation of mynde. Youre name shall not be sworne by amonge my chosen, for God the Lorde shall slaye you, and call his seruauntes by an other name. Who so reioyseth vpon earthe, shall reioyse in the true God. And who so sweareth vpon earth, shall swere in the true God. For the olde emnyte shal be forgotten, and taken away oute of my syght. For lo, I shall make a newe heauen, & a newe earthe. And as for the olde, they shall neuer be thoughte vpon, ne kepte in mynde: but men shall be glad and ouermoze reioyse, for the thynges that I shall do.

For why: Beholde, I shall make a ioyful Jerusalem, yea I my selfe will reioyse with Jerusalem, and be glad with my people: And the voyce of weepynge and waylynge shal not be herde in her from thence forth. There shal neuer be chylde ne olde man, that haue not theyr full dayes. But when the chylde commeth to an hundreth yeare olde, it shall dye. And yf he that is an hundreth yere of age do wronge, he shall be cursed. They shall buylde houses, and dwell in them: they shall plante vineyardes, and eate the frute of them. They shall not buylde, & another possesse. They shal not plāt & other eate: But lyke of my people shalbe the a tree, & so shall the worke of theyr handes.

Apoca.xxi.a.

My chosen shall lyue longe, they shall not labour in vayne, nor begette with trouble: for they are the hye blessed sede of the Lord, and theyr frutes with them. And it shall be, yt ere they call, I shall answere them. While they are yet but thynkynge howe to speake, I shal heare them. The Wolfe and the Lambe shall fede to gyther, and the Lyon shall eate hay lyke the bullocke. But earthe shall be serpentes meate. There shall no man hurt ne slaye an other, in all my holy hylle, sayth the Lorde.

Esay.lxv.a.

¶ God dwelleth not in temples, made by mannes hande: he despyseth sacrifyces done without mercy and fayth. God comforteth them that are troubled for his sake. Amonge the Lyuyng, the Sabboth is contynuall.

CAPI. LXVI.

THus sayethe the Lorde: Heauen is my seate, and the earthe is my foote stole. Where shall newe the house stande yt ye wyll buylde vnto me? And where shall be the place, yt I wil dwell in? As for these thynges, my hande hath made them all, and they are all created, sayth the Lorde. Whiche of them shal I then regarde? Euen him that is of a lowly troubled spirite, and tremdeth my awe of my wordes. For who so slayeth an ore for me, bothe me so greate dishonoure, as yf he killeth a man. He that killeth a shepe for me chooketh a dogge. He that bringeth me meate offringes, offereth swynes bloude: Who so maketh me a memoriall of incense, prayseth the thinge that is vnryghte. Yet take they such wayes in hande, and theyr soule delyteth in these abhominacions.

Esay.xlvi.a.

Therfore wyll I also haue pleasure I laughynge them to scorne, and the thynge that they feare, wyll I bring vpon them. For whē I called, no man gaue answere: whē I spake they wolde not heare: But dyd wyckednesse before myne eyes, and chose the thynges that displeasse me. Heere the worde of God all ye that feare the thing wherby he speaketh. Your brethren that hate you, and caste you oute for my names sake, saye Let the Lorde magnyfy him selfe, that we maye se youre gladnesse: & yet they shall be confounded.

Esay.lxv.b.

For as touchynge the cytie and the temple I heare the voyce of the Lorde, that wyll rewarde, and recompense his enemyes: like as when a wyfe bringeth forth a man childe, or euer she suffre the payne of the byrth and anguysshe of the trauayle. Who euer herde or sawe suche thynges? doth the grounde beare in one daye? Or are the people borne all at ones, as Syon beareth her sonnes? For thus sayethe the Lorde: Am I he that maketh other to beare, and bare not my selfe? Am not I he that beareth, and maketh barē? sayethe thy God. Reioyce with Jerusalem, and be gladde with her, all ye that loue her. Be ioyfull with her, all ye that mourned for her. For ye shall sucke comforte oute of her breastes, and be satisfied. Ye shall taste, & haue delyte in the plentyousnesse of her power. For thus sayeth the the Lorde: Beholde, I will let peace in to her, like a water floude, and the myght of the heathen like a flowyng streme.

Then

Then shall ye sucke, ye shall be borne vpon her sydes, and be toyfull vpon her knees. For lyke as a chylde is comforted of his mother, so shall I comforte you, and ye shalbe comforted in Jerusalem. And when ye se this, youre herte shall reioyse, and youre bones shall sayth lyke an herbe.

Thus shal the hand of the Lorde be knowē amonge his seruauntes, and his indignacion amonge his enemyes. For beholde, the Lorde shall come with fyre, and his charet shall be lyke a whyrle wynde, that he maye recompence his vengeaunce in his wrathe, and his indignacion with the flame of fyre. For the Lorde shall iudge all flesh with the fyre, and with his swearde, and there shall be a greate nombre slayne of the Lorde. Suche as haue made them selues holy and cleane in the gardens, and chose that haue eaten swyne flesh, myce, and other abominations, shalbe taken awaye together, sayth the Lorde. For I wyll come to gather all people and tunges with theyr workes and imaginacyons, these shall come, and se my glorye. Unto them shall I geue a token, & sende certayne of them (that be delyuered) amonge the Gentyles, in to Cilycia, Affryca and Lidya (where men can handle bowes) in to Italye also and Greke lande.

Apoca.xxi.b

The Iles feare of, that haue not heard speake of me, and haue not sene my glorye, shal preache my prayse among the Gentyles, and shall bringe all youre brethren for an offrynge vnto the Lorde, out of all people, vpō horses, charettes and horse lytters, vpō Mules and cartes to Jerusalem my holye hyll (sayth the Lorde) lyke as the chyldren of Israell bringe theyr offrynge in cleane vessels, to the house of the Lorde.

And I shall take vnto certayne of them for to be Preistes and Leuytes, sayth the Lorde. For lyke as the newe heauen and the newe earth which I will make, shalbe fast stablysshed by me, (sayth the Lorde.) So shall youre sede and your name contynue, and there shal be a newe Moone for the other, and a newe Sabboth for the other, & all flesh shall come to worshyppe before me, (sayth the Lorde.)

Apoca.xxi.b

And they shall goo forthe and loke vpon the caryons of them that haue transgressed agaynst me. For theyr wormes shall not dye, neyther shall theyr fyre be quenched, and all flesshe shall abhorre them.

¶ The ende of the boke of the Prophete Esaye.

DD.iij.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IEREMYE.

¶ The boke of Jeremy, and in what tyme he prophecyed. He excuseth him selfe and wolde refuse the office of a Prophete, because he is younge and unexperte. He is taught of the Lorde, and becommeth bolde. God preacheth vnto him, that the destruction of the Jewes, by the Babilonians, is at hand. Jeremy is commaunded to speake the worde of God vnto the Jewes, without feare.

CAPI. I.

THese are the Sermons of Jeremye the sonne of Helkiah the Preest, one of them that dwelte at Anathoth in the lande of Benjamin, when the Lorde had fyrste spoken with hym, in the tyme of Josiah the sonne of Amon kyng of Juda, in the xiij. yere of his kyngdome, and so durynge vnto the tyme of Jehoakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, and vntyl the xj. yeres of Zedekiah the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda were ended, when Jerusalem was take, euen in the fyfty moneth. The worde of the Lorde spake thus vnto me: Before I fashioned the B in thy mothers wombe, I dyd know the. And or euer thou wast borne, I sanctified the, and ordeyned the, to be a Prophete vnto the people. Then sayde I: Oh Lorde God, I am vnmete, for I am yet but yonge. And the Lorde answered me thus: Saye not so, I am to yonge. For thou shalt goo to all that I shall sende the vnto, and whatsoeuer I cõmaunde the, that shalt thou speake. Be not afrayed of their faces, for I wylde with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

And with that, the Lorde stretched out his hande, and touched my mouth, & sayd moreouer vnto me: Beholde, I put my wordes in thy L Jere.xliii.a mouthe, and this daye do I set the ouer the people and kyngdomes, that thou mayst roote oute, breake of, destroye, and make waste, and that thou mayst buylde vp and plante. After this, the Lorde spake vnto me, sayenge: Jeremy, what seest thou? And I sayde: I se a wakyng rodde. Then sayde the Lorde: thou haste sene ryght, for I wyll watch diligently vpon my worde, to performe it.

It happened afterwarde, that the Lorde spake to me agayne, and sayde: What seest thou? and I sayde: I se a seething pot, lokyng from out of the North byther warde.

Jeremy.iiii.a Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: Out of the North shall come a plage vpon all the dwellers of the lande. For lo, I wyll call all the offices of the kyngdomes of the North (sayth the Lorde.) And they shall come, & euery one shall set his seate in the gates of Jerusalem, & in all their walles rounde about, & thorowe all the cyties of Juda. And thorow them shall D I declare my iudgement, vpon all the wyckednesse of those men that haue forsake me, that haue offred vnto straunge goddes and worshipped the workes of their awne handes.

And therfore gyrde vp thy lopnes, aryse, and tell them all, that I geue the in commaundement. Feare them not, I wyll not haue thee be afrayed of them. For beholde, this daye do I make the a stronge fensed towne, an yron pyller, & a wal of stele agaynst the hole lande, agaynst the kynges and myghty men of Juda, agaynst the preistes & people of the lande. They shall fyght agaynste the, but they shall not be able to ouercome the, for I am with the, to deliuer the, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ God reherseth his benefytes done vnto the Jewes. Agaynste Princes and Prophetes, & preachers that contemne and despyse God. The Jewes are destroyed, because they forsoke God, and because they ranne a hore huntynge after Idoles.

CAPI. II.

MOreouer, the worde of the Lorde commaunded me thus: Go thy waye, crye 1 in the eares of Jerusalem, and saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: I remembre the for the kyndenesse of thy youth, & because of thy feithfull loue, in that thou folowdest me thorowe the wyldernesse, in an vntylled lande. Thou Israell wast halowed vnto the Lorde, and to was his fyrste frutes. All they that deuoured Israell, offended: myschefe fell vpon them, sayeth the Lorde. Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, O thou house of Jacob, and all the generacion of the house of Israell. Thus sayeth the Lorde vnto you.

What vnfaithfulnesse found your fathers in me, that they went so farre awaye fro me, 2 falling to ydolatrie, & beyng so vayne? They thought not in their hertes: Where haue we lefte the Lorde, that brought vs out of the lande of Egypt, that led vs thorow the wyldernesse, thorow a desolate & rough lande, thorow a drye & deadly lande, yea a lande that no man had gone thorowe, & wherin no man had dwelt? And when I had brought you into a pleasaunt welbuylded land, that ye might eate the frutes & all the cõmodities of the contre: the frutes & all the goodnesse of it came, ye went forthe & defyled my lande, and brought myne heritage to abominacion.

The Preistes them selues sayde not ons: Where is the Lord? They that haue the lawe in their handes, knowe me not. The Prophetes offende agaynste me. The Prophetes do seruice vnto Baal, and folowe suche thynges as shall brynge them no profyt.

Wherfore I am constrayned (sayeth the Lorde) to make my cõplaynte vpon you, and vpon your chyldren. Go in to the Iles of the E them, and loke well, sende vnto Cedar, take diligent hede, and se, whether suche thynges be done there, whether the Gentiles their gods deale so falsly & vntruely with their gods, (which yet are no godes in deede) but my people hath geue ouer their true honour, for a thynge that maye not helpe them.

Be asshamed, o ye heuens, be afrayde and abashed at suche a thynge, sayeth the Lorde. For my people hath wonne two cuyls. They haue forsaken me the well of water of lyfe, and digged them pittes, yea vile and broken pittes that holde no water. Is Israel a bonde seruaunt, or one of the housholde? Why is he then so spoyled? Why do they roze and crye then vpon him as a lyon? They haue made his land waste, his cityes are so brent vp, that there is no man dwellynge in them. Yea the children of Noph and Tephnes haue vexed the necke.

Commeth not this vnto the, because thou F hast forsaken the Lorde thy God, euer sence he ledde the vp by the waye? And what haste thou nowe to do in the streate of Egypte? to dyncke foule water? Eyther what maketh thou in the waye of Assiria? To dyncke water of the floude? Thyne owne wickednesse shal reproue the, and thy turnyng away shall condemne the: that thou mayste knowe and vnderstande how cuyll and bytterfull a thynge it is, that thou haste forsaken the Lorde thy God, and not feared him sayth the Lorde God of hostes.

I haue euer broken thy yoke of olde, and burste thy bondes: yet sayste thou, I will no more serue, but (lyke an harlot) thou runnest about vpon all hye hylles, and amonge all grene trees, where as I planted the oute of noble grapes, and good rotes. How art thou tourned then in to a bitter, vntrustefull, and vnfraunge, sape? Yea, and that so sooze: G that though thou washe the with Nitrus, & make thy selfe to fauoure with that swete smelynge herbe of Borith: yet in my syght thou art stayned with thy wickednesse, sayeth the Lorde thy God.

Saye not nowe: I am not vnclene, and I haue not folowed the Goddes. Loke vpon thyne owne wayes in the wodoes, valeys, & dennes: so shalt thou knowe what thou hast done. Thou arte lyke a swyfte Dromadary that goeth easely his way: and thy wantonnesse is lyke a wylde asse that vseth the wildernesse, and that snoffeth and bloweth at his will. Who can tame the? All they that seke the, shal not fayle, but fynde H in thyne owne vnclennes. Thou kepest thy foote from nakednesse, and thy throte from thyrst, and thinkest then in thy selfe: tusshe, I will take no sorowe, I will loue the straunge goddes, and hange vpon them.

Lyke as a theefe that is taken with the dede commeth to shame, euen so is the house of Israel come to confusion: the commen people, their kynges and rulers, their preistes and prophetes. For they saye to a stocke: thou art my father, and to a stone: thou hast begotte me: I yea they haue turned their backe vpon me, & not their face.

But in the tyme of their trouble, whe they saye: stande vp and helpe vs, I shal answere them: Where are nowe thy goddes, that thou hast made the? lyft them stande vp and helpe the in the tyme of nede. For loke how many cities thou hast, (O Juda) so many goddes hast thou also.

Wherfore then wyll ye goo to lawe with me, seinge ye all are synners agaynste me sayethe the Lorde? It is but lolte labource, that I impte youre cyldren, for they receyue not my correction. Youre owne swerde destroyeth youre Prophetes, lyke a deuouringe lyon. Yf ye be the people of the Lorde, then harken vnto his worde: Am I then become a wildernesse vnto the people of Israel? or a lande that hathe no lyght? Wherfore sayethe my people then: we are fallen of, and we wyll come no more vnto the? Dothe a mayden forget her raymente, or a bryde her stomacher? And dothe my people forget me so longe? Why bosteth thou thy wayes so lyghly (to obtayne fauoure there fore) when thou hast yet slayned them with blasphemyes?

Upon thy wynges is founde the bloude of poore and innocent people, and that not in corners and holes onely, but openly in all places. Yet darest thou saye I am gyltelesse: Tusshe, his wrathe can not come vpon me. Beholde, I wyll reason with the, because thou darest saye: I haue not offended. O howe cuyll wyll it be for the to abyde it: when it shall be knowen how ofte thou hast gone backwarde? Deute.xxiiii.b Jeremy.ix.a Esech.xx.b

For thou shalte be confounded as well of Egypte, as of the Assirians: Yea, thou shalte goo thy waye frome them, and smyte thyne handes togethre vpon thy hede: Because the Lorde shall brynge that confidence and hope of thyne to nought, and thou shalt not prospere withall.

¶ God beynge mercyfull, calleth vnto repentaunce his people, whiche he hadde forsaken for their whoredome with goodes. He exhorteth Israell vnto repentaunce, promysynge them shepherdes that shulde haue the true knowledge of God. The returne of Israel vnto God, confessynge their offence.

CAPI. III.

COmmenly when a man putteth awaye A his wyfe, and she goeth frome him and marryeth with an other, then the question is: Shulde he resorte vnto her any more after that? Is not this felde then defiled and vnclene? But as for the, thou hast played the harlot with many louers, yet tourne agayne to me sayth the Lord. Lyft vp thyne eyes on euery syde, and loke yf thou be not defiled. Thou hast waited for them in the stretes, & as a murtherer in the wildernesse. Thorowe thy whoredome and shameful blasphemies is the lande defiled.

This is the cause, that the rayne and B euenynge dewe hathe ceased. Thou haste gotten an hoores forehead, and canste not be ashamed. Elles wouldest thou saye vnto me: O my father, thou arte he that hast broughte me vp, and ledde me fro my youthe: Wylte thou then put me awaye, and caste me of for euer? Or wylte thou withdrawe thy selfe cleane fro me? Neuertheleſſe thou ſpeakeſt ſuche wordes, but thou art euer doing woꝛſe and woꝛſe.

* Thꝰ Lorde ſayde alſo vnto me: in the ¶ tyme of Joſiah the kynge: Haſte thou ſene *Jeremy.2. Jerempe.3. & Ezechi.16. & 23. Oſeæ.2. what that wyppthelyche Iſraell hathe doone? howe ſhe hathe runne by vpon all the hylles and amonge all thyſhe trees, and there playde the harlot? Haſte thou ſene alſo (when ſhe hadde doone all this) howe I ſayde vnto her: that ſhe ſhulde turne agayne vnto me, and yet ſhe is not conuerted? Juda that vnfaythfull ſyſter of hers alſo ſawe this: Name ly that after I hadde well ſene the aduoutrye of the wyppthelyche harlotte Iſraell, I put her awaye, and gaue her a bylle of diuoꝛcement.

For all this her vnfaythfull ſyſter Juda was not aſhamed, but went backe and playꝛed the whoꝛe alſo. Yea, and the noyſe of her whoꝛedome hathe defyled the hole lande. For ſhe hath committed her aduoutrye with ſtones and ſtockes.

Neuertheleſſe her vnfaythfull ſyſter Juda is not tourned againe vnto me with her hole hert, but faynedly: ſayth the Lorde. And the Lorde ſayd vnto me. The backſlyder Iſraell is ¶ moꝛe righteous then the vnfaythfull Juda: and therfoꝛe goo preache theſe woꝛdes toꝛwarde the Noꝛthe, and ſaye: Thou wyppthelyche Iſraell, tourne againe (ſayth the Lorde) and I wyll not tourne my face from you: for I am mercyfull, ſayth the Lord, and I wyll not alwaye beare diſpleaſure againſt the: but on this condition, that thou knowe thy greate blaſphemye: Namely, that thou haſte vnfaythfully forſaken the Lorde thy God, and haſte made thy ſelfe parte taker of ſtraunge Godes vnder all grene trees, but haſt hadde no wyll to heare my voyce, ſayth the Lorde.

*Oye wyppthelyche chyldren, tourne a- *Ezechiel.16. Malachias. gayne, ſayth the Lorde: and I wyll be maꝛryed with you. For I wyll take one out of the cite, and two out of one generation from amonge you, and bring you out of Syon: and wyll geue you beſhemen after myne owne mynde, whiche ſhall feede you wiſely in kenynge and wyſdome.

Moꝛeouer, when ye be encreaſed and multiplyed in the lande, then (ſayethe the Lorde) there ſhall no more boſſe be made of the Arcke of the Lordes Teſtament: Ne man ſhall thynke vpon it, neyther ſhall any man make mencion of it: noꝛ ſtraunge thynge for the it ſhall neyther be viſited, ne conuerted with gyftes.

Then ſhall Jeruſalem be called the Lordes ſeate, and all Heathen ſhall be gaꝛthered vnto it, for the Lordes names ſake, whiche ſhall be ſet forthe, they ſhall folowe no more the ymaginacion of their owne frowarde hertes.

Then thoſe that be of the houſe of Juda, ¶ ſhall goo vnto the houſe of Iſraell: and they ſhall come togyther out of the lande, and into the ſame land that I haue geuen vnto their fathers.

I haue ſhewed alſo howe I toke the vp, being but a child, and gaue the a pleaſaunt lande for thyne herytage: yea, and a goodly hoſt of the Heathen: and howe I commaunded the that thou ſhuldeſt *call me father onely, and not to wyppke fro me. Ruth.

But lyke as a woman fayleth her louer, ſo are ye vnfaythfull vnto me (Oye houſe of Iſraell) ſayth the Lorde. And therfore the voyce of the cyuyſed of Iſrael was heꝛd on euery hye, weping and waylinge: for they haue defiled their waye, and forgotten God their Lorde.

Oye wyppthelyche chyldren, tourne a- ¶ gayne (ſayinge: Io, we are thyne, for thou arte the Lorde our God:) And ſo ſhal I heale youre backeſlydynges. Thꝰ hylles fall, and all the hye pryde of the mountaynes, but the helthe of Iſraell ſtandeth onely vpon God our Lorde.

Confuſion hathe deuoured oure fathers laboure from oure youthe vp: yea, their ſhepe and bullockes, their ſonnes and doughters. So wo we alſo lyepe in oure confuſion, and ſhame couereth vs: for we and oure fathers from our youthe vp vnto this daye, haue ſynned againſte the Lorde oure God, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

¶ The true repentaunce or returnynge to God. He exhoꝛteth to the circumcyſion of the herte. The deſtruction of Jewyrye is propheꝛeyed, for the ſinnes of theyr hertes.

CAPI. IIII.

IIf Iſraell, yf thou wylte turne the, then ¶ turne vnto me, ſayeth the Lorde. And yf thou wilt put *away thyne abhominacions out of my ſyght, thou ſhalte not be moued: And ſhalte ſwere. The Lorde liueth: in truth, in equitie and rightouſneſſe: and all peple ſhal be fortunable and ioyfull in him, for thus ſayth the Lorde, to all Juda and Jeruſalem: plowe your lande, and ſowe not among the thornes.

Be circumciſed vnto the Lorde, and take a- Deu. 10. way the foreſkynne of youre hertes, all ye of Juda, and all the indwellers of Jeruſalem: that my indignacion breke not out lyke fyre, and hyndle, ſo that no man maye quenche it, becauſe of the wickednelle of youre ymaginacions. Jere. 36.

Preache in Juda and Jeruſalem: crye and ſpeke: blowe the trompettes in the lande crye that euery man may geare, and ſaye: Gather you togither, and we wyll go in to ſtrong cities. Set vp the token in Syon, ſpede you, and make no taryeng: for I will bring a great plage, & a greate deſtruction from the Noꝛthe. For the people of the Gentyles is broken vp from his place, as a lyon out of his denne, that he maye make the lande waſte, and deſtroye the cities, ſo that no man maye dwell therin. Wherfore gyrde youre ſelues about with ſacke clothe, mourne and weepe, for the fearfull fearful wrath of the Lord ſhal not be withdrawen from you.

¶ At the ſame tyme (ſayethe the Lorde) the ¶ herte of the kynge and of the Pꝛynces ſhall be gone, the prieſtes ſhal be aſtonyſhed, and the Pꝛophetes ſhall ye ſoore afrayde. Then ſayde I: O Lorde God, haſt thou then diſceyued this people, and Jeruſalem, ſayinge: ye ſhall haue peace, and nowe the ſwerde goeth thꝛowe their lyues? Then ſhall it be ſayde to the people, and to Jeruſalem: there commeth a warme wynde frome the Noꝛthe thꝛow the way of my people, but neither to fanne ne clenſe.

After that there ſhall come vnto me a ¶ ſtronge wynde, and then wyll I alſo geue ſentence vpon them. For loo, he commeth downe lyke as a cloude, and his charettes are lyke a ſtormy wynde: his horſemen are ſwifter then the Egle. Wo vnto vs, for we are deſtroyed. O Jeruſalem, waſh thyne herte from wickednelle, that thou mayſt be helped. How longe ſhall thy noyſome thoughtes remayne with the?

For a voyce frome Dan, and from the hyll of Ephraim ſpeaketh oute, and telleth of a deſtruction. Beholde the Heathen geue Jeruſalem warnyng, and preache vnto her, that her deſtroyers are commynge frome farre countreys. They tell the cities of Juda the ſame alſo, they ſhall geue them warnynge in euery place, lyke as the watche men in the felde. For they haue prouoked me to wrathe, ſayth the Lorde.

¶ Thy wayes and thy thoughtes, haue ¶ wroughte the vnto this: this is thyne owne wyckednelle and diſobedience that hath poſſeſſed thyne herte: Ah my bely, ah my bely, (thalte thou crye) howe is my herte ſo ſore? my hert panteth within me, I can not be ſtill, for I haue herd the cryinge of the trompettes and peales of warre.

They crye murther vpon murther, the hole lande ſhal peryſſhe. Immediatly my tentes were deſtroyed, and my hangynges in the twinckelynge of an eye. How longe ſhall I ſe the tokens of warre, and heare the noyſe of the trompettes.

Neuertheleſſe, this ſhall come vpon them, ¶ becauſe my people is become fooliſhe, and haue vtterly no vnderſtandynge. They are the chyldren of foly ſhnelle, and without any diſcrection. To do euil, they haue wit enough: but to do wel, they haue no wyſdome. I haue loked vpon the earthe: and ſe, it is waſte and voyde. I loked towarde heuen, and it had no lyght.

I beheld the mountaynes and they trembled, and all the hylles were in a feare. I loked about me, and there was no bodye, and all the byrdes of the ayre were awaye. I marked well, and the plowed felde was become waſte: yea al their cities were broken downe at the preſence of the Lorde, and indignacion of his wrathe.

¶ For thus hath the Lorde ſayde: The hole ¶ lande ſhal be deſolate, yet will I not then haue done. And therfore let the erth mourne, and let the heuen be ſorye aboue: for the thynge that I haue purpoſed and taken vpon me to do, ſhal not repent me, and I will not go frō it. The hole lande ſhal flie for ỹ noyſe of horſe men and bowmen: they ſhal run in to busshes in to woddes, and clyme vp the ſtony rockes. All the cityes ſhal be voyde, & no man dwellynge therin.

What wylt thou now do, thou beinge deſtroyed? For though thou clotheſt thy ſelfe with Jeremy.ii.c. ſcarlet, & deckeſt the with golde: though thou paynteſt thy ſelf with colours, yet ſhalt thou trym thy ſelf in vayne.

For thoſe that hitherto haue ben thy great fauourers ſhall abhorre the, and goo about to ſlee the. For (me thynke) I heare a noyſe, lyke as it were a woman trauelynge, or one labourynge of her fyrſt chylde: Euen a voyce of the doughter Sion, that calleth out her armes, and ſaweneth, ſayinge: Ah, woo is me, how ſore vexed and ſaynt is my herte, for the that are ſlayne?

¶ In Jewrye is there no vpꝛighteous or faythfull man founde, eyther amongſt the people, or the rulers, for whoſe ſake the Lorde ſhoulde ſpare the cytye: wherfore Jewrye is deſtroyed of the Aſſyrians.

CAPI.

LOke thꝛowe Jeruſalem: beholde and ſe: Seke thꝛowe her ſtreetes alſo within, yf ye can fynde one man that dothe equalland vpꝛighte, or that laboureth to be faythfull: and I ſhall ſpare him (ſayethe the Lorde.) For though they can ſaye: the Lorde liueth, yet w they ſweare to diſceyue: Where as thou (o Lorde) loketh onely vpon faythe and veruthe.

Thou haſt ſcourged them, but they toke no repentaunce: thou haſt coꝛrect the for amendment, but they refuſed thy coꝛrection. They made their faces harder then a ſtone, & wolde not amende.

Therfore I thoughte in my ſelfe: peraduenture they are ſo ſymple and foolyſh, that they vnderſtande nothynge of the Lordes waye, and iudgementes of our God. Therfoꝛe wyll I goo vnto their herdes and rulers, and talke with them: yf they knowe the waye of the Lorde, and the iudgementes of oure God. But theſe (in lyke maner) haue broken the yoke, and burſte the bandes in ſonder.

Wherfoꝛe a lyon out of the wod ſhal hurt them, and a wolfe in the euenynge ſhall deſtroye them. The cat of the mountayne ſhall lye lurkynge by their cities, to teare in peces all them that come therout. For their offences are manye, and their departynge awaye is greate. Shoulde I then for all this haue ¶ mercye vpon the? Thy chyldren haue forſaken me, and ſwoꝛne by them that are no godes. And albeit they were bounde to me in mariage, yet they fell to aduoutrye, and haũted harlottes houſes.

In

In ȳ defire of vncleanly luft they are become like the ſtoned horſe, euery man neyeth at his neyghbourss wyfe: ſholde I not correct this ſayth the Lorde?

Sholde I not be auenged of euery people, Gen.xix.f.c. that is lyke vnto this? Clyme vp vpon her walles beate them downe, but deſtroye them not vtterly: cut of their braunches, becauſe they are not the Lordes. For vnfaythfully hathe the houſe of Iſrael and Juda forſaken me, ſayth the Lorde. They haue denyed the Lorde, and ſayde it is not he. Neuther ſhall no myſfortune come vpon vs: we ſhall ſe neyther ſworde nor honger. As for the waruyng of the Prophetes, they take it but for wynde: yea there is none of theſe, which wil tell them, that ſuche thynges ſhall happen vnto them.

Wherfore thus ſayth the Lorde God of hoſtes: becauſe ye ſpeake ſuche wordes: beholde: The wordes that are in thy mouthe wil I turne to fire, and make the people to be wod, that I may conſume them.

Lo, I will brynge a people vpon you from farre, O houſe of Iſrael (ſayth the Lorde) a myghtye people, an olde people, a people whoſe ſpeche thou knoweſt not, neyther vnderſtandeſt what they ſaye. Their arowes are ſodeyne deathe: yea they them ſelues be bleye graunters. This people ſhall eate vp thy feute and thy meate: yea they ſhall deuoure thy ſonnes and thy doughters, thy ſheepe and thy bullockes.

They ſhall eate vp thy grapes and fygges. Yea for thy ſtronge and well ienſed cityes wherin thou vpholdeſt truſte, they ſhall deſtroye theym with the ſwearde. Neuertheleſſe I wyll not haue doone with you, ſayth the Lorde But yf they ſaye: Wherfore dothe the Lorde oure God all this vnto vs?

Then aunſwere them: becauſe that lyke Jeremi.v.b.i. as ye haue forſaken me, and ſerued ſtraunge goddes in youre owne lande: euen ſo ſhall ye ſerue other goddes in a lande that is not youres. Preache this vnto the houſe of Jacob, and crye it oute in Juda, and ſaye thus: Here this (thou fooliſhe and vnwiſe people) Eſay.vi.b. Joh.xii.g.h. * ye haue eyes, but ye ſe not: eares haue ye, but ye heare not.

Feare ye not me, ſayth the Lorde? Are ye not aſhamed to loke me in the face? which haue bounde the ſee with the ſande, ſo that it can not paſſe his boundes: For though it rage, yet can it doo nothynge, and though the wawes therof do ſwell, yet may they not go ouer.

But this people hathe a falſe and obſtynate herte, they are departed and gone awaye from me. They thynke not in their hertes: O let vs feare the Lorde oure God that geueth vs earne earlye and late, when nede is: whiche kepeth euer ſtyl the harueſt for vs peceably.

Neuertheleſſe youre myſdedes haue tourned theſe frame you, and youre ſynnes haue robbed you hereof. For amonge my people are founde wycked perſonnes, that pyrupye laye ſnares, and wayte for men, to take them and deſtroye them. And lyke as a nette is full of byrdes, ſo are their houſes full of that whiche they haue gotten with falſehed and diſceyte.

Hereof commeth their greate ſubſtaunce and ryches: hereof are they fatte and welfedye, and are iuſt awaye fro me with thanckfull blaſphemyes. They mynyſtre not the lawe, they make no ende of the fatherleſſes cauſe, they iudge not the poore accordynge to equite.

Shulde I not punyſh theſe thinges, ſayth the Lorde? Wolde I be auenged of all ſuche people as theſe be? Horrible and grenous thinges are done in the lande.

The Prophetes teache falſely, and the prieſtes folowe them, and my people hathe pleaſure therin. What wyll come therof at the laſt?

¶ The ſynnes for whiche Jeruſalem is eſteyned. Vncircumcyſed eares. Lonetouſneſſe. Diuyne. The Lorde reiecteth the fatte ſpyrs of the Jewes. The commynge of the Babylonyans is playnelye agayne.

CAPI. VI.

COme forth of Jeruſalem, ye ſtrong chil dren of Ben Jamin: blow vp the trompettes ye Tecuites, let vp a token vnto Bethcarem, for a plage and a greate miſchefe burſteth out from the North.

I wyll ſpeke the doughter of Syon to a fayre and tendre woman, & to her ſhall come the ſhepeherdes with their flockes. Their tentes ſhall they pytche rounde about her, and eurye one ſhall fede them that are vnder his hande. Make battayle agaynſt her (ſhall they ſaye.) Aryſe, let vs go vp, whyle it is yet daye.

Alas, the daye goeth awaye, and the nyght ſhadowes fall downe: Aryſe, lette vs go vp by nyght, and deſtroye her ſtronge holdes: for thus hath the Lorde of hoſtes commaunded.

Hewe downe her trees, and ſet vp bulwerkes agaynſt Jeruſalem. This is the cyte that muſte be punyſhed, for in her is all vnrighteouſneſſe. Lyke as a Condyte abounded in water, euen ſo of this cyte abounded in wyckednelle. Robberye and vnrighteouſnes is herde in her, ſorowe and woundes are euer there in my ſyghte. Amende the, O Jeruſalem, leſt I withdrawe my herte from the, and make the deſolate: and thy land alſo, that no man dwel in it. For thus ſayth the Lord of hoſtes: The reſidue of Iſrael ſhal be gathered as the remnaunt of grapes.

And therfore tourne thyne hande agayne in to the baſket, lyke the grape gatherer. But vnto whom ſhall I ſpeake, whom ſhal I warne, that he maye take hede? Their eares are ſo vncircumcyſed, that they maye not heare.

Beholde, they take ȳ worde of God but for a ſclaun-

a ſtayne, and haue no luſt therto. And therfore I am ſo ful of indignacyō, o Lord, that I may forbere no longer. Powre out thy wrathe vpon the chyldren that are without, and vpon all yonge men.

Yea the man muſte be taken pryſoner with the wyfe, and the aged with the creple. Their houſes with their landes and wyues ſhall be turned vnto ſtraungers, when I ſtretche oute myne hande vpon the inhabitauntes of this lande, ſayth the Lorde. For frome the leſt, vnto the mooſte, they hange all vpon couetouſneſſe: and frome the Prophete vnto the Prieſt, they goo all aboute with falſehed and lyes.

And beſyde that, they heale the hurte of my people with ſweete wordes, ſayinge: peace peace, when there is no peace at all. Therfore they muſte be aſhamed, for they haue committed abhominacion. But howe ſholde they be aſhamed, when they knowe nothing, neyther of ſhame, nor of good nourture? And therfore they ſhall fall amonge the ſlayne: and in the houre when I ſhall viſyte them, they ſhall be brought downe, ſayth the Lorde.

Thus ſayth the Lorde: goo in to the ſtreates, conſyder and make inquiſicion for the olde way, and yf it be the good and right waye: then goo therin, that ye maye fynde reſt for youre ſoules. But they ſaye: we will not walke therin, and I wyll ſet watche men ouer you, and therfore take heed vnto the voyce of the trompet: But they ſaye we will not take hede. Heare therfore ye Gentyles, and thou congregacion ſhalte knowe, what I haue decreed for them. Heare thou earth alſo: beholde, I wyll cauſe a plage come vpon this people, euen the fruite of their own ymaginacions.

For they haue not bene obedient vnto my wordes, and to my lawe, but abhorred them. Wherfore brynge ye me incenſe frome Saba, and ſweete ſmellynge Calamus frome farre countreyes? Youre burnte offerynges delyteth me, and I reioyſe not in youre ſacrifices.

And therfore thus ſayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll make this people fal, and there ſhal fall from amonge them the father with the children, one neyghboure ſhall peryſhe with an other.

Moreouer thus ſayth the Lorde: Beholde there ſhal come a people from the North, and a great people ſhall aryſe frome the endes of the earth, with bowes and with dartes ſhall they be weapened: It is a roughe and fearce people, an vnmercyfull people: their voyce roreth lyke the ſee, they ryde vpon horſes well appoynted to the battayle agaynſt the, o doughter Syon.

Then ſhall this eare be hearde: Oure handes are feble, heupneſſe and ſorowe is come vpon vs, as vpon a woman trauayle with chylde. No man goo forthe in to the feld, no man come vpon the hye ſtreate: for the ſworde and feare of the enemye ſhall be on euery ſyde.

Wherfore gyrde a ſacke clothe aboute the (O thou doughter of my people) ſtrynchle thy ſelfe with aſches, mourne and wepe bytterly, as vpon thy onely beloued ſonne: For the deſtroyer ſhall ſodeynly fall vpon vs. Amos.viij.b.

The haue I ſet for a pryncer of my harde people, to ſeke out, and to eraye their wayes. For they are all vnfaythfull and fallen awaye, they hange vpon fylthy lucre, they are eleme braſſe and yron, for they hurte and deſtroye euerye man. The bellous are brente in the fire, the lead is conſumed, the mynter melteth in vayne, for the euyll is not taken awaye from them. Wherfore ſhall they be called nought ye ſylucr, becauſe the Lorde hathe caſte them oute.

¶ Jeremye is commaunded to ſhewe vnto the people the worde of God, whiche truſteth in the outwarde ſeruyce of the temple, that helpeth nothynge. The euyls that ſhall happen to the Jewes for the deſpyſynge of theyr prophetes. Sacrifyces doth not the Lorde chefely requyre of the Jewes, but that they ſholde obey his worde. Typheth.

CAPI. VII.

THeſe are the wordes that God ſpake vn to Jeremye: Stande vnder the gates of the Lordes houſe, and crye out theſe wordes there with a loude voyce, and ſaye: Heare the worde of the Lorde all ye of Juda that go in at this doore, to honour the Lorde. Thus ſayth the Lorde of hoſtes, the God of Iſrael. Amende youre wayes and youre counſelles, and I wyll lette you dwelle in Jerem.xxvi.d. this place. Truſt not in falſe lyenge wordes, ſayinge: here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde, here is the temple of the Lorde.

* For yf ye wyll amende youre wayes and counſels, yf ye wyll iudge ryghte betwyxte a man and his neyghboure: yf ye wyll not oppreſſe the ſtraunger, the fatherleſſe and the wydowe: yf ye wyll not ſhedde innocente bloode in this place: yf ye wyll not cleue to ſtraunge goddes to youre owne deſtruction: then wyll I let you dwell in this place: yea, in the land that I gaue afore tyme vnto your fathers for euer. B Deut.xvii.c. Jacha.viij.c. Leuit.xix.g. Job.xxiij.d.

But take hede, ye truſte in counſelles that begyle you, and do ye no good. For when ye haue ſtollen, murthered, committed aduoutrye, and periurye: When ye haue offred vnto Baal, folowynge ſtraunge and vnknowen Goddes: Then come ye, and ſtande before me in this houſe, (whiche hath my name grauen vnto it) and ſaye: Truſthe we are abſolued ouyte, thoughe we haue doone all theſe abhominacions. Eſay.lvi.b.

* What, thynke you this houſe that beareth my name, is a den of theues? And theſe thinges are not done priuyly, but before mine eyes ſayth the Lorde. Go to my place in * Silo, whereunto I gaue my name afore tyme, and loke well what I dyd to the ſame place for the wyckednelle of my people of Iſrael. C * Job.xi.b. Math.xxi.b. Jere.xxvi.f. 1.Cor.x.d. 1.Reg.iii.viij. b xvi.b.

And

And nowe, thoughe ye haue wrought all these dedes (sayth the Lorde) and I my selfe rose vp early betymes to warne you, and to common with you, yet wolde ye not heare me:
I called, ye wolde not answere. And therfore euen as I haue done with Silo, so will I do to this house, that my name is grauen vp-on, (and that ye put youre trust in) ye vnto the place that I haue graunted you and youre fathers. And I shall thrust you out of my sighte as I haue cast out all your brethren the hole sede of Ephraim.

Therfore thou shalte not praye for this people, thou shalte neyther geue thankes nor bydde prayer for them: thou shalte make no intercessiō to me for them: for in no wyse will I heare the. Seest thou not what they doo in the cityes of Juda, and without Jerusalem? The children gather stickes, the fathers kindle the fier, the mothers knede
the dowghe, to bake cakes for the quene of heuen.

They poure oute drynke offerynges vn-
to straunge Goddes, to prouoke me vnto wrathe: How be it they hurte not me (sayth
the Lorde) but rather confounde and shame them selues.

And therfore thus sayth the Lorde God:
Beholde, my wrath and my indignacion shall be poured out vpon this place, vpon me and cattell, vpon the trees of the felde, & al frute of the land, & it shal burne so that no mā may quenche it.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israel: Ye heape vp your burnte offerynges
with youre sacrifices, and eate the fleshe.
But when I brought your fathers oute of Egypt, I spake no worde vnto them of burnt offerynges and sacrifices: but this I cō-maunded them, saying: Harken and obey my voyce, and I shall be your God, and ye shal be my people: so that ye walke in all the wayes which I haue commaunded you, that ye may prospere.

But they were not obedient, they inclyned not their eares thereunto, but wente after their owne imaginations, and after the mocions of their owne wycked hert, and so tour ned them selues awaye, and conuerted not vnto me. And this haue they doone, from the tyme that youre fathers came out of Egypt
vnto this daye.

Neuertheles I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: I rose vp erlye &
sente them worde, yet wolde they not harken me nor offre me their eares, but were obstinate and worse then their fathers. And thou shalte now speake all these wordes vnto them, but they shall not heare the: thou shalte cry vpon them, but they shall not answere the. Therfore shalte thou saye vnto them: This is the people, that neyther heareth the voyce of the Lord their God, nor receyueth his correction.
Faythfulnesse and truthe is clene rooted out of their mouth.

Wherfore cut of thyne heere, and caste it away, take vp a complaynt in the hole land:
for the Lorde shall cast away and scatter the people, that he is displeased withall. For the children of Juda haue doone euyll in my syghte, sayth the Lorde. They haue set vp their abhominacions in the house that bare my name, and haue defyled it. They haue also buylded an aulter at Tophet, whyche is in the valleye of the children of Hennom:
that they myghte burne their sonnes and doughters, whiche I neuer commaunded them, neyther came it euer in my thoughte.
And therfore beholde, the dayes shall come (sayth the Lorde) that it shall no more be called Tophet, or the valeye of the children of Hennom, but the valey of the slayne,
for in Tophet they shall be buryed, bycause
they shall elles where haue no rowme. Yea, the deed bodyes of this people shall be eaten
of the foules of the ayre, and of the beestes of the earthe, and man shall fraye them awaye. And as for the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse of the cityes of Juda and Jerusalem, the voyce of the bydegrome, and of the bryde: I will make them waste, for the lande shall be desolate.

¶ The destruction of the Jewes. The Lorde mo-neth the people to amendement, reckening vp their synnes. Reproueth the lyenge doctryne of the Prophetes and Prestes, and their couetyse.

CAPI. VIII.

At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, the bones of the kynges of Juda, the bones of his Prynces, the bones of the prestes and Prophetes, yea and the bones of the cytezyns of Jerusalem, shalbe brought out of their graues, and layde against the sunne,
the moone, and all the heuenly hoste, whome
they loued, whom they serued, whō they ran after, whome they sought and worshipped.
They shall neither be gathered together, ne buried, but shall lye vpon the earthe to them shame and despytynge.

And all they that remayne of this wycked
generacion, shall rather chose to dye then lyue where so euer they remayne, and where as I scatter them, sayth the Lorde of hostes. Thou shalte thou saye vnto them also: Thus sayth
the Lorde: Do men fall so, that they ryse not vp agayne? And turne they so farre away that they neuer conuerte? Wherfore then is this people and Jerusalem gone so far backe, that they rouene not agayne. They are ron the longer, the more obstinate, and will not be conuerted.

For I haue loked and considred: but there is no man that speaketh a good worde: there is no man that taketh repentaunce for his synne, that wyll so mocke as saye: Wherfore haue I done this? But euery man (as some as he is turned backe) runneth forth ful swyfte
a wylde horse in a batayle. The Storke knoweth his appoynted time, the turtle wan, the swalowe and the crane consider the tyme of their comynge, but my people wil not knowe
the lawe of the Lorde amonge vs?

Beholde, the disceytfull penne of the scribes, setteth forth lyes: therfore shall the wise be confounded, they shall be afrayde and taken: for lo, they haue cast oute the worde of the Lorde: what wysdome can then be among them? Wherfore I wyl geue their wiues vnto straungers, and their felds to destroyers.

For from the lowest vnto the hyest, they folow al filthy lucre: and from the prophet vnto the preest, they vse all worly lyes. Neuer thelesse, they heale the hurte of my people in their workes, saying: peax peax, where there is no peax at all.

Are they ashamed, how abhominable they be? nay yet they be not ashamed, yea they knowe of no shame.

Wherfore in the tyme of their visitacion,
they shall fall amonge the deed bodyes saith
the Lorde.

Moreouer I will gather them in, sayth the Lord, so that there shal not be one grape vpō
the vine, ne one fyg vpon the fyg tree, & the leaues shall be plucke of.

Then wil I cause them to departe and saye:
Why prolong we the time? Let vs gather our selues together, and go in to the stronge cite,
there shall we be in rest: For the Lorde oure
God hathe put vs to sylence, and gruen vs water mixte with gall, to drynke, bycause we haue synned against hym.

We loked for peax, and we fare not ye better, we waited for the tyme of helth, and lo,
here is nothyng but trouble.

Then shall the noyse of his horses be herde
from Dan, the hole lande shall be afrayde at the neyeng of his stronge horses: for they shall goo in and deuoure the lande, with all that is in it: the cityes, and those that dwell therin. Moreouer, I will sende Cockatrices and serpentes amonge you (whiche wyl not be charmed) and they shal bite you, sayth
the Lorde.

Sorowe is come vpon me, and heuy-nesse dryueth my herte: for loo, the voyce of the crynge of my people, is herde from a farre countreye: Is not the Lorde in Sy-on? Is not the kynge in her? Wherfore then haue they greued me (shall the Lorde saye)
with their ymages, and koolysshe straunge fasyons?

The haruest is gone, the sommer hathe ende, and we are not holpen. I am sore hurt, bycause of the hurte of my people:
I am brope, and abasshed: for there is no more Triacle at Galaad, and there is no Phisityon that can heale the hurte of my people.

¶ The complaint and bewaylyng of the Prophete for the myserye of the people. For the knowlege of God ought we only to reioyce. The circumcision of the flesh.

CAPI. IX.

O Who wyll geue my head waters y-noughe, and a well of teares for myne eyes: that I may wepe night and day, for the slaughter of my people? Wolde God that I hadde a cotage some where farre from folke, that I myghte leaue my people, and go from them: for they be all aduoutrers and a thrynchynge sorte. They bende their tunges lyke bowes, to shote out lyes. As for the truthe, they may nothyng away withall
in the worlde. For they go from one wyckednesse to an other, and holde nothynge of me,
sayth the Lorde.

Yea, one muste kepe him selfe from an other, no man maye safely trust his owne brother: for one brother vndermyneth an other,
and one neyghboure beggyleth an other. Yea,
one dissembleth with an other, and they trale with no truthe. They haue practised their tonges to lye, and taken great paynes to wo mysdeede. They haue set their stole in the middest of disceyte, and for verye dissemblynge faithes they wyll not knowe me, sayth the Lorde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes:
beholde, I wyll melte them and trye them, for what shold I els do to my people? Their tun ges are lyke sharpe arowes to speake disceyt.
With their mouth they speake peaceably to their neighbour, but priuily they laye wayte
for him.

Sholde I not punish them for these thin-ges, sayth the Lorde? Or sholde I not be aue ged of anye suche people as this? Vpon the mountaynes wyll I take vp a lamentacion & sorowful cry, and a mourning vpon the fayre playnes of the wildernesse: Namely, bowe
they are so brent vp, that no man goeth there any more: yea a man shal not heare one beest crye there.

Byrdes and cattell are all gone from thence. He wil make Jerusalem also an heape of stones, and a denne of venymous wormes.
And I wil make the cityes of Juda so waste, that no man shall dwel therin. What man is so wyse, as to vnderstande this? Or to whom hath the Lord spoken by mouth, that he may shewe this and saye: O thou lande why perisshest thou so? Wherfore are thou so brent vp, and lyke a wylderneste, that no man ga-eth thorowe?

Yea the Lorde him selfe tolde the same vn to them that forsoke his lawe, and kepte not the thynge that he gaue them in commaun-dement, neither lyued therafter: but folo-wed the wyckednesse of their owne herte,
and serued straunge goddes, as their fathers taught them.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hostes,
the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll fede this people with wormewod, and geue them gall to drynke. I wil scatter them also among the Heathen, whom neither they ne their fathers haue knowen: and I wyll sende a swerde amonge them, to persecute them, tyl I bringe them to nought. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Loke ye call for mourning wyues, and send for wyse women: that
they

they come thyther, and synge a mournyng
songe of you: that the teares maye fall out of our eyes, and that oure eye lydes maye
gusshe out of water.

For there is a lamentable noyse herde of Syon: O how are we so sore destroyed? O howe are we so pitesully confounded? We muste forsake oure owne natureall countrey, and we are shut oute of oure owne lodgyn-ges. Yet heare the worde of the Lorde (O ye women, and lette youre eares regarde the wordes of his mouthe: that ye maye learne youre doughters to mourne, and that eue-ry one maye teache her neyghbours to make lamentacyon. Namely thus: Deathe is clymmynge vp in at oure wyndowes, he is come in to oure houses, to destroye the children before the dooze, and the younge men in the stretes.

But tell thou playnly, thus sayth the Lorde:
The dede bodyes of men shall lye vpon the grounde, as the donge vpon the felde, and as the heye after the mower, and there shall be no man to take them vp.

1. Corinth. i. d. 2. Cor. x. b. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde: Let not the wyse man reioyse in his wysdome, ne the stronge man in his strength, neither the riche man in his ryches: But who so will reioyse
let him reioyse in this, that he vnderstandeth and knoweth me: for I am the Lorde, which do mercy, equitie and righteousnesse vpon the earth. Therfore haue I pleasure in suche thin-ges, sayth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme com meth (sayth the Lorde) that I will vysyte all them, whose foreskyn is vncircumcised. The Egyptians, the Iewes, the Edomites, the Ammonites, the Moabites, and the thauen Madianites that dwel in the wyldernes. For all the Gentyles are vncircumcised in y flesh,
but all the house of Israel are vncircumcised
in the herte.

¶ The constellacyons of the sterres are not to be feared. Of the weykenesse of Idoles, and of the power of God. Of vnpyll curates.

CAPI. X.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, that he speaketh vnto the, O thou house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde: Ye shall not learne after the maner of the Heathen, & ye shall not be afrayde for the tokens of heauen: for the Heathen are afrayde of suche:
yea all the customes and lawes of the Gentyles are nothynge but vanitie. They hewe downe a tree in the wod with the handes of the workeman, & facyon it with the axe: they couer it ouer with golde or syluer, they fasten it with nayles and hammers, that it moue
not. It standeth as syfte as the palme tree, it can neither speake ne goo, but must be borne.
Be not ye afrayde of suche, for they can doo neyther good ne euyll. But there is none like vnto to the, O Lorde, and great is the name of thy power. Who wolde not feare the?
Or what kynge of the Paynymes wolde not obey the?

Esaie. xl. b. Esay. xliii. b. Sapien. xiii. Baruch. vi. Iere. x. d. 1. Reg. viii. g. Iudi. v. b. Psalm. xcv. b.

For amonge all the wyse men of the Pa-ynymes, and in all their kyngdomes, there is none that maye be lykened vnto the. They are all togyther vnlerned & vnwyse. All their conning is but vanitie: namely wod, siluer, whiche is broughte out of Tharsis, and beten to plates: and golde frome Ophir, a worke that is made with the handes of the craftes man and the caster, clothed with pe-lowe sylke and scarlet: euen so is the worke of their wyse men all togyther. But y Lorde is a true God, a lyuynge God, and an eter-nall kynge. Yf he be wrothe, the earthe shaketh: all the Gentyles maye not abyde his indignacion.

As for their goddes, it may well be sayd of them: they are goddes that neither made heauen ne earthe: therefore shall they perysshe from the earthe, and frome all thynges vnder heuen. But (as for oure God) he made Iere.
the earth with his power, and with his wis-dome hathe he fynished the hole compasse of the worlde, with his discression hath he spred out the heuens.

At his voyce the waters gather togither in C
the ayre, he drawyth vp the cloudes from the vttermost partes of the erth: he turneth ligh tenynge to rayne, and bringeth forthe the windes out of their treasures. His wisdome Psal.
maketh all men foles. And confounded be al casters of ymages, for that they cast, is but a dayne thynge, and hathe no lyfe. The dayne craftesmen with their workes, that they in their vanitie haue made, shall perysshe one with an other in the tyme of visitacion. Neuertheleffe Jacobs portion is not suche: but it is he that hath made al thinges, and Israel is the rod of his enheritaunce: The Lord of hostes is his name. Put away thyne vnkinnesse oute of the lande, thou that arte in the strong cityes. For thus sayth the Lorde: Be-holde, I will nowe thrust oute the inhabitaunces of this lande a great waye of, and trouble them in suche sorte, as they shall no more be founde.

Alas how am I hurt? Alas how pytefully are my scourges vnto me? For I confesse this D sorowe by my selfe, and I must suffre it. My tabernacle is destroyed, and all my cordes are broken. My chyldren are gone fro me, and can no where be founde. Nowe haue I none to spreade oute my tente, or to set vp my heygynges. For the herdemen haue done fonlyshly, that they haue not sought the Lorde.
Therfore haue they dealte vnwyssely with their catell, and all are scattered abrode. Be-holde, the noyse is harde at hande, and great sedicion out of the North: to make the cities of Juda a wildernesse, and a dwellinge place for dragons.

Nowe I knowe, O Lorde, that it is not in O mans power to ordre his owne wayes, or to rule his owne steppes and goinges. Therfore chasten thou vs, O Lorde, but with iudge-ment and not in thy wrathe, leynge vs not vtterly to nought. Poure out thyne indignacion vp-on the Heathen that know the not, & vp-
on the people that call not on thy name:

Iere. x. d. Psal. lxxix. b.

for that they haue consumed, deuou-red and destroyed Jacob, and haue rooted out his glorye.

¶ Curse of them that obeye not the worde of Goddes promesse. The people of Juda folowynge
the stepps of their fathers, worshypped straunge goddes. The Lorde sayth he will not heare the letters, and forbyddeth also Jeremye to praye for them.

CAPI. XI.

This is an other sermon, which y Lorde commaunded Jeremye to preache, sayynge: Heare the wordes of the couenaunt and speake vnto all Juda, and to all them that dwell at Jerusalem. And saye vnto them:
Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell:
Cursed be euery one that is not obedient vnto
the wordes of this couenaunt: which I commaunded vnto your fathers, what tyme as I brought them oute of Egypte, from the yron fornace, sayynge: Be obedient vnto my voice and do, accordyng to all that I commaunde you: so shall ye be my people, and I will be your God, and will kepe my promesse that I sware vnto youre fathers: Namely that I wolde gyue them a lande wherin flo-weth wyne and honye, as ye se, is come to passe this daye. Then answered I, and sayde. Amen. Ye is euen so, Lorde, as thou sayest.

Then the Lorde sayde vnto me agayne:
Preache this in the cityes of Juda, and raun-
some Jerusalem, and saye: Heare the wor-des of this couenaunt, that ye maye kepe them. For I haue diligently exhorted your fathers, euer sythens the tyme I brought them out of the lande of Egypte, vnto this daye. I gaue them warnynge betymes, sayynge: Harken vnto my voyce: Neuerthelesse they wolde not obeye me, nor enclyne their eares vnto me, but folowed the wyckednesse of their owne hertes.

And therfore haue I accused them as transgressours of all the wordes of this couenaunt that I gaue them to kepe, worke they (not withstandynge) haue not kepte.

And the Lorde sayde vnto me: It is found out, that Juda, Israel, and all these cityes at Jerusalem are gone backe. They haue turned them selues to the blasphemyes of their fore fathers, whiche had no lust to heare my worde. Euen lykewyse haue these also folowed straunge goddes, and worshipped the.
The house of Israell and Juda haue broken my couenaunte, whiche I made with their fathers.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, E
I will sende a plage amonge you, whiche ye shall not be able to escape: and thoughe ye crye vnto me, I will not heare you. Then shall the townes of Juda, and the cityzens of Jerusalem go and call vpon their goddes vnto whom they made their oblations, but they are not able to helpe them in tyme of their trouble. For as many cityes as thou hast, O Jerem. ii. d.

Juda, so many goddes hast thou also. And loke how many stretes there be in the, O Jerusalem, so many shamefull auters haue ye set vp, to offre vpon them vnto Baal. But Iere. xliii. b.
praye not thou for this people: byd neyther
praise ne prayer for them, for though they cry vnto me in their trouble, yet wyl I not heare
them.

O thou beloued, why wolt thou so shame- D
full greate blasphemyes in my house? Euen as thoughe that holye flesshe myght absolue
the, specially when thou hast made thy bosse of thy wyckednesse. The Lorde called the a greene olyue tree, a fayre one, a frutefull one,
a goodly one: but nowe that there is a contrarye reporte of the abyssde, he wyll burne
the vp, and destroye thy braunches. For the Lorde of hostes that planted the, hath mup-sed a plage for the (O thou house of Israell and Juda, for the euyll that ye haue done to prouoke him to wrathe, in that ye byd seruice vnto Baal.

Thou, O Lorde, hast I learned of the, and D vnderstande it: for thou hast shewed me their ymaginacions. But I (as a meke lambe) was caried awaye to be slayne: not knowing that they had deuised suche a counsell agaynste me, sayynge: we wyll destroye his meate
with wodde, and dryue him oute of the lande of the lyuynge, that his name shall neuer be thought vpon.

Therfore I wyll beseche the nowe, O Esay. xlvii. c.
Lorde of hostes, thou ryghteous iudge, thou that tryest the reynes and the hertes: let me se the auenged of them, for vnto the have I committed my cause. The Lorde therfore spake thus of the cityzyns of Anathoth, that Sapien. ii. b.
sought to slee me, sayynge: Preache not vnto Ieremy. xx. c.
vs in the name of the Lorde, or elles thou shalt dye of our handes. Thus (I saye) spake
the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyll vysyte
you. Youre younge men shall perysshe with the swerde, youre sonnes and youre doughters shall vtterly dye of hongre, so that none shall remayne. For vpon the cityzyns of A-nathoth wyll I bryngе a plage, euen yere of their visitacion.

¶ The Prophete maruayleth at the prosperitye of the wycked, although he confesse God to be ryghteous. The Jewes are forsaken of the Lorde. He speaketh agaynste Curates and preachers that seduce the people. The Lorde threteneth destruccyon vnto the nacyons that hindered Jewrye, whiche troubled and vexed it.

CAPI. XII.

O Lorde, thou arte more righteous, then A
that I shoulde dispute with the: Neuertheleffe, lette me talke with the in thinges reasonable. How happeneth it that the way of the vngodly is so prosperous? and that it goeth so wel with them which (without any shame) offend and lyue in wickednes?
Thou plantest them, they take roote, they Ee.ij. growe,

Job. xxi. d. Habac. i. b.

growe, and dryngē fo the feute. They boaſte mache of the, yet doeſt thou not punnifh them.
But thou Lorde (to whom J am wel knowē) thou that haſt fene, and proued my hert, take them awaye, lyke as a flocke is caried to the flaughter houſe, and appoynt them for ſ daye of flaughter.

How long ſhall the lande mourne, and all the herbes of the felde perifh, for the wickedneſſe of them that dwell therin?

The cattell and the byrdes are gone, yet they ſaye: enſche, God wyll not deſtroye vs vtterly.

Seinge thou arte weryc in runnynge with the fote men, how wylte thou then run with horſes? In a peaceable fure lande thou maiſt be ſafe, but how wylt thou do in the iurtions pryde of Jordane? for thy brethren and thy kynred haue all togyther deſpyſed the, and cryed oute vpon the in thyne abſence. Beleue them not, thoughe they ſpeake fayre wordes to the. As for me (ſaye J) J haue forſaken myne owne dwellynge place, and left myne heritage. My lyfe alſo that J loued ſo well, haue J geuen in to the handes of myne enne-mies. Myne heritage is become vnto me, as a lyon in the wod. It cried out vpon me, ther fore haue J forſaken it. Myne heritage is vn to me, as a ſpeckled byrde, a byrde of byuers colours is vpon it. Go bringe and gather all ſ beaſtes of the felde togyther, that they maye eate it vp.

Many herdemen haue broken downe
my vineyarde, and troden vpon my portion.
Of my pleaſaunt portion, they haue made a wylderneſſe. They haue layde it waſte: and lowe that it is waſte, it ſygheth vnto me.
Yea, the hole lande lyeth waſte, and no man
regardeth it.

The deſtroyers come ouer the heeth euery
waye, for the ſwerde of the Lorde ſhall conſume from the one ende of the land to the o-thre, and no fleſhe ſhall haue reſt. They ſhall ſow wheet, and reepe thornes. They ſhal take heritage in poſſeſſion, but it ſhall be them no good. And ye ſhal be confounded of youre owne wrynynges, becauſe of the greate wrathe of
the Lorde.

Thus ſaythe the Lorde vpon all myne
euyll neyghbours, that laye hande on myne heritage, whiche J haue geuen my people of Iſrael: Beholde, J wyll plucke them (namely Iſraell) oute of theyr lande, and put out the houſe of Juda from them. And when J haue rooted them oute, J wyll be at one with them agayne, and wyll haue mercye vpon them: and bringe them agayne (eue-ye man to his owne heritage, and in to his lande.

And yf they (namely that trouble my people) wyll learne the wayes of them to ſwere by my name: The Lorde lyueth (lyke as they learned my people to ſwere by Baal) then ſhall they be reckened among my people. But yf they wyll not obeye, then wyll J rote oute
the ſame folke, and deſtroye them ſayeth the Lorde.

The deſtruccyon of the Jewes is preſygnified, and theyr ſparpelynge abrode. Why Iſrael was re-cepued to be the people of God, and why they were forſaken.

CAPL. XIII.

MOreouer, thus ſaid the Lorde vnto me: J
go thy way and get the a lynen breche, and gyrde it about thy loynes, and let it not be wet. Then J got me a breche, ac-cordyng to the commaundemēt of the Lorde, and put it about my loynes. After this the Lorde ſpake vnto me agayne: Take ſ breche that thou haſt prepared, about the, and get the vp, and goo vnto Euphrates, and hyde it in a hole of the rocke. So wente J, and hyd it, as the Lorde commaunded me. And it happened longe after this, that the Lorde ſpake vnto me: Aryſe, and get the to Euphrates, and fet the breche thence, whiche J commaunded the to hyde there. Then wente J to Euphrates, and dygged vp, and toke ſ breche
from the place where J had hyd it: & beholde
the breche was corrupte, ſo that it was profytable for nothynge.

Then ſayd the Lorde vnto me: thus ſayth
the Lorde: euen ſo wyll J corrupt the pryde
of Juda, and the haughtie myndes of Jeruſalem.
This people is a wycked people, they will not heare my worde, they folowe the wicked ymaginations of theyr owne hert, and hange vpon ſtraunge goddes, them haue they ſerued and worſhypped: and therfore they ſhall be as this breche that ſerueth for no-thynge.

For as ſtraytly as a breche lyeth vpon a mans loynes, ſo ſtraytly dyd J ioyne the hole houſe of Iſraell, and the hole houſe of Juda vnto me, ſayeth the Lorde: that they myght be my people: that they myght haue a gloryous name: that they myght be in honoure: but they wolde not obeye me. Therfore ſaye thy ſelfe before them, and ſaye: Thus ſayeth the Lorde God of Iſrael: Euery pot ſhall be filled with wyne. And they ſhall ſaye: thynkeſt thou we knowe not that euerye pot ſhall be filled with wyne? Then ſhalte thou ſaye vnto them: Thus ſayeth the Lorde: Beholde, J ſhall fyll all the inhabytaunces of this lande
with dronkennefle, the kynges that ſyt vpon Dauids ſtole, the prieſtes and Prophetes, &
all that dwell at Jeruſalem. And J wyll ſmyte them one againſt an other, yea the fathers agaynſt the ſonnes, ſayeth the Lorde.

J wyll not pardon them, J wyll not ſpare them: ne haue pitye vpon them: but deſtroye them. Be obedient, geue eare, take no diſdayne at it, for it is the Lorde him ſelf
that ſpeaketh: Honoure the Lorde youre
God herein, or he take his lyght from you,
and or euer youre feete ſtomble in darck-nefle at the hyll: leſt when ye loke for the lyghte, he tourne it in to the ſhadowe and darckenefle of deathe. But yf ye wyll not heare me, that geue you ſecrete warnynge, J wyll mourne from my hole hrte, for youre ſtubbornefle. plentie

pytuouſly wyl J weype, and the teares ſhal falle oute of myne eyes. For the Lorde ſelfe ſhall be carryed awaye priſoners.
Fall the kynge, and the rulers: Humble youre ſelues, ſette you downe lowe: for the crowne of your glorye ſhall fall from youre heed. The cityes towarde the ſouth ſhall be ſhut vp, & no mā ſhal ope the. All Juda ſhal be caryed awaye priſoners, ſo that none ſhall remayne.

Lyft vp your eyes and beholde them that come from the North: Lyke a fat flocke ſhal they fall vpon the. To whome wylte thou make thy mone, when they come vpon the?
for then haſt taughte them thy ſelfe, & made them maſters ouer the. Shall not ſorowe come vpon the, as on a woman trauelynge with childe? And yf thou wolde ſaye then in thyne herte. Wherfore come theſe thynges vpon me? Euen for the multitude of thy diſ pleaſures, ſhal thy hynder partes and thy fete be diſcouered.

For like as the man of Inde may chaunge his ſkynne, and the cat of the mountayne her ſpottes: ſo maye ye that be exercyſed in euyl, doo good. Therfore wyll J ſcatter you, lyke as the ſtubble that is taken awaye with the South wynde. This ſhall be youre portion, and the portion of your meaſure, wherwith
ye ſhall be rewarded of me, ſayeth the Lorde:
becauſe ye haue forgotten me, and put your truſte in diſceytfull thynges. Therfore ſhall J vnwynde thy clothes ouer thy heed, and diſcouer thy thyghes, that thy pruntynes maye be ſene, thy aduoutry, thy vnely maiſter, thy bruſhynefle and thy ſhamefull hoordome.
For vpon the felides and hylles J haue ſene thy abhominacions. Woo be vnto the (O Jeruſalem) when wylte thou euer be clenſed any more?

Of the deeth that ſhoulde come in Jewrye. The fayth of the people, although mercye of the Lorde.
The vnfayth full people are not hearde. Of prayer, faſtynge, and of falſe Prophetes that diſceyue the
people.

CAPL. XIIII.

THe worde of the Lorde ſhewed vnto Jeremye, concernynge the deeth of the frutes. Juda ſhall mourne: men ſhall not goo moche more thorowe the gates: the lande ſhall be no more had in regarde, & the cye of Jeruſalem ſhall breake out. The lor-des ſhall ſende theyr ſeruauntes to fetche wa ter, and when they come to the welles, they ſhall fynde no water, but ſhall carye theyr veſſels home empteye. They ſhall be aſhamed and confounded, and ſhall couer their heedes.
for the ground ſhal be dried vp, becauſe there commeth no rayne vpon it. The plowmen al ſo ſhall be aſhamed, and ſhall couer their hee-
des. The hynde ſhal forſake the yong fawne that he bringeth forthe in the felde, becauſe
there ſhall be no graſſe. The wylde aſſes ſhal ſtande in the moſſe, and drawe in their wynde lyke the dragons, their eyes ſhall layle for wante of graſſe.

Notwithſtandynge our owne wickednefle rewarde B vs: But Lorde do thou accordyng to thy name, though our tranſgreſſions and ſynnes be many. For thou art the comforte and helpe of Iſ-rael in the tyme of trouble. Why wylte thou be as a ſtraunger in the land, and as one that goeth ouer the felde, and commeth in onely to remayne for a nyght? Why, wilt thou haue thy ſelfe a cowarde, and as it were a tyraunte that yet may not helpe? For thou art ours (O Lorde) and we beare thy name, therfore forſake vs not.

Then ſpake the Lorde concernyng this peo ple, that gaue pleaſaunce to go ſo nyghe with their fete, and leaue not of, and therfore diſ-pleaſe the Lorde: in ſo moch that he wil now begyn againe to remembraunce all their miſ-deades, and punnifh all their ſynnes. Yea, euen thus ſayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou ſhalte Jeremy. viii.
not pray to do this people good. For though they call, J wyll not heare their prayers. And though they offre burnt offerynges and ſacrifi ces, yet will not J accepte them. For J will re-ſcrope them with the ſwerde, honger and peſtilence. Then anſwered J: O Lorde God, ſ Prophetes ſaye vnto them: Loke, ye ſhall ſe C
no ſwerde, and no honger: but ſure peace ſhal Jere. xxiii. & be vnto you in this place. xxviii. xxix.

And the Lorde ſayde vnto me: The Pro
pheres preache lyes vnto them in my name.
J haue not ſpoken with them, neither gaue
J them any charge, neither dyd J lerne them:
yet they preache vnto you falſe viſions, coun-terfayte, vanitie, and deceytfulneſſe of their owne herte: Therfore thus ſayeth the Lorde
As for thoſe Prophetes that preache in my name (whom J neuertheleſſe haue not ſent)
and yet ſaye: Loke there ſhal neither bat-tayle ne honger be in this land: With ſwerde and with honger ſhall thoſe Prophetes periſh, and the people to whom they haue pre-ched, ſhal be caſt out of Jeruſalem, dye of hon ger, and be ſlayne with the ſwerde (and there ſhall be no man to burye them) both they and their wyues, their ſonnes and their doughters. For thus will J poure their wic-kednefle vpon them. This ſhalt thou ſaye al- D ſo vnto them: Myne eyes ſhall weype with- Ezech. i. k. &
out ceaſynge, daye and nyght. For my people ii. k.
ſhall be deſtroyed with great harme, and ſhal periſhe with a great plage, for if J goo in to the felde: lo, it lyeth all full of ſlayne men:
If J come in to the citye: lo, they be all ſa-miſhed of honger.

Yea, their Prophetes alſo and prieſtes ſhall
be led in to an vnknowen lande.

Haſte thou then vtterly forſaken Juda?
(ſayd J) Doth thyne ſo abhorre Sion? Or haſt thou ſo plaged vs, that we can be healed no Jremi. viii. c more? We loked for peace, and there commeth no good, for the tyme of helthe: and lo, here is no thynge but trouble. We knowlege (O Lorde) all oure myſdoers, and the ſynnes of oure fathers, that we haue offended the. Be not diſpleaſed (O Lorde) for thy names ſake, forget not thy louynge kyndnesse: Remembre the throne of thyne honour, breake not the couenaunt that thou hast made with vs. Are there anye amonge the Goddes of the Paynyms, that send rayne, or gyue the shewers of heauen? Doste not thou it, O Lorde oure God, in whom we trust? Yea Lorde, thou wilt all these thinges.

¶ The Lorde wyll not heare Moses or Aaron, yet they praye for the people, but wyll wrappe them in mauye mysteryes. The cause of suche greate mysteryes.

CAPI. XV.

Jeremi. vn.b. xxxvi.a. xxxvii.b. Ezech. xiiii.c.

THen spake the Lorde vnto me, and saide: Though Moses and Samuel stode before me, yet haue I no herte to this people. Dryue them awaye, that they maye goo out of my syghte. And yf they saye vnto the: Whyther shall we go, then tell them: The Lorde sayeth you this answere: Some vnto deathe, some to the sworde, some to honger, some into captiuite. For I wyll dyspose foure plages vpon the, sayth the Lorde. The sworde shall strangle them, the dogges shall drage them, the foules of the ayre, and beastes of the earthe shall eate them vp, and destroye them. I wyll scatter them about amonge all kyngdomes and landes to be plaged, because of Manasses the sonne of Ezechias kynge of Juda, for the thinges that he dyd in Jerusalem.

Who shall then haue pitie vpon the, O Jerusalem? Who shall be sorye for the? Or who shall make intercession to pray for the: seyng thou goest fro me, and courrest backewarde, sayeth the Lorde? Therefore I wyll stretche out myne hande agaynst the, to destroye the, and I will not be entreated. I will scatter the abrode with the fanne on euerye syde of the lande, I wyl waste my people and destroye them, for they haue had no lust to turne from their owne wayes. I wyll make their widowes moo in nombre then the sandes of the see.

Upon the mothers of their children, I shall dryng a destroyer in the noone daye. Sodeynly and vnwares shal I sende a feare vpon their cities. So that hath borne seuen children shall haue none, her herte shal be ful of sorowe.

Amos. viii.c. The sunne shall sayle her in the clere daye, when she shall be confounded and shamed for very heuynesse. As for those that remayne, I will deliuer them vnto the sweorde of their enemyes, sayeth the Lorde. O mother, alas that euer thou diddest beare me, an enemye & hated of the hole lande: Thoughe I neuer lente ne receyued vpon vsury, yet all men speake euill vpon me.

And the Lorde answered me: Lete not I the then vnto good? Come not I to the when thou art in trouble, and helpe the wt̄ thyne ennemye oppressed? Doth one yron hurt an other, or one metall that commeth frome the North another? As for youre riches no treasure, I will gyue them vnto no pray, not for anye money, but bycause of all youre synnes that ye haue wone in all youre coastes. And I wyll dryng you with youre ennemyes in to a lande that ye knowe not: for the fyre that is kindled in my indignacion, shal burne you vp.

O Lorde (sayde I then) thou knowest all thynges, therfore remembre me, and visite me, deliuer me fro my persecuters: Receyue not my cause in thy longe wrathe, yet thou knowest that for thy sake I suffre rebuke. When I had founde thy wordes, I ate them vp greedily: they haue made my herte ioyfull e glad, for I cal vpon thy name, o Lord God of hostes. I dwel not amonge the scorners, neither is my delite therin: but I dwell onely in the feare of thy hand, for thou hast filled me with hyterme. Shal my heuines endure for euer? Are my plages then so great, that they may neuer be healed? Wilt thou be as a watry fayled, and can not continue?

Upon these wordes, thus sayde the Lorde vnto me: Yf thou wylt turne agayne, I shall set the in my seruyce: and yf thou wylte take oute the thynge that is precious frome the vile, thou shalte be euen as myne owne mouthe. They shall conuerte vnto the, but turne not thou vnto them: & so shall I make the a strong wall of stele agaynst this people. They shall fyght agaynste the, but they shall not preuayle. For I my selfe wyl be with the to helpe the, and deliuer the (sayth the Lorde). And I wyll rydde the oute of the handes of the wycked, and deliuer the out of the hande of tyrannes.

¶ The prophecyeth the misery of the Jewes. Be this weth, that the worshyppynge of Idoles and the contempt of Gods lawe, is the cause of their myserie. He prophecyeth the captiuitie of Babilon, and their deliuerraunce from thence agayne. The callynge of the Gentiles.

CAPI. XVI.

MOreouer thus sayd the Lorde vnto me: Thou shalte take the no wyfe, ne begette chyldren in this place: For of the chyldren that are borne in this place, & of their mothers that haue borne them, and of their fathers that haue begotten them in this lande, thus sayethe the Lorde: They shall dye an horrible deathe, no man shall mourne for them, ne burye them: but they shall lye as donge vpon the earthe. They shall perysshe eyther wt̄ the sworde and honger, and their bodyes shall be meate for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the earthe. Agayne, thus sayth the Lorde: Go not vnto them, that come togyther for to mourne and wepe: for I haue taken my peace frome this people (sayth the Lorde) yea my fauour and my mercy. And in this land shal they dye, both and ponge, and shall not be buryed: no man shall bewayle, no man shall clyp or shaue him selfe for them.

Ther shall not one byde at an other, to mourne with them for their deed, or to comforte them. One shall not offre an other the cupp of consolacion, to forget their heuines for father and mother. Thou shalt not go in to their feaste house, to syt downe, much lesse to eate or drynke with them. For thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I shall take awaye oute of this place, the voyce of myrthe and gladnesse, the voyce of the brydegrome and of the bryde: yea and that in youre dayes, that ye may se it.

Now when thou shewest this people all these wordes, and they say vnto the: Wherfore hath the Lorde denysed all this greate plage for vs? Or what is the offence and syn that we haue done agaynste the Lorde oure God? Then make thou them this answere: Because youre fathers haue forsaken me (sayth the Lorde) & haue cleued vnto straunge goddes, whom they haue honoured and worshypped: but me haue they forsaken, and haue not kepte my lawe. And ye with your shamefull blasphemyes & synnes, wherwith ye haue defyled my lande: Namely with your stinkyng Idols and abhominacions, wherewith they haue fylled myne heritage, O Lorde, my strength, my power, and refuge in tyme of trouble. The Gentiles shall come vnto the, from the endes of the worlde, and saye: Verelye oure fathers haue cleued vnto lyes, their Idole are but vayne and vnprofitable. How can a man make vnto his goddes, whiche are not able to be goddes. And therfore I wyll once teache them, sayethe the Lorde, I wyll shewe them my hande and my power, that they maye knowe that my name is the Lorde.

¶ The frowardnesse of the Jewes. Cursed be those that put their confydence in man, and those blessed that trust to God. Mannes hert is wycked. God is the searcher of the hert. The lyuyng waters are forsaken. The halowynge of the Sabboth is commaunded.

CAPI. XVII.

YOure synne (O ye of the tribe of Juda) is written in the table of your hertes, and grauen so vpon the edges of youre altres with a penne of yron and with an Adamant clawe: that youre children also may think vpon your altres, wodes, thicke trees, hyghe hylles, mountaynes and feldes. Wherfore I wyll make all youre substaunce and treasure be spoyled, for the greate synne that ye haue done vpon your hygh places thorow out all the coastes of youre lande. Ye shall be caste out also frome the heritage, that I gaue you. And I wyll subdue you vnder the hye bondage of youre ennemyes, in a lande that ye knowe not. For ye haue mynysshed fyre to my indignacion, whiche shall burne euermore. Thus sayth the Lorde: Cursed be the man that putteth his truste in man and that taketh flesh for his arme: and he, whose herte departeth fro me the Lorde. He shalbe lyke the heeth, that groweth in the wyldernes. As for the good thing that is for to come, he shal not se it: but dwell in a dye place of the wyldernes, in a salt and vnoccupied lād. Jere. xl. b. Psal. xl. b. Prou. xxviii. a.

* O blessed is the mā, that putteth his trust in the Lorde, and whose hope is the Lorde him selfe. * For ye shall be as a tree, that is planted by the waters syde: whiche spredeth oute the rote vnto moysture, whome the heate can not harme, when it commeth, but his leaues are grene. And though there grow but lytle fruite because of drouthe, yet is he not careful: but he neuer leaueth of to bring forthe fruite. Amonge all thinges lyuynge, man hath the most deceytfull and vnsercha-dible herte. Psal. i. a.

Who shall then knowe it? Euen I the Lorde searche out the grounde of the herte, and trye the reynes, and rewarde euery man accordynge to his wayes, and accordinge to the fruite of his counsels. Rome. ii. c.

The deceytfull maketh a nest, but bringeth forth no young: he commeth by riches but not rightfully. In the myddest of his life muste he leaue them behynde him, and at the last be fonde a very foole. But thou (O Lord) whose trone is moste glorious, excellent and of moste antiquite, whiche dwellest in the place of oure holy rest: Thou arte the comforte of Israell. All they that forsake the, shall be confounded: all they that departe from the, shall be written in earthe, for they haue forsaken the Lorde the very condyte of the waters of lyfe. Ipocra. ii. a. Psal. xxxvi. c. i. Reg. xxvi. b.

Heale me, O Lorde, and I shall be holesaue thou me, and I shall be saued, for thou arte my prayse. Beholde, these men saye vnto me: Where is the worde of the Lord? Let it come. Where as I neuertheles leadinge the flocke in thy wayes, haue compelled none by vyolence. For I neuer delyred any mans death, this knowest thou well. My wordes also were right before the. Be not nowe terrybie vnto me, O Lorde, for thou art he in whom I hope, when I am in perpl. Let my persecuters be confounded, but not me: let them be afrayde, and not me. Thou shalte bringe vpon them the tyme of theyr plage, and shalte destroy them right sore.

Agayne, thus hath the Lorde sayde vnto me: Go and stande vnder the gate, where thyrowe the people and the kynges of Juda go out and in, yea vnder all the gates of Jerusalem, and say vnto them: Heare the word of the Lorde, ye kynges of Juda, and al thou people of Juda, and all ye inhabitans of Jerusalem, that go thyrowe this gate: Thus the Lorde commaundeth: Take hede for youre lyues, that ye carye no burthen vpon you in the Sabboth, to bringe it thyrowe the gates of Jerusalem: ye shall beare no burthen also owte of youre houses in the Sabboth. Ye shall do no labour therin, but halowe the Sabboth, as I commaunded youre fathers. How be it they obeyed me not, neither herkened they vnto me: but were obstinate and stubburne, and neither obeyed me, nor receyued my correction. Nathelles, yf ye will heare me (sayth the Lorde) and beare no burthen in to the cyte thyrowe this gate vpon the Sabboth: yf ye will halowe the Sabboth, So that ye do no worke therin: then shal there go thyrow ꝑ gates of this city, kinges and princes, that shall syt vpon the stoole of Dauid: They shalbe caryed vpō charettes and ryde vpon horses, both they and theyr princes. Yea whole Juda and all the citesins of Jerusalem shal go here thyrowe, and this cyte shall euer be the more and more inhabited. There shall come men also from the cyties of Juda, from about Jerusalem, and from the land of Ben Jamin, from the playne fields, from the mountaynes and from the wyldernesse: whyche shall bringe burnt offrynges, sacrifices, oblations, and incense, and offre thanckesgrupnge in the house of the Lorde. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto me, to halowe the Sabboth, so that ye will beare youre burthens thyrowe the gates of Jerusalem vpon the Sabboth: Then shall I set fyre vpon the gates of Jerusalem, and it shall burne vp the tye houses of Jerusalē, and no man shalbe able to quenche it.

¶ God theweth by the example of a potter, that he is in his power to destroye the despysers of his worde, and to helpe them again when they amend. The conspiracye of the Jewes agaynst Jeremye. His prayer agaynst his aduersaryes.

CAPI. XVIII.

A THis is an other communycacion, that God had with Jeremy, sayinge: Arise, and go downe in to the Potters house, and there shall I tell the more of my mynde. Nowe when I came in to the Potters house I founde him madynge his worke vpon a whele. The vessell that the Potter made of claye, brake amonge his handes: So he beganne a newe, and made an other vessell, according to his mynde. Then sayde the Lord thus vnto me: Maye not I do with you, as this Potter doth, O ye house of Israel, sayth the Lorde? Beholde, ye house of Israel: ye are in my hand, euen as the claye in the Potters hande.

B When I take in hande to rote out, to destroye, or to waste awaye anye people or kingdome: yf that people (agaynste whome I haue thus deuyded) conuerte from theyr wickednesse: Immediatly, I repent of the plage that I deuyded to bryng vpon them. Agayne when I take in hande, to buylde, or to plante a people or a kyngdome: yf the same people do euyll before me, and heare not my voyce: Immediatly, I repent of the good, that I deuyse to do for them.

Speake nowe therfore vnto thole Jude, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Thus sayth the Lorde: Beholde, I am deuyding a plage for you, and am takynge a thinge in hande agaynst you.

C Therfore let euery man turne frome his euyll waye, take vpon you the thinge that is good, and do vyght. But they say: No more of this, we will folowe owre owne ymaginacyons, and do euery man according to the wyckednesse of his owne mynde.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Aske amonge the Heathen, yf any man herde suche horryble thinges, as the daughter of Israel hath done. Shal not the snow (that melteth vpon the stony rockes of Lybanus) neuer leue? Or may the sprynges of waters be so grauen awaye, that they cease no more? Yet my people hath forgotten me, that they haue made sacrifice vnto vayne goddes. And whyle they folowed theis owne wayes, they are come out of the vyght lyfe, and geuen to a false waye not vsed to be troden. Yea thyrowe they haue brought theyr landes into an euerlastynge wyldernesse and scorne: so that whosoeuer passeth thereby, shalbe abashed, and wagge theyr heades. Why an Esaie wyll I scatter them, before their enemyes. And when theyr destruction cometh I will turne my backe vpon them, but not my face. Then sayde they: come, let vs ymagyn some thinge agaynste this Jeremye. Yea this ordeyned euen the prestes, to whome the law was committed: the Senatours, that were the wyseste: and the Prophetes whose word ded not the word of God. Come (sayde they) let vs cut out his tunge, and let vs not regarde his wordes. Consyder me, O Lorde, I harke the voyce of myne enemyes. Do they not recompence euyll for good, when they digge a pyt for my soule? Remembre, howe that I stode before the, to speake for them, and to tourne awaye thy wrath frome them.

Therfore let theyr children dye of hunger, and let them be oppressed with the swearde. Let theyr wyues be robbed of theyr children, and become wydowes: let theyr husbandes be slayne, let theyr yonge men be killed with the swearde in the felde. Let there a noyse be herde out of theyr houses, when ꝑ murtherer commeth sodenly vpon them: For they haue digged a pit to take me, and layed snares for my fete. Yet Lorde, thou knowest all theis councell, that they haue deuyded to slaye me. Ron. 11. Clem. Forgeue therfore sorgyue them not theyr wyckednes, and let not theyr synne be put out of thy syght: but let them be iudged before the as the cyte: This shalt thou do vnto them in the tyme of thy indignacion.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruccyon of Jerusalem. for contempt and despysynge of the worde of God,

CAPI. XIX.

1 MOreouer, thus sayde the Lorde vnto Jeremye: Go thy waye, and bye the an earthen pitcher, and bryng forth thy Senatours, and cheefe prestes into the valley of the children of Hinnom, which lyeth before the port that is made of bryckes, and shewe them there the wordes, that I shall tell the, and say thus vnto them: Heare the worde of the Lord, ye kynges of Juda, and ye cytezins of Jerusalem: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wil bring suche a plage vpon this place, that the eares of all that heareth it, shall glowe. And that be cause they haue forsake me, and vnhalowed this place, and haue offred in it vnto straūge goddes: whome neyther they, their fathers, ne the kynges of Juda haue knowen. They haue fylled this place also with the bloude of innocentes, for they haue set vp an aulter vnto Baal, to burne their childre for a burnt offrynge vnto Baal, whyche I neyther commaunded, ne charged them, neyther thought vpon therupon.

2 Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (saith the Lorde) that this place shall no more be called Topheth, ne the valley of the children of Hennom, but the valley of slaughter. For in this place will I slaye the Senatours of Juda and Jerusalem, and kyll them downe with the swearde in the syght of theyr ennemyes, and of them that seke their lyues. And their dead carcases wyll I geue to be meate for the fowles of the ayre, and beastes of the felde. And I will make this cyte so desolate, and despysed: that who so goeth therby, shal be abashed and hisse vpon her, because of all the plages.

3 * I will fede them also with the fleshe of their sonnes and their doughters. Yea euery one shall eate vp an other in the besegynge & straytnesse, wherewith their ennemyes (that seke their lyues) shall kepe them in. And the pytcher shalt thou breake in the syght of the men, that shall be with the, and saye vnto them: Thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes: euen so will I destroye this people and cyte: as a Potter breketh a vessel, that can not be made hole agayne.

4 In Topheth shall they be buried, for they shall haue none other place. This wyll I do vnto this place also, sayeth the Lorde, and to them that dwell therin: Yea I will doo to this cyte, as vnto Topheth (For the houses of Jerusalem and the houses of the kynges of Juda are defiled, like as Topheth) because of all the houses, in whose parlers they burnt sacrifice vnto all the hoste of heauen, and poured out drynke offrynges vnto straunge goddes. And so Jeremy came from Topheth where the Lorde had sent him to prophecye & stode in the court of the house of the Lorde and spake to all the people: Thus sayeth the Lord of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll bringe vpon this cyte and vpon ducy to wne about it, al the plages that I haue deuyded against theym: for they haue bene obstynate, and wolde not obeye my warnynges. 4. Reg. xxiii.

¶ Jeremye is smytten and caste in to prison, for preachynge of the worde of God. He prophecyeth the captiuite of Babylon. He complayneth that he is a mockynge stocke, for the worde of God. He is compelled by the spyrete to preache the worde, wyll he wyll he not.

CAPI. XX.

1 WHen Phashur the preaste, the sonne of Emer, chefe in the house of the Lorde, herde Jeremye preache so stedfastly: he smote Jeremye, and put him in the stockes, that are by the hygh gate of Ben Jamin, in the house of the Lorde. The next daye folowynge Phasha: brought Jeremye out of the stockes agayne. Then sayde Jeremye vnto him: The Lord hal cal the no more Phashur (that is excellent and increasynge) but Magor (that is fearefull and afrayed) euery where. For thus sayeth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll make the afrayed, the thy selfe, and all that fauoure the: whych shall perysche with the swearde of their ennemyes, euen before thy face.

2 And I wyll geue hole Juda vnder the power of the kynge of Babylon, whyche shal cary some vnto Babylon pryseners, and slay some with the swearde. Moreouer, all the substaunce of this lande, all theire precyous and gorgeous workes, all costlynes, and all the treasure of the kynges of Juda: wyll I geue into the handes of theyr ennemyes whyche shall spoyle them, and carye theym vnto Babylon. But as for the (O Phashur) thou shalte be caryed vnto Babylon with al thine houshold, and to Babylon shalte thou come where thou shalte dye, and be buryed: thou and al thy fauoures, to whom thou hast prophecyed lyes. O Lorde, thou makest me weake, but thou refreshest me, and makest me strong agayne. All the daye longe am I despysed and laughed to scorne of euery man: because I haue now preached long agaynste malicious tyranny, and shewed them of destruccio. For the whiche cause they call the worde of the Lorde in my earth, and take me euer to the

worlde.

Wherefore, I thought from hence forthe not to speake of him, ne to preache any more in his name. But the worde of the Lorde was a very burnynge fyre in my herte and in my bones, wherfore when I wolde haue stopped I myght not. For why, I herde so many reuylyons and blaspheymyes, yea euen of myne owne companyons, and of suche as were conuersaunt with me: with the wiche I dwelte, to make me afrayed, sayinge: vpon him, let vs go vpon him, to teare hym, and make him tolde his tonge: that we may ouercom him and be auenged of him.

But the Lorde stode by me, lyke a mysshepe graunt: therfore my persecutours fell, and coulde do nothynge. They shalbe ouer confounded, for they haue wrought vnwiselye, they shal haue an euerlastynge shame. And now, O Lorde of hoostes, thou rygh teous serchest (wha eye knoweth the reynes and the very herte) let me se them punysshed, for vnto the I committe my cause.

Jere. xvii. b

Jeremy. xii. D

Synge vnto the Lorde and prayse hym, for he hath delyuered the soule of the oppressed, from the hande of the wycked. Curssed be the daye, wherin I was borne: blessed be the daye wherin my mother brought me forth. Cursed be the man, that brought my father tydynges, to make him glad, sayinge: thou hast gotten a sonne. Let it happen vnto that man, as to the cities which the Lord turned vpsyde downe (when he had hearde longe the wicked rumoure of them) because he slewe me not, as sone as I came oute of my mothers wombe, and because my mother was not my graue her selfe, that the byrthe might not haue come out, but remayned hyd in her. Wherfore came I forth of my mothers wombe? To haue experience of labource and sorowe? and to lede my lyfe with shame?

Job iii. a

¶ The prophesyeth that Zedekiah shall be taken, and the cytye burned.

CAPI. XXI.

THese are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy what tyme as king Zedekiah sent vnto him Phashur the sonne of Melchiah, and Sophonias the son of Maasiah preaste, sayinge: Aske counsell at the Lorde (we praye the) of oure behalfe, for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon besiegeth vs, if the Lorde (peraduenture) will deale with vs, accordyng to his meruelous power, and take hym from vs.

Then spake Jeremy. Vnto Zedekiah this answere. Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: beholde, I will euene backe the weapons, that ye haue in youre handes, wherewith ye fyghte agaynste the kynge of Babylon and the Caldees, which besege you rounde about the walles, and I will bringe them together into the myddest of this cytye, and I my selfe will fyghte agaynst you, with an out stretched hande, and with a myghtye arme, in greate displeasure and terrible wrathe, and wyll smyte them, that dwell in this cytie: yea both men and cattell shall dye of the pestilence.

And after this (sayeth the Lorde) I shall delyuer Zedekiah the kyng of Juda and his seruauntes, his people (and suche as are escaped in the cytye, from the pestylence, sweard, and honger) into the power of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon: yea into the handes of their enemyes, in to the handes of them that folowe vpon their lyues, whiche shall smyte them with the sweard: they shal not pytye them, they shall not spare them, they shal haue no mercye vpon them.

And vnto this people thou shalte saye: Thus sayeth the Lorde: ✻ beholde, I laye before you the waye of lyfe and deeth. Whosoeuer abydeth in this cytye, shall perysshe: either with the sweard, with honger, or with pestylence. But who so goeth out to holde on the Chaldees parte, that besege it, he shall saue his lyfe, and shal wynne his soule for a praye. For I haue set my face agaynst this cytye (sayth the Lorde) to plage it, and to do it no good. It muste be gyuen in to the handes of the kynge of Babilon, and he brent with fyre.

And vnto the house of the kynge of Juda, saye thus: heare the worde of the Lorde (O thou house of Dauid) for thus sayth the Lorde: Minyster ryghteousnesse, and that soone, deliuer the oppressed from violent power: or elles my terrible wrath breake out like a fyre, and burne so, that no man maye quench it, because of the wickednesse of youre ymaginacions. Beholde, (sayeth the Lorde) I will come vpon you, that dwell in the valleye, rockes and felde, and say: Tushe: who wil make vs afrayed? or who wyll come in to our houses? For I wyl vysit you, sayeth the Lorde) because of the wickednesse of youre inuencions, and wyll kyndle fyre in youre wod, as shall consume all, that is about you.

¶ He exhorteth the kynge of Juda to iudgement and ryghteousnesse. why Jerusalem is brought in to captyuite. The death of Sellum the sonne of Josias is prophesyed.

CAPI. XXII.

THus sayde the Lorde also: Go down into the house of the kynge of Juda, & speake there these wordes, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thou kynge of Juda that sytteste in the kyngly seate of Dauid: thou and thy seruauntes and thy people that go in and out at this gate. Thus the Lorde commaundeth: Kepe equite and ryghteousnes, deliuer the oppressed from the power of the violent: do nat greue ne oppresse the straunger, the fatherlesse ne the widowe, and shede no innocent bloode in this place. And if ye kepe these thinges faythfully, then shall there come in at the dore of this house kynges to syt vpon Dauids seate, they shall be caryed in charettes and vpon horses, both they and their seruauntes, and their people. But yf ye will not be obedient vnto these commaundementes, I swere by mine owne selfe (sayeth the Lorde) this house shall be waste. For thus hathe the Lorde spoken vpon the kynges house of Juda: Thou arte me dear, as Galaad is in Libanus: What wylt thou saye of it, yf I make the not so waste (and thy cities also) that no man shall dwell therin? I wyl prepare a destroyer with his weapons for the, to hewe downe thy chefest Cedre trees, and to caste them in the fyre.

And all the people that go by this cytye, shall speake one to another: wherfore hath the Lorde done thus vnto this noble cytye? Then shall it be answered: ✻ because they haue broken the couenaunt of the Lorde their God, and haue worshypped & serued straunge goddes. Weepe not ouer the dead, and be not wo for them, but be sory for him that departeth away: for he commeth not agayne and seeth his natiue countrey no more. For thus sayeth the Lorde, as touchynge Sellum the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, whiche raygned after his father, and is caryed oute of this place: he shall neuer come hyther agayne, for he shal dye in the place, whereunto he is led captyue, & shal se this lande no more.

Wo vnto him, that buyldeth his house with vnryghteousnes, and his parlers with the good that he hath gotten by violence: which neuer recompenseth his neyghbours labour ne payeth him his hyre. He chynketh with him selfe: I wyll buylde me a wyde house and goodly parlers: He causeth wyndowes to be hewen therin, and the selynges & gates maketh he of Cedre, and paynteth it with Cynober. Thinkest thou to raigne nowe that prouokest me to wrath with the Cedre trees?

Dyd not thy father eate and drynke, and prospere well, as longe as he dele with equite and ryghteousnes? Yea when he helped the oppressed & poore to their ryght then prospered he well.

From whence came this, but onely because he had me before his eyes, sayeth the Lorde. Neuertheles, as for thyne eyes and thyne hert, they loke vpon couetousnesse, to shed innocent bloode, to do wronge and violence. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde agaynste Jehoakim, the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda: They shall not mourne for him (as they vse to wayle brother, alas sister: neither shal they saye vnto him: Alas syr, alas for that noble prince. But as an Asse shall he be buryed, corupt and be caste without the gates of Jerusalem.

Clymme vp the hyl of Libanus (O thou daughter Sion) lyfte vp thy voyce vpon Basan, cry from all partes: for all thy louers are vtterly destroyed. I gaue the warnynge, whyle thou wast yet in prosperyte. But thou sayest: I will not heare. And this maner hast thou vsed from thy youth, that thou wouldest neuer heare my voyce. All thy heedmen shall be dryuen with the wynde, and thy louers gyues shall be caryed away into captyuyte: Then shalte thou be ashamed and confused vpon, because of all thy wickednesse. O thou that dwellest vpon Libanus, and makest thy nest in the Cedre trees. O how greate shall thy mournynge be, when thy sorowes come vpon the, as a woman trauelyng with chylde?

As truelye as I lyue (sayethe the Lorde) Though Conanias the sonne of Jehoakim kynge of Juda were the signet of my ryghte hande, yet wyll I plucke him of: And I wyl gyue the into the power of them that seke to slaye the, and into the power of them that thou feareste: in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, and in to the power of the Caldees. Moreouer, I wyll sende the, and thy mother that bare the, in to a straunge lande, where ye were not borne and there shall ye dye. But as for the lande that ye wyll desyre to returne vnto, ye shall neuer come at it agayne. This man Conanias shal be lyke an ymage robbed and torne in peces, whiche pleaseth no man, for all his apparell. Wherfore doth he and his seed shal be sent awaye, and cast out into a lande, that they knowe not.

O thou earthe, earthe, earthe: heare the worde of the Lorde: Write this man amōg the outlawes, for no prosperyte shall this man haue all his lyfe long. Neither shall any of his seed be so happye, as to syt vpon the seate of David, and to beare rule in Juda.

¶ He speaketh agaynst euyll curates that make hauocke of the flocke of the Lorde. Of the conuersyon of the remnaūt of the Jewes to the fayth. The commynge of the true shepherde Christ is prophesyed. Agaynst false prophetes. when a prophet preacheth the worde of God. God conuerteth the hertes of the hearers. Agaynst prophetes that preache lyes vnder the name of God. The myracles of false prophetes.

CAPI. XXIII.

WO be vnto the shepherdes, that destroye and scatre my flocke, sayeth the Lorde. Wherfore, this is the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, vnto the shepherdes that fede my people: Ye scatre and thrust out my flocke, and loke not vpon them. Therfore nowe wyll I vysit the wickednesse of youre ymaginacions, sayeth the Lorde: And wyl gather to gether the remnaunt of my flocke frome all landes that I had dryuen them vnto, and wyll bringe them agayne to their pastures, that they maye growe and increase. I wyll set shepeherdes also ouer them, which shall fede them: They shall no more feare and dreade, for there shall none of them be lost, sayeth the Lorde. Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lorde, that I wyll rayse vp the righteous braunche of David, whiche shal beare rule, and discus matters with wysdome, and shall set vp equite and ryghteousnesse a gayne in earth.

In his tyme shall Juda be saued and Israell shall dwell without feare. And this is the name that they shall call hym: euen the Lorde oure ryghteous maker. And therfore beholde, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord, that it shall no more be sayde: the Lorde lyueth, which brought the chyldren of Israell out of the lande of Egypte: But the Lorde lyueth, which brought forth, and led the seed of the house of Israel, out of the North land, and from all countreyes where I had scatered them and they shall dwell in their owne lande agayne.

My herte breaketh in my bodye, because of the false Prophetes, all my bones shake: I am become lyke a dronken man (that by the reason of wyne can take no rest) for very feare of the Lorde, and of his holy wordes: Because the lad is full of aduoutrers, where throwe it is destroyed and mourneth, and the pleasaunt pastures of the desert are dryed vp. Yea the waye that men take, is wycked, and their countenaunce is nothynge lyke the holy worde of the Lorde. For the prophetes & the preestes them selues are polluted hypocrites, and euen wycked dueldo I fownde in my house, sayth the Lorde. Wherfore, their way shal be slypperye in the darknes, wherin they may stomble and fal. For I wyll bring a plage vpon them, euen the yeare of their vysitacion, sayth the Lorde. I haue sene folye amonge the Prophetes of Samaria, that they prophecyed for Baal, & caused my people of Israell.

Jeremy.xxiii.b

I haue sene also among the Prophetes of Jerusalem foule aduoutrye, and presumptuous lyes. They take the moste wametull men by the handes, flatteringe them, so that they can not returne from their wickednes. All these with their cytezyns are vnto me, as Sodome, and as the inhabytoures of Gomorer.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes concerninge the prophetes: Beholde, I wyll feede them with wormwod, and make them drynke the water of gall. For from the prophetes of Jerusalem is the syckenes of hypocrysye come into all the lande.

D Jeremi.xxiii & xxiii.b

And therfore the Lorde of hoostes giueth you this warninge: Heare not the wordes of the prophetes, that preach vnto you, and deceyue you: for they speake the meaninge of their owne herte, and not oute of the mouth of the Lorde. They saye vnto them, that dispise me: The Lorde hath spoken it: Truly, ye shall prosper ryght well. And vnto all them, that walke after the lust of their owne herte, they saye: Tushe, there shall no mischefe come happen you. For who hath stoden in the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath herde and vnderstande, what he is about to doo: Who hath marked his waice, an herde it? Beholde, the stormy wether of the Lorde (that is, his indignacion) shal go forth, and shal fal downe vpon the heed of the vngodly. And the wrath of the Lorde shall not turne agayne, till he performe and fulfyll the thought of his herte. And in the latter dayes ye shall knowe this meanynge.

I haue not sent these Prophetes (sayth the Lorde) and yet they ranne. I haue not spoken to them, and yet they preached. But yf they habde contynued in my counsell and herde my wordes: they had turned my people from their cupill wayes and wycked ymaginacions. Am I then God that seeth but the thynge, whiche is nygye at handes, and not that is farre of? sayth the Lorde. Maye any man hyde hym selfe so, that I shal not se hym? sayth the Lorde. Do not I fulfyl heauen and earthe? sayth the Lorde. I haue herde well ynoughe, what the Prophetes saye, that preache lyes in my name, sayinge: I haue dreamed, I haue dreamed. How longe wyll this contynue in the prophetes hertes, to tell lyes, & to preache the crafty subtylte of their owne herte? Whose purpose is (with the dreames that euery one tell) to make my people forgette my name, as their fore fathers dyd, when Baal came vp. The prophet that hathe a dreame, let him tell it: and he that vnderstandeth my worde, let him shewe it faythfully.

For what hath chaffe and wheat to do together? sayth the Lorde. Is not my worde lyke a fyre, sayth the Lord, and lyke an hammer, that breaketh the harde stone? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I wyll vpon the Prophetes, that steale my wordes priuylye from euery man. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste the Prophetes, that take vpon their tunges to speake: The Lorde hath sayd. Beholde, here am I (sayth the Lorde) agaynste those Prophetes, that darre prophesye lyes, and discerne my people with their vanyties, & myracles, whom I neuer sent, ne commaunded them. They shall do this people greate harme, sayth the Lorde.

If this people, eyther any Prophete or preste aske the, and saye: what is the burthe of the Lorde? Thou shalte saye vnto them: What burthen? Therfore will I caste you fro me (sayth the Lorde) because ye your selues are a burthen. And the Prophete, preest or people that vseth this terme (the burthen of the Lorde) vpon whit I vyset, and his house also.

But thus shall ye saye, euery one to an other: What answere hath the Lorde geuen? or, what is the Lordes commaundement? And as for the burthen of the Lorde, ye shal speake no more of it: for euery mans owne word is his burthen, because ye haue altered the wordes of the lyuynge God the Lorde of Hostes our God.

Thus shall euerye man saye to the prophetes: what answere hath the Lorde geuen the? Or what sayth the Lorde? And not once to name the burthen of the Lorde. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: For so moche as ye haue vsed this terme (the burthe of the Lorde) where as I not withstandinge sent vnto you and forbade you to speake of the Lordes burthen.

Beholde therfore I will repute you as a burthe lessen, and will cast you out of my presence: ye and the cite also, that I gaue you & your fathers: and will bring you to an euerlasting confusion, and to suche a shame as shal neuer be forgotten.

The vyson of the two pannyers of fygges. The tyme vpon vnryghteth, that parte of the people shulde be brought agayne from captyuyte. The lernede, that Sedechias and the rest of the people shulde be destroyed.

CAPI. XXIIII.

The Lorde shewed me a vision: Beholde there stode two maundes of fygges before the temple of the Lorde, after that Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon had led away captyue Jechonah the sonne of Joakim kynge of Juda, the myghtye men also of Juda, with the worke maisters, and conynge men of Jerusalem vnto Babylon. In the one maunde were very good fygges, euen lyke as thoi that be fyrst rype. In the other maunde were verye naughtye fygges, whiche myghte not be eaten, they were so cupil. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: What seest thou Jeremy? I sayde: fygges, wherof some be very good, and some so cupil, that no man may eate them.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, after this maner: Thus sayth the Lorde the God of Israell: lyke as thou knowest these good fygges, so shall I knowe the men lede away, whome I haue sente out of this place into the landes of the Caldees, for their profyt: and I wyll set myne eyes vpon them for their welfare, for I wyll bringe them agayne into this lande: I wil buylde them vp, and not breake them downe: I will plant them, and not roote them oute. And I wyll gyue them an herte, to knowe howe that I am the Lorde. They shall be my people, and I wil be their God, for they shall returne vnto me with their whole herte.

And lyke as thou knowest the naughtye fygges, whiche maye not be eaten, they are so cupil: Euen so wyll I (sayth the Lorde) let Sedechias the kynge of Juda, (ye and all his princes, and the residue of Jerusalem that remayne oute in this lande, and them also that dwell in Egypte) to be vexed and plaged in all kyngdomes and landes. And wyll make them to be a reproffe, a comon by worde, a laughynge stocke and shame, in all the places where I shall scatter them. I wyll sende the swerde, honger, and pestylence amonge them, vntyll I haue cleane consumed them out of the lande that I gaue vnto them and their fathers.

Jeremye prophecyeth, that they shall be in captyuyte thre score and ten yeares, because they contemned and despysed the worde of God. He sheweth that after thre score and ten yeares, the Babylonians shoulde be destroyed. The destruction of all nacions is prophecyed. He mouneth the greatnes of his sorowe to waylynge.

CAPI. XXV.

A Sermon that was gyuen vnto Jeremye, vpon all the people of Juda. In the fourthe yere of Joakim the sonne of Josias kynge of Juda, that was in the fyrste yere of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon. Whiche sermon Jeremye the Prophete made vnto all the people of Juda, and to all the inhabitoures of Jerusalem on this maner.

From the thyrtenth yere of Josias the son of Amon kynge of Juda, vnto this presente daye (that is euen thre and twenty yere) the worde of the Lorde hath ben committed vnto me. And so I haue spoken to you, I haue eyten vp earlye, I haue gyuen you warninge in season, but ye wolde not heare me. Lykewyse the Lorde hathe sente his seruauntes, all the Prophetes vnto you in season: Yet wolde ye not obeye, ye wolde not enclyne youre eares to heare.

He sayd: Tourne agayne euery man from his cupill waye, and from your wycked ymaginacions, and so shall ye dwelle for euer in the lande, that the Lorde promysed you and youre forefathers: and go not vnto straunge goddes, serue them not, worshyp them not, and angre me not with the workes of youre handes: then wyll not I punysshe you. Neuertheles, ye wolde not heare me (sayth the Lorde) but haue kyndled me with the workes of youre handes, to youre owne greate harme.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Forasmuche as ye haue not harkened vnto my worde: lo, I wyll sende oute and call for all the people that dwell in the North, sayth the Lorde, and wyll prepare Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunte, and wyll bringe them vpon this lande, and vpon all that dwell therin, and vpon all the people that are aboute them, and wyll vtterly roote them oute. I wyll make of them a wyldernesse, a mockage, and a contynuall desolate.

Moreouer, I wyll take from them the voyce of gladnesse and solace, the voyce of the bridegrome and the bryde, the voyce of the anoynted, with the swetsherers: and this hole lande shall become a wilderneste, and they shall serue the sayd people, and the kyng of Babylon thre score yeres and ten. When the thre score and tenne yeres are expyred, I wyll vysyte also the wickednesse of the kyng of Babylon and his people, sayth the Lorde: yea and the lande of the Caldees, and wyll make it a perpetual wyldernesse, and will fulfyll all my wordes vpon that lande, whiche I haue deuysed agaynste it: yea, all that is wrytten in this boke, whiche Jeremye hathe prophecyed of all people: so that they also shall be subdued vnto diuers nacions & great kynges, for I wyll requyte them according to their dedes and workes of their owne handes.

For thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken vnto me: Take this wyne cup of indignacion

Jerem.xlvi.b. dignacion fro my hand, that thou maist cause all the people to whome I sende the, for to drynke of it: that when they have dronken therof, they may be mad and out of their wittes, when the swerde commeth, that I will sende amonge them. Then toke I the cuppe from the Lordes hand, and made all the people, drynke therof, unto whom the Lorde had sente me.

C But fyrste the cittye of Jerusalem, and all the cyties of Juda, their kynges and princes: to make them wyldate, waste, despised and cursed, as it is come to passe this daye. Yea, and Pharao kyng of Egypte, his servauntes, his princes, and his people all together one with an other, and all kynges of the lande of Hus, all kynges of the Philistines lande, Ascalon: Azah, Accaron and the rest of Asdod, the Edomites, the Moabites, and the Ammonites, all the kynges of Tyrus and Sidon: the kinges of the Iles, beyonde the see: Dedan, Thema, Buz, and the shaven Ismaelites: all the kynges of Arabye, and (generallye) all the kynges that dwell in the wyldernesse: all the kynges of Zamri, all the kynges of Elam, all the kynges of Medes, all kynges towarde the Northe, farre or nye, excepe one with his neyghboures: Yea, all the kyngdomes that are upon the wyde earthe. The kynge of Sesach, layde he, shall drynke with them also.

And say thou unto them: This is the commaundement of the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Drynke and be dronken, spewe and fall that ye never ryse: and that thorow the swerde, whiche I will sende amonge you. But yf they will not receyve the cuppe of thy hande, and drynke it, then tell them: Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes threten you: drynke it ye shall, and that shortly. For lo, I begyn to plage the cittye that my name is called unto: thynke ye then, that I will leave you unpunyshed? Ye shall not goo cleare. For why, I call for a swerde upon all inhabitaunces of the earth, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Jerem.xlix.b Ezech.xxi.b 1 Petri.iiii.c.

Therfore tell them all these wordes, and say unto them: The Lorde shall crye from above, and let his voyce be herde frome his holy dwellynge place. With a greate noyse shall he crye fromt his courte regall. He shall gyve a greate voyce (lyke the grape gatherers) and the sounde therof shall be herde unto the endes of the worlde. For the Lorde hathe a iudgement to gyve upon all people, and will holde his courte of iustyce with all fleshe and punysshe the ungodly, sayth the Lorde.

Jerem.xxv.c G For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, a myserable plage shall goo frome one people to an other, and a greate tempest shall aryse frome all the endes of the earthe. And the same daye shall the Lorde himself slee them, frome one ende of the earthe to an other. There shall no lamentacion be made for any of them, none gathered up, nether buryed: but shall lye as dung upon the grounde.

Mourne, ye shepherdes, and crye: splatte your selves with asshes, ye rammes of the flocke: for the tyme of your slaughter is fulfilled, and ye shall fall lyke vessels commagly made for pleasure.

The shepherdes shall have no waye to flye, and the rammes of the flocke shal not escape. Then shall the shepherdes crye horrible, and the rammes of the flocke shall mourne: for the Lorde shall consume their pasture, and their welle tilled fields shall lye dere, because of the horrible wrathe of the Lorde. They shall forsake their folders, lyke as a lyon. For their landes shall be waste, because of the wrathe of the destroyer, and because of his fearefull indignacion.

C Jeremye moneth the people to amendement. He is taken of the Prophetes and Preastes, and brought to iudgement. He beinge accused before the Princes, answereth: that he had preached onely the wordes of God. The rulers and the people defyver Jeremye, against the wylles of the Preastes and Prophetes: after the exemple of Ezechias, why they had delyvered Michias, that had preached the same thynges that Jeremye had preached. Uriah the Prophete is killed of Joakym, contrarye to the will of God.

CAPI. XXVI.

IN the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the sonne of Josias kyng of Juda, came this wordes from the Lorde, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde: Stande in the courte of the Lordes house, and speake unto all them whiche (oute of the cityes of Juda) come to doo worshyp in the Lordes house, all the wordes that I commaunde the to saye. Loke then kepe not one worde backe, yf (peradventure) they will harken and turne every man frome his wycked waye: that I maye also repente of the plage, whiche I have determined to bringe upon them, because of their wycked inventions.

And after this manor shalt thou speake unto them: Thus sayth the Lorde: yf ye will not obeye me, to walke in my lawes, whiche I have given you, and to heare the wordes of my servaunntes the Prophetes, whome I sende unto you, rysynge up tymely, and dyll sendynge: Yf ye will not folowe them (I saye) then will I do to this house, as I dyd unto Silo, and will make this citye to be abhorred of all the people of the earthe. And the preestes, the Prophetes, and all the people herde Jeremye preache these wordes in the house of the Lorde.

Nowe when he had spoken unto all the wordes, that the Lorde commaunded him to preache unto all the people, then the preestes, the Prophetes, and all the people layde holde upon him, and sayde: thou shalte dye. Howe darest thou be so bolde, as to saye in the name of the Lorde: it shall happen to this house as it dyd to Silo: and this cytie shall be so waste, that no man shall dwell in it?

And when all the people had gathered about Jeremye in the house of the Lorde, the princes of Juda herde of this rumoure, and they came forthwith oute of the kynges palace in to the house of the Lorde, and sat them downe before the newe doore of the Lorde. Then spake the preestes and the Prophetes unto the rulers, and to all the people, these wordes: This man is worthy to dye, for he hath preached against this city, as ye your selves have herd with your eares.

Then sayde Jeremye unto the rulers and to all the people: The Lord hath sent me to preache against this house, and against this city all the wordes that ye have herd. Therfore amende youre wayes, and your adulesmentes, and be obedyente unto the voyce of the Lorde youre God: so shall the Lorde repent of the plage, that he hadde devysed against you. Nowe as for me: I am in youre handes, doo with me as ye thynke expediente and good.

But this shall ye knowe: yf ye put me to deth, ye shall make your selves, this city and all the inhabitours therof, guilty of innocent bloude. For this is of a trueth: that the Lord hath sent me unto you, to speake all these wordes in your eares.

Then sayd the rulers and the people unto the preestes and Prophetes: This man may not be condemned to death, for he hath preached unto us in the name of the Lorde oure God. The elders also of the lande rose up, and sayd thus unto all the people: Micheas the Morasthite, whiche was a Prophete under Ezechias kynge of Juda, spake to all the people of Juda: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Sion shall be plowed lyke a felde, Jerusalem shall be an heape of stones, and the hyll of the Lordes house, shall be turned to an hye wodde.

Did Ezechias the kynge of Juda and the people of Juda put him to deth for this? No truly, but rather feared the Lorde, and made their prayer unto him. For whiche cause also the Lorde repented of the plage that he had tolde against them. Should we then to sache a shamefull dede against our soules? There was a Prophete also, that preached thy fyre in the name of the Lord called Uriah the sonne of Semiah of Cariathiarim: this man preached also against this citye and against this land, according to all as Jeremy sayth. Now when Joakim the kynge with all the chiefe and princes had herde his wordes, the kynge went about to slee him. When Uriah perceyved that, he was afrayde, and fled, and departed in to Egypt.

Then Joakim the kyng sent servauntes in to the lande of Egypt: Namely Elnathan the sonne of Achabor, and certeyn men with him into Egypte, whiche fetched Uriah oute of Egypt, and brought him unto kyng Joakim that slewe him with the swerde, and caste his dede body in to the comman peoples grave. But Ahikam the son of Saphan helped Jeremye that he came not in to the handes of the people to be slayne.

CAPI. XXVII.

IN the begynnynge of the raygne of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde unto Jeremye frome the Lorde, whiche spake thus unto me: Make the bondes and cheynes, and put them about thy necke, and sende them to the the kyng of Edom, the kynge of Moab, the kynge of Ammon, the kynge of Tyrus, and to the kynge of Sydon, that by the messengers which shall come to Jerusalem unto Sedechias the king of Juda, and bydd them saye unto their maisters: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell, speake thus unto youre maisters: I am he that made the erth, the men, and the catell that are upon the grounde, with my greate power and stretched out arme, and have geven it unto whom it pleased me.

And nowe will I delyver all these landes in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, my servaunt. The beestes also of the felde shall I geve hym to doo hym seruyce. And all people shall serve him, and his sonne, and his chyldes chyldren, untyll the tyme of the same lande be come also: yea manye people, and greate kynges shall serve hym.

Moreover, that people and kyngdome whiche will not serve Nabuchodonosor, and that will not put their neckes under the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: the same people will I vysyte with the swearde, with honger, with pestylence, untyl I have consumed them in his handes, sayth the Lorde.

And therefore folowe not youre Prophetes, sothesayers, expounders of dreames, charmers and wytches, whiche saye unto you: ye shall not serve the kynge of Babylon. For they preache you lyes: to bringe you farre frome youre lande, and that I myghte cast you out, and destroye you. But the people that put their neckes under the yoke of the kynge of Babylon and serve him, those I will let remayne styll in their owne lande (sayth the Lorde) and they shal occupy it and dwell therein.

All these thynges tolde I Sedechias kyng of Juda, and sayde: Put youre neckes under the yoke of the kynge of Babylon, and serve him and his people, that ye maye lyve. Why, wylt thou and thy people perish with the swerde, with honger, with pestylence: lyke as the Lorde hathe devysed for all people that will not serve the kynge of Babylon? Therfore geve no eare unto those Prophetes (eyght tell you: Ye shall not serve the kyng of Babylon) for they preache you lyes, nether have I sente them, sayth the Lorde: how be it they are bolde, falsely to prophecye

in my name: that I might the sooner dryue you out, and that ye myght perish with your preachers.

D I spake to the preestes also, and to all the people: Thus sayth the Lorde: Heare the wordes of those Prophets that preache vnto
you, and saye: Beholde the vessels of ℣ Lor-des house, shall shortly be brought hyther a-gayne from Babylon: For they prophecye lyes vnto you. Heare them not but serue the kynge of Babylon, that ye may lyue. Why-fore will ye make this cyte to be destroyed?
But yf they be true Prophetes in very dede,
and yf the worde of the Lorde be committed vnto them, then lette them praye the Lorde of hostes, that the remnaunt of the ornamen tes (which are in the house of the Lorde, and in the house of the kynge of Juda, and at Jerusalem) be not caried to Ba bylon also.

For thus hath the Lorde of hostes spoken concerning the pylers, the lauer, the seat and the residue of the ornamentes that yet remayn in this cyte, whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon toke not, when he caryed
awaye Jechoniah the sonne of Joakim kyng of Juda, with all the power of Juda and Jerusalem, from Jerusalem vnto Babylon
captyue.

Yea, thus hathe the Lorde of hostes
the God of Israell spoken, as touchynge
the residue of the ornamentes of the Lordes house, of the kynge of Judas house, and of Jerusalem: They shall be caryed vnto Babylon, and there they shall remayne vntyll I vysyte them, sayethe the Lorde. Then will I brynge them hyther agayne. And this was wone in the same yere: euen in the begynnyng of the raygne of Sedechias kyng of Juda.

¶ The false prophecye of Hananiah the Prophete. Jeremye sheweth ℣ the Prophecye of Hananiah to false, by the exemple of other Prophetes. He bring inspyred of the Lorde, reproueth Hananiah, Pro-phecyinge his death.

CAPI. XXVIII.

A BVt in the fourthe yere of the raygne of Sedechias kynge of Juda, in the fyfth moneth: It happened that Hananiah
the sonne of Assur the Prophete of Gabaon spake to me in the house of the Lorde, in the presence of the preestes and of all the people, and sayd: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes
the God of Israell: I haue broken the yoke of the kynge of Babylon: and after two yere will I brynge agayne in to this place, all the ornamentes of the Lordes house, that Nabu chodonosor kynge of Babylon caried awaye
from this place vnto Babylon.

Yea, I will brynge agayn Jechoniah ℣ sonne of Joakim the kynge of Juda thyther, with all the pysoners of Juda (that are caryed vn to Babylon) euen in to this place, sayth the Lorde, for I will breake the yoke of the kyng of Babylon.

Then the Prophet Jeremye gaue answere B
vnto the Prophet Hananiah, before the pree-stes, and before all the people that were present in the house of the Lorde. And ℣ Prophet Jeremye sayd: Amen. The Lorde do that, and graunt the thynge whiche thou hast Prophecied: that he maye brynge agayne all the or-namentes of the Lordes house, and relieue al
the pysoners from Babylon in to the place.
Neuerthelelle harken thou also what I will saye, that thou and al the people may heare:
The Prophetes that were before vs in times
paste, whiche prophecied of warre or trouble, or pestylence, eyther of yeare vpon manye na-cions and greate kyngdomes were prone vnto
this, (yf God had sende them in verye dede)
whē the thyng came to passe, which that Pro phet tolde before.

And Hananiah the Prophet toke ℣ cheyne C
from the Prophet Jeremyes necke, and brake
it, and with that sayd Hananiah that all the people might heare: Thus hathe the Lorde spoken: Euen so will I breake the yoke of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, frome
the necke of all nacions, yea and that within this two yere. And so the Prophete Jeremye went his waye.

Nowe after that Hananiah the Prophete had taken the cheyne from the Prophete Je-remies necke, and broken it: The worde of the Lorde came vnto the Prophete Jeremye sayinge: Go and tell Hananiah these wordes:
Thus sayth the Lorde: Thou hast broke the cheyne of wood, but in stede of wod thou shalt make cheynes of yron. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: I will put a yoke of yron vpon the necke of all this people, that they maye serue Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, yea and so shal they do. And I will geue him the beestes in the felde. Then sayd the Prophet Jeremye vnto that Prophet Hananiah: Heare me (I praye
the) Hananiah: The Lorde hathe not sente
the, but thou bringest this people in to false beleke. And therfore thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I will send the out of the land, and within a yere thou shalte dye, bycause thou hast falsely spoken agaynst the Lorde. So Hananiah the Prophet died the same yere in the seuenth moneth.

¶ The Epystle of Jeremye, sent vnto them that were in captyuytye in Babylon. He prophecyeth they retourne from captyuytye after the ende of ten yeares. He prophecyeth the destruction of the kynge and of the people that remayned in Jerusa-lem. He reproueth two Prophetes that seduced the people. The death of Semeiah the Nehe-lampte is prophecyed.

CAPI. XXIX.

THis is the coppye of the letter, that Jeremye the Prophet sent from Jerusalem vnto the pysoners: the Senatours preestes, Prophetes, and al the people whom Nabuchodonosor hadde led vnto Babylon
after

after that tyme that kynge Jechoniah, and his quene, his chamberlaynes the prynces of Juda and Jerusalem, the workemaysters of Jerusalem were departed thyther. Whiche letter Elasah the sonne of Saphan and Ga-mariah the sonne of Helkiah dyd beare, whom Sedechias ℣ kyng of Juda sente vnto Babylon to Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon. These were the wordes of Jeremyes letter:

Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell spoken vnto all the pysoners that were ledde frome Jerusalem vnto Babylon: Buylde your houses to dwell therin: plante
you gardens, that ye maye eniope the frutes
therof: take you wyues to beare you sonnes
and doughters: prouyde wyues for youre
sonnes, and husbandes for your doughters,
that they maye getre sonnes and doughters,
and that ye maye multiplye there. Laboure not to be fewe, but seke after peace, and prosperite of the cyte wherin ye be pysoners, & praye vnto God for it. For in the peace therof shall your peace be. For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes, the God of Israell: Let not your Prophetes and sothesayers that be amonge
you, deceyue you: and beleue not your owne dreames. For why, they preache you lyes in my name, and I haue not sente them, sayeth
the Lorde.

But thus sayth the Lorde: When ye haue
fulfylled thre score and tenne yeres at Babylon, I will brynge you home, and of myne awne goodnelle I will carye you hyther a-gayne vnto this place. For I knowe what I haue decyded for you, sayeth the Lorde. My thoughtes are to geue you peace, and not trou ble (whiche I grue you all redye) and that ye eyghte haue hope agayne. Ye shall crye vnto me, ye shall go and call vpon me, and I shall heare you. Ye shal seke me, and fynde me. Yea yf so be that ye seke me with your hole herte,
I will be found of you (sayeth the Lorde) and will delyuer you out of pryson, and gather you together agayne owte of all places wherin I haue scattered you, sayethe the Lorde: and will brynge you agayne to the same place, from whence I caused you to be caried awaye
captyue.

But where as ye saye, that God haue rays-ed you vp prophetes at Babylon: thus hath the Lorde spoken (concernyng the kyng that sytteth in the stole of Dauid, and all the peo ple that dwelle in this cyte, youre brethren that me not gone with you in to captiuitie.)
Thus, I saye, speaketh the Lorde of hostes:
Beholde, I wil sende a swerde, honger, and pestilence vpon them, and will make them lyke vnsauery figges, that maye not be eaten for bitternesse. And I will persecute them with ℣ sworde, with honger and with
I will delyuer them vp to be vexed of all kyngdomes, to be cursed, abhorred, laughed to scorne, and put to confusion of all the people amonge whome I haue scattered them:
and that bycause they haue not ben obedient vnto my commaundementes, saith the Lorde, whiche I sente vnto them by my seruauntes

the Prophetes. I rose vp early, and sent vnto them, but they wolde not heare, sayeth the Lorde.

Heare therfore the worde of the Lorde, E
all ye pysoners, whom I sent from Jerusalem vnto Babylon: Thus hathe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel spoken of Achab
the sonne of Colaiah, and of Sedechias the sonne of Maasiah, which prophecye lyes vn to you in my name: Beholde, I will delyuer them in to the hand of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, that he may slee them before youre eyes. And all the pysoners of Juda that are in Babylon, shall take vpon them
this terme of cursynge, and saye: Now God wo vnto the, as he dyd vnto Sedechias and Achab, whome the kynge of Babylon rosted
in the fyre, bycause they synned shamefully in Israell.

For they haue not only defiled their neigh- F
bours wyues, but also preached lyinge wor-des in my name, which I haue not commaun ded them. Thus I testify and allure, sayeth the Lorde. But as for Semeiah the Nehelampte thou shalt speake vnto him: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Bycause thou hast sealed letteres vnder thy name, vnto all the people that is at Jerusalem, and to Sophoniah the sonne of Maasiah the preest:
and vnto them to all the preestes: wherin thou writtest thus vnto him: The Lord hath ordeined the to be preest in stede of Joiada the iiii. Reg. xi. a preest, that thou shalt be the office in the house ii. Par. xxix. a of the Lorde aboue all Prophetes, and prisoners, and that thou shuldest put them in pryson, or in the stockes. Howe happeneth it then, that thou hast not reproued Jeremy of Anathoth, which neuer ceaseth of his prophecyinge?

And beside all this, he hath sent vs worde vnto Babylon, and tolde vs plainely, that oure captiuitie shall longe endure: that we shulde buylde vs houses to dwell therin, and to plante vs gardens that we maye entoye the frutes thereof. Whiche letter Sopho niah the preest dyd rede, and let Jeremye the Prophete heare it.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto G
Jeremye, sayinge: Sende worde to all them Jere. xxviii. a that are in captiuitie, on this maner: Thus hath the Lorde spoken concerning Semeiah
the Nehelampte: Bycause that Semeiah hath prophecied vnto you without my commission, and broughte you in to a false hope,
therfore thus the Lorde dothe certifye you:
Beholde, I will vysyte Semeiah the Nehelampte, and his seed: so that none of his shal remayne amonges this people, and none of them shall se the good that I will do for this people, sayeth the Lorde. For he hath preached falsely of the Lorde.

¶ The retourne of the people from Babylon. God by his chastenynge shewith that the people is syn-full. The destruction of the enemyes of Israel.

CAPI. XXX.

a THese are the wordes that the Lorde shewed vnto Jeremye, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel: Write vp diligentlye all the wordes that I have spoken vnto the, in a boke. For loo, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lord) that I wyll bryng agayne the prysoners of my people of Israell and Juda, sayth the Lorde: For I wyll restore them vnto the lande, that I gaue to their fathers, and they shall have it in possession.

Agayne, these wordes spake the Lorde concerning Israel and Juda: thus sayth the Lorde: We heare a terrible crye, feare and disquietnesse. For what els dothe this signifie, that I se? Namely that all stronge men smyte euery man his hande vpon his loynes, as a woman in the payne of her trauaple. Who euer sawe a man trauaple with chylde? Enquyre therafter, and se. Yea, all their faces are marueylous pale.

Jeremi.xiii.b

Alas for this day, which is so dredful that none may be lykened vnto it: and alas for the tyme of Jacobs trouble, from the whiche he shall yet be deliuered. For in that daye, sayeth the Lorde, I wyll take his yoke frome thy necke, and breake thy bondes. They shall no more serue straunge goddes vnder him, but they shall do seruyce vnto God their Lorde, and to Dauid their kyng, whom I wil rayse vp vnto them. * And as for the, o my seruant Jacob, feare not (sayth the Lorde) and be not afrayde, o Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the also frome farre, and thy seed frome the lande of their captiuitie.

Jeclii.c. Amos.b.c. Sophon.ii.b

Esaye.xliii.a Luke.i.g Esa.xxxiii.b Jerem.xlvi.g

And Jacob shall turne agayne, be shall be in rest, and haue a prosperous lyfe, and no man shall make him afrayde. For I am with the, to helpe the, sayeth the Lorde. And though I shall destroye all the people amonges whom I haue scattered the, yet wyll I not destroye the, but correcte the, and that with discretion. For I knowe that thou arte in no wyse withoute faute. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde: I am sory for thy hurt and woundes. There is no man to medle with thy cause, or to bynde vp thy woundes: there maye no man helpe the.

Jeremye.x.d Sto.xxxiii.a Nahum.i.a.

All thy louers haue forgotten the, and care nothynge for the. For I haue smyten the a cruell stroke, and chastened the roughly: and that for the multytude of thy mysdedes, for thy synnes haue had the ouer hand. Why makest thou mone for thy harme? I my self haue done this vnto the, but for the multitude of thy mysdedes and synnes, I haue doone this vnto the.

Jerem.xiii.d

And therfore all they that deuour the, shal be deuoured, and all thyne enemyes shall be led in to captiuitie. All they * make the wane shal be waste, them wil I make also to be robbed. For I wyl geue the thy perfy again, and make thy woundes hole, sayeth the Lorde: because they called the as one caste awaye and despysed, O Syon.

Jere.ii.a.xx.d

For thus sayethe the Lorde: beholde, I wyll lifte vp Jacobs tentes agayne, and destroye his dwellynge place. The cite shall be buylded in her olde estate, and the houses shall haue their right foundacion. And ante of them shal go thankesgyuing, and the voice of ioye.

Num.xxiiii.a

I wil multiply them, and they shal not minish: I shal endue them with honour, and no man shal subdue them. Their children shal be as afore tyme, and their congregacion shal continue in my syght. And al those that vexe the wyll I wreke.

Micha.

A capitayne also shall come of them, and a prynce shall spryng out from the myddest of them: hym wyll I chalenge to my selfe, and he shall come vnto me. For what is he, that vndertaketh ouer his herte o come vnto me, sayeth the Lorde?

Jere.xxx.

Ye shall be my people also, and I wyll be youre God. Beholde, on the other syde shall the wrathe of the Lorde breake oute as a stormye water, as a myghtye whyrlewynde: and shall fall vpon the heedes of the vngodly.

Jeremias capitulo xxiii. Jeremias capitulo xxiii.

The terrible displeasure of the Lorde shall not leaue at, vntyll he haue done and performed the intent of his herte, which in the latter dayes ye shall vnderstande. At the same tyme, sayth the Lorde, shall I be the God of all the generations of Israell, and they shall be my people.

The prophecyeth that the people of Israel shall be restored agayne vnto their prosperytye. Co be ensured frome tyme to the tyme of God. The kyngdo of Christe is prophecyed. All the wycked shall dye in their wyckednes. The newe Testament and couenaunt is prophecyed. The Christen are taught and instructe of the Lorde. Our synnes shall to be remembred, that they shall not ones be thought on. Finally he myeth that he wyll calle of the Jewes. The buylduynge agayne of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XXXI.

THus sayethe the Lorde: The people of Israell, whiche escaped in the wyldernesse from the swerde, founde grace come in to their rest. Even so shall the Lorde nowe also appeare vnto me frome farre, and saye: I loue the with an euerlastynge loue, therfore wo I spreade my mercye before the. I wyll repayre the agayne (O thou bought seet of Israell) that thou mayste be fast and sure. Thou shalte take thy tabretes agayne, and goo forth with them that leade the daunce.

Genesis. Exodus.

Thou shalt plant vynes agayne vpon the hylles of Samaria, and the grape gatherers shal plant and synge.

And when it is tyme the watchemen vpon the mounte Ephraim shall crye: Aryse, let vs goo vnto Syon to oure Lorde God, for thus sayethe the Lorde: Reioyce with gladnesse, because of Jacob, crye vnto the heed of the Gentyles: speake out, sing, and say: The Lorde shall deliuer his people, the remnaunt of Israell, and make them whole. Beholde, I wyll bringe them agayne from out of the Northy lande, and gather them from the endes of the worlde, with the blynde and lame that are amonge them, with the women that be greate with chylde, and suche as be also delyuered: and the company of them that come agayne, shall be greate.

They departed frome hence in heynesse, but with ioye wyll I bringe them hyther agayne. I wyll leade them by the ryuers of water in a streyght waye, where they shall not stomble: For I wyll be Israels father and Ephraim shall be my fyrstborne.

Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye Gentiles, preach in the Iles, that ye farre of, and say: he that hath scatered Israel, shal gather him together agayne, and shall kepe hym as a shepherde dothe his flocke. For the Lorde hath redeme Jacob, and eyd him frome the hande of the byolent. And they shall come, & reioyce vpon the hyl of Syon, and shal haue plentifousnes of goodes, whiche the Lorde shal geue them: Namely, wheat, wyne, oyle younge shepe & calues. And their conscyence shal be as a wel watred garden, for they shal no more be hongry.

Jeremias capitulo xxiii.

Then shal the maide reioyce in the daunce, yea both yonge and olde folkes. For I wyll turne their sorowe in to gladnes, and wyll comfort them and make them ioyfull, euen frome their hertes. I wyl poure plentefousnes vpon the hertes of the prestes, and my people shal be satisfied w good thinges, saith the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: * The voyce of thynges, weppynge and lamention came into heuen: euen of Rachel mournynge for her children, & wolde not be comforted because they were awaye.

But now sayeth the Lorde: leaue of from weppynge and cryinge, withholde thyne eyes from teares, for thy labours shall be rewarded sayethe the Lorde. And they shall come agayne oute of the lande of their enemyes: Yea euen thy posterite shall haue consolacion in this (sayeth the Lorde) that thy children shall come agayne in to their owne lande.

Moreouer I herde Ephraim, that was led awaye captyne, complayne on this maner: O Lorde, thou hast correct me, and thy chastenynge haue I receyued, as an vntamed calfe.

Conuerte thou me, and I shall be conuerted, for thou arte my Lorde God: Yea as soone as thou turnest me, I shall retourne my selfe: and when I vnderstande, I shall smyte vpon my thyghe. For verelye I haue commytted shamefull thynges: O lette my youthe beare this reproche and confusion.

Upon this complaynt, I thoughte thus by my self: is not Ephraim my deare sonne? Is he not the chylde, with whom I haue had all myrth and pastyme? For sence the tyme that I spake, I remembraunce: therfore my bely driueth me vnto him, gladly and louyngly wil I haue mercye vpon him, sayeth the Lorde. Set the watchmen, prouyde teachers for the, let thyne herte vpon the highway, that thou shuldest walke, and turne agayne (O thou doughter of Israel) turne agayne to these cytyes of thine. Howe longe wilte thou go astraye, O thou shynkynge doughter? For the Lorde wyll worke a newe thing vpon earth. A woman shall compasse a man.

For thus sayethe the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: It wyll come thereto, that when I haue brought Juda out of captyuyte, these wordes shall be herde in the lande & in his cytyes: The Lorde, which is the fayre bydegrome of ryghteousnesse, make the fruteful, O thou holy hill: And there shall dwell Juda, and all her cities, the shepherdes and husbande men: For I shall feede the hongry soule, and refreshe all faynte hertes. Wherin I heed this I came agayne to my self, and mused, lyke as I had bene waked out of a sweete slepe.

Beholde (sayeth the Lord) the dayes come, that I wyl sowe the house of Israel and the house of Juda, with men and with catel. Yea it shall come therto, that lyke as I haue gone abouce in tymes paste to roote them oute, to scatte them, to breake them downe, to destroye them and chasten them: Euen so will I also go dylygently about, to buylde them vp agayne and to plante them sayeth the Lorde.

Ezech.xviii.d

Then shall it no more be sayde: the fathers haue eaten a sowre grape, and the chyldrens teth are set on edge: for euery one shal dye for his owne mysdede, so that who so eateth a sowre grape, his teeth shall be set on edge.

Beholde, the dayes come (sayeth the Lorde) that I wyl make a newe couenaunt with the house of Israel and with the house of Juda: not after the couenaunt that I made with their fathers, when I toke them by the hand and led them out of the land of Egipt: which couenaunt they brake, wherfore I punyshed them sore, sayeth the Lorde: But this shall be the couenaunte that I wyll make with the house of Israell after those dayes, sayethe the Lorde: I wyll plante my lawe in the inwarde partes of them, and wryte it in their hertes, and wyll be their God and they shall be my people.

Hebre.x.d. Ezaye.li.a. Jerem.xxxii. and xxxiii.

And frome thence forth shall no man teache his neyghboure or his brother, & say: Knowe the Lorde: But they shall all knowe me, frome the lowest vnto the highest, sayeth the Lorde. For I wyll forgyue their mysdedes, and wyll neuer remembre their synnes anye more.

Jer.xxxi.

Thus sayeth the Lorde which gaue the sunne to be a lyght for the daye, and the moone and sterres to shyne in the nyght: whiche moueth the see, so that the floudes thereof waxe fearce: his name is the Lorde of Hoostes.

Lyke as this ordynaunce shall neuer be take out of my syght, sayeth the Lord: So shall the sede of Israell neuer cease, but alwaye be a people before me.

Moreouer, thus sayethe the Lorde: lyke as the heauen aboue can not be measured, and as the foundacions of the earth beneth may not

not be sought out: So wyll I also not cast out the dole sede of Israell, for that they haue committed, sayeth the Lorde Beholde, the dayes come sayeth the Lorde, that the cy-tie of the Lorde shall be enlarged from the towre of Hananeel, vnto the gate of the corner wall. From thence shall the ryght measure be taken before her vnto the hyll top, of Gareb, and shal come about Gaath, and the hole valley of the dead karcases, and of the asshes, & all Cedrom vnto the broke of Le-dion: and from thence vnto the corner of the horse gate towarde the East, where as the Sanctuary of the Lorde also shall be sette.
And when it is nowe buylded and set vp of this fashyō it shall neuer be brokē, nor cast downe any more.

¶ Jeremye is cast in to prison, because he prophesyed that the cytie shoulde be taken of the kynge of Babylon. By the felde that Jeremye bought at the commaundement of the Lorde, is signified, that the people shoulde come agayne to their owne pos-sessyon. The people of God are his enheritaunce, and he is their Lorde. To feare God is Gods gyfte, so obstinate that synnes maye be withewed.

CAPI. XXXII.

THese wordes spake the Lorde vnto Je remye, in the tenth yere of Sedechias kynge of Juda, whiche was the .xviij.
yere of Nabuchodonosor, what tyme as the kinge of Babilons hoste layed syege vnto Jerusalem. But Jeremye the Prophet lay bounde in the courte of the prison, which was in the kynge of Judaes house: where Sedechias
the kynge of Juda caused him to be layed, because he hadde prophecyed of this maner: Thus sayethe the Lorde: Beholde: I wyl de-liuer this cytie in to the handes of the kyng of Babylon whiche shall take it. As for Sede-chias the kyng of Juda, he shall not be able to escape the Caldees, but surely he shal come in to the handes of the kynge of Babylon:
which shal speke with him mouth to mouth
and one of the shall loke an other in the face.
And Sedechias shal be caryed vnto Babilō,
and there shall he be, vntyll the tyme that I vysyt hym, sayeth the Lorde. But yf thou ta-kest in hande to fyghte agaynste the Caldees
thou shalte not prospere.

And Jeremye sayde: Thus hath the Lord spoken vnto me: Beholde, Hananeel the son of Selum thyne vncles sonne shall come vnto the, and requyre the to redeme thy land, that lyeth in Anathoth vnto thy selfe: for
by reason of kynred it is thy parte to redeme
it, and to dye it out.

And to Hananeel myne vncles son came to me in the courte of the prison (accordynge to the worde of the Lorde) and sayde vnto me: Bye my lande (I prayde the) that lyeth
in Anathoth in the countrey of Ben Jamin:
for by heritage thou hast ryghte to loose it out for thy selfe, therfore redeme it. Then I perceyued, that this was the commaundemēt
of the Lorde, and so I loosed the lande frome Hananeel of Anathoth, myne vncles sonne,
and weyed him there the mony: euen seuen
scycles, and ten syluer pens.

I caused him also to make me a wryting and to seale it, and called recorde therby, and weyed him there the mony vpon the weyghts.

So I toke the euydence with the coppe
(when it was orderlye sealed and red ouer)
I gaue the euydence vnto Baruch ſ sonne of Neriah the sonne of Maasiah in the syght of Hananeel my cosen, and in the presēce of the wytnesses, that he named in the euydēce, and before all the Jewes that were therby in the courte of the prison.

I charged Baruch also before them saye-inge: the Lorde of Hoostes ſ God of Israel cōmaundeth the, to take this sealed euydēce with the coppe, and to lay it in an erthen dea-sell, that it maye longe contynue.

For the Lorde of Hoostes the God of Isra el hath determyned, that houses, feldes and vyneyardes shall be possessed agayne in this lande.

Now when I had deliuered the euydēce vnto Baruch the son of Neriah, I besought the ſ Lord, sayeng: O Lorde God: It is thou ſ hast made heauen and earth with thy great power and hygh arme, and there is nothyng to harde for the. Thou shewest mercye vpon thousandes, thou recompensest the wickednes of the fathers, into the bosome of ſ children that come after them

Thou arte the great and myghty God, whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes: greate
in counsell, and infinite in thought: Thyne eyes loke vpon all the wayes of mens chyldren, to reward euerye one after his waye and accordynge to the fruites of his inuēcions.

Thou hast done greate tokens and wō ders in the lande of Egypte (as we se this daye) vpon the people of Israell an vpon thole men: to make thy name greate, as it is come to passe this daye:

Thou hast brought thy people of Israel out of the lande of Egypte, with tokens,
with wonders, with a myghtye hande,
with a stretched oute arme, and with greate terrybilenesse: and hast gyuen theym this lande, lyke as thou haddest promysed vnto their fathers: Namelye that thou wouldst
gyue them a lande, that floweth with myike and honye.

Lowe when they came therin, and possessed it, they followed not thy voyce, and walked not in thy lawe: but all that thou commaundedest them to do, that haue they not wonne, and therfore comest all these plages vpon
them.

Beholde, there are bulwerkes made nere against the cite to take it: and it shal be won of the Caldees that besiege it, with sworde, ſ
hongre and pestilence, and lo what thou hast spoken, that same shall come vpon them.

For lo, all thinges are present vnto the:
Yet sayest thou vnto me (O Lorde God) and commaundest me, that I shall lose a pece of lande vnto my selfe, and take witnesses ther-to: and yet in the meane season the cite is delyuered in to the power of the Caldees.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Beholde, I am the Lorde God of all flesshe, is there any thyng then to hard for me? Therfore thus sayde the Lorde: be-holde, I shall deliuer this cytie in to the power of the Caldees, and in to the power of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon, they shall take it. For the Caldees shall come, and wynne this cytie, and sette fyre
vpon it, and burne it: with the gorgyous houses, in whose parlers they haue made sacrifice vnto Baal, and poured dyncke offerin-ges vnto straunge goddes to prouoke me vnto wrathe.

For synge the children of Israel, and the children of Juda haue wrought wyckednes
before me euer from their youth, what haue they elles done, but prouoked me with the workes of their owne handes? sayethe the Lorde.

Or what hathe this citie bene els, but a prouokynge of my wrath, euer sence the daye
that I buylded it vnto this houre? Wherin
I cast it out of my syght, because of the great blasphemyes of the children of Israell and Juda, whiche they haue done to prouoke me:
yea they, their kynges, their princes, their preestes, their prophetes, hole Juda, and all the citizens of Jerusalem.

When I rose vp early, and taught them
and instructe them, they turned their backes to me, and not their faces. They wolde not heare, to be reformed and correcte. They haue sette their goddes in the house, that is halowed vnto my name, to defyle it. They haue buylded hyghe places for Baal in the valley of the children of Hennom, to burne their sonnes & daugters vnto Moloch: whiche I neuer commaunded them, neither came it euer in my thoughte, to make Juda synne
with suche abhomynacion.

Moreouer thus hathe the Lorde God of Israel spoken, concernynge this cytie, which (as ye noure selues confesse) shall be delyue-red into the hande of the kynge of Babilon,
when it is wonne with the sworde, with hon
ger and with pestylence. Beholde, I will gather them to gyther from all landes, wherin
I haue scatered the in my wrath, in my fear-full and greate displeasure: and wyll bryng
the agayne vnto this place, where they shall dwell safelye. And they shal be my people, and I wyll be their God.

And I will gyue them one herte and one
waye, that they maye feare me all the dayes
of their lyfe, that they and their children after them maye prospere. And I wyll sette vp an euerlastyng couenaunt with them Name-lye: that I wyll neuer cease to doo them good, and that I wyll put my feare in their hertes, so that they shal not run awaye from me.

Yea I wyll haue a ioye and pleasure to do them good, and sayethfully to plant them in this lande with my hole herte, and with all my soule.

For thus sayeth the Lorde: lyke as I haue brought all this great plage vpon this people: so will I also bringe vpon them all the good, that haue I promysed them. And men shall haue their possessions in this lande, whereof ye saye nowe, that it shall neither be inhabited of people ne of catell, but be deliyered in to the handes of the Caldees: Yea
lande shal be bought for mony, and euydēce made therupon and sealed before witnesses in the countrey of Ben Jamin, and rounde about Jerusalem: in the cities of Juda, in the cities that are vpon the mountaynes, and in them that lye beneth, yea & in the cities that are in the desert. For I wyl bringe their prisoners hither agayne, sayeth the Lorde.

¶ The Prophete is monyshed of the Lorde, to praye for the deliueraunce of the people, whiche the Lorde promyseth. God forgyueth synnes, and doeth graciously to the people, for his owne renowne. Of the kyngdome of Christ. The kyngdome of Christe in the churche shall neuer be ended.

CAPI. XXXIII.

MOreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye on this maner, when he was yet bounde in the courte of the prison: Thus sayethe the Lorde, which furthereth the thyng that he speaketh, the Lord which performeth the thing that he taketh
in hande euen he, whose name is the Lorde:
thou hast * cryed vnto me, and I haue herde
the: I yue shewed greate an hyghe thynges, whiche were vnknowen vnto you.

Thus (I saye) spake the Lorde God of Israel, concernynge the houses of this citie, &
the houses of the kynges of Juda: that they shall be broken thorowe the ordynaunce and weapons, when the Caldees come to besiege them: and they shall be filled with the dead karcases of men, whome I wyll slaye in my wrathe and displeasure: when I turne my face frome this cytie because of all her wyckednesse. Beholde, (sayethe the Lorde) I wyll heale their wounds and make them hole,
I will open them the treasure of peace and trueth.

And I wyll returne the captyuyte of Juda and Israel: and wyl set them vp agayne
as they were afore, From all myscheues (wher in they haue offended agaynste me) I wyll clense them: And all their blasphemyes wh-che they haue done agaynst me, when they re garded me not, I will forgyue them.

And this shall get me a name, a prayse &
honoure, amonge all people of the earthe, whiche shall heare all the good, that I wyll
shewe vnto them: yea they shall be afrayed and astonyed at all the good dedes and be-nefytes, that I wyll do for them. Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde: in this place, wher-of

ofpe fayde that it shall be a wylderneffe, wher in neither people ne catell shall dwell: in like maner in the cytyes of Juda and without Jerusalem (which also shal be so voyde, that neither people ne cattell shall dwell there) shall the voyce of gladneffe be herde againe,
the voyce of the brydgrome and of the bryde
the voyce of them that shall synge: Prayse
the Lorde of Hostes, for he is loupnge and his mercye endureth for euer, and the voyce
of them that shal offre vp gyftes in the house of the Lorde. For I wyll reduce the captyuite of this lande, as it was afore, sayethe the Lorde. Thus sayethe the Lorde of Hostes It shall come yet therto, that in this lande, whiche is voyde from men and cattell, and in all the cytyes of the lande, there shall be set vp shepherdes cotages: in the cytyes vpō the mountaynes: and in the cytyes that lye vpō
the playne, and in the deserte.

In the lande of Benjamin, in the fyldes
of Jerusalem, and in the cytyes of Juda shal
the shepe be nombred agayne, vnder the hād
of him, that telleth them, sayethe the Lorde.

L Beholde, the tyme commeth, sayeth the Lord, Jere. xiii. a. Jere. xxxi. a. that I will performe that good thyng, whiche I haue promysed vnto the house of Isra el and to the house of Juda. In those dayes, and at the same tyme, I wyll bringe forthe
vnto Dauid, the braunche of ryghteousnes, & he shall do equytie and ryghteousnesse in the land. In those dayes shall Juda be helped, & Jerusalem shall dwell safe, and he that shal
call her is euen God cure ryghteuous maker.
For thus the Lorde promyseth: Dauid shal neuer want one, to syt vpon the stole of the house of Israel: neither shall the prestes & Leuytes want one to offre alwaye before me
burnt offerynges, to kyndle the meatoffe, syn-ges, and to prepare the sacrifyces.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto
D Jeremye after this maner: Thus sayth the Gene. viii. d. Jere. xxxiii. a. Lorde: Maye the couenaunt whiche I haue made with daye and nyght be broken, that ther shulde not be daye and night in due season? Then maye my couenaunt also be broke whiche I made with Dauid my seruaunte, and so he not to haue a sonne to reigne in his Gene. xv. a and xxvi. c. throne. So shall also the prestes and Leuites neuer fayle, but serue me. For lyke as the sterres of heauen maye not be nombred, neither the sande of the see measured: so will I multyplye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte,
and of the Leuites my ministres.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came to Jeremy, saynge: Hast thou not what this people speake? They reherse (sayne they) how the Lorde hath forsaken, and thole lame two kynredes of late. For so farre is my people fallen, that they haue no hope to ryse. Oh (saye they) we will not be one prople agayne. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde:
If I haue made no couenaunt with daye & nyght, and ordeyned lawes vnto heuen and erth, then will I also caste awaye the sede of Dauid my seruaunte: so that I will take no ruler out of his sede, to rule the posteri-te of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob. But yet I will turne agayne their captiuitie, & de mrcifull vnto them.

The thirteneth that the cytie, and kynge Sede-chias also, shall be gyuen into the handes of the kynge of Babylon. He reherseth them that brought backe of theyr brethren into captyuyte, that were pardoned to go at theyr libertye.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

These are the wordes which the Lord
spake vnto Jeremy, what tyme as Ne-buchonodor the kynge of Babylon, and all his hostes (out of al the kingdomes that were vnder his power) and all his people, fought agaynste Jerusalem, and al the cities
therof. Thus sayeth the Lord God of Israel:
Goo, and speake to Sedechias the kynge of Juda, and tell him: The Lorde sendeth the this worde: Beholde, I wyll delyuer this cittie in to the handē of the kynge of Babylon, he shall burne it, and thou shalte not escape his handes, but shalte be led awaye pry-soner, and delyuered in to his power. Thou shalte loke the kynge of Babylon in the face, & he shall speake with the, mouth to mouth,
then shalte thou go to Babylon. Yet heare
the worde of the Lorde, O Sedechias thou kynge of Juda: Thus sayethe the Lorde vnto the: Thou shalte not be slayne with the swearde, but shalte dye in peace. Lyke as thy forefathers the kynges, thy progenitours, were brente: so shalte thou be brent also, and in the mournyng they shall saye: Oh Lord.
For thus haue I determyned, sayethe the Lorde.

Then spake Jeremye the Prophete all 3
these wordes vnto Sedechias kynge of Juda in Jerusalem: what tyme as the kynge of Babylons hoste besieged Jerusalem, and the remnaunte of the cytyes: Namely, Lachis & Azecah, whiche yet remayned of the stronge
defenced cytyes of Juda.

These are the wordes that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the prophet, when Sede-chias was agreed with all the people at Jerusalem, that there shulde be proclaymed a lybertye: so that euerye man shulde let his seruaunte and handmayde go free, Hebrue and Hebruelle, and no Jewe to holde his brother as a bonde man. Nowe as they had consented euen so they were obedyent, and let them go free. But afterwarde they repented, and toke agayne the seruauntes and handmaydens, whom they had let go free, and so made the bonde agayne.

For the whiche cause the worde of the Lorde came vnto Jeremye from the Lorde him selfe, sayenge: Thus sayethe the Lorde God of Israel: ✻ I made a couenaūte with your fathers, when I brought them out of Egypte (that they shulde no more be bonde men, sayenge: When seuen yeres are out, e-uery man shall let his bought seruaunte as Hebrue go free, yf he haue serued him sex yeres. But youre fathers obeyed me not and hearkened not vnto me. As for you, ye were now

nowe turned, and dyd ryghte before me, in ye proclaymed, euery man to let his neigh-boure go free, & in that ye made a couenaunt
before me, in the temple that beareth my name.
But yet ye haue turned youre selues agayne
and blaspheamed my name: In this, that eue ry man hathe requyred his seruaunte and bondmayden agayne, whom ye had let goo D ryghte and free, and compelled them to serue you agayne, and to be youre bonde men. And therfore thus sayethe the Lorde: ye haue not obeyed me, euery man to proclayme fredome
vnto his brother and neighboure: wherfore
I wyll call you vnto a fredome, sayethe the Lorde: euen vnto the swearde, to the pestilence, and to honger, and will make you to be plaged in all the kyngdomes of the earthe.
Yea those men that haue broke my couenaūt
and not kepte the wordes of the appoyntment, which they made before me: when they dyuyded the calfe in two, and went thorowe the two halues therof: The Pryn-ces of Juda, the Princes of Jerusalem, the gylded men, the Prestes and all the people of the lande, whiche went thorowe the two sydes of the calfe. Those men will I gyue in to the powre of their enemyes, and into the handes
of them that folowe vpon their lyues.

And their deed bodyes shall be meat for the foules of the ayre, and beestes of the feld for Sedechias the kynge of Juda and his Princes, I wyll delyuer them into the power of their enemyes, and of them that de-syre to slaye them, and into the hande of the kynge of Babylons hoste, whiche nowe is departed from you: But thorowe my commaundement (sayethe the Lorde) they shall come agayne before this cittie, they shall fyght agaynste it, wynne it, and burne it.
Moreouer I wyll laye the cyties of Juda
so waste, that no man shall dwell therin.

The propoundeth the obedyence of the Rechabytes, and therby confoundeth the pryde of the Jewes. The commaundement of Jonadab, the father of the Rechabytes. He threteneth punyshment vnto the rebellyous Jewes. He promyseth prosperyte vnto the Rechabytes, for theyr obedyence vnto their father.

CAPI. XXXV.

The wordes whiche the Lorde spake
vnto Jeremye, in the tayme of Joa-kim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda methese: Goo vnto the house of the Recha-bites, and call them oute, and bryngе theym
to the house of the Lorde in to some commodrous place, and gyue them wyne to drynke.
Then toke I Jazanlah the sonne of Jeremye, the sonne of Habazinah, & his brethren, and all his sonnes, and the hole houshold of the Rechabites: and broughte theym to the house of the Lorde, into the closet of the chil dren of Hanan the sonne of Jegedaliah the man of God: whiche was by the closet of the Princes, that is aboue the closet of Maasi-ah the sonne of Selum, whyche is the kepar of the treasurye. And before the sonnes of the kynred of the Rechabites, I set portes full of wyne, and cuppes, and sayde vnto theym: Drynke wyne. But they sayde: we drynke no wyne, for Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father commaunded vs sayenge: ye and youre sonnes shall neuer drynke wyne, buyld
no houses, sowe no sede, plante no vynes, yea ye shall haue no vynyardes: but for all youre tyme ye shall dwell in tentes, that ye maye lyue longe in the lande wherin ye be straungers.

Thus haue we obeyed the cōmaundemēt
of Jonadab the sonne of Rechab oure father:
in all that he hathe charged vs, and so we drinke no wyne all oure lyfe longe: we, nor oure wyues, oure sonnes, and oure doughters.
Neither buylde we any house to dwell therin, we haue also amonges vs neither vyneyardes, ne ozne land to sowe: but we dwel in tentes, we obey, and do accordyng vnto all that Jonadab oure father commaunded vs.

But nowe when Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp in to the land, we sayde come, let vs go to Jerusalem, that we maye escape the hoste of the Caldees and the Assirians: & so we dwell nowe at Jerusalem.
Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremye sayenge: thus sayth the Lorde of Hostes the God of Israell: Goo and tell hole Ju da and al ꝑ inhabitauntes of Jerusalē: Will yenet be reformed, to obey my wordes? sayth the Lorde. The wordes which Jonadab the sonne of Rechab commaunded his sonnes, that they shulde drynke no wyne, are fall and surely kepte: for vnto this daye they drynke
no wine, but obey theire fathers commaunde-ment. But as for me, I haue stande vp early, Jere. xxvii. & xxv. a. I haue spoken vnto you, and gyuen you earnest warning: and yet haue ye not bene obedy ent vnto me. Yea I haue sent my seruaunces all the prophetes vnto you, I rose vp early, & sent you worde, sayenge: O turne you, euery man from his wicked waye: amende youre lyues, and go not after straunge goddes, to worshyp them: that ye may contynue in the lande, whiche I haue gyuen vnto you & your fathers, but ye wolde neither heare me, ne to lowe me.

The children of Jonadab Rechabs sonne
haue stedfastly kepte their fathers commaun dement, that he gaue them, but this people is not obedyent vnto me. And therfore thus sayeth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel:
Beholde, I wyl bryngе vpon Juda and vpon euery one that dwelleth in Jerusalem, all the trouble that I haue deuysed agaynste them.
For I haue spoken vnto the, but they wolde not folowe: I haue called vnto them, neuer-theles they wolde gyue me no answere. Jere my also spake vnto the houshold of the Rechabites: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes
the God of Israel: For so moche as ye haue obeyed ꝑ commaundement of Jonadab your father, and kept all his precepres, and done accordynge vnto all that he hath bydde you:
Therfore thus sayeth the Lord of hostes, the God of Israel: Jonadab the sonne of Rechab shall

that not fayle, but haue one out of his stocke, to stande alwaye before me.

¶ Baruch wryteth (as Jeremye indyteth) the booke of the curses agaynst Juda and Israel. He is sent with the boke vnto the people, and rebuketh it before them all. He is called before the rulers, and rebuketh it before them also. The rulers shewe vnto the kynge the wordes of the boke. Jehudi taketh the boke, and readeth a lytle of it, and after casteth it in the fyre. There is an other wrytten at the commaundement of the Lorde.

CAPI. XXXVI.

A IN the.iiij. yere of Joakim ſ sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda, came this worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take a boke
Jeremi.xxx.a and wryte therin all the wordes, that I haue spoken to the, to Israel, to Juda, and to all the people from the tyme that I began for to speake vnto the (in thy sayinge of Josiah) vnto this daye. That when the house of Juda heareth of the plage, wherin I haue deuysed for the, they may peraduenture turne Jere.xviii.a euery man from his wicked way, that I maye forgyue their offences and synnes.

Then dyd Jeremye call Baruch the Jeremi.xxx.a sonne of Neriah, & Baruch wrote in the boke at the mouthe of Jeremy, all the wordes of the Lorde, whiche he had spoken vnto him. And Jeremy commaunded Baruch, sayinge:
B I am in pryson, so that I maye not come in to the house of the Lorde: therfore go thou thyther, and reade the boke, that thou haste wrytten at my mouth: Namely, the wordes of the Lorde, & rede them in the Lordes house vpon the fastyng daye: ſ the people, hole Juda, and all they that come out of the cytyes maye heare. Peraduenture they will praye meekly before the face of the Lorde, and turne euery one from his wycked waye. For great is the wrathe and displeasure, that the Lorde hath taken agaynst this people.

So Baruch the sonne of Neriah dyd accordyng vnto all that Jeremy the Prophete commaunded him, readynge the wordes of the Lorde out of the boke in the Lordes house. And this was done in the fyfth yere of Joa-
Jere.xlvi.a kim the sonne of Josiah kyng of Juda, in the mynethe moneth whenne was commaunded that all the people of Jerusalem shulde faste, before the Lorde, and they also that were come fromthe cytyes of Juda vnto Jerusalem.

Then red Baruch the wordes of Jeremye
C Jere.xxxvi.b out of the boke within the house of the Lord out of the treasurye of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan the Scribe, which is beside the vpper courte of the dore of the Lordes house: that all the people might heare. Now when Micheah the sonne of Gamariah the sonne of Saphan had hearde all the wordes of the Lord out of the boke, he went downe to the kynges palace into the Scribes chamber, for there al the princes were set: Elisama the Scribe, Delaiah the sonne of Semei, Elnathan the sonne of Achbor, Gamariah ſ sonne of Saphan, Sedechias the sonne of Hananiah, with all the princes. And Michah told them all the wordes, that he harde Baruch rede out of the boke before the people.

Then all the princes sent Jehudi the son of Nathaniah, etc sonne of Selemiah, the D sonne of Chusi, vnto Baruch, sayinge: Take in thine hande the boke, wherout thou haste red before all the people, and come. So Baruch the sonne of Neriah toke the boke in his hand, and came vnto them. And they sayd vnto him: Syt downe, & rede the boke that we may heare also. So Baruch red, that they myght here. Now whē they had harde the wordes, they were abashed one vpō another, and sayd vnto Baruch: We will certefye ſ kynge of all these wordes. And they requyred Baruch, sayinge: tell vs, how diddest thou wryte all these wordes out of his mouth? Then Baruch answered them: He spake all these wordes vnto me with his mouthe, and I alone was with him, and wrote them in ſ boke.

Then sayde the Princes vnto Baruch: E Go thy waye, and hyde the with Jeremye, so that no man knowe where ye be. And they went in to the courte. But they kept the boke in the chambre of Elisama the Scribe, and tolde the kynge all the wordes that he myght heare. So the kynge sent Jehudi to fetche him the boke, which he brought out of Elisama the Scribes chambre. And Jehudi red it, that the kynge and all the princes, which were about him, myght heare. Now the kynge sat in the wynter house, for it was in the nynth moneth, and there was a good fyre before him. And when Jehudi had red.iij. Jere.xxiii.a or foure leaues therof, he cut the boke in peces with a penne knyfe, and caste it into the fyre vpon the harth, vntyll the boke was all brent in the fyre vpon the harth.

Yet no man was abashed therof, or rente F his clothes: neither the kynge them selfe, ne his seruauntes, though they hearde all these wordes. Neuertheles Elnathan, Delaiah, and Gamariah besought the kinge, that he wolde not burne the booke: notwithstandyng the kynge wolde not heare them, but commaunded Jerahmeel the sonne of Hamelech, Saraiah the sonne of Ezriel and Selemiah the sonne of Abdiel, to laye handes vpō Baruch the Scribe, and vpon Jeremye the Prophete but the Lorde kept them out of syght. After nowe that the kynge had brent the boke, and the Sermons which Baruch wrote at the mouth of Jeremye: The word
G of the Lorde came vnto Jeremy, sayinge: Take an other boke, and wryte in it all the former sayde sermons: that were written in the fyrste boke, which Joakim the king of Juda hath brent.

And tell Joakim the kynge of Juda thus H
sayth the Lorde: thou haste brent the booke, and thoughtest within thy selfe: Why haste thou written therin, ſ the kyng of Babylon shall come, and make this land waste, so that he shall make both the people and catell to be out of it? Therfore thus the Lorde sayth of Joakim the kinge of Juda: There shall none of his generation syt vpon the throne of Dauid. Yea dead corse shall be cast oute that the heat of the day, and ſ frost of the night may come vpon him. And I will visite the wickednesse of him, of his seed, and of his seruauntes. Moreouer all the euyll that I haue promised them (though they herd me not) wyl I bring vpon them, vpon the inhabitauntes of Jerusalem, and vpon all Juda. Then toke Jeremye an other booke, and gaue it Baruch the Scribe, the sonne of Neriah, which wrote therin out of the mouthe of Jeremye: All the sermons that were in the fyrst booke, whiche Joakim the kynge of Juda had burne. And there were added vnto them many moo sermons then before.

¶ Sedechias succedeth Cononiah. He sendeth vnto Jeremye to praye for him. Jeremye goyng in & out amonge the people, is taken, put in pryson, and in a pyt. He is deliuered by kynge Sedechias.

CAPI. XXXVII.

1 SEdechias the sonne of Josiah, whiche was made kyng thorow Nabuchodonosor king of Babylon reygned in the land of Juda, in the stede of Cononiah the sonne of Joakim.
But neyther he, nor his seruauntes, ne the people in the lande wolde obeye the wordes of the Lorde, which he spake by the Prophet Jeremye. Neuertheles Sedechias the kynges sonne Jehucal the sonne of Selemiah, and Sophonias the son of Maasiah preest to the Prophet Jeremy, sayinge: O praye thou vnto the Lord our God for vs. Now Jeremye walked yet among the people at that tyme, and was not put in pryson as yet. Pharaos hoste also was come out of Egypte, which whē the Caldees that besieged Jerusalem perceyued, they departed from thence.

Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto B
Jeremye the Prophet, sayinge: Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israel, this aunswere shall ye gyue to the kynge of Juda, that sente you vnto me for counsell: Beholde, Pharaos hoste, which is come forth to helpe you, shal returne to Egypte, in to his owne lande: but the Caldees shal come agayne, & fight against this cyte, wyn it, & set fyre vpon it. For thus sayth the Lord: Deceyue not your owne myndes, thynkyng on this maner: euyll the Caldees goo nowe there waye from vs: No, they shall not go their waye. For though ye had slayne the hole hoste of the Caldees, that be fyght you, and euery one of the slayne laye in his tent, yet shulde they stande vp and set fire vpon this cyte.

Lowe when the hoste of the Caldees was C broken vp from Jerusalem for feare of the Egyptians armye, Jeremye went out of Jerusalem towarde the lande of Ben Jamin to departe thence amonge the people. And whē he came vnto Ben Jamins port, there was a porter called Jeriah the sonne of Selemiah, the son of Hananiah, whiche fell vpon him, and toke him, sayinge: thy mynde is to turne to the Caldees.

Then sayd Jeremy: It is not so, I goo not E to ſ Caldees. Neuertheles Jeriah wold not beleue him, but brought Jeremy bound before the princes. Wherfore the princes were angry with Jeremy, causing him to be beaten, & to be layd in pryson in the house of Jonathas the scribe, for he was the ruler of the pryson. Thus was Jeremye put in the dongeon and pryson, and so laye there a longe tyme. Then Sedechias the kynge sent for him, and called him, and asked him quietly in his owne house sayinge: thynkest thou this busynesse (that nowe is in hande) commeth of the the Lorde? Jeremy answered: yea that it doth, and thou (sayd he) shalt be deliuered in to ſ king of Babylons power.

Moreouer Jeremye sayde vnto kynge Se- D
dechias: what haue I offended against the, against thy seruauntes, or against this people, that ye haue caused me to be put in pryson? Where are your Prophetes which haue prophecyed vnto you, and sayd that the king of Babylon shold not come against you and this lande?

And therfore heare nowe, O my lorde the kynge: let my prayer be accepte before the, and sende me no more in to the house of Jonathas the scribe, that I dye not there. Then Sedechias the kyng commaunded to put Jeremy in the fore entry of the pryson, and dayly to be gyuen him a cake of breed, and eis no dyde meate, vntyll all the breed in the cite was eaten vp. Thus Jeremy remayned in the fore entre of the pryson.

¶ By the meanes of the rulers, Jeremye is put in to a dongeon. At the requeste of Ebedmelech the Chamberlayne, the kynge commaundeth Jeremye to be brought forthe of the dongeon. Jeremye sheweth the kynge how he myght escape death.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

SAphatiah the sonne of Mathan, Godo- A liah the sonne of Phashur, Jucah the son of Selemiah, and Phashur the sonne of Melchiah perceyued the wordes that Jeremy had spoken vnto all the people: namelye on this maner: Thus sayth the Lord: Who so remayneth in this city, shal perysshe, either by the swerde, with hongre or with pestilence: Jeremi.xxi.b
But who so falleth vnto the Caldees, shall escape wynnynge his soule for a praye, and shall lyue. For thus sayth the Lorde. This cite (no doubt) must be deliuered in to the power of the king of Babylon, and he also shal wyn it. Then sayd the princes vnto the kyng: Syr, we beseche you lette this man be put to deth. For thus he discourageth the handes of the souldyers that be in this city, and the handes of all the people, when he speaketh suche wordes vnto them.

B This man verely laboureth not for pear of the people, but mischiefe. Sedechias the kinge answered and sayd: lo, he is in your handes for the kynge may denye you nothynge. Then toke they Jeremy, and cast him in to the dongeon of Melchiah the son of Hamelech, that dwelte in the fore entre of the pyson. And they let downe Jeremye with cordes in to a wynged, where there was no water, but myre: So Jeremye stacke faste in the myre. Nowe when Abedmelech the Mozian being a cham berlayne in the kynges court, understode that they had cast Jeremye in to the dongeon: he went out of the kynges house, and spake to ỹ kynge, (whiche then sate vnder the porte of Ben Jamin) these wozdes: My lozde the kinge where as these men medle with Jeremye the Prophete, they doo him wronge: Namelye in that they haue put him in pyson, there to dye of hongee, for there is no moze breed in the cite.

C Then the kynge commaunded Abedmelech the Mozian, and sayd: Take from hence xxx. men whom thou wilt, and drawe vp Jeremye the Prophete oute of the dongeon before he dye. So Abedmelech toke the men with him, and went to the house of Amelech, and there vnder an almery he gat olde ragges, & worne cloutes, and let them downe by a cozde in to the dongeon to Jeremy.

D And Abedmelech the Mozian sayd vnto the Prophete Jeremye: O put these raggis and cloutes vnder thyne arme holes, but wert the and the cordes: and Jeremye did so. So they drewe vp Jeremye with cordes, and toke him out of the dongeon, and he remayned in the fore entre of the pyson. Then Sedechias the kynge sent and caused Jeremye the Pro-
Jer. xxi. b. phete be called vnto him out of the thirde entre that was by the house of the Lord. And the kynge sayd vnto Jeremy: I will aske the some what, but hyde nothynge fro me. Then Jeremy answered Sedechias: Yf I be playne vnto the, thou wilt cause me suffre wch: yf I gyue the counsel, thou wilt not folow me. So the king swoze an othe secretly vnto Jeremy sayinge: As truly as the Lozde lyueth, that made vs these soules, I will not slee ỹ, ne gyue the in to the handes of them that seke after thy lyfe.

E Then sayd Jeremy vnto Sedechias: thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf case be that thou wylte go forth vnto the kynge of Babylons princes, thou shalt saue thy lyfe, and this cite shall not be brent: yea bothe thou and thy housholde shall escape
Jer. xxi. b. with youre lyues. But yf thou wylte not go forth to the kyng of Babylons princes, then shall this cite be deliuered in to the handes of the Caldees whiche shall set fyre vpon it, and thou shalte not be able to escape them. And Sedechias sayd vnto Jeremye: I am a-
F frayde for the Jewes, that are fled vnto the Caldees lest I come in their handes, and they to haue me in derision.

F But Jeremy answered: No, they shal not betraye the: O harken vnto the voyce of the Lozd (beseche the) which I speke vnto the, so shalte thou be well, and saue thy life. But yf thou wilt not go forth, the Lord hath shewed me this playnly: Behold, all the women that are lefte in the kyng of Judas house, shall go oute to the kynge of Babylons princes. For they think, that thou art disceyued: and that the men in whom thou dyddest put thy truste, haue mated the, & let thy fete fall in ỹ myre, and gone their waye from the. Therfore all thy wyues with their children shall be vnto the Caldees, & thou shalt not escape their handes, but shalt be the king of Babylons prisoner, and this city shal be brent.

Then sayd Sedechias vnto Jeremy: lette no body knowe of these wordes, & thou shalt not dye. But yf the princes geyne that I haue talked with the, and come vnto the, saying: O speake, what sayd the king to the? hyde it not from vs, and we will not put the to deth. Tell vs (we praye the) what sayd the king to the? Se thou gyue them this answer: I haue humbly besought the kinge, that he will let me lye no moze in Jonathans house, that I dye not there? Then came all the princes vnto Jeremy, and asked him. And he tolde them after the maner as the kynge had him. Then they helde their pease, for they perceyued nothynge. So Jeremye abode styll in the fore entre of the pyson, vntyll the day that Jerusalem was wonne.

¶ Nabuchodonosor besiegeth Jerusalem. Sedechias flieth. Hys is taken of the Chaldees. His sonnes are slayne. His eyes are thrust out. Jeremye is prouyded for. Abedmelechus deliuered from captiuite, because of the confydence that he hathe in God.

CAPI. XXXIX.

NOwe when the cite of Jerusalem was I taken (for in the nynth yere of Sede- Jere.
chias kynge of Juda, in the tenth mo- lii.
neth, came Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Ba- Jere.
bylon and all his hoste, and besieged Jerusa- lii.
lem, and in the eleuenth yere of Sedechias, in the fourthe moneth, in the myneth daye of the moneth he drake in to the cite.) Then all the princes of the kynge of Babylon came in, and sat them down vnder the port: Nergel, Sarezar, Samegarnabo, Sarsachim, Rabsaris, Nergel, Sarezer, Rabmag, with all the other princes of the kynge of Babylon. And when Sedechias the kynge of Juda, with his souldyers sawe them, they fled, and departed out of the cite by nyght thorowe the kynges garden, and thorowe the port that is betwene the two walles, and so they wente towarde the wildernesse.

But the Chaldees hoste folowed fast after them, and toke Sedechias in the felde of Jericho, and brought him prisoner to Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon vnto Rebla- lath that lyeth in the land of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him. So the king of Babylon caused the children of Sedechias, and all the nobles of Juda be slayn before his face at Reblath. And made Sedechias eyes to be put out, and bound him with chaynes and and sent him to Babylon.

Moreouer the Caldees brent ỹ kynges palace, with the other houses of the people, and drake downe the walles of Jerusalem. As for the remnaunt of the people that were in the cite, and suche as were come to helpe them (what so euer was lefte of the common sorte) Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne caryed them to Babylon. But Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne lefte the rascall people, (and those that hadde nothynge) dwell styll in the lande of Juda, and gaue them vynezardes and corne feldes, at the same time. Nabuchodonosor also the kynge of Babylon, gaue Nabuzardan the chiefe capiteyn a charge concernynge Jeremye, sayinge: take and eye wilthe him, and make moche of him: se thou do him no harme, but entreate him after his owne desyre.

So Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne, Nabusaban the chiefe chamberlayne, Rergallarezer the treasurer, and all the kynge of Babylons lozdes sent for Jeremye, and caused him be fet oute of the fore entre of the pyson, and committed him vnto Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam, the sonne of Saphan: that he shulde cary him home, and so he dwelt emonge the people.

D Now whyle Jeremy laye yet bounde in the fore entre of the pyson, the worde of ỹ Lozde came vnto him, saying: Go and tel Ebedmelech the Mozian: Thus sayeth the Lozde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, the cruell and sharpe plage that I haue deuyced for this cite, wyl I bryng vpon them, that thou shalt se it: but I wyll delyuer the (sayeth the Lozde) and thou shalt not come in the handes of those men whom thou feareste. For vndoubtedly I will saue the so that thou shalt not perish with the swerde: but thy lyfe shal be saued, and that because thou hast put thy truste in me, sayeth the Lozde.

¶ Jeremye hathe lycence to go whyther he wyll. He dwelleth with the people that remayneth at Jerusalem, ouer whom Godoliah ruleth. Johanan reporteth euyll vnto Godoliah.

CAPI. XL.

THis is the maner how the Lord entreated Jeremy, when Nabuzardan ỹ chiefe capitayne had let him go fre from Rama, whither he had led him bounde amonge all the prysoners, that were caried from Jerusalem and Juda vnto Babylon. The chiefe Capitayne called for Jeremy, and sayd vnto him: The Lozde thy God spake mighteily before of the mischefe vpon this place: Now the Lord hath sent it, and performed it as he had promysed: for ye haue synned agaynst the Lozde, and haue not bene obedient vnto his voyce, therfore commeth this plage vpo you. Beholde, I loose the bondes from thy handes this daye: yf thou wylt now goo w me vnto Babylon: vp them, for I wyll se to the, and prouyde for the: But yf thou wylte not goo with me to Babylon, then remayne here. Be- Gene. xlvi. b. Toby. i. d.
holde, all the lande is at thy wyl, loke where thou thinkest conuenient and good for the to abyde, there dwell. Yf thou canst not be content to dwel alone, then remayne with Gedaliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan: whom the king of Babilon hath made gouernour ouer the cities of Juda, and dwell with him among the people, or remayne where so euer it pleaseth the. So the chiefe Capitayne Jere. xxxix. f gaue him his expenses with a reward, and let him go. Then went Jeremy vnto Godoliah the son of Ahikam to Maspha, and dwelte there with him amonge the people that were lefte in the lande.

E Now when the Capitaynes of the hoste of Juda (which with their fellowes were scattered abrode on euery syde in the lande) vnderstode that the kyng of Babylon had made Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam gouernour in the the lande, and that man, wyfe, and child: yea and the poze men in the lande (that were not led captiue to Babylon) sholde be vnder his iurisdiction: They came to Godoliah vnto Maspha: Namely Ismael the son of Nathaniah, Johanan, and Jonathan the sonnes of Careah, Sareah the son of Thanhometh, the sonnes of Ophai the Netophathite, Jesaniah the son of Maachati with their companions. And Godoliah the son of Ahicam, the son of Saphan swore vnto them & their fellowes on this maner: Be not afrayde to Jere. xxvii. c.
serue the Caldees, dwel in the lande, and do the kynge of Babylon seruyce, so shal ye prospere. Beholde, I dwell at Maspha to be an officer in the Caldees behalfe, and to satisfye suche as come to vs. Therfore gather you wyne, corne and oyle, and kepe them in your wast houses, and dwel in your cities that ye haue in keping.

D Yea all the Jewes also that dwelt in Moab vnder the Ammonites, in Idumea, and in all the countreys, when they herde that the kyng of Babylon hadde made Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan, gouernour vpon them that were left in Juda: All the Jewes (I saye) returned oute of all places where they were fled vnto and came in to the lande of Juda to Godoliah vnto Maypha, and gathered wyne and other fruites, and that very moche.

Moreouer Johanan the sonne of Kareah & all the capitaynes of the hostes, that were scattred on euery syde in the land, came to Godoliah in Maspha, and sayd vnto him: knowest thou not that Baalam king of the Ammonites hathe sent Ismael the son of Nathaniah to slee the? But Godoliah the son of Ahicam bileued the not. Then said Johanan the son of Careah vnto Godoliah in Maspha these wordes secretly: let me go, I praye the, & I wil slee Ismael the son of Nathaniah, so that no body shal know it. Wherfore wil he kill the, that all ỹ Jewes which resort vnto the might be scatred, and the remnaunt in Juda perish? Then said Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam to Johanan the sonne of Careah: Thou shalte not do it, for they are but lyes, that men saye of Ismael.

¶ Ismael killeth Godolieh grievously, and many other with hym. Johanan followeth after Ismael.

CAPI. XLI.

A 4. Reg. xxv. b. BUt in the seuenth moneth it happened that Ismael the son of Nathaniah the sonne of Elisama (one of the kynges blood) came with them that was greatest about the king, and ten men that were sworne vnto hym vnto Godoliah the son of Ahicam to Maspha, and ate there together. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah, with those ten men that were sworne to him, start vp and smote Godoliah the son of Ahicam the sonne of Saphan with the swerde and slewe him, whom the king of Babylon had made gouernour of the land. Ismael also slewe all the Iewes that were with Godoliah at Maspha, and all the Caldees that he founde there waytyng vpon him.

B The next day after that he had slayne Godoliah (the matter was yet vnknowen) there came certeyn men from Sichem, from Silo and Samaria, to the nombre of foure score, whiche had shauen there berdes, rent their clothes, and were all heuy, bryngynge meat offerynges, and incense in their handes, to offre it in the house of the Lorde. And Ismael the son of Nathaniah went to, fro Maspha weping to mete them. Now when he met them, he sayd: Go your waye to Godoliah the son of Ahicam. And when they came in the myddest of the cite, Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah (with them that were sworne vnto hym) slewe them euen at the myddest of the pyte.

C Among these four score men there were ten that sayd vnto Ismael: Oh slee vs not, for we haue yet a great treasure in the felde, of whete, barley, oyle and honye. So he spared them, and slewe them not with their brethre.

4. Reg. xxv. c. Now the pyt wherin Ismael did cast the dead bodyes of the men (whom he slewe because of Godoliah) had king Asa caused to be made, for feare of Baasa the kynge of Israell, and the same pyt dyd Ismael fyll with slayne men.

As for the remnaūt of the people, the kinges doughters and all the people that were yet left at Maspha, vpon whome Nabuzaradan the chiefe Capitayne had made Godoliah the son of Ahicam gouernoure: Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah caryed them awaye prisoners towarde the Ammonites.

Gene. xxxvii. c. 1. Reg. xxv. b. But when Johanan the sonne of Careah and all they whiche had ben capitaynes ouer the kynges hoste with hym herde of al the wyckednesse that Ismael the son of Nathaniah had wrought, they toke their companions & went out for to fight with Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah, and found him by the waters of Gabaon in Gabaon. Nowe when all the people whom Ismael led captyue saw Johanan the son of Careah and al the other capitaynes of the host, they were glad. So al the people that Ismael had caryed awaye frome Maspha, were brought agayne.

D And when they returned they came to Johanan the sonne of Careah. But Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah fledde frome Johanan with eyght of his owne companions, and wente to the Ammonites. Then Johanan the sonne of Careah, and all the capitaynes of the hoste that were with hym, toke the remnaunt of the people, whome Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had ledde awaye (when he had slayne Godoliah the sonne of Ahicam) whom they had also rescued from him: fightyng men, women and children, and geldo men, whom they brought again from Gabaon: and wente from thence and sate them downe at Gerath Camaam, which lyeth beside Bethlehem, that they might go in to Egipte for feare of the Caldees: of whom they were afrayde, because that Ismael the sonne of Nathaniah had slayne Godoliah Ahikams sonne, whom the kyng of Babylon had made gouernour in the lande.

¶ The Capitaynes take counsell of Jeremye what they oughte to do. Jeremye monysheth the rest of the people not to go in to Egypte.

CAPI. XLII.

1 SO all the rulers, and Johanan the sonne of Careah, Jezoniah the sonne of Osaiah came with all the people from the least vnto the moost, and sayde vnto Jeremye the Jerem. Prophet: heare our petition, that thou maist praye for vs vnto the Lorde thy God, and for the rest whereof there be verye fewe lefte of many, as thou seest vs: that the Lorde thy God maye shewe vs awaye to go in, and tell vs what we shoulde doo. Then Jeremye the Prophete sayde vnto to them: I haue herde you. Beholde, I wyll praye vnto God youre Lorde, as ye haue required me: & loke what aunswere the Lorde geueth you, I shall certifye you therof, and kepe not dyng backe frō you. And they sayd vnto Jeremy: The Lord Jerem. xlii. Jerem. of truth and faythfulnesse be our recorde that we wyl do all that the Lorde thy God commaundeth vs, whether it be good or euil. We wil harken vnto the voyce of our Lord God to whome we sende the, that we maye prospere, when we haue followed the voyce of the Lorde our God.

And after ten dayes came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jeremy. Then called he Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the capitaynes of the people that were with him: yea and all the people from the least to the most, and sayd vnto them: Thus sayth the Lord God of Israel, vnto whom ye sent me, to lay forth your prayers before him: Yf ye wyll dwell in this land, I shal buylde you vp, and not plucke you down: I shal plant you, and not rote you out: for I am pacified as concernynge the noble that I haue done to you. Feare feare not the kynge of Babylon, of whom ye stande in awe: O be not afrayde of hym, sayth the Lorde: for I wyll be with you, to helpe you, and deliuer you frome his handes. I wyll pardon you, I wyll haue mercye vpon you, & bryngе you agayne in to your owne lande.

E Neuertheles, yf ye purpose not to dwell in this lande, nor to folowe the voyce of the Lorde youre God: but wyll saye thus, we will not dwell here, but goo in to Egypte: where we shall neyther se warre, heare the noyse of batayle, ne suffre honger, there will we dwell. Wherefore heare nowe the worde of the Lorde, ye remnaunt of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Yf ye holly purpose to goo in to Egypte, and to be there as straungers: the swearde that ye feare, shall ouertake you in Egypte, and the honger wherof ye be here afrayde shall hange vpon you in to Egypt, and there ye shall dye. For all they that of set purpose vndertake to goo in to Egypte, there to ease themselues of their myserye, shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestylence: not one of them shall remayne, there shall none escape the plage, that I wyl bring vpon them.

D For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: Lyke as my wrathe and indignation is come vpon the inhabitaunces of Jerusalem, so shall my displeasure goo forthe vpō you also, yf ye go in to Egypt: For there ye shalbe scrutled, abhorred, brought to shame and confusion: and as for this place, ye shal neuer se it more. The Lorde forbyddeth you, ye remnaunt of Juda, that ye shal not go in to Egypte.

And forget not that I haue warned you earnestly this daye, ellis shall ye begyle your selues. For ye sente me vnto the Lorde youre God, and sayd: O praye thou the Lorde our God for vs: and loke what aunswere the Lorde oure God geueth the, that bryngе vs agayne, and we shall doo therafter. Nowe haue I shewed and declared vnto you the voyce of the Lorde youre God, for the which cause he hathe sent me to you. Yf ye wyll not folowe it, be sure that ye shall perysshe with the swerde, with honger, and pestilence: euen in the same place, where your lust was to go and dwell.

¶ Johanan caryeth the remnaunt of the people in to Egypte, contrary to the mynde of Jeremy. Jeremye prophesyeth the destruction of Egypte.

CAPI. XLIII.

1 NOwe when Jeremye had ended all the wordes of the Lorde God vnto the people (for their sakes to whom God had sent him) Azariah the son of Osaiah, and Johanan the sonne of Karee, with al the prauaricatours, sayd vnto Jeremye: Thou spekest, the Lorde oure God hathe not sent the to speake vnto vs, that we shulde not go in to Egypte to dwell there: But Baruch the sonne of Nerias prouoketh the against vs, that he might bryngе vs in to the captiuite of the Caldees: that they might slee vs, and cary vs away prisoners vnto Babylon.

So Johanan the sonne of Karee, and al the Capitaynes of the hoste, and all the people folowed not the commaundement of the Lorde: Namely to dwell in the lande of Juda: But Johanan the sonne of Karee, and all the Capitaynes of the hoste, caryed awaye all the remnaunte in Juda, that were come together agayne frome the Nethen, (amonge whome they hadde ben scattered) to dwell in the lande of Juda: Men, women children, the kinges doughters: al those that Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne had lefte with Godoliah the sonne of Ahikam. They caryed awaye also the Prophet Jeremy, Baruch the sonne of Neriah, and so came in to Egypt: for they were not obedient vnto the commaundement of God. Thus came they to Taphnis. Jerem. xlii.

And in Taphnis the worde of the Lorde happened vnto Jeremye, sayenge: 4 Take greate stones in thyne handes, and hyde them in the bryckе wall, vnder the doore of Pharaos house in Taphnis, that all the men of Juda maye se, and saye vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde, I wyll sende and call for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon my seruaunt, and wil set his seate vpon the stones that I haue hyd, and he shall spreade his tente ouer them. Jerem. xliii.

And when he commeth he shall smyte the lande of Egypt with slaughter, with pyllowment, and with the swerde. He shall set fyre vpon the temples of the Egyptians goddes, and burne them vp, and take them selues prisoners. Moreouer he shal scrape him self with the lande of Egypt, lyke as a shepherde putteth on his cote, and shall departe his waye frome thence in peax. The pyllers also of the temple of the sunne that is in Egypte: shall he breake in peces, and burne the temples of the Egyptians goddes. D

¶ He reproueth the people for their Idolatrye. They that feare tryfles by the threatenynge of the Lorde, are chastened. The destruction of Egypte, and the Iewes therin, is prophesyed.

CAPI. XLIIII.

THis is the worde that was shewed to Jeremye concernynge all the Iewes, whiche dwelte in Egypte: at Magdal, at Taphnis, at Memphis, and in the lande of Pathures. Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the God of Israell: ye haue seene all the myserye that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem, and vpon all the cyties of Juda, so that this daye they are desolate, and no man dwellynge therin: and that because of the great blasphemyes whiche they committed, to prouoke me vnto angre: In that they wente backe to doo sacrifyce and worshyp vnto straunge goddes: whom neyther they, nor ye, youre fathers haue knowen. Jerem. xvb. & xxiiij. c.

Howbe it I sent vnto them my seruauntes all the Prophetes: I rose vp early, and sente vnto them, and gaue them warnynge: O doo no suche abhominable thynges, and thynges that I hate. But they wolde not folowe ne harken, to tourne from theyr wyckednesse, and to doo no more sacrifyce vnto straunge goddes.

Wherfore myne indignacion and wrathe was kyndled, and brent vp the cityes of Juda, the feldes with the stretes of Jerusalem, so that they were made waste and desolate, as it is come to passe this daye. Nowe therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Howe happeneth it that ye do so greate euyll vnto youre owne soules, thus to destroye the men and women, chyldren and babes of Juda? so that none of you is lefte, bycause ye prouoke me vnto wrathe with the workes of your owne handes: whē ye offre vnto straunge goddes in the lande of Egypte, where as ye begon to dwell: That ye myght vtterly perysshe, and that ye might be reuyled, and shamefully intreated at all nacyons. Or haue ye nowe forgotten the wyckednesse of youre forefathers, the wyckednesse of the kynges of Juda, and theyr wyues, the wyckednesse that ye youre selues and youre wyues haue doone in the lande of Juda, in the citye and in the lande of Jerusalem?

Yet are ye not sorye this daye, ye feare not neither walke ye in my lawe & in my commaundementes that I haue gyuen vnto you and youre forefathers.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: I am stedfastly auoyded and determined to punysshe you, and to rote oute all Juda. As for the remnaunt of Juda that purposly went in to Egypt, there to take them of theyr misery: I wyll take them and they shall all be destroyed. In the lande of Egypte shall they perysshe, beynge consumed with the swerde and with honger. For from the leest vnto the moost, they shall perysshe with the swerde and with honger. Moreouer they shall be reuyled, abhorred, shamed, and confounded. Amos. ix. b. Jeremy. xlii. c. and. xliiij. c.

For I will visyte them that dwell in Egypt, as I haue visited Jerusalem: with the swerde, with honger, and with pestilence: so that none of the remnaunt of Juda, whiche are gone to dwell in Egypte shall be lefte to come agayn vnto the land of Juda, although they thinke to come thither agayn, to dwel there. For none shall come agayne, but suche as are fled awaye. Jerem. xxxix.

Then all the men which knewe that theyr wyues had offered vnto straunge goddes, and a greate sorte of wyues that stode there, yea and all the people that dwelte there in Egypte in the cirye of Patures answered Jeremye and sayd: as for the wordes that thou hast spoken vnto vs in the name of the Lorde we wyll in no wyse heare them: but wyll so euer goeth oute of oure owne mouth, that wyll we doo: We wyll doo sacrifyce, and offre oblacions vnto the quene of heuen, lyke as we and oure fore fathers, our kynges and our rulers haue wonte in the cityes of Juda, and in the stretes and feldes of Jerusalem. For then had we plentifulnesse of vitayles, then were we in prosperite, & no misfortune came vpon vs.

But sence we lefte to offre and to doo sacrifyce vnto the Quene of heuen, we haue had scarcenesse of all thynges, and perysshe with the swerde and hongre. Last of all, whē we women doo sacrifyce and offred vnto the Quene of heuen, doo we make her cakes, and poure vnto her drynckesofferynges, to wit her iesupre, without oure husbandes wyles?

Then sayd Jeremy vnto all the people, to the men, to the women, and to all the folke whiche had gyuen hym that answere: Doo not the Lorde remembre the sacrifyces that ye, youre fore fathers, youre kynges and rulers (with all the people) haue offered in the cityes of Juda, in the stretes and lande of Jerusalem? and hathe he not considered this in his mynde? In so moche that the Lord might no longer suffre the wyckednesse of youre inuentyons, and the abhominable thynges whiche ye vsed? Is not youre lande desolate and waste, yea and abhorred so that no man dwelleth therin anye more, as it is come to passe this daye?

Doo not all this happen vnto you bycause ye made suche sacrifyce, and synned agaynst the Lorde? Ye haue not folowed his voyce, to walke in his lawe, in his ordinaunces and statutes.

Yea this is the cause, that all myschefe tune happened vnto you, as it is come to passe this daye. Moreouer, Jeremye spake vnto all the people, and to all the women: Heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that be in the lande of Egypte: thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israell: Ye and youre wyues haue spoken with youre owne mouthe the thynge that ye haue fulfilled in dede.

Yea thus haue ye sayd: We wyl not fayle, but doo the thynge that pleaseth vs: we wil doo sacrifyce, and poure oute drynckofferynges to the quene of heuen. Purposely haue ye set vp youre owne good meanynges, and hastely haue ye fulfylled youre owne intent. And therfore heare the worde of the Lorde all Juda, ye that dwelle in the lande of Egypte.

Beholde, I haue sworne by my greate name, sayth the Lorde, that my name shall not be reherced thorowe anye mans mouthe of Juda, in all the lande of Egypte, to saye: The Lorde God liueth, for I wyll watche to plage them, and not for their welthe. And all the men of Juda that be in the lande of Egypte, shall perysshe with the swerde and with honger, vntyll they be vtterly destroyed.

Neuertheles those that fled awaye for the swerde, shall come agayne in to the land of Juda, but there shall be very fewe of them. And all the remnaunt of Juda, that are gone into Egypte, there to dwell, shall knowe whose wordes shall be found true: theirs or myne. Take this for a token, that I wyll visyte you in this place, sayth the Lorde, and ye may know, howe that I (without doubt) wyl performe my purpose vpon you to punysshe you. Beholde, sayth the Lorde, I wyll delyuer Pharao Ophra kynge of Egypte into the handes of his ennemyes, that seke after his lyfe: euen as I gaue Sedechias the kynge of Juda in to the handes of Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon, which sought after his lyfe.

¶ Baruch is reproued of Jeremye.

CAPI. XLV.

These are the wordes that Jeremy the Prophet spake vnto Baruch the sonne of Nerias, after that he had written these sermons into a booke at the mouthe of Jeremy, in the fourth yere of Joakim the son of Josias kynge of Juda.

Thus sayth the Lorde God of Israell vnto the, O Baruch: In so moche as thou imaginest thus, when thou wast wrytynge. Wo is me, the Lorde hath gyuen me payne to my trauayle: I haue wearyed my self with syghynge, and shall I fynde no rest? Therfore tell him O Jeremy, that the Lorde sayth thus: Beholde, The thing that I haue buylded, wyll I breake downe agayne, and rote out the thynge, that I haue planted, yea this hole lande. And seekest thou yet promotion? Take not for it, and desyre it not. For I wyll bryng a miserable plage vpon all flesshe sayth the Lord. But thy life will I gyue the for a pray wherforeuer thou goest.

¶ The prophecyeth the destruction of Egypt. Nebuchadnezzar is prompted to Israel.

CAPI. XLVI.

Here folowe the wordes of the Lorde to the Prophete Jeremye, whiche he spake vnto the Gentyles. These wordes folowynge preached he to the Egyptians cōcernynge the host of Pharao Necho kyng of Egypt, when he was in Charcamis beside the water of Euphrates: what tyme as Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babilon slewe him, in the fourth yere of of Joakim the sonne of Josiah kynge of Juda.

Ye make redy buckler and shylde, ye go forth to fight: Ye harnesse youre horses and set your selues vpon them: Ye set your salets fast on, ye bynge forthe speares, ye scoure youre swerdes and put on youre breest plates.

But alas, how happeneth it, that I se you so afrayde? why flynche ye backe? wherfore are your worthyes slayne? Yea they runne so fast awaye, that none of them loketh backe hynde hym. Feare & snares is fallen vpon euery one of the sayth the Lorde. The lightest of fote shall not flie awaye, and the worthyest shall not escape.

Toward the North by the water of Euphrates, they shall stomble & fall. But what is he this, that swelleth vp, as it were a flonde, rysynge & ragynge lyke the streames of water? It is Egypt that ryseth vp lyke a flonde, and casteth oute the waters with so greate noyse.

For they say: We wil go vp, and wil couer the earth: we wyll destroy the cytyes, with them that dwel therin. Get you to horsbacke coule forth the charettes, come forth ye worthies: ye Mozians, ye Libeans with youre buckelers, ye Libeans with youre bowes: So shall this daye be vnto the Lord God of hoostes, a daye of vengeaunce, that he maye auenge him of his ennemyes. The swerde shal deuoure, it shall be satisfied & dathed in their bloude: For the Lorde God of hoostes shall haue a slaynge offrynge towarde the North, by the water of Euphrates. Go vp (O Galaad) and bynge trycle vnto the daughter of Egypte:

But in vayne shalte thou go to surgerye for thy wounde shal not be stopped. The Heythen shall heare of thy shame, and the lande shall be full of thy confusion: for one strong man shall stomble vpon an other, howe then shulde they not fall both togyther.

Thus are the wordes that the Lorde spake to the Prophet Jeremye, concernynge the host of Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babilon, which was sente to destroy the land of Egipt: Preache out thorowe the lande of Egypt, & cause it be proclaymed at Magdol, Memphis and Thaphnis, and saye: Stande fyl, make the redye, for the swerde shall consume the rounde aboute.

Howe happeneth it that thy myghty worthies are fallen? why stode they not faste? Euen because the Lorde thrust them downe. The slaughter was greate, for one fell euer syl vpon an other. One cryed vpon an other: Vp, let vs goo agayne to our owne people, and to oure owne naturall countrey, from the swerde of oure enemye.

Crye euen there: O Pharao kynge of Egypte, the tyme wil drynge it vpon. As truly as I lyue (sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of Hoostes) it shall come as the mount of Thabor, and as Lybanus if it stode in the see. O thou daughter of Egypte make redy thy gere to flye. For Memphis shall be voyde and desolate, so that no man shal dwel therin. The lande of Egypte is lyke a goodly fayre calf, but one shal come out of the North to pluck her forwarde. Her waged souldiers that be with her, are lyke fat calues.

They also shall flie awaye togyther, and not abyde: for the daye of their slaughter & the tyme of their vysytacion shall come vpō them.

The crye of their ennemyes shall make a noyse, as the blaste of a trompet. For they shall entre in with their host, and come with axes.

ares, as it were hewers downe of wod. And they shall cut downe her wodde, sayethe the Lorde, without any discrecion. For they shal be mo in nombre then the grashoppers, so that no man shall be able to tell them. The daughter of Egypt shal be confounded, whe she shall be deliuered in to the handes of the people of the North.

Moreouer thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes the God of Israel: Beholde I wyll visit that rebelle people of Alexandria, Pharao and Egypte, yea both their goddes and their kynges: euen Pharao, and all theym that put their truste in hym. Yea I wyll deliuer them into the handes of those, that seke after their lyues: Namely, into ℔ power of Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon, and into the power of his seruauntes. And after all these thinges it shall be inhabited as afore tyme sayth the Lorde.

But be not thou afrayd (O my seruaunte Jacob) feare not thou, O Israel. For lo, I wil helpe the frome farre, and thy sede frome the lande of thy captyuyte. Jacob also shal come agayne, and be in rest: he shall be rych, and no man shall do him harme. Feare thou not (O Jacob my seruaunte) sayethe the Lorde, for I am with the: and wyll destroye all nacions, amonges whom I haue scatered the, Neuertheles I will not consume the but chasten the and correct the: yea and that with discrecyon: neither will I spare the as one that were faultles.

¶ The worde of the Lorde, agaynste the Philystynes.

CAPI. XLVII.

THese are the wordes, that the Lorde spake vnto Jeremye the Prophete agaynste the Philistines, before that Pharao smote the cytye of Azah. Thus sayeth the Lorde: Beholde, there shal waters arise out of the North: and shal grow to a great floude, runnyng ouer, and couerynge the lãd, the cytyes, and them that dwell therin.

And the men shal crye, and all they that dwell in the lande shal mourne at the noyse and stampynge of their stronge barbed horses, at the shakynge of their charettes and at the rombling of the wheles. The fathers shall not loke to their children, so feble and wery shal their handes be: at the same tyme when he shall be there, to destroye the hole lande of the Philistines. He shal make waste both Tyrus, Sidon and all other that are sworen vnto them.

For the Lorde wyll destroye al Palestina, and the other Iles, that be deuyded from the countrey. Baldnesse is come vpon Gaza, Ascalon with her other valleyes shall kepe her pese.

Howe longe wilte thou stare, O thou swearde of the Lorde? Turne agayne into thy shethe, rest, and staut ot. But how can it cease, when the Lorde him selfe hath geuen him a charge ageynste Ascalon, and sayeth it vp agaynste the cytye of the see coste?

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Moabites.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THus sayth the Lord of hostes the God of Israell agaynste Moab: Wo be to the citie of Nabo, for it shall be layed waste, brought to confusyon and taken. Yea thy stronge citie of Kariathaim shall be brought to shame, and afrayed: Moab shall no more be had in honoure: Wicked counsell shall be taken vpon Hesbon. Come (shal they say) let vs roote them out, that they may be no more amonge the nombre of the Gentyles, ℟ they may no more be thought vpõ: Thus the Swerde shal persecute the: A voice shall crye frome Horonaim: With great wa fynge and destruccion, is Moab made desolate.

And this crye shall be herde in all her cytyes. At the going vp vnto Luhith there shall arise a lamentacion: and downe towarde Horonaim, there shall be herde a cruell and a deedly crye: Get you away, saue your liues and be lyke vnto the herbe in the wyldernes. For because thou hast trusted in thy stronge holdes and treasure, thou shalt be take, Chamos with his preistes and princes shall go awaye into captyuyte.

The destroyer shal come vpõ al the cityes, none shall escape. The valleyes shal be destroyed, and the feldes shall be layde waste lyke as the Lorde hath determyned.

Make a token vnto Moab, that she get her awaye spedely: for her cuntre shall be made so desolate, that no man shall dwell therin. Cursed be he that doth the worke of the Lorde negligently, and cursed be he that kepeth backe his swearde frome shedyng of blonde.

Moab hath neuer bene eyche and carelesse frome her youth vp, she hath sytten and taken her ease with her treasure. She was neuer yet put out of one vessell into an other (that is) she neuer went awaye into captyuyte, therfore her taste remayneth, and her sauoure is not yet chaunged.

But lo, the tyme commeth, sayth the Lord that I shal sende her trusters to trusse her vp ℟ prepare and season her vessels: yea her vessels rattell and shake to and fro. And Moab shall be ashamed of Chamos, lyke as Israel was ashamed of Bethel, wherin she put her truste.

Wherefore do ye chinke thus: we are myghtye, and stronge men of warre? Moab shall be destroyed, and her cyties brent vp: her chosen younge men shall be slayne, sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes. The destruction of Moab commeth on a pace, and her fall is at hande.

All her neyghbeures shal mourne for her, and all they that knowe her name, shall say: O howe happeneth it, that the stronge staffe and the goodly rod is broken? Come downe frome thy glory daughter Dibon, come downe frome thy glory and sytte in pouertye. For he that destroyeth Moab, shall come vp to the also, and breake downe thy stronge holdes.

And thou that dwellest in Aroer, get the to the strete, and loke about the: aske them that are fled and escaped, and say: what thing is happened? O, Moab is confounded and ouercome.

Mourne and crye, tell it out at Arnon, that Moab is destroyed. And myscrye shall come vpon the playne lande: Namely, vpon Holõ, ℟ Jahazah: vpon Mephaath ℟ Dibon: vpon Nabo and the house of Diblathaim, vpon Kariathaim and Bethgamul, vpon Bethmaon and Karioth, vpon Bozrah and all the cytyes in the lande of Moab, whether they lye farre or nere.

The horne of Moab shall be smytten downe, and her arme broken, sayth the Lord. Make her dronken, for she magnifyed her selfe aboue the Lorde, that men may clappe their handes at her vomyt, and that she also may be laughed to scorne. O Israel, shalte thou not laugh him to scorne, when he is taken amonge theues? Yea because of thy wordes that thou hast spoken agaynste him, thou shalte be hyden awaye. Ye Moabites shall leaue the cities, and dwell in rockes of stone, ℟ become lyke doues, that make their nestes in holes.

As for Moabs pryde, we haue herde of it, she is very high mynded. I know her stoutnesse, her boasting, her arrogancy, ℟ the pryde of her stomach, sayth the Lorde. For her stoutnesse may neyther vpholde her wickednes nor dede. Therfore shall there mourenynge be made for Moab, and euerye man shall crye for Moabs sake: a lamentacion shalbe made to the men that stande vpon the wall. So will I mourne for the also, O Jazer, and for the. O thou vynyarde of Sabamah.

Thy wyne braunches shall come ouer the see, and the braunches of Jazer but vnto the see: the destroyer shall breake into thy harnest and grape gatheryng: Myrth and chere shall be taken awaye from the tymbrefelde, and from the hole land of Moab.

There shal be no swete wine in the presse, the treader shall haue no stomacke to crye, yea there shal be none to crye vnto him: whiche afore tyme were herde from Hesbon to Eleale ℟ Jahas, which lyfted vp their voyce from Zoar vnto Horonaim, that bullocke of three yere olde. The waters also of Nemrim shall be dryed vp.

Moreouer I wyll make Moab cease (sayethe the Lorde) frome the offeringes & encense that she hath made vnto her goddes in hygh places. Wherfore my herte mourneth for Moab, like a croude playing an heuy song: and for the mens sake of the byrche wall my herte mourneth also, euen as a pype that pypeth a dolefull songe: for they shall be very fewe, and destroyed.

All heades shall be shauen, and all beardes clypped of: all handes bounde, and all loynes gyrded about with sackcloth. Upon all the house toppes and stretes of Moab, there shall be mourenynge: For I wyll breke Moab lyke an vnprofytable vessell sayth the Lorde. O how fearfuel is she? O how mourneth she? O howe doth Moab hang downe her heade, and is ashamed? Thus shal Moab be a laughinge stocke, and had in derision of all them, that be rounde aboute her.

For thus sayethe the Lorde: Beholde, the ennemy shall come flyenge as an Egle, & spreade his wynges vpon Moab. They shall clyme ouer the walles, and winne the strong holdes. Then the myghtye mens herces in Moab shal be lyke the hert of a woman trauelyng with chylde.

And Moab shall be made so desolate, that she shall no more be a people, because she hath set vp her selfe agaynste the Lorde. Feare, pyt, and snare shall come vpon the (O Moab) sayethe the Lorde. Who so escapeth the feare, shall fal in the pyt: and who so getteth out of the pyt, shall be taken in the snare.

For I wyll bryng a peare of vysitacyon vpon Moab, sayth the Lorde. They that are vable to flye, shall stande vnder the shadowe of Heshebon. For there shall go a fyre out of Heshebon, and a flame from Sion, and shall burne vp that proude people of Moab, both before and behynde.

Wo be vnto the (O Moab) for thou people of Chamos shalt perysh: Yea thy sonnes and doughters shall be led awaye captyue. Yet at the laste wyll I bryngе Moab out of captyuyte agayne, sayethe the Lorde. Thus farre of the plage of Moab.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst the Ammonytes, agaynst Edom, Damascus, Cedar, and Elam.

CAPI. XLIX.

AS concernynge the Ammonytes, thus the Lorde sayth: Hath Israel no children, or is he without an heyre? Why hath youre kynge then taken Gad in? wher fore doth his people dwell in his cities? Beholde therfore, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that I will bryngе a noyse of warre into Rabah of the Ammonytes. Rabel shal be desolate, and her cytyes brent vp: and the Israelites shall be Lordes ouer those that had them in possession afore, sayth the Lord. Hesebon shall mourne, for it shall be voted out of the grounde, sayth the Lorde. The cytyes of Rabah shall crye out, and gyrde the selues with sackcloth: they shall mourne, & runne aboute the walles: for their kyng shal be led awaye prysoner: yea his preestes and princes with him.

Wherfore trustest thou in the waters & stremes that flowe to and fro, O thou feare doughter: and thinkest thou arte so safe (by reason of thy treasure) that no mã shal come to the?

Beholde, I wyll bryngе a feare vpon the, sayth the Lord God of hostes, from all those that be about the: so that ye shal be scattered euery man frome an other, and no man shall gather gather them togyther agayne that be fled. But after that, I will bryngе the Ammonites also out of captyuyte agayne.

Esaye.xxi.b Ezechi.xxv.b Jere.xlix.a

Upon the Edomites hath the Lorde of hoostes spoken in this maner: Is there no more wysdom in Theman? Is there no good counsell amonge his people? Is their wysdome then turned clene to nought? Get you hence, turne your backes, crepe downe into the depe, O ye cytyzens of Dedan.

For I will bryngе destruction vpon Esau, yea e day of his vysytacion. If the grape gatherers came vpon the, shulde they not leaue some grapes? If the nyghte robbers came vpon the, shulde they not take so much as they thought were ynough?

But I will make Esau bare, and discouer his secretes, so that he shall not be able to hyde them. His sede shal be wasted away, yea his brethren and his neighbowres, and he him selfe shall not be lefte behynde.

Jerem.xxv.b Ezechiel.xx.b 1. Petri.iii.c.

Thou shalte leaue thy fatherlesse children behynde the, and I will kepe them and thy lowes shall take their comforte in me. For thus hath the Lorde spoken: Beholde, they that men thought were vnmete to drinke of the cuppe, haue dronken with the fyrste: and thynkest thou them to be free?

No no: thou shalte neuer be quyte nor free, but thou muste drynke also: For why, I have sworne by my selfe (sayth the Lorde) Bozrah shall become a wildernesse, an open shame, a laughynge stocke and cursynge: and her cities shall be a contynuall desert.

For I am perfectly informed of the Lord that he hath sent a message all ready vnto the heithen. Gather you togyther, and go forth agaynste them: make you ready to the battayle, for lo, I will make the but small amonge the heithen, and lytle regarded amõg men.

Jere.xlviii.b Ezay.xxvii.b Jere.xlviii.d

The pryde thy stomacke and the pryde of thy hert haue deceyued the, because thou wilte dwell in the holes of stony rockes, and haue the hygh mountaynes in possession. Neuertheles though thy nest were as hygh as the Egles, yet will I caste the downe, sayth the Lorde. Moreouer Idumea shall be a wyldernesse: who so goeth by it, shall be abashed, & wonder at all her miserable plages. Lyke as Sodome, Gomor, and the cities that laye there about, were turned vp syde downe, sayth the Lorde, so that no body dwell in Idumea, and no man shal haue his habytacion there, Behold, lyke as the Lyon commeth vp from the pleasaunt medowes of Jordan vnto the grene pastures of Edam, so will I dryue him, and make him runne agaynste her. But who is the younge man that I wyl ordeyne thereto? Who is lyke vnto me? What is he that will stryue with me? What Shepherd may stande in my handes?

Gene.xix.c

Job.xli.a

Therfore heare the counsell of the Lorde, that he hath taken vpon Idumea: and his purpose, that he hath determined vpon the cytezens of Theman: The leest of the flock shall teare the in peces, & lete what layre thynge they haue, they shal make it waste, and them selues also: At the noyse of their fal the earth shall quake, the crye of their voyce shall be herde vnto the red see. Beholde, the enemye shall come and flee vp hyther, lyke as it were an Egle, and spred his wynges vpõ Bozrah. Then shall the heerte of the worthyes in Edom be as the hert of a woman trauelynge of child. Vpon Damascus, Hemath and Arphad shall come confusyon, for they shall heare tydynges: they shall be tossed to & fro lyke the see that can not stande still. Damascus shal be sore afrayd, and shal flee, trembling shall come vpon her. Sorowe and payne shall sure take her as a woman trauelynge of childe.

But howe shulde so worshypfull and glorious a cytye be forsaken? Yeare therfore her younge men shall fall in the stretes, and all her men of warre shall be takin awaye in that tyme, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. I will kindle a fyre in the walles of Damascus, whiche shall consume the palace of Benhadad.

As for Cedar and the kyngdome of Hazor, whom Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon smote downe, the Lorde hath spoken thus vpon them: Aryse, and get you vp vnto Cedar and destroye the people towarde the east. Their tentes and their flockes shal they take awaye, yea their hangynges and their vessell. Their camels also shall they carye awaye with them. They shall come about them on euery syde with a fearefull crye.

Flee, get you some awaye, crepe in to caues, that ye maye dwell there: O ye inhabitaunces of Hazor, sayth the Lorde: for Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath holden a counsell concernynge you and conclused his deuyce agaynste you. Aryse, and get you vp agaynste yonder ryche and carelesse people (sayth the Lorde) whiche haue neyther gates ne bore barres, and that dwell not together. Their Camels shall be stolen and the droues of their cattayle bryuen a way.

Moreouer, these that be shaue will I scatter towarde all the wyndes, and bryngе them to destruction: yea and that out of them owne kamp leters, sayth the Lorde. Hazor also shall be a dwellynge for Dragons, & an euerlastynge wyldernesse: so that no body shall dwell there, and no man shall haue there his habytacion.

These are the wordes, that the Lorde spake to the prophet Jeremy concernyng Elam, in the begynnynge of the regne of Sedechias kyng of Juda. Thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Beholde: I will breake the bowe of Elam, and take away their strength and vpon Elam I will bryng the foure wyndes from the foure quarters of heauen, & will scatter them agaynst the same foure wyndes. And there shall be no people, but some of Elam shall flee vnto them.

For I will cause Elam to be afrayde of their enemyes, and of them that seke their lyues: and will bryngе vpon them the indignacion of my wrethe, sayth the Lorde. And I will persecute them with the swearde, so longe tyll I haue brought them to noughte. I will set my stole in Elam, I will destroye both the kynge and the prynces from thence, sayth the Lorde. But in processe of tyme, I will bryng Elam oute of captyuyte agayne, sayth the Lorde.

The prophecyeth the destruction of Babylon, and the deliuraunce of Israel, whyche was in captyuyte.

CAPI. L.

The wordes that the Lorde spake vnto the Prophet Jeremy, concernynge Babylon, and the lande of the Caldees: preache among the Gentyles, let your voyce be herde, make a token: crye oute, kepe no thinge, but saye: Babylon shall be wonne, Bel shall be confounded, and Merodach shal be ouercome.

Jere.xlviii.b

Her goddes shalbe brought to shame and their ymages shall stande in feare. For out of the North there shall come a people against her, whiche shall make her land so waste, that no body shall dwell therin: neyther man ne beaste, for they shall flee and departe from thence.

In those dayes and at that tyme saith the Lorde, the children of Israel shall come, they and the children of Juda, weping and mayuyng both, and shall seke the Lorde their God. They shall aske the waye to Sion, thyther shall they turne their faces, and come and bynde vpon the, in a couenaunt that neuer shall be broken.

My people hath bene a lost flocke, my Herdmen haue discerued them, and haue made them go astraye vpon the hilles. They haue gone from the mountayne to the lytle hill, and forgotten their folde. All they that came vpon them, haue deuoured them: and their enemyes sayde: We haue made no trespace against them, for they haue displeased the Lorde, yea euen the Lorde which is the beautye of their eyghteousnesse, and that defended their fathers. Yet shall ye flee from Babylo, and departe out of the lande of the Caldees, and be as the rammes that go before the flocke. For lo, I will wake vp an hoofte of people from the Northren lande, & bryngе them vpon Babylon: these shall laye siege vnto it, and winne it: Their arowes shall not mysse, lyke as a cunnyng archer shooteth not in vayne. And the Caldees shall be spoyled, & all they that spoyle them, shall be satysfyed (sayth the Lorde: because ye were so cheareful and glad, to treade downe myne heritage, and fulfylled youre pleasures, as the calues in the grasse: and tryumphed ouer the stie the bulles, when ye had gotten the victorye. Youre mothers shall be sore confounded and they that bare you, shall come to shame. Se, shall be the leste set by amonge nations, both waste, and dryed vp. No man shal be able to dwel there, for the feare of the Lorde, but he shall be vtterly desolate.

All they that goo by Babylon, shall stande styll, and be abashed, and shall wonder at all her plages.

Jere.xviii.b. xxiii.b.xliv.c.

Go forth in youre araye against Babylon rounde about, all ye that can handle bowes shote at her, spare no arowes, for she hathe synned against the Lorde. Crye out: vpon her, vpon her, against her rounde about: she shall yelde her selfe, her foundacions shal fal and her walles shall come downe, for it shal be the vengeaunce of the Lord. Yea vengeaunce shall be taken of her, and as she hathe done, so shal she be dealt withall. They shall rote out the sower from Babylon, and him that handleth the sicle in haruest. For feare of the swearde of the enemye, euery man shall get him to his owne people, and euery man shal flee to his owne lande. Israel is a scattered flock, the Lyons haue dispersed them. First the kynge of the Assyrians deuoured them, last of all it is Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylon hath brosed all their bones.

Ezod.xxi.b. Leuit.xx.xxvi.d Joheli.iii.d

iiii.Reg.xvii.c Ezayc.x.a. xxxvi.Ecc.xx.b.b.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel: Beholde I will vysyte the kynge of Babylon and his kyngdom, as I haue vysyted the kynge of the Assyrias and will bryngе Israel agayne to his pleasaunt pasture, that he maye fede vpon Charmel and Basan, and be satysfyed vpon the mount of Ephraim and Galaad. In those dayes and at the same tyme (sayth the Lord) ye the offence of Israel be sought for, there shall none be found: Ye men enquyre for the synne of Juda, there shall be none: for I will be mercyful vnto them, whome I suffre to remayne ouer.

iii.Reg.xix.g Ezay.xxxvii.b

Go downe (O thou auengee) into the enemyes lande, and vysyte them that dwell therin: downe with them, and smyte them vpon the backes, sayth the Lorde: do accordynge to all that I haue commaunded the. There is gone aboute the lande a crye of slaughter and greate murther, namely on this maner: Howe happeneth it, that the hammer of the hole worlde is thus broken and brosed in sonder? Howe chanceth it, that Babylon is become a wyldernesse amonge the heithen on this maner? I my selfe haue layed wayte for the, and thou arte taken: vnwares art thou crapped and snared: for why, thou haste prouoked the Lord vnto anger: The Lord hath opened his house of ordinaunce, and brought forth the wepons of his wrath. For the thing that is done in the lande of the Caldees, it is the Lorde of hoostes worke.

These thynges shall come vpon her at ꝑ last, they shall breake in to her preuy chambers, they shall leaue her as bare as stones, that be layde togyther vpon heapes. They shall so destroye her, that nothynge shall be lefte.

They shall slaye all their myghtye soudyers, and put them to death. Wo be vnto them, for the daye and tyme of their vysytacion is at hande. We thynke I heare all ready a crye, of them that be fled and escaped out of the lande of Babylon, whiche shewe in Sion the vengeaunce of his temple: yea

a boyes

a bowe of it them, that ye ayarnste Babylō:
Call vp all the archers ayarnste Babylon, Pytch youre tentes rounde about her, that none escape. Recompence her, as she hath de-serued: and accordynge as she hath done, so deale wyth her ayarne: for she hath set vp her selfe ayarnste the Lorde, ayarnste the ho ly one of Israel. Therfore shall her younge men fall downe in the stretes, and all her me of warre shall be rotted out in that day, sayth
the Lorde. Beholde I speake vnto the (O ꝓ proude) sayth the Lorde God of Hostes: for thy daye shall come, euen the tyme of thy vi-sitacion. And the proude shall stomble & fall, and no man shall helpe him vp. I wyl burne vp his cyties with fyre, and it shall consume
all that is rounde about him.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The childzen of Israel and Juda suffre vyolence togethee. All they that haue them in captiuatyye, kepe them fast, and wyll not let them go: but their auenger and redemer is myghty eye, whose name is the Lorde of Hostes: he shall marntayne their cause, he shall make ꝓ lande wake, and iudge them that dwell ther in, one wyth an other. The swearde shal come vpon the Caldees, sayth the Lorde, vpon them that dwell in Babylon, vpon their prin ces, and vpon their wyse men: the swearde shal be come fooles. The swearde vpon their worthyes, so that they shall stande in feare:
The swearde vpon their horsmen and charets
and vpon all the commen people that dwell vnder them: so that they shall all become lyke wemen: the swearde vpon their treas-sure, so that it shall be rolled awaye: The swearde vpon their waters, so that they shall be dried vp: For the lād wo;shipperly ymages and delyteth in straunge wonderfull thin-ges. Therfore shall wylde beastes, Apes, and Ostriches dwell therin: for there shal neuer man dwell there, neither shall any man haue his habitacion there for euermore. Lyke as God destroyed Sodom and Gomozre, wyth
the cities that lye there aboute, sayth the Lorde: So shal no man dwel there also, neither shal any man haue there his habitacion.
Beholde, there shall come a people from the North, with a great bond of men, and many kynges shall stande vp from the endes of the earthe: They beare bowes and buckelers, cru el are they and vnmercyful.

Their voyce roreth lyke the ragyng see,
they ryde vpon horses, and come weapened to fyght ayarnste the: O Babylon. As sone as the bruyt of Babylon heareth tell of the his handes shall wexe feble: Sozowe and trauayle shall com vpon him, as a woman trauaylynge with childe. Beholde, lyke as ꝓ Lyon cometh vp from the pleasaunt wabowes of Jordane vnto the grene pastures of Ethan, so wyll I bryng the forth, ꝓ make them runne ayarnste her. But whom e shall
I chose out, and ordeyne to suche a thynge?
For who is lyke me, or who will sprue with me? or what shepherde maye stande ayarnst me? Therfore heare the counsell that the Lorde hath gruen vpon Babylon, and the deuyce that he hathe taken vpon the lande of the Caldees. The leest amonge the people shall teare them in peces, and loke what pla sauntthyng they haue: they shal lay it wast.
The noyse at the wynnyng of Babylon shal
meue the earthe, and the crye shall be harde amonge the Gentyles.

¶ Howe Babylon shoulde be ouerthrowne. Jeremy geueth his token to Seraiah.

CAPI. LI.

THus hath the Lorde sayde: beholde, I I wyll rayse vp a perelous wynde a-gaynst Babylon and her cytyzens, that reare vp myl wyll against me. I wyll sende also into Babylon fanners, to fanne her out and to destroye her lande: for in the daye of her trouble they shall be about her on euery syde: Bezcause, the Lorde hath sayd vnto the bowe men, and to them that clyme vp ure the walles in dyuerse places: Ye shall not spare her younge me: vtterly wast all her hoste.
Thus ꝓ slayne shal fal downe in ꝓ lād of the Caldees, and the wounded in ꝓ stretes. As for Israel and Juda, they shall not be forsaken of their God, of the Lorde of hostes, al though their lande be full of synne fore
ꝓ holy one of Israel: no, straught they haue fled all their lande full of synne fore way frō Babylō, euery mā fame his priuate
no mā hold his tōge to her wyckednes, for ꝓ tyme of the Lordes vengeaunce is come, ꝓ he shall rewarde her agayne. Babylon hath bene in the Lordes hand a golden cuppe, that maketh all landes dronken. Of her wyne haue all people dronken, therfore are they mad of their wyttes. But sodenly is Babylon fallen and destroyed. Howle for her, bryng playsters for her wounds, yf she maye peraduenture be healed agayne. We wolde haue made Babylon hole (sayd they) but she is not recouered. Therfore wyll we let her alone, and go euery mā into his owne countrey. For her iudgement is come into heauen, and is gone vp to the cloudes. And therfore come on, we wyll serue God in worke of the Lorde our God.

Make sharpe the arowes, and fyll the ꝓ quyuers: for the Lorde shall rayse vp the spirite of the kynge of the Medes, bycause hath already a desyre to destroy Babylon.
This shal be the vengeaūce of the Lord, and the vengeaunce of his temple.

Set vp tokens vpon the walles of Babylon, make yeure watche stronge, sit your watch men in araye, yea bolde yeume watch
tes: and yet for all that shall the Lordes forth with the bourne, which he hath take vpon them that dwell in Babylon.

O thou that dwellest by the great waters. O thou that hast so great treasure and riches, thyne ende is come: and ꝓ stretchynge of thy wynnynges. The Lord of hostes hath sworne by hym self, that he wyl euer replenis
the with men lyke grasshoppers in numbre, which with a rerourage shall eye against

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the D
God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon
hathe bene in her tyme lyke as a threshynge
floore, but shortly shall her harueste come. Na buchodonosor the kyng of Babylon hath deuoured and destroyed me, he hath made me an empty vessell, he hath swalowed me vp lyke a dra gon, and fylled his belye with my delycates
he hath caste me oute, he hath taken my substaunce awaye, and the thyng that was left me, hath he caryed into Babylon, sayth the doughter that dwelleth in Sion: yea and my bloude also vnto the Caldees, sayth Jerusalem. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde: Behold
I wyll defende thy cause, and auenge the: I wyl dzynke vp her see, and dzye vp her watre springes.

Babylon shall become an heape of stones, C a dwelling place for dragons, a fearfulnesse Esay.xiij.
and wondring, bycause no mā dwelleth there.
They shall roze togyther lyke lyons, and as the yonge lyons when they be angry, so shall they bende them selues. In their heate I shal set dzinke before them, and they shall be dron ken for ioye: Then shal they slepe an euerla- Jeremye.li.
sting slepe, and neuer wake, sayth the Lorde.
I shal cary them downe to be slayne like sheep,
like wethers and goates.

O, how was Sesach wonne! O how was the glorye of the hole lande taken? Howe happeneth it that Babylon is so wondred at amonge the heathen? The see is ryssen ouer Babylō, and hath couered her with his great waues. Her cities are layde waste, the lande lyeth barayne & voyde: it is a land where no man dwelleth, and where no man trauey-leth thozow. Moreouer I wyll vysyte Bel at Babylon: and the thyng that he hath swa- Jeremye.l.a.
lowed vp: that same shal I plucke out of his Esay.xlvi.a mouth. The Gentyles also shal run no moze Dan.xiij.d.
vnto hym: yea and the walles of Babylon
shall fall

O my people, come out of Babylon, that euery man maye saue his lyfe, from the fearefull wzath of the Lorde. Be not fayntе bre-ted, and feare not at euery rumour that shall be herde in the lande: for euerye yere bryn-geth newe tydynges, yea straunge wyckednesse and lozdshyp. And lo, the tyme commeth that I wyll vysyte the ymages of Babylon,
and the hole lande shall be confounded, yea
and her slayne shall lye in the myddest of her.
Heuen and erth with all that is therin, shall reioyse ouer Babylon, when the destroyers shall come vpon her from the North, sayth
the Lorde.

Lyke as Babylon hath beaten downe and E slayne many of Israel, so shall there fall ma- Jeremye.li.
ny and be slayne in all her kyngdome. Ye that haue escaped the swearde, haste you, stande not styll, remembze the Lorde a farre of: and thynke vpon Jerusalem, for we were ashamed to heare the blasphemyes: oure faces were couered with shame, bycause the straūge aleannies came in to the Sanctuarye of the Lorde. Wherfore beholde (sayeth the Lorde)
the tyme commeth that I wyl vysit the ymages of Babylon, and thozowe the hole lande lorum ayarnste the. Yea turn the Lorde of hostes, that with his power made the earth with his wisdome prepared the round world,

and with his discrecion spredde oute the hea-uens. As sone as he letteth his voyce be herd the waters in the ayre ware fearce: He draweth vp the cloudes frome the endes of the earthe. He tourneth the lyghtenynges to rayne, he bryngeth the wyndes oute of their secrete places. By the reason of wysdome, all men are become fooles. Confounded be all the caruers of ymages: for the thynge
that they make, is but disceyte, and hathe no breathe. Starke is it, and worthy to be laughter: and in the tyme of vysitacion, it shall perysshe.

Neuertheles the portion of Jacob is none
lyke: but he that made all, whose name is the Lorde of hostes, is the rodde of his inhe ritaunce. Thou dyrakest my weapons of warre, and yet thorowe the I haue scattered the nacions and kyngdomes: Thorowe the haue
I smyten horse and horseman, yea the charet-ter, and smote as sore vpon them: Thorowe
the I haue scattered man and woman, olde and yonge, bachelor and mayden.

Thorowe the, I haue scattered the shepeherde and his flocke, the husbande man, and his catell, the princes and the rulers. Therfore wyll I rewarde the cityes of Babylon, and all the inhabytours the Caldees, with al the euil whi ch they haue wrought vnto Syon: yea that ye your selues shall se it, sayth the Lorde. Be-holde, I come vpon the (thou noysome hyll)
sayth the Lorde: thou that destroyest all lan des. I wyll stretche out my hand ouer the, and rolle the downe from the stony rockes: & will make the a brente hyll, so that neither corner stone ne pinacles, ne foundacion stones shal be taken any more out of the, but waste and desolate shalte thou lye for euer more, sayth
the Lorde.

Set vp a token in the lande: blowe the trompettes amonge the Heathen, prouoke
nacyons ayarnste her, call the kyngdomes of Ararat, Mynni, and Ascanes ayarnste her: romble ouer Taphlat ayarnste her:
bringe as greate a sorte of hostes ayarnste her, as yf they were grasshoppers. Prepare ayarnste them the people of the Medes, and their kynges, princes, and all their chefe rulers, yea and the hole lande that is vnder them.

The lande also shall shake and be afeayde
when the bruyt of the Lorde shal come forth ayarnst Babylon, to make the lande of Babylon so waste, that no man shall dwell any more therin. The worthyes of Babylon shal leaue the battayle, and kepe them selues in strange holdes, their strengthe hathe fayled them, they shal be lyke women. Their dwellynge places shall be brente vp, their barres shall be broken. One pursuaunt shall mete another, yea one poste shall come vp an other to bryng the king of Babylon tydinges: that his cyty is taken on euery syde, the foordes ou
ered the fennes brent vp, and the souldiers
all afeayde.

For thus sayth the Lorde of hostes the D
God of Israell: the doughter of Babylon
hathe bene in her tyme lyke as a threshynge

Jerem.li.d. they shall mourne and kall. Though Babylō clymbe vp in to heuen, and kept her power on hye: yet shall I sende her destroyers, sayethe the Lorde.

A piteous crye shall be herde from Babylon, and a greate myserye frome the lande of the Caldees: when the Lord destroyeth the, and when he driueth oute the hye stomacke, and proude boasting, wherwith they haue ben as furyous as the wawes of great water flowdes, and made greate crakes with their wordes. For the destroyers shall come vpon her, (euen vpon Babylon) whiche shall take her worthyes, and breake theyr bowes: for God is disposed to auenge him selfe vpon theym, and sufficiently to recōpence them. Yea (sayth the Lorde) I will make theyr Princes, their wyse men, theyr chyefe rulers and all theyr worthyes dronken: so that they shall slepe an euerlastyng slepe, and neuer wake: Thus sayth the kynge, whose name is the Lorde of hostes.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: The thycke wall of Babylon shall be broken, and her proude gates shall be brente vp. And the thing that the Gentyles and the people haue wrought with greate trauayle & labour, shall come to nought, and be consumed in the fyre.

This is the charge that Jeremy gaue vnto Saraiah the son of Nerias, the son of Maasiah, when he went towarde Babylon with Sedechias the kyng of Juda, in the fourth yere of his raigne. Now this Saraiah was a peaceable prince. Jeremy wrote in a boke all the mischefe that sholde come vpon Babylon, yea and al these sermons that he written against Babylon, and gaue Saraiah this charge: When thou commest vnto Babylon, se that thou rede all these wordes and saye: O Lorde thou art determined to rote out this place, so that neyther people nor cattell shall dwelle there any more, but to lye waste for euer: and whē thou hast red out the boke, bynde a stone to it, and cast it in the myddest of Euphrates and say: Euen thus shal Babylon sinke, and be thrust downe with the burthen of trouble that I wil bring vpon her: so that she shal neuer come vp agayne. Thus farre are the prechynges of Jeremye.

The repeteth the takynge of Sedechias. Jerusalem is taken of the Caldees. Sedechias sonnes are kylled before his face, and his eyes put out. The cyte is burned. The temple is spoyled and robbed. They that were lefte in Jerusalem, are caryed to Babylon. Kynge Joakym is brought forth of prison, and fedde like a kynge.

CAPL. LII.

SEdechias was one and twenty yere olde when he was made kyng, and he raigned eleuen yere in Jerusalem. His mothers name was Hamutal, Jeremyes doughter of Lobnah. He lyued wyckedly before the Lorde euen as Joakim dyd. Wherfore the Lorde was angrye at Jerusalem and Juda, so longe tyll he had cast them out of his presence. And Sedechias fel frome the kynge of Babylon. But in the nyneth yere of his raygne, in the tenth moneth, the tenth daye of the moneth, it happened that Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon with all his host came before Jerusalem, and besieged it, and made them bulwerkes rounde about it. And this besieging of the city endured vnto the eleuenth yere of kynge Sedechias.

And in the fourth moneth, the nyneth daye of the moneth, there was so greate honger in the city, that there were no more vitaples for the people of the lande. So all the souldyers brake away, and fled out of the city by nyghte thorowe the waye of the porte betwene the two walles by the kynges gardyn. Now the Caldees habde compassed the citye rounde about, yet went these men their waye toward the wildernesse.

And so the Caldees folowed vpon them, and toke Sedechias the kynge in the feldes at Jericho, when his hoste was cum from hym. So they caryed the kynge awaye prysoner to Reblath, vnto the kynge of Babylon in the lande of Hemath, where he gaue iudgement vpon him.

The king of Babylon also caused Sedechias sonnes to be slayne before his face, yea and put al the princes of Juda to deth at Reblath. Moreouer he put out the eyes of Sedechias, caused him to be bounde with cheynes, to be caryed vnto Babylon: and let him lye in prison tyll he dyed.

Now the tenth daye of the fyfth moneth in the nyneth yere of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babilon, Nabuzardan the chiefe capitayne and the kynge of Babylons seruauntes came vnto Jerusalem, and brente the house of the Lorde.

He brent also the kynges palace, all the houses and all the gorgious buyldynges in Jerusalem.

And the hole hoost of the Caldees that were with the chyefe Capitayne, brake downe the walles of Jerusalem rounde about.

As for the poore people, and suche folke as yet was left in the cyte, whiche also were fallen to the king of Babylon, yea and what people as yet remayned: Nabuzardan the chyefe Capitayne caryed them awaye prisoners.

But the poore people of the countreye dyd Nabuzardan the chyefe Capitayne leaue in the lande, to occupye the vynegardes and feldes.

The Caldees also brake the brasen pilles that were in the house of the Lorde, yea the seate and the brasen Lauer that was in the house of the Lorde: and caryed all the metal of them vnto Babylon.

They toke awaye also the Cauldrons, Shouelles, Fleshe hookes, Sprynklers, Spones, and all the brasen vessell that was occupyed occupyed in the seruice: with the basens, cole pannes, tynckers, potters, candelsticks, spounes, and cuppes: wherof some were of golde, and some of syluer.

The chiefe Capitayne toke also the two pilles, the lauer, the twelue brasen bullockes that stode vnder the seate, whiche kynge Salomon made in the house of the Lorde: and all the vessell conteyned to mothe metal that it might not be weyed. For euery pylle was eighteen cubites hye, and the rope that went about it was twelue cubytes and foure fyngers thycke and rounde: Now vpon the rope were brasen knoppes, and euery knop was .v. cubites hye: and vpon the knoppes were hoopes and pomegranettes round about of clene brasse.

After this maner were both the pylles fashioned with the pomgeanettes, wherof there were an hundred foure score and fyftene which hanged vpon the hoopes round aboute. The chyefe Capitayne also toke Saraiah the hye preist, and Sophonyah that was chefe next him, and the thre kepers of the treasurye. He toke out of the citye a chamberlayne whiche was a capitayne of the souldyers, and seuen men that were the kinges priuauntes, which were founde in the citye: and Sopher a capitayne that vsed to muster the men of warre with thye seare men of the countrey that were taken in the citye. These Nabuzardan the chiefe Capitayne toke, and caryed them to the kynge of Babylon vnto Reblath: and the kynge of Babylon caused them to be put to deathe at Reblath in the land of Hemath. So thus Juda was ledde awaye captyue, out of his owne lande. This is the summe of the people, whome Nabuchodonosor led awaye captyue.

In the seuenth yere of his raygne, he caryed awaye of the Jewes, thre thousande and seuen. In the eyghteenth yere Nabuchodonosor caryed awaye from Jerusalem eight hundred and two and fyftye persons. In the thre and twenty yere of Nabuchodonosor, Nabuzardan the chefe Capitayne toke awaye seuen hundred. xlv. Jewes prysoners. The hole sum of all the prysoners, is foure thousande and sixe hundred.

In the .xxxvij. yere after that Joakim the kynge of Juda was caryed awaye, in the xxv. daye of the .xij. moneth, Euilmerodach kynge of Babylon (the same yere that he raygned) gaue Joacin the kynge of Juda his pardon, & let him out of prison, and spake louyngly to him, and set his throne aboue the thrones of the other kynges that were with him in Babylon. He chaunged also the clothes of his prison, yea he ate with him all his lyfe long. And he had a continual lyuyng giuen him of the kynge of Babylon, euery daye a certayne lyuyng alowed him al the dayes of his life, vntyll he dyed.

The ende of the booke of the Prophete Jeremye.

THE LAMENTACYONS. OF IEREMYE.

These wordes are reade in the.lxx. Interpreters, but not in the Hebrewe.

IT happened after Israell was brought in to captiuitie and Ierusalem destroyed, that Ieremy the Prophet sate wepynge, and sorowfully bewayled Ierusalem: and sighing and bewlyng with an heuy and wofull herte, sayd:

CAPI. I.

ALEPH.

a ij. Reg. iiij. b. viij. Esay. xlvij. a

ALas, howe sytteth the city so desolat, that somtyme was full of people? How is she become like a widow whi the was the lady of all nacions? Howe is she brought vnder tribute & ruled all landes?

BETH.

Jeremy xiij. c She wepeth sore in the nyght, so that the teares run downe her chekes: for among all her louers, there is none that gyueth her any comfort: yea her next frendes abhore her, and are become her ennemyes.

GIMEL.

Juda is taken prysoner, because she was defyled: and for seruynge so manye straunge goddes, she dwelleth now amonge the heathen. She fyndeth no rest, all they that persecuted her, toke her, and so she dwelleth amõg her ennemyes.

DALETH.

The stretes of Sion mourne, because no mã commeth any more to the solemne feestes. All her gates are vyolate, her preestes make lamẽtacion, her maydens are carefull, and she her selfe is in great heynesse.

HE.

Her enemyes are fallen vpon her heed, and haue put her to shame: because the Lorde hath chastened her for her great wickednesse: her chyldren are ledde awaye captyue before theyr ennemye.

VAV.

All the beautie of the doughter Sion is away, her princes are becom like wethers that fynde no pasture. They are dryuen away before their ennemye, so that they haue no more power.

ZAIN.

Now dothe Ierusalem remembre the tyme of her misery and disobedience, yea the tyme and pleasure that she hath had in tymes past: synge her people is brought downe thorow the power of their ennemye, and there is no man for to helpe her: her ennemyes stande lokynge at her, and laugh her Sabeth dayes to scorne.

HETH.

Ierusalē synned euer more and more, therfore is she come in decaye. All they that had her in honour, despise her: for they haue sene her fylthynesse. Yea she sigheth and is ashamed of her selfe.

TETH.

Her shyttes are defiled, she remembred not what wold folowe therfore is her fal so great and there is no man to comfort her. O Lorde consydre my trouble, for myne ennemye hathe the vpper hande.

IOD.

The ennemye hathe put his hande to all d the precious thynges that she had: yea euen before her eyes came the Heathen in and out of the Sanctuarye whome thou (neuertheles) hast forbydden to come within thy congregacion.

CAPH.

All her people seke their breed with heynesse, and loke what precious thynge euerye man hath, that gyueth he for meat to saue his lyfe. Consydre, O Lorde, and se, howe vyle I am become.

LAMED.

O ye all that go fore by, beholde and se, yf ther be any sorow like vnto myne, wherwith the Lord hath troubled me in the daye of his feareful wrathe.

MEM.

From aboue hathe he sent downe a fyre in e to my bones and chastened me: he hath layde a net for my fete, and throwen me my retorne: he hath made me desolate, so that I must euer be mournynge.

NVN.

The yoke of my transgression is come af the laste, with his hande hath he taken it vp, and put it aboute my necke. My strengthe is gone: the Lorde hathe deliuered me into whole handes, from which I can not quite my selfe.

SAMECH. The

The Lord hath destroyed all ỹ mighty men that were in me. He hath proclaymed a feest, to slaughter all my best men. The Lorde hath troden downe the doughter of Juda, lyke as it were a wyne presse.

AIN.

f Therfore wo I wepe, and myne eyes gush out water: for the comforter that sholde quicken me, is farre fro me. My children are dyspersed awaye, for why? the enemy hath gotten the ouer hande.

PHE.

Syon casteth out her handes, & there is no man to comfort her. The Lorde hath layde the ennemyes rounde aboute Jacob, and Jerusalem is as it were a menstruous woma in the myddest of them.

ZADE.

The Lorde is righteous, for I haue prouoked his ỹ countenaunce vnto angre. O take hede all ye people, and consydre my heuinesse: My maydens and my yonge men are led awaye into captiuitie.

KOPH.

I called for my louers (but they begyled me) for my preestes and counsellers, but they perished: euen whyle they sought for meat to saue their lyues.

RES.

g Consydre (o Lorde) how I am troubled, my bõde is disquieted, my herte turneth about in me, and I am ful of heuinesse. The swerd hurteth me without, and within I am lyke vnto deth.

SIN.

They heare my mourning, but ther is none that wil comfort me. All myne enemyes haue herd of my trouble, & are glad therof, because thou hast done it. But thou shalt bring forthe the tyme, whe they also shal be like vnto me.

THAV.

From the shal come al their aduersite, thou shalt pluckе them awaye, euen as thou hast pucked me because of all my wickednesse. For my sorow is very greate, and my herte is feint.

CAPI. II.

ALEPH.

h ALas how hath the Lord darkened the dougher of Sion so sore in his wrath? As for the honour of Israel, he he hath caste it downe from heuen: how happeneth it, that he remembred not his own fote stole, when he was angry?

BETH.

The Lorde hath cast downe all the glorye of Jacob without any fauour: all the strong places of the doughter Juda hath he broken in his wrath, and throwen them down to the ground: her kyngdome and her princes hath he suspended.

GIMEL.

In the wrathe of his indignacyon he hathe broken all the ỹ horne of Israell: he hathe withdrawen his ryghte hande from the ennemye: yea, a flambe of fyre is kyndled in Jacob, and hath consumed vp al round aboute.

ỹ Horne here sygnyfyeth strengthe, power, nobylite and dominiõ.

DALETH.

i He hathe bente his bowe lyke an ennemye, he hathe fastened his ryghte hande as an aduersarye: and cuerye thynge that was pleasaunt to se, he hathe smytten it downe. He harye powred oute his wrathe lyke a fyre, in to the tabernacle of the doughter of Syon.

HE.

The Lorde is become lyke as it were an ennemye, he hathe caste downe Israell and all his places: yea, all his stronge holdes hathe he destroyed, and fylled the doughter of Juda with mocke sorowe and heynesse.

VAV.

Her tabernacle (whiche was lyke a gardeyn of pleasure) hathe he destroyed: her hye solemne feastes hathe he put downe. The Lorde hath brought it so to passe, that the hye solemne feestes and Sabothes in Sion, are clene forgotten. In his heuye displeasure hathe he made the kynge and preestes to be despysed.

ZAIN.

The Lorde hathe forsaken his owne aulter, and is wrothe with his owne Sanctuarye, and hathe gyuen the walles of their towres in to the handes of the ennemye. Theyr ennemyes made a noyse in the house of the Lorde, as it hadde bene in a solemne feast daye.

HETH.

The Lorde thoughte to breake downe k the walles of the doughter Syon: He stredde oute his lyne, and drewe not in his hande, tyll he hadde destroyed them. Therfore mourne the turrettes and the broken walles togyther.

TETH.

Her portes are fallen downe to the ground, her barres are broken and smytten in sonder: her kynge and Princes are caryed awaye to the Gentyles. They haue neyther lawe ne Prophetes, nor yet any vysion frome the Lorde.

IOD.

The Senatoures of the doughter Syon syt vppon the grounde in silence: they haue strowed asshes vpon theyr heedes, and gyrded them selues with sackcloth. The maydes of Jerusalem hange downe theyr heedes to the grounde.

CAPH.

Myne eyes begyn to fayle me thorow weping, my body is disquietet & my liuer is poured vpon the erth, for the great hurt of my people, seing the children and babes dyd swowne in the stretes of the city.

LAMED.

Euen when they spake to theyr mothers: where is meat and drinke? for whyle they so sayd, they fel downe in the stretes of the city lyke as they had ben wounded, and some dyed in their mothers bosome.

MEM.

What shall I saye of the, O thou doughter Jerusalem, to whome shall I lyken the? To whome shall I compare the, O thou doughter Syon, to comforte the withall? Thy hurte is lyke a mayne see, who may heale the?

NVN.

Thy Prophetes haue loked out vayne and folisshe thinges for the, they haue not shewed the of thy wickednesse, to kepe the from captiuite: but haue ouerladen the, & thorow falsehed scattered the abrode.

SAMECH.

All they that go by the, clap their handes at the: hysshing and waggyng their heedes vpon the doughter Jerusalem, and saye: is this the citye that men call so fayre, wherin the hole lande reioyseth.

AIN.

All thyne enemyes gape vpon the, whispering and byting their teth: saying: let vs deuoure, for the time that we loked for is come: we haue found and sene it

PHE.

The Lord hath fulfilled the thing that he was purposed to do: and performed that he had deuised long ago: he hath destroyed and not spared. He hath caused thyne aduersarye to tryumphe ouer the, and set vp the horne of thyne ennemy.

ZADE.

Let thyne herte crye vnto the Lorde, O thou citye of the doughter of Syon: let thy teares runne downe lyke a ryuer, daye and nyght: rest not, and let not the apple of thyne eye leaue of.

KOPH.

Stande vp and make thy prayer in the first watch of the night: poure out thyne hert like water before the Lorde: lift vp thyne handes for the lyues of thy yong children that dye of hongre in the stretes.

RES.

Beholde, O Lorde, and consider, why hast thou thus gathered me vp so clene? Shal the women then eate theyr owne frute, euen children of a span longe? Shall the preestes and Prophetes be slayne thus in the Sanctuarye of the Lorde?

SIN.

Yong and olde lye behynde the stretes vpon the grounde, my maydens and yonge men are slayne with the swerde: whom thou in thy day of thy wrathful indignacion hast put to deth: yea, euen thou hast put them to deth, and not spared them.

THAV.

My neyghbours that are rounde about me, hast thou called, as it were to a feest daye: so that in the day of the Lordes wrath none escaped, neyther was any lefte behynde. Those that I had brought vp and nourished, hathe myne ennemy destroyed.

CAPI. III.

ALEPH.

I Am the man, that (thorowe the rod of his wrath) haue experience of misery.

He droue me forth, and led me: yea into darcknesse, but not in to light.

Agaynst me onely he turneth his hand, and layeth it euer vpon me.

BETH.

My flesshe and my skyn hath he made olde, and my bones hath he broken.

He hathe buylded rounde about me, and closed me in with gall and trauayle.

He hath set me in darcknesse, as they that be dead for euer.

GIMEL.

He hath so hedged me in, that I can not get out, and hath layed heuy lynckes vpon me.

Though I crye and call pitiously, yet heareth he not my prayer.

He hath stopped vp my wayes with hewe squared stones, and made my pathes croked.

DALETH.

He layeth wayte for me lyke a Beare, and as a Lyon in a hole.

He hathe marred my wayes, and broken me in peces, & hath layed me waste altogyther.

He hath bent his bowe, and made me as it were a marcke to shoute at.

HE.

The arowes of his quyuer hath he shot, euen vnto my reynes.

I am laughed to scorne of all my people, they make songes vpon me, all the daye longe.

He hath filled me with bytternesse and gyuen me wormwod to drynke.

VAV.

He hath smytten my teth in peces, and rolled me in the dust.

He hath put my soule out of rest, I forget all good thynges.

I thought in my self: I am vndone, there is no hope for me in the Lorde.

ZAIN.

Remembre yet my mysery and my trouble the wormwod and the gall.

Yea thou shalte remembre them, for my soule melteth awaye in me.

Whyle I cōsydre these thynges in my hert I get a hope agayne.

HETH.

Namely, that the mercyes of the Lorde are not cleane gone, and that his louynge kyndnes ceaseth not.

His fayethfulnesse is greate, and renueth it selfe as the morynge.

The Lorde is my portion, sayth my soule, therfore will I hope in him.

TETH.

O howe good is the Lorde vnto them, that put their truste in him, and to the soule that seketh after him.

O howe good is it with stylnesse to wayte and tary, for the helth of the Lorde?

O howe good is it for a man, to take the yocke vpon him from his youth vp.

IOD.

He sytteth alone, he holdeth him styll, and dwelleth quietly by hym self.

He layeth his face vpon the earth, yf (percase) there happen to be any hope.

He offereth his cheke to the smyter, he will be content with reproues.

CAPH.

For the Lorde wyll not forsake for euer.

But though he do caste of, yet accordyng to the multytude of his mercyes, he receyueth to grace agayne.

For he doth not plage, and caste out the chyldren of men from his herte.

LAMED.

To treade all the prysoners of the earthe vnder his fete.

To moue the iudgement of man before the most hyghest.

To condemne a man in his cause: The Lorde hath no pleasure in suche thynges.

MEM.

What is he then that sayth: there shulde somthynge be done without the Lordes cōmaundement?

Out of the mouth of the most hyghest goeth not euell and good?

Wherfore then murmureth the lyuynge man? lette him murmure at his owne synne.

NVN.

Let vs loke well vpon oure owne wayes, and remembre oure selues, and turne agayne to the Lorde.

Let vs lyfte vp oure hertes with our handes vnto the Lorde that is in heauen.

We haue bene dissemblers, and haue offended, wyle thou therfore not be intreated?

SAMECH.

Thou hast couered vs in thy wrathe, and persecuted vs, thou hast slayne vs without any fauoure.

Thou hast hyd thy selfe in a cloude, that our prayer shulde not go thorowe.

Thou hast made vs out cakes, and to be despysed amonge the heythen.

AIN.

All our ennemyes gape vpon vs.

Feare and snare is come vpon vs, yea despyte and destruction.

Hole ryuers of water gushe out of myne eyes, for the greate hurte of my people.

PHE.

Myne eyes runne, and can not ceasse, for there is no rest.

O Lorde when wylte thou loke downe frome heauen, and consydre?

Myne eye breaketh my hert, because of all the doughters of my cytye.

ZADE.

Myne ennemyes hunted me out sharpely, lyke a byrde, yea and that wythout a cause.

They haue put downe my lyfe in ye pyt, and layed a stone vpon me.

They poured water vpon my heade, then thought I: nowe am I vndone.

KOPH.

I called vpon thy name, O Lorde, oute of the depe pytte

Thou haste herde my voyce, and haste not turned awaye thine eares fro my syghynge and crienge.

Thou haste enclyned thy selfe vnto me, when I called vpon the, and hast sayd: feare not.

RES.

Thou (O Lord) hast mayntayned the cause of my soule, and haste redemed my lyfe.

O Lorde, thou haste sene my blaspheme: take thou my cause vpon the.

Thou hast well consydred howe they go about to do me harme, and that al their counsels are agaynste me.

SIN.

Thou hast herde their dispytfull wordes (O Lorde) yea and all their ymaginacyons agaynste me.

The lyppes of myne ennemyes, and their deuyces that they take agaynste me, all the dayt longe.

Thou seest also their sytynge downe and their rysynge vp, they make their songes of nothynge but of me.

THAV.

Rewarde them (O Lorde) accordynge to the workes of their handes.

Gyue them the thynge, that their owne herte is afrayd of: euen thy curse.

Persecute them (O Lorde) with thyne indignacyon, and rote them out frome vnder the heauen.

CAPI. III.

ALEPH.

How is the golde become so dymme? howe is the goodly coloure of it so sore chaunged? and the stones of the Sanctuarye thus scattered in the corner of euery strete.

BETH.

The chyldren of Syon that were alwaye in honour, and clothed with the moost precyous gold: how are they now become like the erthen vessels wyche be made with the potters handes.

GYMEL.

The Lampes gyue their young ones sucke with bare brestes: But the doughter of my people is cruell, and dwelleth in the wylderneße: lyke the Estrich es.

DALETH.

The tonges of the suckyng chyldren, cleue to the rofe of their mouthes for very thyrst. The younge children aske bred, but there is no man, that gyueth it them.

HE.

They that were wont to fare delycately, perysshe in the stretes: they that alore were brought vp in purple, make nowe moche of donge.

VAV.

The synne of the daughter of my people is become greater then the wyckednesse of Sodome, that sodenly was destroyed, and not taken with handes.

ZAIN.

Her abstayners (or Nazarees) were whyter then the snow or mylke: their coloure was fresshe reed as the Corall, their beautye lyke the Saphir.

HETH.

But nowe their faces are very blacke: In so moch, that thou wouldest not know them in the stretes. Their skynne cleueth to their bones, It is wythered, and drome lyke a dry stocke.

TETH.

They that be slayne with the swerde, are happyer then suche as dye of honger, and pe erisshe awaye famyshing for the fruites of the felde.

IOD.

The women (whyche of nature are pitefull) haue sodden their owne children with their handes that they myght be their meate in the miserable destruction of the doughter of my people.

CAPH.

The Lorde hath performed his hye wrath: he hath poured out the furyousnesse of his displeasure. He hath kyndled a fyre in Sion, which hath consumed the foundacyons therof.

LAMED.

Neither the kinges of the earthe, ne all the inhabitauntes of the worlde, wolde haue beleued that the enemye & aduersary shoulde haue come at the gates of the cite of Jerusalē.

MEM.

Which neuertheles is come to passe for the synnes of her prophetes, and for the wickednes of her preestes that haue shed innocentes bloude within her.

NVN.

So that these blynd men went stombling in the stretes, and stayned them selues with bloude, whiche els wolde touche no bloudy cloth.

SAMECH.

But they cryed vnto euery man: flee the defyng, awaye, get you hence, touch it not. Ya (sayde they) ye must be vyrgyn, ye must dwell among the Gentyles, & byde no longer hie.

AIN.

The countenaunce of the Lorde hath dasshed them, and shall neuer loke more vpō them: for they the selues neither regarded the preestes, nor pitied their elders.

PHE

Wherfore yet oure eyes fayle vs, while we loke for vayne helpe: seynge we be cure dyligent vpon a people, that can do vs no good.

ZADE.

They laye so sharpe watte for vs, that we cannot go safe vpon the streates: for oure ende is come, oure dayes are fulfylled oure ende is here.

KOPH.

Oure persecutours are swyfter then the Egles of the ayre, they folowed vpon vs on the mountaynes, and layed wayte for vs in the wildernes.

RES.

The brey dreth of our mouthe: euen the anoynted Lorde him selfe shall be taken in our synnes, of whome we saye: Vnder his shadowe we shall be preserued amonge the heithen.

SIN.

And thou O (doughter Edom) that dwellest in the lande of Hus, be glad and reioyce: for the cuppe shall come vnto the also, which when thou suppest of thou shalte be dronken.

THAV.

Thy syn is wel punyshed (O thou doughter Sion) he shall not suffre the to be caryed awaye any more. But thy wickednesse (O doughter Edom) shall he vysyt, and for thy synnes sake, he shall leade the into captyuytye.

CAPI. V.

The prayer of Jeremye.

CAll to remembraunce (O Lorde) what we haue suffred, consydre and se our confusyon. Oure inheritaunce is turned to the straungers, and oure houses to the aleastes, We are become carefull and fatherlesse, & our mothers are as the wydowes. We are fayne to drynke oure owne water for mony, and our owne wod must we bye with mony. Our neckes are vnder persecucyon, we are weerye, and haue no rest.

Afore tyme we yelded oure selues to the Egyptians, and nowe to the Assyrians, onely that we myghte haue bred ynough. Oure fathers (whiche now are gone) haue synned, & we must bare their wyckednes. Seruauntes haue the rule of vs, and no man delyuereth vs out of their handes. We muste get our lyuynge with the peryll of oure lyues because of the drouth of the wyldernes.

Oure skynne is as it had bene drente in an ouen, for verye sore hunger. The wyues are rauyshed in Sion, and the maydens in the cytyes of Juda. The princes are hanged vp with the hand of the enemyes, they haue not spared the old sage men, they haue take yong mens lyues from them, and the boyes are hāged vp vpō trees. The elders syt no more vnder the gates, and the young men vse no more playeng of Musyke. The ioye of our hert is gone, our mery quere is turned in to mournynge. The garlande of oure heed is fallen: alas, that euer we synned so sore.

Therfore oure herte is full of heuynesse, and oure eyes dymme: because of the hyll of Sion that is destroyed. In so moche, that the foxes run vpon it. But thou, O Lorde, that remaynest for euer more, and thy seate worde without ende: wherfore wilt thou styll forget vs, and forsake vs so longe? O Lorde, turne thou vs vnto the, and so shal we be turned. Renue oure dayes as in olde tymes, for thou hast banysshed vs now long ynough, and hast bene sore displeased at vs.

The ende of the lamentacyons of Jeremye.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE EZECHIEL.

¶ The tyme wherin Ezechiel prophesyed, and in what place. His offeryng and office. The vysyon of the foure beastes. The vysyon of the wheles. The vysyon of the throne, and of the ymage about the throne.

CAP. I.

A IT chaunced in the thirtye yere the fyfth daye of the fourth Moneth, that I was amonge the prisoners by the ryuer of Cobar: where the heauens opened, and I sawe a vysyon of God. Nowe the fyfth day of the moneth made out the fyfth yere of kyng Joachins captruytye. At the same tyme came the worde of the Lorde vnto Ezechiel the sonne of Buzi the preest, in the lande of the Caldees by the water of Cobar, where the hande of the Lorde came vpon him.

And I loked, and beholde a stormy wynde came out of the Northe with a greate cloude full of fyre, which vi his glystre lyghtened al rounde about. And in the myddest of the fyre it was all cleare, and as it were the lykenesse of foure beastes, whiche were fashyoned like a man: sauynge, that euery one had foure faces and foure wynges.

Their legges were streyght, but their fete were lyke bullockes fete, and they glystered, as it had bene fayre scoured metall. Vnder their wynges vpon al the foure corners they had mens handes. Their faces & their wynges were toward the foure corners: yet were the wynges so, that one euer touched an other. When they went, they turned not about: but echone went streyght forwarde.

Vpon the ryghte syde of these foure, their faces were lyke the face of a man, and the face of a Lyon: But vpon the left syde, they had the face of an oxe, and the face of an Egle. Their faces also and their wynges were spred out aboue: so that two wynges of one touched euer two wynges of an other, and with the other they couered their body. Euery one when it went, it went streyght forwarde. Where as the spirite led them thither they went, and turned not about in their goynge.

The fashyon and countenaunce of the beastes was lyke hote coles of fyre, euen as though burnynge cressettes had bene amõge the beastes: and the fyre gaue a glystre, and out of the fyre there went lyghtenyng. Whe the beastes went forwarde and backwarde, one wolde daue thoughte it had lyghtened. Nowe when I had well consydered the beastes, I sawe a worke of wheles vpõ the earth with foure faces also lyke the beastes.

The fashyon and worke of the wheles was lyke the see. The foure wheles were ioyned and made (to loke vpõ) as it had bene one whele in an other. When one went forwarde, they went all foure, and turned them not about in their goinge. They were large, greate and horyble to loke vpon. Their bodyes we full of eyes rounde about them al foure. When the beastes went, the wheles went also with them: And when the beastes lyft them selues vp from the earth, the wheles were lyfte vp also. Whither soeuer the spirite went thyther went they also, and the wheles were lyfte vp, and folowed them: for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

When the beastes went forth, stode still, or lyft them selues vp from the earth: then the wheles also went, stode still, and were lyfte vp, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

Aboue ouer the heades of the beastes there was a firmament, whiche was fashyoned as it had bene of the moost pure Christal, & that was syred out aboue vpon their heades: vnder the same firmament were their wynges layde abrode, one towarde an other, and two winges couered the body of euery beest. And when they went forthe, I hearde the noyse of their winges, like the noyse of greate waters, as it had bene the voyce of the great God, & a rushyng togyther as it were of an hoost of men. And when they stode still, they let downe their wynges.

Nowe when they stode still, and had letten downe their wynges, it thondred in the firmament that was aboue their heades. Aboue the firmament that was ouer them beades, there was the fashyon of a seate, as it had bene made of Saphir. Vpon ꝑ seattthe sat one lyke a man. I beheld him, and he was lyke a cleare lyghte, as it had bene all of fyre with in from his loynes vpward,

And beneth when I loked vpon him vnto the loynes, me thoughte he was lyke a fyry ymage fyre, that gaueth lyght on euery syde. Yea the whole glystre that lyghtened rounde aboute, was lyke a raynebowe, whiche in a rayny daye appeareth in the cloudes. Euen so was the symylitude, wherin the glorye of the Lorde appeared. When I sawe it, I fell vpon my face, and harkened vnto the voyce of him that spake.

¶ The prophete is sende to call agayne the people from their errour.

CAP. II.

AND then sayde he vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete (o thou sonne of man) & I wyll talke with the. And as he was cõmunyng with me, the spirite came in to me and set me vp vpon my fete: so that I vnderstode the thyng, ꝑ he sayd vnto me. And he sayde: Beholde, thou sonne of man: I will sende the to the children of Israel, to those rebellious gates and obstinate people: for they haue taken parte agaynst me, and are runne away fro me: both they and their forefathers vnto this daye.

Yea I wyll sende the vnto a people that haue rough byslages and styffe stomackes: vnto whom thou shalte saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God him selfe hath spoken, that whether they be obedyẽt or no (for it is a frowarde housholde) they maye knowe yet that there hathe bene a Prophete amonge them.

Therfore (thou sonne of man) feare them not, neither be afrayed of their wordes: for they shall rebell agaynste the, and despyse the.

Yea thou shalte dwell amonge scorpions: but feare not their wordes, be not afrayed at their lokes, for it is a frowarde housholde.

Se that thou speake my wordes vnto the, whether they be obedyẽt or not, for they are obstynate. Therfore thou sonne of man, obey thou all thynges, that I saye vnto the, & be not thou stynecked, lyke as they are a stynecked housholde. Open thy mouth and eate that I gyue the.

So as I was lokynge vp, beholde, there was sent vnto me an hande, wherin was a closed boke: and the hande opened it before me, and it was wryten within and without, full of carefull mourenynges: alas, and wo.

¶ The Prophete beynge fedde with the worde of God with the constaunt boldenesse of the spirite, is sent vnto the people that were in captruytye. The punyshment of a curcase that sheweth not the people theyr faultes.

CAP. III.

AFter this sayde he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, eate that, whatsoeuer it be: yea eate that closed boke and goo thy waye, and speake vnto the cyldren of Israel. So I opened my mouth, and he gaue me the boke for to eate, and sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thy belly shall eate, and thy bowels shalbe fylled with the boke, that I gyue ꝑ. Then dyd I eate the boke, & it was in my mouth swete then hony. And he sayde vnto me: thou sonne of man, get the soone vnto the house of Israel, and shewe them the wordes, that I commaunde the: for I sende the not to the people that hath a straunge, vnknowen, or harde speache, but vnto the house of Israel: Not to many nations, whiche haue dyuerse speaches and harde languages, whose wordes thou vnderstandest not. Neuertheles, yf I sent the to those people they wolde folowe the: But the house of Israel wyll not folowe the, for they wyll not folowe me: yea all the house of Israel haue thy forehedes and harde hertes. Beholde therfore, I wyll make thy face prouayle agaynste their faces, and harden thy forehead agaynste their foreheades: so that thy forehead shalbe harder then an Adamãt or flint stone: that thou mayste feare them the lesse, and be lesse afrayde of them, for they are a frowarde housholde.

He sayde moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, take dylygent hede with thyne eares to the wordes that I speake vnto the, fasten them in thine herte: and go to the prysoners of thy people, speake vnto them, and saye on this maner: Thus the Lorde God hath spoken: whether ye heare, or heare not. With that the spirite toke me vp. And I hearde the noyse of a greate rushynge and remouynge of the moste blessed glory of the Lorde out of his place.

I hearde also the noyse of the wynges of the beestes, that rushed one agaynst an other yea and the ratlyng of the wheles, that were by them, which rushynge and noyse was very greate.

Nowe when the spirite toke me vp: and caryed me awaye, I went with an heuy and a sorowfull mynde, but the hande of the Lord comforted me ryght soone.

And so in the begynnynge of the moneth Abib, I came to the prysoners (that dwelt by the water of Cobar, and remayned in that place, where they were: And so contynued I amonge them seuen dayes, beinge verye sorye.

And when the seuen dayes were expired, the Lorde sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, I haue made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel: therfore take good hede to the wordes, and gyue them warnynge at my cõmaundement.

If I saye vnto the, concernynge the vngodlye man, that (without doubte) he muste dye, and thou gyuest hym not warnynge, ne speakest vnto him, that he maye turne frome his euyl waye, and so to lyue: Then shal the same vngodly man dye in his owne vnrighteousnes: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne hande. Neuertheles, yf thou gyue warnynge vnto the wycked, and he yet forsake not his vngodlynes: then shal he dye in his owne wyckednesse, but thou hast discharged thy soule.

Now yf a ryghteous man go from his righteousnesse, and do the thynge that is euell: I wyll laye a stomblynge blocke before him, & he shall dye, because thou hast not gyuen him warnynge: yea dye shall he in his owne syn, so that the deedes, whiche he dyd before, shal not be thought vpon: but his bloude will I requyre of thyne hande.

Neuertheles, yf thou exhortest the righteous, that he synne not, and so the ryghteous do not synne: then shall he lyue, because he hath receyued thy warnynge, and thou hast discharged thy soule. And there came the hãd of the Lorde vpon me: and he sayde vnto me: Stande vp, and go into the felde, that I may there talke with the.

So when I had vpsen vp, and gone forth in to the felde: Beholde, the glory of ꝑ Lord stode there, lyke as I sawe it afore, by the water of Cobar.

Then fell I downe vpon my face, and the spirite came in to me, whiche set me vp vpon my fete, and sayd thus vnto me: Go thy way and sparre thy selfe in thyne house. Beholde (O thou sonne of man) there shall chaynes be brought for the, to bynde the withall, so that thou shalt not escape out of them. And I will make thy tunge cleue fast to the roffe of thy mouth, that thou shalte be domme, and not be as a chyder with them: for it is an obstynate housholde.

But when I speake vnto the, then open thy mouthe, and saye: Thus saythe the Lorde God: who so heareth, let him heare: who so wyl not, let him leaue: for it is an obstynate housholde.

¶ The syege of the cytye of Jerusalem is signified. The longe contynuaunce of the captyuytye of Israel. An hunger is prophecyed to come in the captyuytye.

CAPI. IIII.

THou sonne of man: take a tyle stone, and laye it before the, and describe vpo it the citie of Jerusalem, howe it is besieged, howe bulwarkes and stronge dytches are grauen on euery syde of it: describe also tentes, and an hoofte of men rounde about it.

Moreouer, take an yron pan, and sette it betwyxte the and the citie, in stede of an yron wal. Then set thy face towarde it, besiege it, and laye ordynaunce agaynst it, to wynne it. This shall be a token vnto the house of Israel.

But thou shalte slepe vpon thy left syde, and lay the synne of the house of Israel vpo the. Certayne dayes appoynted, thou shalte slepe vpon that syde, and beare their synnes. Neuertheleffe, I wyll appoynte the a tyme (to put of their synnes) e the nombre of the dayes: Three hundreth and.xc. dayes muste thou beare the wickednesse of the house of Israel. Whē thou hast fulfilled these dales, lye downe agayne, and slepe vpon thy right syde. xl. dayes, & beare the synnes of the house of Juda.

Nume. xiiii. e

A daye for a yere, a daye (I saye) for a yere, wyll I euer laye vpon the. Therfore set now thy face agaynst the besieged Jerusalē and discouer thyne arme, that thou mayste prophecy agaynst it.

Beholde, I wyll laye chaynes vpon the that thou shalt not turne the frome one side to an other, tyl thou hast ended the dayes of thy siege.

Wherfore, take vnto the wheate, barlye, beanes, grotwell sede Millium and lytches: and put these togyther in a vessel, and make the loues of breade therof, accordynge to the nombre of the dayes that thou muste lye vpon thy syde: that thou mayst haue breade to eate, for three hundreth and.xc. dayes.

And the meate that thou eatest, shall haue a certayne waygbt appoynted: namely twen ty vnces euery daye. This appoynted meate shalt thou eate dayly, from the begynnynge to the ende.

Thou shalte drynke also a certayne measure of water: Namely, the syxte parte of an Hin shalt thou drynke dayly frome the begynnynge vnto the ende. Barlye cakes shalt thou eate, yet shalte thou fyrste strake them ouer with mans donge, that they maye be. And with that sayde the Lorde: Euen thus shal the chyldren of Israel eate their defyled breed in the myddest of the Gentyles, among whome I wyll scatter them.

Then sayd I: Oh Lorde God. Beholde, my soule was yet neuer stayned: for fro my youth vp vnto this houre. I yet neuer eate of a deed carkase, or of that whiche was torne of wylde beastes, neither came there euer any vncleane flesshe in my mouth.

Whervnto he answered me, and sayde: Well then, I wyl graunt the to take cowes donge, for the donge of man, and to strake the breed ouer withall before them.

And he sayd vnto me: Beholde thou sonne of man, I will minyssche all the prouision of breed in Jerusalem, so that they shal wey their breed, and eate it with scarcenesse. But as for water, they shall haue a verye lytle measure therof to drynke. And when they haue no more breed ne water, one shall be astonyed with an other, and stamp sore away for their wyckednesse.

¶ The tyddle of the heares, by whiche is signified the destruction of the people. The causes of the ire of God towarde the people. The Lorde declareth the tyddle of the heares.

CAPI. V.

THou sonne of man, take the thy sharpe knyfe, namely a rasour. Take it, and shaue the heere of thy heed & beard. Then take the scales and the waight, and deuyde the heere asunder. And burne the thirde parte therof in the fyre in the myddest of the citye, and cut the other thyrde parte in peces with a knyfe. As for the thyrde parte that remayneth, cast it in the wynde, and then drawe the bare knyfe.

Yet afterwarde take a lytle of the same, and bynde it in thy cote lappe. Then take a curtlye of it, and cast it in the myddest of the fyre, and burne it in the fire. Out of the same fire shal there go a flame vpon the hole house of Israel.

Moreouer, thus sayd the Lorde God: this same is Jerusalem, I set her in the myddest of the heathen and nacions that are rounde about her: but she hathe despised my iudgementes more then the Gentyles them selues, and broken my commaundementes more then the nacions that lye rounde about her: for they haue cast out mine ordinaunces, and not walked in my lawes. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so muche as ye with youre wyckednesse farre excede the Heathen that dwell rounde about you: (for ye haue not walked in my lawes, neither haue ye kept myne ordinaunces.) Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God.

I wyll also come vpon the, for in the myddest of the, wyll I syfte in iudgement, in the syght of the Heathen, and wyl handle the suche a facion as I neuer dyd before, and as I neuer wyll do from that tyme forthe, and that bycause of all thyne abhommacions. For in the, fathers shall de layne to eate their owne sonnes, and the sonnes their owne fathers. Suche a coueye wyl I kepe in the, and the hole remnaunt wyll I scatter in to al the windes.

Wherfore as truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) seinge thou haste defyled my Sanctuarye with all maner abhommacions, and with all thy shamefull offences. For this cause wyll I also destroye the. Myne eye shall not ouerle the, neither will I spare the.

One thyrde part within the, shal dye of the pestilence and of hōgre: An other thirde part shall de slayne downe rounde about the, with the swerde: The other thirde parte that remayneth will I scatter abrode towarde all the windes, and drawe out the swerde after the. Thus I will performe my indignation, and stil my wrath against them and ease my selfe. So that when I haue fulfylled myne angre ageynst them, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde, which with a feruente gelousye haue spoken it.

Moreouer I wyll make the waste and abhorred before all the heathen that dwell about the, and in the syghte of all them that go by the: so that when I punysche the in my wrathe, in myne angre, and with the plage of my hoote displeasure, thou shalte be a verye abhommacion, shame, a gasynge and wondring stocke amonge the Heathen that lye about the.

Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, & it shall come to passe, when I shote among them the perylous dartes of hongre, whiche shall be but death: Yea, therfore shall I shote them, bycause I wyll destroye you. I wyll encrease hongre, and minysch all the prouision of breed emonge you.

Plages and myserye wyl I sende you, yea and wylde beastes also to destroy you. Pestilence and bloodshedynge shal come vpon you, and the swerde will I bringe ouer you. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

The wrath that the people shall be plaged for the synne of Idolatrye. He prophecyeth the repentaunce of the remnaunt of the people, and their deliuerance. The destruction of the frowarde is prophecyed.

CAPI. VI.

AGayne the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man, turne thy face to the mountaynes of Israel, that thou mayste prophecye vnto them, and saye: Heare the worde of the Lorde God, o ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus hath the Lorde God spoken to the mountaynes, hylles, valleys and dales.

Beholde, I wyll bringe a swerde ouer you, and destroye youre hye places: I wyll cast downe your aulters, and breake downe your temples. Your slayne men wyll I laye before youre goddes, and the deed carkases of the children of Israel wyll I caste before their ymages, youre bones wyll I destroye rounde about youre aulters and dwellynge places.

The cityes shall be desolate, the hyll chapels layde waste: youre aulters destroyed, and broken: youre goddes caste downe, and taken awaye, your temples layd euen with the grounde, your owne workes clene rooted out.

Your slayne men shal lye among you, that ye maye learne to knowe howe that I am the Lord. None that amonges you haue escaped the swerde will I leaue among the Gentiles, for I wil scatter you among the nacions. And they that escape from you shall remēbre me amonges the heathen, where they shalbe in captiuitie. Baruc. iiii.

As for that hoorishe and vnfaythful hert of theirs, wherwith they ran away fro me, I will breake it: yea and put oute those eyes of theirs, that commit fornication with their idolles.

Then shal they be ashamed, and displeased with their selues, for their wickednesses and abhominacions which they haue wrought, and shall learne to knowe howe that it is not in vayne that I the Lorde spake to bringe suche miserye vpon them.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: Smite thyne handes togyther, and stampe with thy feete, and saye: Wo worth all the abhominacions and wickednesses of the house of Israel, for bycause of them they shal perysh with the swerde, with hongre, & with pestilence. Who so is farre of, shall dye of the pestilence: he that is nye at hande, shall perysshe with the swerde: and the other that be besieged, shall dye of hongre.

Thus wyll I satisfye my wrothfull displeasure vpon them. And so shall ye learne to know that I am the Lorde, when your slayne men lye amonge youre goddes, and aboute youre aulters: vpon all hye hylles and toppes of mountaynes, amonge all grene trees, amonge all thycke okes: euen in the places where they dyd sacrifyce to all their idolles. I wyll stretche myne hande oute vpon them, and wyll make the lande waste: so that it shall lye desolate and voyde, from the wyldernesse of Deblathath forthe, thorowe all their habitacions, to learne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

¶ The ende of all the lande of Israel shall sodenly come. The cause of the destruction therof. The prophetes commaunded to shewe the summe of the euylles that are at hande.

CAPI. VII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: the I call, o thou sonne of man. Thus sayeth the Lord God vn to the lande of Israell: The ende commeth, yea verily the ende cõmeth vpon al the foure corners of the erth.

But now shal the ende come vpon the: for I wyll sende my wrathe vpon the, and wyll punysshe the: accordynge to thy wayes, and rewarde the after all thy abhommacyons.

Eze.vii.b.iv.c Myne eye shall not oneryle the, neyther wyll I spare the, but rewarde the accordynge to thy wayes, and declare thy abhompnacyons. Then shall ye knowe that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, one mysery and plage shall come after an other: the ende is here. The ende (I saye) that wayteth for the, is come alreadye, the houre is come agaynste the, that dwellest in the lande.

B The tyme is at hande, the daye of sedicion is harde by, and no glad tydynges vpon the mountaynes. Therfore I wyll shortly powre out my sore displeasure vpon the, and fulfill my wrathe vpon the. I wyll iudge the after thy wayes, and recompence the all thy abhominacions.

Eze.vii.b.iv.c C Myne eye shall not oneryle the, neyther wyll I spare the: but rewarde the after thy wayes, and shewe thy abhompnacyons, to lerne you for to knowe howe that I am the Lorde that smyteth. Beholde, the daye is here, the daye is come, the houre is runne oute, the rodde flourysheth, wyl ranelle waxeth greene, malicyous violence is growen vp, and the vngodly waxen to a staffe. Yet shall there no complaynte be made for them, nor for the trouble that shall come of these thynges.

D The tyme commeth, the day draweth nyer Who so bieth, let him not reioyce: he that selleth let him not be sory, for why? trouble shal come in the middest of all rest: so that the seller shall not come agayne to the byer, for neither of them bothe shall lyue.

For the vision shal come so greatly ouer al that it shall not be hyndred: No man also with his wyckednesse shall be able to saue his owne lyfe. The trompettes shal ye blowe and make you all redye, but no man shall go to the batel, for I am wroth with all the hole multitude.

E The swerde shall be without, pestylence and hongre within: so that who so is in the felde, shall be slayne with the swerde: and he Deut.xxviii.d. that is in the cite shall perisshe with hongre and pestilence.

And suche as escape and flee from amonge them, shal be vpon the hylles, lyke as the doues in the felde: euery one shal be afrayde because of his owne wickednesse.

All handes shal be let downe, and al knees F shall be weake as the water: they shal gyrde them selues with sacke clothe, feare shall fall vpon them. Their faces shall be confounded, Esaye.xv.b Jere.xl.viii.b Sopho.i.d Ezech.v.b Prouer.xi.a. *& their heades bald: their syluer shal lye in the stretes, and their golde shall be despysed: *Yea their syluer and golde maye not deliuer them, in the day of the fearfull wrath of the Lorde.

They shall not satisfye their hongry soules, neither fyll their empty bellyes therwith: For it is become their owne decaye through their wickednesse: because they made them of not onely costlye iewels for their pompe and pryde, but also abhominable ymages and idols. For this cause wyl I make the to be abhorred.

Moreouer I wyll gyue it in to the handes G of the straungers to be spoyled, and to the wicked for to be robbed, and they shall destroye it. My face wyll I turne from them, my treasury shall be despised: for the theues shall go in to it and suspende it. I will make clene vnclaunce, for the lande is hole fylled with vnrighteous iudgement of innocent blood, & the cite is full of abhominations. Wherfore I will bryng the moost cruel tyrauntes from amonge the Heathen, to take their houses in possession. I will make their pompe of the pouke to ceasse, and they shall take in their sanctuaryes. When this trouble commeth, they shal seke peax, but they shall haue none. One mischefe and sorow shall folowe an other, and one rumour shall come after an other. Then shal they seke visions in vayne at their prophetes.

The lawe shall be gone from the preistes, and wysdome from the elders. The kynge shall mourne, the princes shall be clothed in heuynesse, and the handes of the people in the lande shall tremble for feare. I will doo vnto them after their owne wayes, and accordynge to their owne iudgements wyll I iudge them: to lerne them for to know that I am the Lorde.

¶ An appearance of the similitude of God. Ezechiel is brought vnto Jerusalem in the spyrit. The Lorde sheweth the Prophete the Idolatries of the house of Israel, and chefely of the preistes.

CAPI. VIII.

IT happened that in the fyrste yere, the fyfte daye of the fyrste moneth I sat in my house A and the Lordes of the counsel of Juda with me: and the hande of the Lorde God fell vpon there vpon me.

And as I loked vp, I saw as it were a lykenesse of fire from his loynes downeward, and and from his loynes vpwarde it shyned maruelous clere. This similitude stretched oute an hande, and toke me by the heery lockes of B my heed, and the spirite lyfte me vp betwixt heuen and earthe: and God brought me in a vysyon to Jerusalem, in to the entrye of the inner porte that lyeth towarde the north: there stode an ymage, with whome he that hathe all thynges in his power, was very wrothe.

And beholde, the glorye of the God of Israel was in the same place: euen as I hadde sene it afore in the felde. And he said vnto me: Thou sonne of man. Lyfte vp thyne eyen, and loke towarde the north. Then lyfte I vp C myne eyes towarde the north: and beholde, beside beside the porte northward, there was an aulter, made vnto the ymage of prouocacion in the very entryng in. And he sayd furthermore vnto me: Thou sonne of man, seist thou what these do? Seist thou the great abhominacions that the house of Israel commit in this place which ought not to be done in my Sanctuary? But turne the about, and thou shalte se yet greater abhominacions. And with that brought he me to the court gate: and when I loked: D beholde, there was an hole in the wal. Then sayd he vnto me: thou sonne of man, dygge thorowe the wall. And when I dygged thorowe the wall: beholde, there was a dore. And he sayd vnto me: Go thy waye in, and loke what wycked abhominacions they do there. So I went in and sawe: and beholde, there were all maner ymages of wormes and beestes, al idolles and abhominacions of the house of Israell painted euery one rounde about the wall.

There stode also before the ymages three E score and ten lordes of the counsel of the house of Israel: and in the middest of them stode Jazaniah the sonne of Saphan: And euery one of them had a censoure in his hande, and out of the incense there wente a smoke, as it hadde ben a cloude. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, hast thou sene what the maisters of the house of Israel do secretly, every one in his chambre? For they say: Lorde the Lorde seeth vs not, the Lorde regardeth not the worlde. And he sayd vnto me: Turne theyer agayne, and thou shalte se the greate abhominacions that they do. And with that he brought me to the dore of the porte of the Lordes house towarde the norey. And beholde there sate women mournynge for Thamus. Then sayde he vnto me: hadde thou sene this thou sonne of man? Turne the about, & thou shalt se yet greater abhominacions.

And he brought me in to the inwarde F court of the Lordes house: & beholde at the porte of the Lordes house, betwixte the fore entrye and the aulter, there were fyue and twentye men, that tourned their backes vpon the temple of the Lorde, and their faces towarde the East, and these worshypped the Sunne.

And he sayd vnto me: hast thou sene this G sonne of man? Thynketh the house of Israel that it is but a tryfle, to do these abhominacions here? Shoulde they fyll the lande full of wyckednesse, and vndertake to prouoke me vnto anger? Yea and purposely to caste vp their noses vpon me? Therfore wyll I also do some thynge in my wrothfull displeasure, so that myne eye shall not ouer se them, neyther wyll I spare them. Yea and though they crye in myne eares with loude voyce, yet wyll I not heare them.

¶ The destruction of Idolatrers, and the conseruacion of the righteous. They that shall be saued are marcked. They that are vnmarcked are slayne. Complaynte of the Prophete for the destruction of the people.

CAPI. IX.

HE cryed also with a loud voyce in myne A eares, sayynge: Come here pe rulers of the city, euery man with his weaponed hande to the slaughter. Then came there fyue men oute of the streete of the vpper porte towarde the North, and euerye man a weapon in his hande to the slaughter. There was one amongest them that had on him a lynnen rayment, and a writers pynchhorne by his syde.

These went in & stode before the brasen aul B ter/ for the glory of the Lorde was gone away Exod.xl.a from the Cherub, and was come vnto the Nume.ix.e threshold of the house, and he called the man iii.Reg.viii.b that had the lynnen rayment vpon him, and the writers pynchorne by his syde, and the Lorde sayd vnto him: Go thy waye thorow the city of Jerusalem, & set this marke Thau Exod.xii.a vpon the foreheades of them that mourne Apoca.vii.a and are sorye for all the abhominations that be done therin. And to the other he sayd that I might heare: Go ye after him thorow the city, slee, oneryle none, spare none: kyll and destroye both olde men and yong maydens, children and wyues.

But as for those that haue this marke Thau vpon them, se that ye touch them not/ and begyn at my Sanctuarye. Then they be- Jere.xxv.b gan at the elders whiche were in the temple, xlix.b. for he had sayd vnto them: when ye haue de- i.Peter.iiii.d filed the temple, and fylled the courte with the slayne, then go your waye forth. So they went out, and slewe downe thorow the city. Now when they had wae the slaughter, and I yet escaped, I fell downe vpon my face, and cryed, sayynge: O Lorde, wilte thou then destroye all the residue of Israel in thy sore displeasure, that thou hast powred vpon Jerusalem? Then sayde he vnto me: the wyckednes of the house of Israell and Juda is verye great, so that the lande is full of bloode, and the city full of vnrighteousnesse. For they say: Tushe the Lorde regardeth not the earthe, he seeth vs not.

Therfore wyll I vpon them, myne eye D shall not oneryle them, neyther wyll I spare Job.xxii.b them, but wyll recompence their wycked- Esaye.lvii.c nesse vpon their heedes. And beholde, the Ezechiel.xxii.d man that had the lynnen rayment vpon him Ezech.vii.a and the writers pynchorne by his syde, tolde all the matter howe it happened, and sayde: Lorde, as thou hast commaunded me, so haue I done.

¶ Of the man that toke hote burnynge coles out of the middle of the wheles and of the Cherubyns, in token of the burnynge of Jerusalem. A rehersall of the wisyon of the wheles, of the beastes, and of the Cherubyns.

CAPI. X.

AND as I loked beholde in the firma- A ment that was aboue the Cherubyns Ezechiel.i.a there appered the symilitude of a stole of Saphir vpon them: Then sayde he that fate therin to him that had the lynen raymēt vpon him: Crepe in betwen the wheles that are vnder the Cherubins, and take thine hand full of hote coles out from betwene the Cherubyns, and caste them ouer the citye. And he crepte in that I myght se.

Now the Cherubyns stode vpon the right syde of the house, when the man went in, and the cloude fylled the innermer courte. But the glorye of the Lorde remoued frome the Cherubyns, and came vpon the threshold of the house, so that the temple was ful of cloudes, and the courte was full of the shyne of the Lordes glory. Yea and the sounde of the Cherubins wynges was herde in to the fore courte, lyke as it had ben the voyce of the almighty God when he speaketh.

Now when he hadde bydden the man that was clothed in lynen, to go and take the hote coles from the myddest of the wheles, which were vnder the Cherubyns: he wente and stode beside the wheles. Then the one Cherub reached forthe his hande from vnder the Cherubins, vnto the fire that was betwene the Cherubyns, and toke therof, and gaue it vnto him that hadde on the lynnen raymēt in his hande: whiche toke it, and went oute.

13 And vnder the wynges of the Cherubyns, there apperēd the lykenesse of a mans hande: I sawe also foure wheles beside the Cherubyns, so that by euerye Cherub there stode a whele. And the wheles were (to loke vpon) after the facyon of the precyous stone of Thartis: yet (vnto the syght) they were facyoned and lyke as yf one whele had ben in an other.

When they wente forthe, they wente all foure togyther, not turnynge aboute in their goynge: But where the fyrst wente thyther went they after also, so that they tourned not aboute in their goynge. Their hole bodyes, their backes, their handes and wynges, yea and the wheles also were all full of eyes rounde aboute them all foure. And I herde him call the wheles Galgal (that is) a rounde boule. Euery one of them had four faces: so that the one face was the face of a Cherub, the seconde of man, the thyrde of a lyon, the fourth of an Egle, and they were lifted vp aboue. This is the beest that I saw at the water of Cobar. Now when the Cherubyns, went the wheles went with them, and when the Cherubyns spred their wynges to lifte them selues vpwarde, the wheles remayned not behynde, but were with them also. Shortlye when they stode, these stode also: And when they were lyfte vp, the wheles were lyfte vp also with them, for the spirite of lyfe was in the wheles.

Then the glory of the Lorde was lyfte vp from the threshold of the temple, and remayned vpō the Cherubins: And the Cherubins stackred with their wynges, and lifte them selues vp frome the earthe: so that I saw when they wente, and the wheles with them. And they stode at the east syde of the porte that is in the house of the Lorde. So the glorye of the Lorde was vpon them. This is the beest that I sawe vnder the God of Israel, by the water of Cobar. And I perceyued, that it was the Cherubyns. Euerye one had foure faces, and euerye one foure wynges, and vnder the wynges, as it were mennes handes. Nowe the fygure of their faces was, euen as I had sene them, by the water of Cobar, and so was the countenaunce of them: Euerye one in his goynge wente streyght forwarde.

Who they were that made the people of Israel to strape. Agaynst these he prophecyeth, threwynge them how they shall be dyspersed abrode. The reuengynge of the herte commeth of God, otherwyse can we not walcke in his commaundementes. He threatēneth them that leane vnto their owne counselles.

CAPI. XI.

MOreouer the spirite of the Lorde lyfte me vp, and brought me vnto the East porte of the Lordes house. And behold there were. xxv. men vnder the wose amonge whom I sawe Jaazaniah the sonne of Azur, and Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah the rulers of the people. Then sayd the Lorde vnto me: thou son of man, these men ymagin mischefe, and a wicked counsell take they in this cite, sayinge: tush, there is no destruccion at hand, let vs buylde houses: this Jerusalem is the caudron, & we be the flesh. Therfore (shalt thou prophecy vnto them, yea prophecy (shalt thou vnto them, o sonne of man. And with that fell the spirite of the Lord vpon me, and sayde vnto me: Speake, thus sayth the Lorde:

On this maner haue ye spoken (O ye house of Israel) and I knowe the ymaginacions of youre hertes. Many one haue ye murthered in this cite, and fylled the stretes full of the slayne. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: The slayne men that ye haue layden in the grounde in this cite, are the flesh and this cite is the caudron: But I will brynge you oute of it: ye haue drawen out the swerde, euen so will I also brynge a swerde ouer you, sayth the Lorde God: I will bryue you oute of this cite and deliuer you in to youre enemyes handes, and will condemne you. Ye shall be slayne in all the coostes of Israell, I will be auenged of you to learne you for to knowe, that I am the Lorde.

This cite shall not be youre caudron, neither shall ye be the flesh therin: but in the coostes of Israel will I punysshe you, that ye maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: in whose commaundementes, ye haue not walked & kepte his lawes: but haue doone after the customes of the Heathen that lye rounde about you.

Now when I preached, Pheltiah the sonne of Bananiah dyed, then fell I downe vpon my face, and cryed with a loude voyce: O Lorde God, wylt thou then vtterly destroye all the remnaunt in Israell? And so the woyde of the Lorde came to me on this maner: thou sonne of man: thy brethren, thy kynsfolke, and the hole house of Iuda, whiche dwell at Jerusalem, sayē: they be gone farre from the Lord, vnto vs the lande is gyuen vp in possession. Therfore tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: I will fetche you farre of among the Gentyles, and skatter you amonge the nacions, and I will hyde you but a lytle in the landes where ye shall come.

Tell them also thus sayth the Lorde God: I will gather you agayne out of the nacions, and bringe you from the countreyes where ye be skatred, and wil giue you the land of Israel agayne: and thither shall ye come. And as for all impetimentes, and all your abhominacions I will take them awaye.

And I will giue you one herte, and I will plante a newe spirite within youre bowels. That stony hert will I take out of your body, and gyue you a fleshly hert: that ye may walke in my commaundementes, & kepe mine ordinaunces and worcken them, that ye maye be my people, and I your God. But loke whose hert as are disposed to folowe their abhominacions, and wicked lyuynges: those mens dedes will I bringe vpon their owne heades, sayth the Lorde God.

After this dyd the Cherubins lifte vp their wynges, and the wheles went with them, & the glory of the Lorde was vpon them. So the glory of the Lorde went vp frō the myddes of the cite, and stode vpon the mountes of the cite towarde the east. But the winde toke me vp, and in a vision (which came by the spirit of God) it brought me agayne in to Caldea amonge the pyssoners. Then the vision of Jhesus vanished awaye fro me. So I spake vnto the pyssoners al the woydes of the Lord whyche he had shewed me.

The parable of the vessells of the captyuytye. Interpretyd on of the parable, by whyche the captyue kynge Sedechias is signifyed. An other parable whereby the vylenesse of hunger and thyrst is signyfyed.

CAPI. XII.

THe woyde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou son of man, thou dwellest in the myddest of a frowarde housholde whiche haue eyes to se, and yet se not: eares haue they to heare, and yet heare they not, for they are a stubborn housholde. Therfore (thou son of mā) make thy gere redy to fare, and go forth by fayre day light, that they maye se: Yea euen in their sight shalt thou go from thy place to an other place: yf peraduenture they will consydre that they be an vnobedient housholde.

Thy gere that thou hast made redy to fare withall, shalt thou beare oute by fayre day light, that they maye se: and thou thy selfe shalt go forth also at euen in their syght, as men vse to whē ye departe. Digge thorowe the wall, that they maye se, and beare thorow it the same thing that thou toke vp in their syght. As for thy selfe, thou shalte go forth in the darke. Hyde thy face that thou se not the erth, for I haue made the a shewe token vnto the house of Israel. Now as the Lord cōmaunded me, so I dyd: the gere that I had made redy, brought I out by daye. At euen I brake downe an hole thorow the wall with my hande: and whē it was darke I toke the gere vpon my shoulders, and bare them out in their sight.

And in the mornyng came the woyde of the Lorde vnto me, saying: Thou son of man, yet Israel that frowarde housholde aske the, and saye: what doest thou there? Then tell them, thus sayth the Lorde God: This punishmēt toucheth the chefe rulers at Jerusalem, and all the house of Israel that dwel among the. Tell them, I am your shewe token: lyke as I haue done, so shall it happen vnto you. Fare shal ye also, and go in to captyuitie. The chefest that is among you, shall lay his shoulders in the darke, & get him awaye. He shal breake downe the wall to cary stuffe therthorow. He shall couer his face that he se not the ground with his eyes.

My lyne will I spreade oute vpon hym, and catche him in my nette and carye him to Babylon, in the lande of the Caldees, which he shall not se, and yet shall he dye there. As for all his helpers, and all his Hostes, that be aboute hym, I will scatter them towarde all the wyndes, and drawe oute a swearde after them. So when I haue scattered them amonge the Heathen, and strowed them in the landes, they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

But I wil leaue a litle nombre of the from the swerde, hunger, & pestilence, to tell all their abhominacions amonge the Heathen, where they come, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Moreouer the woyde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, with a fearefull tremblynge shalte thou eate thy breed, with carefulnesse and sorow shalt thou drynke thy water. And vnto the people of the lande speake thou on, this maner. Thus sayth the Lorde God, to them that dwell in Jerusalem, and to the lande of Israel: Ye shall eate youre breed with sorowe, and drynke youre water with heynesse: Yea, the lande with the fulnesse therof shall be layd waste, for the wickednesse of them that dwel therin. And the cityes that now be wel occupyed, shall be voyde, and the lande desolate, that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

Yet came the woyde of the Lorde vnto me agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, what maner of byworde is that, whiche ye vse in the lande of Israell, sayinge: Tusshe seinge that the dayes are so slacke in commynge, all the vysions are of none effecte. Tell them therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll make that byworde to cease, so that it shal no more be cōmonly vsed in Israel.

But say this vnto them: The dayes are at hande, that euery thing whiche hath ben prophecied, shal be fulfilled. There shal no vision be in vayne, neythre any prophecye fayle among the children of Israel: for it is ℣ Lord that spoke it: and what so euer I the Lorde speake shall be performed, and not be slacke in commynge.

G Yea eurn in youre dayes (O ye frowarde housholde) will I deuise somthyng, and bryng it to passe sayth ℣ Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Beholde thou sonne of man: the house of Israel saye in this maner: Such as for the vision that he hath sene, it wil be many a daye or it come to passe: It is farre of yet, the thyng that he prophecieth. Therfore saye vnto theym: Thus sayth the Lorde God. All my wordes shal no more be slacke: loke what I spoke, that same shal come to passe, sayth the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst false prophetes, whiche teache the people the counselles of their owne hertes.

CAPI. XIII.

H THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man. Speake prophecye agaynste those prophetes, that preache in Israell: and saye thou vnto them that prophecye out of their owne hertes: Heare the worde of the Lorde: Thus False prophetes. sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto those foolyshe prophetes that folow their owne spirite, and speake where they se not thynge. O Israell, thy prophetes are lyke the foxes vpon the dyre felde: For they stande not in the gappes, neuther make they an hedge for the house of Israel, that men might abide the perell in the daye of the Lorde. Vayne thynges they se: and tell lyes to maynteyne their preachynges withall. The Lorde (saye they) hath spoken it, when in deed he the Lorde hathe not sent them. Vayne visions haue ye sene, and spoken false prophecyes, when ye saye: the Lorde hathe spoken it, where as I neuer spake it.

Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: Because your wordes be vayne, and ye seke out lyes: Beholde, I wyll vpon you, sayth the Lorde. Myne handes shall come vpon the prophetes that loke out vayne thynges, and preache lyes: they shall not be in the counsell of my people, nor wrytten in the boke of the house of Israel, neyther shal they come in the lande of Israell: that ye maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde God. And that for this

Jerem. xxiij.b cause: they haue discerned my people, and tolde them of peax, where no peax was. One letteth vp a walle, and they dawbe it with loose clayr. Therfore tell them which dawbe

Math. xxiij.c it with vntempered morter, that it shall fall. For there shall come a great showre of rayne, great stones shal fal vpō it, and a forc stourme of wynde shall breake it, so shall the wall come downe.

Shal it not then be said vnto you: where is nowe the morter, that ye dawbed it withall? Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll breake oute in my wrothfull displeasure with a stormye wynde, so that in myne anger, there shall come a mighty showre of rayne and hayle stones in my wrathe, to destroye withall.

As for the wall that ye haue dawbed with vntempered morter, I will breake it downe, make it euen with the grounde: so that the foundacion therof shall remayne, and it shall fall: yea and ye youre selues shall perysshe in the myddest therof: to lerne you for to knowe I am the Lorde.

Thus wyll I performe my wrathe vpon this wall, and vpon them that haue dawbed it with vntempered morter, and then will I saye vnto you: The wall is gone, and the dawbers are awaye. These are the prophetes of Israel, whiche prophecye vnto the cyte of Jerusalem, and loke oute visions of peax for them, where as no peax is, sayth the Lorde God.

Wherfore (O thou sonne of man) set thy face agaynste the doughters of thy people, whiche prophecye oute of their owne hertes: and speake thou prophecye agaynste them, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Wo be vnto you ℣ sowe pyllowes vnder all armholes, and bolsters vnder the heades both of yonge and olde, to catche soules withall. For when ye haue gotten the soules of my people in youre captiuitie, ye promyse them lyfe, and dishonoure me to my people, for a handfull of barlye, and for a piece of breed: when ye kil the soules of them, that dye not, and promyse lyfe to them that lyue not: thus ye dissemble with my people that byleueth your lyes.

Wherfore thus sayth the Lord God: Beholde, I wil also vpō the pillowes, wherwith ye catch the soules in fleing: them wil I take from your armes, and let ℣ soules go, that ye catche in fleing.

Youre bolsters also wyll I teare in peces, and deliuer my people oute of your handes: so that they shall come no more in your handes to be spoyled, and ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

Seinge that with youre lyes ye discomforte the herte of the righteous whom I haue not discomforted. Agayne: For so much as ye courage the hand of the wycked, so that he maye not fourne from his wycked waye and lyue: therfore shall ye syse oute no more vanitie, nor prophecye youre owne gestynges: for I wyll deliuer my people oute of your handes, that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The Lorde denyeth his worde to the people for their synnes sake. The disciples of the worde doth the Lorde sometyme deceyue by false prophetes. A comfort of them that trede vnto Babylon.

CAPI. XIIII.

That

THere resorted vnto me certayne of the elders of Israel, & sate downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lord vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man, these men beare their Idolles in their hertes, and go purposly vpon the stumbelynge blocke of their owne wyckednesse: how dare they then aske counsell at me? Therfore speake vnto them, and saye: thus sayeth the Lorde God: Euery man of ℣ house of Israel that beareth his Idolles in his herte, purposinge to stomble in his owne wyckednesse, and commeth to a prophet, to enquyre any thynge at me by hym: vnto that man wyll I the Lorde my selfe geue answere, accordynge to the multytude of his Idolles. that the house of Israell maye be snared in their owne hertes, because they be cleane gone from me, for their Idolles sake.

Wherfore, tell the house of Israel: thus sayth the Lorde God: Be conuerted, forsake your Idolles, and turne your faces from all your abhominacions. For euery man, (whether he be of the house of Israel or a straunger, that soiourneth in Israel) whiche departeth fro me, and carryeth Idolles in his herte purposyng to go still stumbelyng in his owne wickednesse, and commeth to a Prophet, to aske counsell at me therof vnto him: vnto that man wyll I the Lord geue answere, by mine owne selfe. I wyll set my face agaynste that man, and wyll make him to be an example & a by worde, yea and a common by worde: and wil roote him out of my people. & ye shall know that I am the Lorde. And yf that Prophete be deceyued, when he offereth him a worde: then I the Lord my selfe haue deceyued that Prophete, and wyll stretche forth myne hand vpon him, to roote him quite out of my people of Israel: and they both shall be punyshed for their wickednesse. Accordynge to the synne of him that asketh, shall the synne of the Prophete be: that the house of Israel be led no more fro me thorow errours, & be no more defiled in their wyckednesse: but that they maye be my people, and I their God, sayth the Lorde God. And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man when the land sinneth against me, and goeth forth in wyckednesse: I wyll stretche oute myne hand vpon it, and destroye all the prouision of the yrth, and sende derth vpon them to destroy man and beste in the lande. And though Noe, Daniel, and Job, these thre were amōg the, yet shal they in their righteousnesse deliuer but their owne soules sayth the Lorde God. If I bringe noysome beastes into the lande, to waste it vp, and it be so desolate, that no mā may go therin for beastes: yf these thre men also were in the lande, as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shal saue neither sonnes ne doughters, but be onely deliuered them selues: and as for the lande, it shall be waste.

Or yf I bringe a swearde into the lande, and charge it to go thorow the land: so that I slaye owte man & beaste in it, and yf these thre men were therin: As truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but only be saued them selues. If I sende a pestylence into the land, and poure out my sore indignacō vpō it in bloude, so that I rote out of it both mā and beast, and yf Noe, Danyel, and Job, were therin: as truly as I lyue (sayth the Lorde God) they shall deliuer neither sonnes ne doughters, but saue their owne soules in their righteousnesse. Moreouer thus sayth the Lorde God: Though I send my foure iust- Jere. xxvij.b bious plages vpon Jerusalem: the swearde honger, perelous beastes and pestylence, to destroye man and beaste oute of it: yet shall there be a remnaūt saued therin, which shall bringe forth their sonnes and doughters. Be holde they shall come forth vnto you, and ye shall se their waye, and what they take in hande, and ye shall be cōforted, as touchinge all the plages that I haue brought vpon Jerusalem.

They shall comforte you, when ye se their waye and workes: and ye shall knowe, how that it is not without a cause, that I haue done so agaynste Jerusalem, as I dyd, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ As the vnprofytable woode of the vyne tree is cast in to the fyre, so (sayeth he) that Jerusalem shall be brent.

CAPI. XV.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saynge: Thou sonne of man: What commeth of the vyne amonge al other trees? and of the vyne stock among al other tymbre of the greue? Do men take of it, to make any worke withall? Or maye there a nayle be made of it, to hang any thynge vpō? Beholde, it is cast in the fyre to be brent, the fyre consumeth both the endes of it, the middest is brente to asshes. Is it mete then for any worke? No.

Seing then, that it was mete for no worke beinge hole: moche lesse may there any thing be made of it, when the fyre hath consumed and brent it. And therfore thus sayth the Lord God: Lyke as I caste the vyne into the fyre for to be brent, as other trees of the wod: Euen so wyll I do with them that dwell in Jerusalem, and set my face agaynste them: they shall go out fromme the fyre, and yet the fyre shall consume them. Then shal ye know that I am the Lorde, when I set my face against them, and make the hād waste: because they haue so sore offended, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The prophete intendynge to speake of the abhominacyons of Jerusalem: doth fyrste shewe the benefytes of God towarde it. Jerusalem is reproued of vnkyndenes, for her fornication with Idolles. He iustifyeth the wyckednesse of other people in comparison of the synnes of Jerusalem. The cause of the abhominacyons is to whiche the Sodomytes fell. Mercy is promysed. o the repentaunt.

CAPS. XVI.

A Sayne, the worde of the Lorde spake vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man shewe the cytye of Jerusalem their abhominacions, and saye: thus sayth the Lorde God vnto Jerusalem: Thy progeny and kynred came out of the lande of Canaan, thy father was an Amorite, thy mother a Hethite. In the daye of thy byrth when thou waste borne, the stringe of thy nauell was not cutte of: thou waste not bathed in water to make the clene: ye wast neither rubbed with salte, ne swadled in cloutes: No man regarded the so moche, as to do any of these thynges for the, or to shewe the suche fauoure, but thou wast vtterly caste out vpon the felde, for dispised was thou in the daye of thy byrth.

Then came I by the, and sawe the troden downe in thyne owne bloude, and sayd vnto the: thou shalte be purged from thyne owne bloude, from thyne owne bloude (I saye) that thou be clensed. So I plated the, as the blossome of the felde: thou arte growen vp, and waxen greate: thou hast gotten a maruelous pleasaunt beautye, thy brestes are come vp, thy heare is goodly growen, where as thou wast naked and bare afore.

Nowe when I went by the, and loked vpō the: beholde, thy tyme was come yea euen the tyme to powe the. Then spred I my clothes ouer the, to couer thy priuytie: yea I made an othe vnto the, and maryed my selfe with the (sayth the Lorde God) and so thou becamest myne owne. Then washed I the with water, and pourged thy bloude from the. I annoynted the with oyle, I gaue the chaunge of rayment, I made the shoes of Tarus leather: I gyrded the about with white silke, I clothed the with brouderie: I decked the with costly apparell. I put ringes vpon thy fyngers: a chayne about thy necke, spanges vpō thy foreheade, eare ringes vpon thine eares, and set a beautiful crowne vpon thyne heade. Thus waste thou decte with syluer and golde, and thy rayment was of fyne white silke, of needle worke and of diuerse colowres.

Thou diddest eate nothyng but fynnels, honye and oyle: maruelous goodly wast thou and beautyfull, yea euen a very Quene wast thou. In so moche, that thy beauty was spoke of amonge the heithen, for thou wast excellent in my beauty, wt which I put vpō the saith the Lorde God.

But thou haste put confydence in thyne owne beauty, and played the harlot, when thou haddest gotten the a name. Thou haste committed bordome, with all that wente by the, and hast fulfylled their desyres: yea thou haste taken thy garmentes of diuerse colours, and decked thyne aulters therwith, whereupon thou myghtest fulfyll thyne bordome, of suche a sorte, as neuer was done ne shall be. Thy goodly ornamētes & Jewels whiche I gaue the of myne owne golde and syluer, hast thou taken, and made the ymages therof, and committed bordome with all.

Thy garmentes of diuers colowres hast thou taken, and decked them therwith: myne oyle and incense hast thou sette before them.

My meate which I gaue the, as fynnels, oyle, and honye (to feede the withall) that hast thou set before them, for a swete sauoure. And this came also to passe, sayth the Lorde God: Thou haste taken thine owne sonnes and doughters, whom thou boddest begete vnto me: and these haste thou offered vp vnto them, to be their meat. Is this but a smal bordome of thyne (thinkest thou) that thou slayest my children, and gruest them ouer, to be dient vnto them? And yet in all thy abhominacions and bordome, thou hast not remembred the dayes of thy youth, how naked and bare thou wast at that tyme, and troden downe in thyne owne bloude. After all this thy wickednesse, (wo wo vnto the, sayth the Lorde) thou haste buylded thy stewes and brodel houses in euery place: yea at the hye stretes vtter hast thou buylded the as an aulter. Thou haste made thy beauty to be abhorred, thou haste layed out thy legges to euery one that came by, and multyplyed thine bordome. Thou hast committed fornication with the Egyptians thy neighbours, myghtie of flesshe and thus hast thou vexed me to bordome, to anger me.

Beholde, I will stretch out myne hande ouer the, and wyl mynyshe thy flocke of wode and delyuer the ouer vnto the wyllis of the Philistines thyne enemyes, which are ashamed of thy abhominable ways. Thou hast played the bore also with the Assirians, wt the myghte not satisfie the: Yea thou hast played the harlot, & not had ynough. Thus hast thou yet committed thy fornicacion frome the lande of Canaan vnto the Caldees, and yet thy lust not satisfied. How shall I circumcyse thine hert (saith the Lord God) seinge thou dost all these thynges, thou myghtyous boore: bycause thy stewes at the heade of euery strete, and thy brodell houses in all places?

Thou hast not ben as an other hoore, that maketh boste of her wynnynge, but as a wife that breaketh wedlocke, and taketh other in stede of her husbande. Vnto all other hores are gyuen gyftes, but thou gyuest rewardes vnto all thy louers, and offrest them gyftes, to come vnto the oute of all places, and to commyt fornication with the. It is come to passe with the in thy bordedomes contrary to the vse of other women: yea there hath no such fornication ben committed after the, seinge that thou proferest gyftes vnto other, and rewarde is gyuen the: thus is a contrary thynge.

Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde, O thou harlot, thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou hast spente thy money, and discouered thy shame, throughe thy bordome with al thy louers, and with all the abhominacions of thy children, whome thou hast gyuen them: Beholde therfore I wyll gather together all thy louers, vnto whome thou hast made thy selfe common: yea, and all them whom thou fauoured, and euery one that thou hatest: & will discouer thy shame before the, that they all maye se thy fylthynesse.

Moreouer, I wyll iudge the as a breaker of wedlocke and a murtherer, and recompence the thine owne bloude in wrathe and gelousy. I wyl gyue the ouer into their power, that shall breake downe thy stewes, and destroye thy brodell houses: they shall stripp the oute of thy clothes, all thy fayre and beautyfull Jewells shall they take from the, and so lefte the set naked and bare: yea they shall bryng the common people vpon the, which shal stone the, and slaye the wyne with their swerdes. They shall burne vp thy houses, and punysh the in the sight of many women. Thus wil I make thy bordome to ceasse, so that thou shalte gyue out no more rewardes.

Shulde I make my wrathe to be stylle, take my gelousye from the, be content, & no more be displeased: seinge thou remembrest not the dayes of thy youth, but hast prouoked me to wrathe in all these thynges? Beholde therfore, I wyll bringe thyne owne wayes vpon thyne head, sayth the Lorde God: how be it, I neuer dyd vnto the, accordyng to thy wickednesse and al thy abhominacyons. Be holde, all they that vse common prouerbes, shal vse this prouerbe also agaynst the: such a mother, suche a doughter.

Thou arte euen thy mothers owne dough ter, that hath caste of her husbande and her children. Yea thou arte the sister of thy sisters, which forsoke their husbandes and their children. Your mother is a Hethite, and your father an Amorite. Thine eldest sister is Samaria, she and her doughters that dwell vpō thy left hande.

But thy yōgest sister that dwelleth on thy right hande, is Sodoma and her doughters. Ye hast thou not walked after their wayes or done after their abhominacions: but in all thy wayes thou hast bene more corrupte then they. As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God: Sodoma thy sister with her doughters, hath not done so cursedly, as thou & thy doughters. Beholde, the synnes of thy sister Sodoma were these: Pryde, fulnes of meate, aboundaunce and idelnes: these thynges had she and her doughters. Besides that, they reached not their hand to the poore & nedy, but were proude, and dyd abhominable thynges before me: therfore them I toke away, when I had sene it. Neither hath Samaria done halfe of thy synnes, yea thou haste exceaded them in wyckednes: In so moche that in comparyson of all the abhominacions which thou hast done, thou haste made thy sisters seme women.

In lyke their captyuitye, namely the captyuitye of Sodoma and her doughters: the captyuitye of Samaria and her doughters: I wyll bringe them agayne, so wyll I also bringe agayne thy captyuitye amonge the:

that thou mayest take thyne owne confusyō vpon the, and be ashamed of all that thou hast done, and to comforte them. Thus thy sisters (namely) Sodoma and her doughters, Samaria and her doughters, with thy selfe and thy doughters, shall be brought agayne to your olde state.

When thou wast in thy pryde, and before thy wickednes came to the lyght: thou wolst not heare speake of thy sister Sodoma, vntyll the tyme that the Sirians with all their townes, & the Philistines with all that lye round about them, brought the to shame and confusyon: yt thou myghtest beare thyne owne sylenynes and abhominaciō, sayth the Lorde.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: I shulde (by right) deale with the, as thou hast done. Thou hast despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte. Neuertheles, I wyll remembre the couenaunte that I made with the in thy youth, in so moche that it shall be an euerlastynge couenaunt: so that thou also remembre thy wayes, and be ashamed of them: the shalt then receyue of me thy elder & yonger sisters, whom I wyll make thy doughters, & that beside thy couenaunt. And so I wyll re Jere.xxxi.c. Heoze. viii.b. nue my couenaunt with the, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lord: that thou maist remēbre it, be ashamed, and excuse thyne owne confusyon no more: when I haue forgeuen the, all that thou hast done, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The parable of the two Egles signifyeth that Sedechias, whiche contrarye to his othe had forsaken the frendshyp of Nabuchodonosor, turned himselfe to the kyng of Egypt, and therfore perished. In exposycyon of the parrable. ¶ prophecye of Christe.

CAPI. XVII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Thou sonne of man: put forth a darcke speakynge and a parable, vnto the house of Israel, and saye: Thus sayth the Lorde God: There came a greate Egle with greate wynges, yea with myghtye long wynges, & full of fethers of diuerse colours, vpon the mounte of Lybans, & toke away from a Cedre tree, and brake of the toppe of his twygge, and caryed it in to the lande of Canaan, and set it in a cytye of marchauntes. He toke also a braunche of the lande, & planted it in a frutefull grounde, he brought it vn to greate waters, and set it as a willye tree therby.

Then dyd it growe, and was a greate vine stocke, but lowe by the grounde: thus there came of it a vyne, and it brought forth blossomes, and spred out braunches.

But there was an other Egle, a greate one which had greate wynges and many fethers, and beholde, the rotes of this vyne hadde an hunger after him, and spred oute his braunches towarde him, to water his frutes. Nenertheles it was planted vpon a good grounde beside beside greate waters: so that (by reason) it A would have brought out braunches & fruite, & have bene a goodly tree. Speake thou therefore, thus saythe the Lorde God: Shall this tree prospere? Shall not his rotes be plucked out, his fruite be broken of, his grene braunches wither and fade away? yea without rither stronge arme or many people, shall it be plucked vp by the rotes. Beholde, it was plated: shall it prospere therfore. Shall it not be dryed vp and withered, yea rute in the sty tynge out of his blossomes, as soone as the B east wynde bloweth?

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came
vnto me sayinge: Speake to that fowarde houshalde: knowe ye not, what these thyn-ges do signifye? Tell them: Beholde, the kynge of Babylon came to Jerusalem, and toke the kyng and his princes, & led them to Babylon.

He toke of the kynges seed, and made a
C couenaunt with him, and toke an oth of him:
The Princes of the lande toke he with him
also, that the lande myght be holden in subiection, and not to rebell, but kepe the counaunt, and fulfyll it. But he fell from him, and sent his Embassadours into Egypt that he myght have horses and mocke people.
Shoulde that prospere? Shulde he be kepte safe, that doth suche thynges? Or shulde he escape, that breaketh his couenaunt? As tru-Couenaunt breakers. E lye as I lyue saith the Lorde God: the shal lye at Babylon, in the place where the king dwelleth, that made him kinge: whose othe
he hath despysed, and whose couenaunte he hath broken. Neither shall Pharao with his greate hoost and multytude of people, warr F eyne him in the warre: when they take vp rythes, and set vp bulwarkes to destroye moche people. For seinge he hathe despysed the othe, and broken the couenaunte (where as he yet gaue his hande thervpon) and done
all these thinges, he shall not escape.

G Therfore thus saythe the Lorde God: As truelye as I lyue, I wyll auenge myne othe that he hath despysed, and my couenaute that he hathe broken, vpon his owne heade. I wyll caste my net about him, and catche him Ezechie.xvii.d yeremi.d. in my parne. To Babylon will I carye him, there will I punyshe him, because of the great offence that he made me.

As for those that fle frome him out of the hoost, they shall be slayne with the swearde.
The residue shal be scattered towarde al the wyndes: and ye shall knowe, that I the Lorde haue spoken it.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will also H take a braunche frome an hyghe cedre tree,
and wyll set it, & take the vppermost twigge,
that yet is but tender, and plante it vpon an hye hyll: Namely, vpon the hye hyll of Sion wyll I wyl plant it: that it may bring forth swyggis, and grue frute, and be a greate Cedre tree: so that all maner of foules maye dwell in it: and make their nestes vnder the shadowe of his braunches.

And all the trees of the felde shall knowe that I the Lorde hath brought downe the hyghe tree, and set the lowe tree vpright: I haue dryed vp the grene tree, and made the dry tree to florysh: Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, haue also brought it to passe.

The sweth that every man shall beare his owne synne. To hym that amendeth is fauour ynough promysed. Deathe is prophecyed to the ryghtous which turneth backe from the ryght waye.

CAPI. XVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me on this maner: what meane ye by this comon prouerbe, that ye vse in the lande of Israel, sayinge: The fathers haue eaten sowre grapes, and the childrens teth are set on edge? As truely as I lyue saith the Lorde God, ye shall vse this by worde no more in Israel.

Beholde, all soules are myne. Lyke as the father is myne, so is the sonne myne also.
The soule that synneth, shall dye. If a man be godly, and do the thyng that is equall & ryght, he eateth not vpon the hylles: he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel:
he defyleth not his neyghbours wife: he ma-ryeth no wife: he greueth no body: he giueth his detter his pledge again: he taketh none other mans good by violence: he parteth his meate with the hy-grye, he clotheth the naked: he lendeth no-thynge vpon vsury, he taketh nothinge mo,
then he lent: he withdrawyth his hand from doing wrong:
he walketh in my commaundementes, and keepeth my lawes, & performeth them faithfully: This is a ryghtous man, he shal ver-ly lyue saith the Lorde God.

If he now get a sonne, that is a murthe-rer, a sheder of blonde: yf he do one of these thinges (though he do not all the rest) he eate hilles, he defyleth his neyghbours wife,
he greueth the poore and nedy, he robbeth
spoyleth, he giueth not the detter his pledge
again, he lyfteth vp his eyes vnto Idols, medleth with abhominable thinges, he taketh vpon vsury, & taketh more ouer. Shal this man lyue? he shall not lyue. Seinge he hath done all these abhominations, he shal dye his blonde shall be vpon him.

Nowe if this man get a sonne alle, that seeth all his fathers synnes, whiche he hath done: and feareth, maycheth hath suche lyke Namely, he eateth not vpon the mountaynes, he lyfteth not his eyes vp to the Idols of Israel, he defyleth not his neighbours wife,
he greeueth no man, he keepeth no mans pledge he neither spoyleth, ne robbeth any man, he dealeth his meate with the hungrye, he couereth the naked, he oppresseth not the poore, he receyueth no vsurye, ne any thinge mo, he keepeth my lawes, and walketh in my commaundementes. This man shall not dye for his fathers synne, but shall lyue without faile. As for his father: because he oppressed and spoyled his brother, and fed [illegible]
among his people: lo, he is dead in his owne synne. And yet say ye: Wherefore then shal not the sonne beare his fathers synne? Therfore: because the sonne hathe done equitye &
ryght, hath kept all my commaundements,
and done them: therfore shall he lyue in dede.
The same soule that synneth, shall dye. The sonne shall not beare the fathers offence, neither shal the father beare the sonnes offence.
The righteousnesse of the ryghtous shall be vpon him, and the wyckednes of the wicked shall be vpon him selfe also. But if the vngodly wyll turne away frome all his synnes that he hath done, and kepe all my comman-dementes, and do the thynge that is equall & ryght: doubtles he shal lyue, and not dye. As for all his sinnes that he did before, they shal
not be thought vpon: but in his righteousnes he hathe done, he shall lyue. For haue I any pleasure in the death of a synner, saythe the Lorde God: but rather that he conuert, and lyue?

Agayne: if the ryghtous turne awaye
from his righteousnes, and do iniquyte, ac-cordinge to all the abhominations, that the wycked man doth: shal he lyue? All the rygteousnes that he hath done, shal not be thought vpon, but in the faute that he hath offended withall, and in the synne that he hathe done,
he shall dye.

And yet ye saye: Tush, the waye of the Lorde is not indifferent. Here therfore ye house of Israel: Is not my waye ryghte? Or are not your wayes rather wicked? Wha a rygtous man turneth awaye from his righteous-nesse, and medleth with vngodlynes: he must dye therin: yea for the vnryghteousnesse that he hath done, muste he dye. Agayne: when the wycked man turneth awaye frome his wickednesse, that he hath done, and doth the thynge whiche is equall and ryght: he shall saue his soule alyue. For in so moch as he remembreth him selfe, and turneth him frome
all the vngodlynesse that he hath vsed, he shal
lyue and not dye.

And yet sayeth the house of Israel: Tush,
the waye of the Lorde is not equall. Are my wayes vnright, O ye house of Israel: Are not your wayes rather vnequall? As for me I will iudge euerye man, accordynge to his wayes, O ye house of Israell, sayeth the Lord God.

Wherfore be conuerted, and turne you frome from all youre wyckednesse, so shall there no synne do you harme. Caste awaye from you al youre vngodlynesse, that ye haue done: make you newe hertes and a new spi-rite. Wherfore wyll ye dye, O ye house of Israel? Seinge I haue no pleasure in the death of him that dyeth, sayeth the Lord God. Turne
you then, and ye shall lyue.

The captyuytye of Iechas and Joacin is signified by the lyons whelpes, and by the lyon. He foreseeth ouer the prosperytye of the cytye of Jerusalem that is past, and the myserye therof that is present.

CAPI. XIX.

BVt mourne thou for the princes of Is-
A racell, and saye: Wherfore laye thy mother that lyonesse amonge the lyons, & nosyshed her yonge amonge the yonge whelpes? One of her whelpes she brought vp, & it became a lyon: it learned to spoyle, and to de-youre folke. The heithen herde of him, and toke him in their nettes, and brought him in chaynes vnto the lande of Egypte.

Now when the damme sawe that, al her
B hope and comforte was away, she toke an other of her whelpes, and made a lyon of him:
whiche went amonge the lyons, and became a fearce lyon: learned to spoyle & to deuoure folke: he destroyed their palaces, and made their cytyes waste. In so moche that the hole lande and cuery thynge therin, were vtterlye desolate, throwe the beey voyce of his ro-synge.

Then came the heithen together on eue-
ry syde out of all countreyes agaynste hym, layed their nettes for him, and toke hym in their pitte. So they bounde him with chay-nes, and brought him to the kinge of Babylon: which put him in pyson, that his voyce shulde no more be herde vpon the mountaynes of Israel. As for thy mother, she is like a vine in thy bloude, planted by the water
syde: her frutes and braunches are growen
out of many waters, her stalkes were so strög
that men myght haue made staues therof
for offycers: she grewe so highe in her stal-
kes.

So when men sawe that she exceaded the C heyght and multytude of her braunches, she was rooted out in displeasure and cast do wne
to the grounde.

The east wynde dryed vp her frut, her strög
stalkes were broken of, wythered and drente in the fyre. But now she is plãted in the wil Oseę.xiii.d dernesse, in a dry and thurstie grounde. And there is a fyre gone out of her stalkes, which hath brent vp her braunches and her frute: so that she hath no mo strong stalkes, to be rules for officers. This is a piteous and miserable thynge.

¶ The Lorde denyeth that he wyll answere them
when they praye, for the offence of vnkyndenesse whiche he here obiecteth. He promyseth that his people shall returne from captyuytye. By the wode that shoulde be brent is signifyed the burnynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XX.

IN the .xbij. yeare the tenth daye of the .v.
monethe, it happened, that certayne of the elders of Israel came vnto me, for to aske
counsell at the Lorde, and sat them downe by me. Then came the worde of the Lorde vnto me on this maner: Thou sonne of mã:
speake vnto the elders of Israel, and say vnto them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Are ye come to aske any thinge at me? As truely as I lyue (sayeth the Lorde) I will geue you no answere. Wilt thou not reprove them(ꝑ Ezech.xiii. lonne of man) wilt thou not reprove them?

Shewe them the abhominacions of their fore fathers, and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when I chose Israel, and lyfte vp myne hande vpon the seede
of the house of Jacob, and shewed my selfe
vnto them in the lande of Egypte: Yea whē
I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them, and sayde
I am the Lorde your God, euen in the daye that I lyfte vp myne hand ouer them, to bring them out the lande of Egypte, in to a lande
that I had prouyded for them, which floweth
with milke and hony, and is a pleasaunt lād
Deut.viii.a amonge all other: Then sayd I vnto them:
Cast away euerye man the abhominacions that he hath before him, and defyle not your selues with the Idols of Egypte, for I am ꝑ Lorde your God.

B But they rebelled agaynste me, and wolde not folowe me: to cast away euery man the abhominacions of his eyes, and to forsake the Idolles of Egypte. Then I made me to poure my indignacion ouer them, and to accomplysshe my wrathe vpon them: yea euen in the mydest of the lande of Egypte. But I wolde not do it, for my names sake: that it shulde not be vnhalowed before the heethē, amonges whome they dwelt, and amonges whome I shewed my selfe vnto them that I wolde bringe them out of the land of Egypt.
Nowe when I had caryed them out of ꝑ lāde of Egypte, and brought them into the wyl-dernesse: I gaue them my commaundemen-Exod.xx.xxi. tes, and shewed them my lawes: which who & xxiii.m. so keepeth shall lyue in them. I gaue them al

Galath.iii.b and them, and thereby to knowe, that I am ꝑ Ezech.xxiii.a Lorde, whiche haloweth them.
xxxvi.c.xxxvii.c. And yet the house of Israel rebelled against me in the wyldernesse, they wolde not walk in my commaundementes, they haue cast away my lawes (which who so keepeth should Exod.xxxi.b lyue in them) and my Sabboth dayes haue Ezech.xx.b they greatly vnhalowed.

C Then I made me to power out my indig-nacion vpon them, and to consume them in the wyldernesse. Yet I wolde not do it, for my names sake: lest it shulde be dishonoured before the heethen, from the whiche I had caryed them away. But I swore vnto them in the wildernesse, that I wolde not bring the
into the lande, whiche I gaue them: a lande that floweth with mylke and hony, and is a pleasure of all landes: and that because they refused my lawes, and walked not in my commaundementes, but had vnhalowed my Sabbothes, for their herte was gone after their Idolles.

Neuertheles myne eye spared them, so that I wolde not vtterly slay them, and consume them in the wyldernesse. Moreouer, I sayde vnto their sonnes in the wyldernesse: walke
not in the statutes of your forefathers, kepe not their ordynaunces, and defyle not youre selues with their Idols, for I am the Lorde your God. But walke in my statutes, kepe my lawes & do them, halow my Sabboth, &
for they are a token betwixte me and you, ꝑ that ye maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Notwithstandynge, they sonnes rebelled Leuit.
against me also: they walked not in my sta- Ezech.
tutes they kept not my lawes to fulfyl them xxxvi.
(whiche he that doth shall lyue in them), neither halowed they my Sabboth dayes. Ꝺe
I made me agayne to poure oute my indignacion ouer them, and to satisfy my wrath vpō them in the wildernes. Neuertheles I with D drewe my hande for my names sake, lest it shulde be vnhalowed amonges the heethen,
before whome I had brought them forthe.
I lyfte vp myne hande ouer them also in the wyldernesse, that I wolde skatter them amōg
the heethen, and strowe them amonge the nacions: because they had not kepte my lawes, but cast away my commaundementes, vnhalowed my Sabothes, and lyfte vp their eyes to their fathers Idols.

Wherefore I gaue them also commaunde- Ezech.
mentes not good, & lawes thorow the which xx.
they shulde not lyue, & I vnhalowed them in their owne gyftes (when I appointed for my selfe all their fyrstborne) to make them desolate: that they myght knowe, how that I am
the Lorde.

Therfore (O thou sonne of man) tell the E
house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God:
Beside all this, youre forefathers haue yet blasphemed me more, and greatlye offended against me: For after I had brought them in to the lande, that I promysed to geue them, when they sawe euery hygh hill and all the thick trees: they made there their offringes, & prouoked me with their oblacions, in sauyng
swete sauoures there, and poured out there drinckofferinges. Then I asked them: what haue ye to do withal, that ye go thither? And therfore is it called the hygh place vnto this daye.

Wherefore, speake vnto the house of Israel: Thus sayth the Lorde God: ye are poluted as vnclene as your forefathers, and committe horedome also with their abhommacī-
ons. In all your Idols, wherevnto ye bringe your oblacions, & to whose honoure ye burne
your children: ye defyle your selues, euen
vnto this daye: howe darre ye then come, & Jerem.
aske any question at me? O ye housholde of Ezech.
Israel? As truelye as I lyue (sayth the Lord xx.
God) ye get no answere of me: and as for the thynge that ye go about, it shall not come to passe, where as ye say: we will be as the 1.Reg.viii.
heethen, and do as other people in the land,
wod and stone wyll we worshyp.

As truely as I lyue, sayth the Lorde God, F
I my selfe will rule you with a myghtye hand, with a stretched out arme, and with in-dignacion poured out ouer you: & will bryng you out of the nacions and landes, where ye are scattered: & gather you together with a myghtye hande, with a stretched oute arme
and with indignacion poured out vpon you & will bringe you into the wildernesse of the people. & there I will reason with you face to face. Like as I punished your forefathers
in

in the wyldernesse, so will I punysshe you al-sayth the Lorde God.

I will bringe you vnder my rod, & bryng you vnder the bonde of the couenaunt. The rebelles also and the transgressours will I cut from amonge you, and bryng them out of the lande of youre habitacyon: as for the lande of Israell, they shall not come in to it:
that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

Go nowe then (sayth the Lorde God) ye house of Israell, cast awaye and destroye e-uery man his ydole: then shall ye heare me, and no more blaspheme my holy name with your offringes and ydolles. But vpon my holy hill, euen vpon the hye hill of Israell saith the house of Israell and all that is in the lande, worshyp me: and in the same place will I fauour them, and there will I accepte your heaueofferynges, and the fyrstfrutes of youre oblacyons, with all youre holy thynges.

I will accepte youre swete sauoure,
when I bringe you frome the nacyons, and gather you together oute of the landes, where ye be scattered: that I maye be halowed in you before the heathen, and they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde, which haue brought you in to the lande of Israell: yea, in to the same lande that I swore to geue vnto youre forefathers.
Then shall ye calle to remembraunce youre
owne wayes, and all youre ymaginacyons, wherin ye haue bene defyled: and shall be displeased with youre owne sel-ues, for all youre wyckednesse which ye haue done.

And ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde,
when I intreate you after my name, not after youre wycked wayes, ne accordynge to your corrupte workes: O ye house of Israel,
sayth the Lorde.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came
vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, sette thy face towarde the Southe, and speake to the Southe wynde, and saye to the wodde towarde the Southe: Heare the worde of the Lorde, thus sayth the Lorde God: Be-holde, I will kyndle a fyre in the, that shall consume the grene trees with the dyre. No man shall be able to quenche his flame, but all that loketh from the South to the North shall be brente therin: and all flesche shall se that I the Lorde haue kyndled it, so that no man may quenche it. Then sayd I: O Lorde, they will saye of me: Tusche, they are but fables that he telleth.

The worde of the Lorde came to me, 21
sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face toward Jerusalem, speake against the Sanctuarye, and prophecye agaynste the lande of Israel, saye to the lande of Israell:
Thus sayth the Lorde God. Beholde I wil vpon the, and will drawe my swerde out of the sheathe, and rote out of the both the right-ous and the wicked. Seing then that I will rote out of the both the righteous and wicked therfore shall my swerde go out of his sheathe against all flesh from the north to the south:
that al flesh may knowe how that I the Lorde haue drawen my swerde out of the sheath, and it shall not be put in agayne.

Mourne therfore (O thou sonne of man) B
that thy loynes cracke withall: yea mourne bytterly for them: And yf they saye, wherfore mourneth thou? Then tell them: for the tydynges that commeth, at the whiche
all hertes shall melte, all handes shall be letten downe, all stomaches shall faynte, and all knees shall waxe feble. Beholde, it commeth, and shall be fulfylled, sayth the Lorde God.

Agayne, the worde of the Lorde came C
vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, proph-ecye and speake: Thus sayth the Lorde God: speake, the swerde is sharpened and well scoured. Sharpened is it for the slaughter, and scoured that it maye be bright. O, the destroyinge staffe of my sonne, shall bringe downe all wodde. He hath put his swerde to the dyghynge, that good holde may be taken of it. This swerde is sharpened and dyghte, that it maye be geuen in to the hande of the manslear.

Crye (O thou son of man) and howle, for D
this swerde shall smyte my people, and all the rulers in Israel, whiche with my people shal be slayne downe to the grounde thorow this swerde. Smyte thou vpon thy thyghe, for wherfore (shulde not the plage and staffe of iudgement come? Prophecy thou son of man and smyte thyne handes togyther: make the swerde two edged, yea make it thre edged, ꝑ manslears swerde, that swerde of the greate slaughter, whiche shall smyte them, euen m their pryuye chambres: to make them abas-shed and saynte at the gates, and in all gates to make some of them fall. O how bryght and sharpe is it? how well dyghte, and mete for the slaughter. Set the to some place alone either vpon the right hande or vpon the left, whyther so euer thy face tourneth. I will smyte my handes togyther also, and satisfye
my wrothfull indignacion. Euen I the Lorde haue sayd it.

The worde of the Lorde came yet vnto me E agayne, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make the two streetes, that the swerde of the kynge of Babylon maye come. Bothe these streetes shall goo oute of one lande. He shall set him vp a place, at the heade of the streete shall he chose him out a corner. Make the a streete, that thy swerde may come towarde Rabath of the Ammonites, and to the stronge cite of Jerusalem.

Ezech.xxi. (For he threatneth the swerde, that is to saye, destruction to the cytye of Jerusalem. He sheweth the fall of kynge Sedechias. He is commaunded to prophecy the destruction of the children of Ammon.
Then the slaughter of other, at the last the Lorde threatneth death vnto Nabuchodonozor kynge of

For the kynge of Babylon shall stande in the cowrsynge of the waye, at the heed of the two stretes to aske counsell at the sothesayers, castynge the lottes with his arowes to aske counsell at the ydolles, and to loke in the lyuer.

But the sothesayinge shall poynte to the ryght syde vpon Jerusalem, that he maye set men of warre to smyte it, with a great noyse to crye out alarum, to set battelleammes agaynst the gates, to graue vp ditches, and to make bull workes.

Neuertheles, as for the sothesayenge, they shall holde it but for vanite, euen as though a lesynge were told them: yea, and they theym selues remembre theyr wyckednesse, so that by ryghte they muste be taken and wonne. Therfore sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as ye youre selues shewe youre offence / and haue opened youre wyckednesse, so that in all youre workes men may se youre synnes: yea in so moche (I saye) that ye youre selues haue made mention therof, ye shall be taken by violence.

O thou shamefull wicked gyrde of Israel whose day is come / euen the tyme that wickednesse shall haue an ende. Thus sayth the Lorde God: take awaye the myter, and put of the crowne, and so is it awaye: the humble is exalted, and the proude brought low. Ruynsche, ruynsche / yea ruyn. Ye shew wyll I, and ouerthrow them: and that shal not be fulfylled vntyll he come, to whome the iudgement belongeth, and to whome I haue geuen it.

And thou (O sonne of man) prophecye and speake: Thus sayth the Lorde God to the children of Ammon, and to theyr blasphemye speake thou: Yee the swerde, the swerde is drawen for the slaughter, and scoured that it glysteren (because thou hast loked the out vanities, and prophecyed lyes) that it maye come vpon thy necke, lyke as vpon the other vngodlye, whose day came, when theyr wyckednesse was full.

Thoughe it were put vp agayne in to the sheathe / yet wyll I punysche the in the land where thou wast norysshed and borne, and powre my indignacyon vpon the, and wyll blow vpon the in the fyre of my wrath, and delyuer the vnto cruell people, whiche are learned to destroye. Thou shalte fede the fyre, and thy bloode shall be shedde in the lande, that thou mayste be put oute of remembraunce. Euen I the Lorde haue spoken it.

¶ The worde of the Lorde agaynst Jerusalem for manslaughter, and dyuersye due honour to theyr fathers and mothers, and other wyckednesses. Of the wycked doctryne of the false prophetes and prestes, and of theyr vnsaciable couetousnesse. The tyrannye of rulers. The vnhyndernesse of the people.

CAPL. XXII.

MOreouer the worde of the Lorde came vnto me and sayd: thou sonne of man, wylt thou not reproue this bloudthyrsty cytie? Shewe them their abhominacions and tell them: Thus sayth the Lorde God. O thou cytie that shedest blood in the myddes of the, that thy tyme may come also / and makest the ydolles to defyle the withall. Thou hast made thy selfe gylty in the bloode that thou hast shed: & defyled the in the ydolles, which thou hast made.

Thou hast caused thy dayes to drawe nye, & made ꝑ tyme of thy yeres to come. Therfore wyll I make the to be confounded among the heathen, and to be despysed in all the landes, whether they be nye or farre fromme the: they shall laugh the to scorne, thou that hast gotten the so foule a name, and arte full of myschiefe. Beholde, the rulers of Israel haue brought euery man his power, to shed bloud in the. In the haue they despysed father and mother, in the haue they oppressed the straunger, in the haue they vexed the wydowe and the fatherlesse. Thou hast despysed my Sanctuarye, and vnhalowed my Sabboth. Ouerthrowers are there in the, that shede blood, and eate vp the hylles, and in the they vse vnhappynesse.

In the haue they discouered theyr fathers shame, in the haue they vexed women in their syckenesse. Euery man hath dealte shamefully with his neighbours wife, and abhominably defiled his doughter in law. In the hath euery man forced his owne sister, euē his fathers doughter: yea gyftes haue ben receyued of to shede bloode. Thou hast taken vsurye and encrease, thou hast oppressed thy neyghbour by extorcion, and forgotten me, sayth the Lorde God.

Beholde, I haue smytten my handes vpon thy couetousnesse that thou hast vsed, and vpon the bloude whiche hathe ben shedde in the. Is thy herte able to endure it, or maye thy handes defende them selues in the tyme that I shall bringe vpon the? Euen I the Lorde that speake it, wyll bringe it to passe. I wyll scatter thy selfe among the heathen, and strowe the about in the landes, and wyll cause thy fylthynesse to cease out of the: yea and I wil haue the in possession in the sight of the heathen, that thou mayste knowe that I am the Lorde.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, the house of Israel is turned to drosse. All they that shall be drasse, tynne, yron, and leade are in the fyre become drosse. Therfore thus sayth the Lorde God: for so moche as ye all are turned in to drosse: beholde, I wyll bringe you together vnto Jerusalē lyke as syluer, brasse, yron, tynne, and leade are put together in the furnace, and the fyre blowen there vnder to melte them: Euen so wyll I gather you in my wrath and indignacyon, put you in together, and melte you in my wrath and indignacyon. I wyl bringe you together, and kyndle the fyre of my cruell displeasure vnder you, that ye maye be melted therin.

Lyke as the syluer is melted in the fyre, so shall ye also be melted therin: that ye maye know how that I the Lorde haue powred my wrath vpon you.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge. Thou sonne of man, tell her: Thou art a vncleane lande, whyche is not rayned vpon in the day of thy cruel wrath: the Prophetes that are in the, are lyke a roryng Lyon that rauyth by his pray.

They receyue rychesse and good, and make many wydowes in the. Thy prestes breake my law, and defyle my Sanctuary. They put no difference betwene ꝑ holy & vnholy, neither discerne betwene the clene and vncleane: they turne their eyes fro my Sabbothes, and I am vnhalowed amonge them. Thy rulers in the myddes are lyke rauenynge wolues to shede bloode, and to destroy soules for theyr owne couetous lucre. As for thy prophetes, they dawbe with vntempered clayre / they se vanities, and prophesyes vnto them, sayinge: the Lorde God hath so, where as the Lorde hathe not spoken. The people in the lande vse ryght violently and robbeye. They vexe the poore and nedy, and oppresse the straunger agaynst ryght.

And I soughte in the lande for a man that shulde make vp the hedge, and set him self in the gappe before me, in the landes behalfe, that I shulde not vtterly destroye it, but I coulde fynde none. Therfore wyll I powre out my cruel displeasure vpon them, and burne them in the fyre of my wrath: their owne wayes will I recompence vpon theyr heades, sayth the Lorde God.

Of the hypocrysye, meanynge the Idolatry of Samaria and Jerusalem: vnder the names of Oholah and Oholibah. In comparison of Samaria it setteth that the fornicacyon of Jerusalem is greuous. The destruction of Jerusalem is prophesyed. The auouterye of both the sores is found out. Theyr destruction.

CAPL. XXIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: thou sonne of man, there were two women ꝑ had one mother: These (when they were yonge) began to playe the harlottes in Egypte. There were theyr breastes hadd, and the pappes of theyr maydenhed destroyed. The eldest of them was called Oholah, and her youngest sister Oholibah. These two were myne, and bare sonnes and doughters, theyr names were Samaria, and that was Oholah: and Jerusalem that was Oholibah. As for Oholah, she began to goo a hoorynge, when I had taken her to me. She was set on fyre vpon her louers the Assirians, which had to do with her: euen the princes and Lordes that were dressed gaye: fayre yonge men, lusty ryders vpon horses.

Thus thorowe her hoordome, she cleaued vnto all the yonge men of Assiria: Yea, she was mad vpon them, and defiled her self with all their ydolles. Neyther ceased she from the fornycacion that she vsed with the Egyptians: for in her youthe they laye with her, they bruised the dyscles of her maydenhed, & poured their hoordome vpon her. Wherfore I delyuered her in to the handes of her louers, euen the Assirians whom she so loued. These discouered her shame, toke her sonnes and doughters, and slewe her with the swerde. And euyl name gat she of all people, and they punished her.

Her syster Oholibah sawe this, and destroyed her self with inordinate loue, more then she, and exceeded her sysster in hoordome, she loued the Assirians (whiche also lay with her) namely the princes and great lordes, that were clothed with al maner of gorgyous apparell, all-lusty horsemen, and fayre yong persones. Then I sawe that they both were defyled alyke.

But the increased syll in hoordome: for when she sawe men paynted vpon the walle, the ymages of the Caldees set forthe with reedlye colloures, with fayre gyrdles about theyr lendes, and goodly bonettes vpon theyr heades, lokynge all lyke Prynces (after the maner of the Babylonyans and Caldees in theyr owne lande, where they be borne) immediatlye as soone as she sawe them, she brente in loue vpon them, and sent messengers for them into the lande of the Caldees.

Now when the Babylonians came to her they laye with her, and defiled her with theyr hoordome, and so was she polluted with them. And when her lust was abated from them, her hoordome and shame was discouered and seue, then my herte forsoke her, lyke as my herte was gone from her syster also.

Neuertheles, she vsed her hoordome euer the lōger the more, and remembred the dayes of her youth, wherin she had played the harlot in the land of Egypt / she brent in lust vpō them, whose flesh was like the flesh of Asses, & their seed lyke the seed of horses. Thus thou hast renued the filthinesse of thy youth, when thy louers bruised thy pappes, & marred thy brestes in Egypte.

Therfore (O Oholibah) thus sayth the Lorde God. I will rayse vp thy louers (with whom thou hast satisfied thy lust) against the and gather them together rounde about the: namely the Babylonias, and all the Caldees: Pecod, Schoa and Coa, with al the Assirias, all yonge and fayre louers, princes and lordes, knyghtes, and gentylmen, whiche be all good horse men: these shall come vpon the with horses, charettes, and a great multitude of people, which shall be harnessed about the on euery syde, with brestplates, shelides and helmettes. I will punysche the before them, yea they them selues shall punysche the, accordyng to their owne iudgement. I will put my gelousy vpon the, so that they shall deale cruelly with the.

They shall cut of thy nose and thyne eares, and the remnaunt shall fall thorowe the sweorde. They shall carye awaye thy sonnes and doughters, and the residue shall be brent in the fyre. They shall stripe the oute of thy clothes, and carye thy costly iewelles awaye with them.

e Thus will I make an ende of thy fylthynesse and hoordome, which thou hast brought out of the lande of Egypt: that thou shalte nourne thyne eyes no moze after them, and call thy mynd no moze vpō Egypt. For thus sayth the Lorde: beholde, I will deliuer the in to the handes of them whom thou hatest: yea, euen in to the handes of them, with whome thou hast fulfylled thy lust, whiche shal dele cruelly with the. All thy labour shal they take with them, and leue the naked and bare, and thus the shame of thy fylthy hoordome shal come to light. All these thinges shal the? pcu vnto the, bycause of thy hoordome, and whiche thou hast died amonge the Gentyles with whole pooles thou hast defiled thy selfe. Thou haste walked in the waye of thy syster, therefore will I geue the her cup in thy hande.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: Thou shalte drynke of thy systers cuppe, hawe depe and large so cure it be to the botome. Thou shalt be laughed to scorne, and hadde as greatlye in derysion, as is possible. Thou shalte be full of dronkennesse and sorowe, for the cup of thy syster Samaria, is a cuppe of destruction and wastynge: the same shalte thou drynke and suppe it oute, euen to the dregges: and thou shalte eate vp the broken peces of it, and to teare thyne owne dressed: For euen I haue spoken it sayth the Lorde God.

f Therefore thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as thou hast forgotten me, and cast me all de, so beare nowe thyne owne fylthynesse and hoordome.

The Lorde sayd moreouer vnto me: thou sonne of man, wylte thou not reprouе Oholah, and Oholibah? Shewe them their abominations: namely that they haue broken their wedlocke, and stained their handes with bloode: yea euen with their idols haue they committed aduoutrye, and offred them their owne children (to be deuoured) whome they had borne vnto me.

Ezech.xvi.a Yea, and this haue they done vnto me also: they haue defyled my Sanctuarye, in that same daye, and haue vnhalowed my Sabboth. For when they had slayne their children for their idolles, they came the same daye in to my Sanctuary to defyle it. Lo, this haue they done in my house.

Besyde all this, thou hast sente thy messengers for men oute of farre countreys: and when they came, thou hast bathed, trymmed and set forthe thy selfe of the beste facion: thou sattest vpon a goodly bed, and a table spred before the, wherevpō thou hast set myne incense and myne oyle.

Gen.xxxv. G Then was there great chere with her, and the men that were sent from farre countreys heare thou the boonts together, kyndle thou the fyre, sethe the fleshe, let all be well sodden, that the bones maye be suckte oute. Moreouer set the potte emptye vpon the coles, that it maye be warme, and the metall hote, that the fylthe and rustynesse maye be consumed.

p But it will not goo of, there is so moche of it: the rustynesse must be brent oute. Thy fylthynesse is abhominable, for I wold haue clensed the, but thou wouldest not be clensed. Thou canst not be pourged fromе thyne vncleannesse, tyll I haue poured my wrothfull indignacion vpon the. Euen I the Lorde haue so decreed: Yea, it is come vnto effecte that I will do it. I will not go backe I will not spare, I will not be intreated: but accordynge to thy wayes and ymaginacyons, thou shalte be punyshed sayth the Lorde God.

q And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me saynge: Thou sonne of man, beholde, I will take awaye of the pleasure of thyne eyes with a plage: yet shalte thou neyther mourne nor weepe, ne water thy chekes therfore: but mayst mourne by thy selfe alone: but vse no tredly lamentacion. Holde on thy bonet, and put on thy shoes vpon thy feete, couer not thy face, and eate no mourners breed.

So I spake vnto the people dayly in the morynge, and at euen my wyfe dyed: then vpon the nexte morowe I dyd as I was commaunded. And the people said vnto me: wilt thou not tell vs what that signifieth whiche thou doest?

r I answered them, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: Tell the house of Israel, thus sayth the Lorde God: beholde, I will suspende my Sanctuarye: euen the glorye of your power, the pleasure of your eyes, and the thyng that ye loue: your sonnes and doughters whom ye haue left, shall fall thorowe the sweorde.

Like as I haue done, so shall ye doo also: Ye shall not hyde youre facce, ye shall eate no mourners breed: youre bonnettes shall ye haue vpon your heedes, and shoes vpon your fete.

s Ye shall neyther mourne nor wepe, but in your synnes ye shall be sorowfull, and one repente with an other. Thus Ezechiel is your shewe token. For loke as he hath done so (when this commeth) ye shall doo also: that ye maye lerne to knowe, that I am the Lorde God.

But beholde, O thou sonne of man: In the daye when I take fromе theym their power, their ioye and honoure, the lust of their eyes, the burthen of their bodyes: namely their sonnes and doughters. Then shall there one escape, and come vnto the, for to shewe the. In that daye shall thy mouthe be opened to him whiche is escaped, that thou maylte speake, and be no more domme: yea, and thou shalte be their shewe token, that they may knowe howe that I am the Lorde.

¶ The worde of the Lorde vpon the sonnes of Ammon, whiche reioyced at the fall of Ierusalem. Against Moab and Seir. Against Idumea. Against the Philistynes.

CAPI. XXV.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, saying: thou sonne of man, set thy face against the Ammonites: Prophecye vpon them, and saye vnto the Ammonites: heare the worde of the Lorde God. Thus sayth the Lorde God. For so moche as thou spraktest ouer my Sanctuarye, A ha, I trowe it be nowe suspended: and ouer the lande of Israel, I trowe it be nowe desolate, yea and ouer the house of Juda, I trowe they be nowe ledde awaye prysoners. Beholde, I will deliuer the to the people of the East, that they maye haue the in possession: these shall sette their castles and houses in the. They shall eate thy frute, and drynke vp thy mylke. As for Rabath, I will make of it a stall for camelles, and of Ammon a shepe folde: and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Ezech.xxi.d Jere.xlix.a

For thus sayth the Lorde God: In so moche as thou hast clapped with thyne handes, and stamped with thy fete, yea reioyced in thyne herte ouer the lande of Israel with despyte: beholde, I will stretche oute myne hand ouer the also, and deliuer the to be spoyled of the Heathen, and rote the oute from among the people, and cause the to be destroyed oute of all landes, yea I will make the be layd waste, that thou mayst knowe that I am the Lorde.

Esay.xvi.d Esay.xlvi.a Zephon.ii.b

Thus sayth the Lorde God: For so moche as Moab and Seir do saye: As for the house of Juda, it is but lyke as all other Gentiles be. Therefore beholde, I will make the cities of Moab weaponlesse, and shall take awaye their strengthe: their citeyes and cheefe townes of their lande, which are the pleasures of the countrey: as namely Bethiesimoth, Baalmeon, and Cariathaim: these will I open vnto them of the East, that they maye fall vpon the Ammonites: and will geue it them in possession, so that the Ammonites shal no moze be hadde in remembraunce amonge the Heathen. Euen thus will I punyshe Moab also, that they maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

Esay.xxxiiii.a Jerem.xlix.b Ezech.xxxv.c xxv.a. Hiere.xvii.b Gene.xxv.a

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: Bicause that Edom hath auenged and eased him selfe vpon the house of Juda, therfore thus sayth the Lorde: I will reache out mine hand vpon Edom, and take awaye man and beast out of it.

From Theman vnto Dedan will I make it desolate, they shal be slayne with the sweorde. Thorowe my people of Israell will I auenge me agayn vpon Edom: they shal handle him accordyng to my wrath and indignacion, so that they shall knowe my vengeaunce, sayth the Lorde God.

1.Macha.v.a

Thus sayth the Lord God: For so moche as the Philistines haue done this: namely taken vengeaunce with dispytefull stomackes, and of en elte cupll wyll set them selues to destroye. Therefore thus sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll stretche oute myne hande ouer the Philistines, and destroy the destroyers, and cause all the remnaunt of the see coste to perysshe. A greate vengeaunce wyll I take vpon them, and punysshe them cruellye: that they maye knowe howe that I am the Lorde, whiche haue auenged me of them.

The prophecyeth that Tyrus shall be ouerthrowen, bycause it reioyced at the destruction of Jerusalem. The wonderynge and astonyshment of the marchantes, for the desolacyon of Tyrus.

CAPI. XXVI.

IThappened that in the. xi. yere, the fyrste daye of the moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, bycause that Tyre hath spoken vpon Jerusalem: A ha, now I trowe the portes of the people be broken, and the turned vnto me, for I haue destroyed my dely cull.

Yea, therfore sayethe the Lorde God: Beholde, O Tyre, I wyll vpon the, I wyll bryng a great multytude of people agaynste the, lyke as whea the see aryseth with his wauis: Theie shall breake the walles of Tyre, and caste downe her towres: I wyll scrape the grounde fromt hee, and make her a bare stone: yea as the dryinge place where the fyshers hange vp the nettes by the see syde. Euen I haue spoken it, sayethe the Lorde God. The Gentiles shal spoyle her/her wughters vpon the felde, shall perysshe with the sworde, that they may knowe how that I am the Lorde.

For thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I wyll bryng vnther Nabuchodonosor (whiche is the kynge of Babylon, and a kynge of kynges) from the North vpon Tyre, with horses, charettes, horsmen, and with a greate multitude of people. Thy doughters that are in the land, shal be slee with the sworde: but agaynste the he shall make bulwerkes, and graue vp dyches aboute the, and lyfte vp his shylde agaynste the. His kynges and battell rammes shall be prepare for thy walles, and with his weapons breake downe thy towres. The dust of his horses shall couer the, they shall be so many, thy walles shall shake at the noyse of the horsemen, charettes, and wheles, when he commeth to thy portes, as men doo in to an open citye. With the hoofes of his horse fete, shall he treade downe al thy strietes.

He shall slee thy people with the sworde, & breake downe the pylleres of thy strengthe. They shall waste awaye thy rychesse, and spoyle thy marchaundyse. Thy walles shall they breake downe, and destroye thy houses of pleasure. Thy stones, thy tymbre and youre earthen shall they caste in the water. Thus wyll I barynge the melodye of thy songes, & the voyce of thy mynstrelsye to an ende, so that they shall no more be herde. I will make a bare stone of the / yea a dryinge place for nettes, and shalt neuer be buylded agayne: For euen I the Lorde haue spoken it, sayethe the Lorde God: thus sayethe the Lorde God spoken concernynge Tyre. The Iles shall be moued at the noyse of thy fall, and at the cry of the slayne that shall be murthered in the. All kynges of the see shall come downe from their seates regall: they shall laye awaye theyr robes, and put of their costly clothyng: Yea with tremblynge shall they be clothed, they shall sye vpon the grounde: they shall be afrayde at thy sodeyn fall, and be abasshed at the.

They shall mourne for the, and saye vnto the: O thou noble city that hast ben so greatly occupyed of olde, thou that hast ben the stronge vpon the see with thyne inhabitaūtes, of whom all men stode in feare: how art thou now so vtterly destroyed? Nowe at the tyme of thy fall the inhabitaūtes of theyles / yea and the yles them selues shall stand in feare at thyne ende.

For thus sayethe the Lorde God: when I make the a desolate citye (as other cities be, that no man dwell in) and when I bring the depe vpon the, that greate waters may couer the: Then wyll I cause the downe vnto them that descende in to the pytte: vnto a people that hath ben longe dead, and set the in a lande that is benethe, lyke the olde wyldernesse, with them which go downe to their graues, so that no man shall dwell more in the. And I wyll make the to be no more honoure in the lande of the lyuynge. I wyll make an ende of the, and thou shalt be gone. Thoughe thou be sought for, yet shalte thou not be founde for euermore, sayeth the Lorde God.

The Prophete is moued to bewayle the desolacyon of Tyrus. He setteth out the playte of Tyrus for the haauntyng of marchaunte therto.

CAPI. XXVII

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: O thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynt vpon Tyre, and saye vpon Tyre, whiche is a porte of the see, that occupieth with moche people and many yles: Thus speaketh the Lorde God. O Tyre, thou hast sayde: What, I am a noble citye: Thy borders are in the myddest of the see, and thy buylders haue made the meruayllous goodlye, all thy tables haue they made of Cypre trees of the mount of Sanir. From Libanus haue they take Cedre trees to make the maste: and the okes of Basan to make the rowers.

Thy bordes haue they made of yuory, and of costly wod out of the yle of Cethim. Thy sayle was of wrought smal nedle worke out of the lande of Egypte, to hange vpon thy maste: and thy hangynges of pelowe sylke purple, oute of the yles of Elisah.

The

They of Sidon and Arnad were thy mayners, and the wisest in Tyre were thy shipmaysters. The eldest & wysest at Gebal were they, that mended and stopped thy shyppes. All shyppes of the see with their shypmen occupyed their marchaūdyses in the. The Persis, Libians, and Libias, were in thyne host, & dyped & to fight: these hāged vp their shelde and helmettes with the, these sette forth thy brauye. They of Arnad were with thyne host round aboute thy walles, and were thy watchmen vpon thy towres, these hanged vp their shildes round about thy walles, and made the meruelous goodly. Tharsis occupyed with the in all maner of wares, in syluer, yron, tynne, and leade, and made thy market greate. Jauan, Tubal, and Mesech were thy marchauntes, which brought the men & emauncetes of metall for thy occupynge.

They of the house of Thogarma brought vnto the at the tyme of thy marte, horse, horsmen and mules.

They of Sedan were thy marchauntes: & many other Iles that occupyed with the, brought the wethers, Elephant bones and Paynctes for a present. The Syrians occupyed with the, because of thy diuers wozkes, and increased thy marchaundyse, with Hmagades, with scarlet, with nedle wozke, with white lynen cloth, with sylcke & with Chrysall.

Jude and the land of Israel occupyed with the, and brought vnto thy marketes, wheat balme, hony, oyle, and treacle, Damascus also vsed marchaundyse with the, in the best wyne and white woll: because thy occupynge was so great, and thy wares so manye. Dan, Jauan, & Meusal haue brought vnto thy marketes, yron redy made, with Casia & Calamus, accordynge to thyne occupynge. Dedan occupyed with the, in sayre tapestrye worke and quyssbyns. Arabia and al the princes of Cedar haue occupyed with the, in shepe, wethers and gootes.

The marchauntes of Seba and Rema haue occupyed also with the, in al costly spyces all precious stones and golde, whiche they brought vnto thy marketes. Haran, Chene and Eden, the marchauntes of Saba, Assur and Chelmad, were all doers with the, occupyed with the: in costly rayment, of perfume spyke and nedle worke (deep precious & therfore packte and bounde togyther with ropes) Yea and in Cedre wod, at the time of thy marketes. The shyppes of Tharsis were the chiefe of thy occupynge.

Thus thus thou arte full, and in worshypp in the myddest of the see. Thy maryners brought the vp vnto the oute of many waters. But the east wynde shall ouerbeate the into the myddest of the see: so that thy wares, thy marchaundyse, thy tryches, thy mariners thy shypmaysters, thy helpers, thy occupyers (that brought the thynges necessary) the men of warre that are in the, yea and all thy comens shall perysshe in the myddest of the see in the daye of thy fall.

The suburbes shall shake at the loude cry of thy shypmen. All thy men, and all maryners vpon the see, shall leape oute of their bootes, and set them selues vpon the lande. They shall syste vp their voyce bycause of the, and make a lamentable cry. They shall caste dust vpon their heades, and lye downe in the asshes. They shal shaue them selues, and put sacke cloth vpon them for thy sake.

They shall mourne for the with heetfull sorow, and heuye lamentacion, yea their children also shall wepe for the. Alas, what eyle hath so bene destroyed in the see, as Tyre is? When thy wares and marchaundyse came from the sees, thou gauest al people ynough. The kynges of the erth hast thou made rich, thorow the multytude of thy wares and occupynge.

But thou arte nowe cast downe into the depe of the see, all thy resorte of people is perished with the. All they that dwell in the Iles are abasshed at the, and all their kynges are afrayed, yea their faces haue chaunged colour. The marchauntes of the nacios wondre at the. In that thou art so cleane brought to nought, and cōmest no more vp.

The worde of God agaynst the kynge of Tyrus for his pryde. Daniel. The Prophete is moued to bewayle the kynge of Tyrus. The worde of the Lorde agaynst Sydon. The Lorde promyseth to gather togyther the chyldren of Israel.

CAPI. XXVIII.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, tell the prince of Tyre. Thus sayeth the Lorde God: because thou hast a proude herte and hast sayde: I am a God, I haue my seate in the myddest of the see like a God: where as thou art but a man and not God, and yet sāyest in thine owne conceyt, þ thou art God: Behold, thou thinkest thy selfe wyser then Daniel, that there is no secretes hyd fro me the

With thy wysdome and thy vnderstandynge, thou hast gotten the great welthines and gathered treasure of syluer and golde: With thy greate wysdome and occupynge hast thou increased thy power, and because of thy greate ryches, thy herte is proude.

Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: For so moch as thou hast lyfte vp thyne herte, as though thou were God behold, I wyl bryng enemyes vpon the, euen the tyraunes of þ heithen: these shall drawe out their swerdes vpon thy beautye and wysdome, and shal defyle thy glory.

They shall cast the downe to the pytte, so that thou shalte dye in the myddest of the see as they that be slayne.

Let se, yf thou wilte say then (before them that slaye the) I am God: where as thou art but a man & not God, in the handes of them that slaye the.

Dye shalt thou, euen as the vncircumcysed in the handes of the enemyes: for I my selfe haue spoken it: sayeth the Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, make a lamentable complaynte ouer the kynge of Tyre, and tell him: Thus sayethe the Lorde God: Thou art a seale of a lykenesse, full of wysdome and excellent beautye. Thou hast bene in the pleasaunt garden of God: thou art dect with all manir of precyous stones: with Rubye, Topas, Christal, Jacynct, Onix, Jaspis, Saphir, Smaragde, Carbuncle, and golde. Thy beautye and the holes that be in the were set forthe in the daye of thy creacion. Thou art a fayre Cherub, stretched wyde out for to couer.

I have set the vpon the holy mounte of God, there hast thou bene, & walked amonge the fayre glysterynge stones. From the tyme of thy creacion thou hast ben ryght excellit, till wickednesse was founde in the. Because of thy greate marchaundyse, thy herte is full of wyckednes, and thou hast offended. Therfore will I cast the from the mount of God (O thou couerynge Cherub) and destroye the amonge the glysterynge stones. Thy herte was proude in thy fayre beautye, and therow thy beauty thou hast destroyed thy wisdome, I will caste the downe to the grounde, & that in the syghte of kynges.

Thou hast defyled thy Sanctuary, with the greate wickednesse of thy vnrighteous occupyenge. I will bringe a fyre from the middest of the, to consume the: and will make the to ashes, in the syght of all the that loke vpon the. All they that have bene acquyented with the amonges the Heithen, shall be abashed at the: seinge thou arte so cleane brought to nought, and commest no more vp.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, set thy face agaynste Sidon.

Prophecye vpon it, and speake. Thus saith the Lorde God: Beholde O Sidon, I will vpon the, and get me honoure in the: that it maye be knowen, howe that I am the Lorde when I punyshe her, and get me honoure in her. For I will sende pestylence and bloude sheddyng into her streates, so that thase which be slayne with the swearde, shal lye rounde about in the myddest of her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde. She shall no more be a prickinge thorne, and an hurtynge briere vnto the house of Israel, ne vnto them that lye rounde about her and hate her: and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde God: when I gather the householde of Israel togyther againe from the nations among whome they be scattered: then shal I be sanctified in them, in the syght of the Gentyles, and they shall dwell in ℔ land, that I gaue to my seruaūte Jacob. They shall dwell safely therin, buylde houses and plante vynyardes: yea safelye shall they dwell therin, when I have punyshed all thase that despyse them rounde about: and then shall they knowe, that I am the Lorde their God.

The prophecyeth agaynst Pharao. He prophecyeth the desolation of Egypt, and the scatteringe abrode of the Egyptians. The Lorde promyseth that he will restore Egypt agayne after forty yeares. Egypt is therewarde of kynge Nabuchodonosor for his labour which he toke agaynst Tyrus.

CAPI. XXIX.

In the tenth yere vpon the twelueth daye of the tenth moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: O thou sonne of man, set nowe thy face agaynste Pharao the kynge of Egypte, prophecye agaynste him, & agaynste the hole lande of Egypte: Speake and tell him, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, O Pharao thou kinge of Egypte, I will vpon the, thou greate dragon, that lyest in the waters: thou that sayest: the water is mine. I have made it my selfe. I will put an hooke in thy chawes, and hange all the fysshe in thy waters vpon thy skales: after that I have pull drawe the oute of thy waters: Yea and all the fysshe of thy waters that hange vpon thy skales. I will caste the oute vpon the dry land with the fysshe of thy waters, so that thou shalte lye vpon the felde. Thou shalte not be gathered ne taken vp: but shalt be meate for the beastes of the felde, and for the foules of the ayre: that all they whiche dwell in Egypte, maye knowe, that I am the Lorde: because thou hast bene a staffe of reede to the house of Israel. Whē they took holde of the with their handes thou brakest, & pyrcedst them on euery syde: and when they leaned vpon the, thou brakest and hurtest the myne eynes of their backes. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: beholde, I will bringe a swearde vpon the, and rote out of the both man and beaste. Yea the lande of Egypt shal be desolate and waste, and they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde: Because he sayde: ℔ water is myne, I my selfe have made it: Beholde therfore, I will vpon the, and vpon thy waters: I will make the lande of Egypte waste and desolate, from the towre of Syene, vnto the borders of the Morians lande so that in.xl. yeres there shal no foote of man walke there, neither foote of cattell goo there, neither shall it be inhabyted. I will make the lande of Egypte to be desolate, amonges other waste countreyes, and her cyties to lye waste.xl. yeres, amōg other desolate cyties: And I will scatre the Egyptians amōg the heithen and nations.

Againe, thus sayeth the Lorde God: When the.xl. yeres are expired, I will gather the Egyptians to gyther agayne, out of the nations, amonges whome they were scatred, & will bringe the prisoners of Egypt agayne into the lande of Pathures their owne natyue countrey, that they may be there a lowly small kingome: yea they shal be the smallest amonge other kyngdomes: lest they exalte them selues above the Heithen: for I will so mynisshe them that they shal no more rule the Heithen.

They shall no more be an hope vnto the house of Israel, neither prouoke them anye more more to wickednes, so cause the turne backe and to folowe them: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde God.

In the.xxvij. yere, the first daye of the first moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon hath made his hoste, with greate trauaple and laboure to come before Tyre: that euery heed maye be balde, and euery shoulder bare. Yet hathe Tyre gotten neither him ne his hoost any reward, for the greate trauaple that he hath taken there.

Therfore thus sayethe the Lorde God: beholde I will gyue the lande of Egypt vnto Nabuchonosor the king of Babylon, that he may take away all her substaunce, rob her robberyes, and spoyle her spoyles, to pay his hoste their wages withal. I will gyue him the lāde of Egypt for his labour, that he toke for me before Tyre.

At the same tyme will I cause the horne of the house of Israel to growe forthe, and open thy mouth agayne amonge them: that they maye knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

The destruction of Egypte and of his cytyes is shewed.

CAPI. XXX.

The worde of the Lord came moreouer vnto me, sayinge: Sonne of man, prophecye and speake: thus sayethe the Lorde God: Mourne, wo worth this daye, for the daye is here, the daye of the Lorde is come: the darcke daye of the Heithen, the time is at hande, the swearde commeth vpon Egypte.

With ℔ wailed shal downe in Egypte, whē her people are taken away, & when her foundations are destroyed, the Morians lāde shall be shaked, yea the morians lande, Libia and Lidia, all their common people, and Chub, all that be confederate vnto theym, shall fall with them therowe the swearde.

Thus sayeth the Lorde: the mayntenyers of the lande of Egypte shall fal, the pryde of her power shall come downe: euen vnto the towre of Syenes shall they be slayne downe with the swearde, sayeth the Lorde God: & amonge other desolate countreyes they shall be made desolate, and amonge other waste cyties they shall be wasted. And they shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, when I kyndle a fyre in Egypte, and when all her helpers are destroyed.

At that tyme, shall their messengers goo forth for me in shyppes, to make the careliesse Morians afrayed, and sorow shall come vpō them in the daye of Egypte for doubtlesse it shall come.

Thus sayeth the Lord God: I will make an ende of the people of Egypte therow the hande of Nabuchodonosor kyng of Babylō. & his people with him, yea and the cruel cyties of the Heithen shalbe brought to destroye the lande.

They shall drawe out their swearde vpō Egypte and fyll the lande full of slayne me. I will drye vp their foudes of waters, and sell the lande into the handes of wicked people. The lande and all that is therin, will I destroye therow the ennemyes. Euen I the Lorde have sayde it.

And thus sayeth the Lorde God: I will destroye the Idolles, and bringe the ymages of Noph to an ende. There shall no more be a prince of Egypte, and a fearfulnesse will I sende in to ℔ Egiptians land. As for Pathures, I wil make it desolate, and kyndle a fyre in Zoan. Alexandria will I punyshe, and poure my wrothfull indignacion vpon Sin whiche is the strength of Egypte. All the substaunce of Alexandria will I destroye, and kyndle a fyre in Egypte.

Sin shall be in greate heynesse, Alexandria shall be rored out, and Noph shall have dayly sorowe. The yeall men of Heliopolis and Bubasto shall be slayne with the swerd, and carryed awaye captyue. At Taphnis the daye shall be darke, when I breake there the septer of the lande of Egypte, and when the pompe of her power shall have an ende. A cloude shal couer her and her doughters shal be led awaye into captyuyte. Thus will I punyshe Egypt, that they may knowe, how that I am the Lorde.

It happened in the.xi. yeare, vpō ℔ seuenth daye of the fyrste moneth, that the Lordes worde came vnto me, sayinge: Beholde thou sonne of man, I wyl breake the arme of Pharao kynge of Egypte: and lo it shall not be bound vp to be healed, neither shal any playster be layde vpon it, for to ease it, or to make it so strong, as to holde a swearde. Therfore, thus sayeth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will vpon Pharao the kynge of Egypt, and breke his stronge arme (yet is it but a broken one) and will smyte the swearde out of his hand.

As for the Egyptians, I will scatre theym among the Heithen, and strow them in ℔ landes aboute. Agayne I will strength the arme of the kyng of Babylō, & giue him my swerd in his hād: but I will breake Pharaos arme so that he shall holde it before him piteously lyke a wounded man.

Yea I will stablyshe the kynge of Babylons arme: and the armes of Pharao shall fal downe: that it maye be knowen, that I am the Lorde, which gyue the kynge of Babylon my swearde in his hande, that he maye drawe it oute vpon the lande of Egypte: & that when I scatre the Egyptians amonge the Gentyles, and strowe them in the landes aboute, they maye knowe, that I am the Lorde.

A comparyson of the prosperitye of Pharao, with the prosperitye of the Assyrians. He prophecyeth a lyke destruction vnto them bothe.

CAPI. XXXI.

Moreouer

a MOreouer, it happened in the. xi. yeare the fyfte daye of the thirde moneth that the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man speake vnto Pharao the kinge of Egypte, and to all his people: Whō art thou lyke in thy greatnesse: Beholde Assur was lyke a Cedre tree Ezech.xxxi.c vpon the mount of Lybanus with fayre braūches: so thicke, that he gaue shadowes and shot out deep bygde. His toppe reached vnto the cloudes. The waters made him greate, & the depe set him vp an bygde. Rounde about the rootes of him ranne there floudes of water he sente oute his lytle rywers vnto all ꝑ b trees of the felde. Therfore was he bygger then all the trees of the felde, and thorowe ꝑ multytude of waters that he sent from him he optayned many longe braunches. All fowles of the ayre made their nestes in his braunches, vnder his bowes gendred all their beastes of the felde, and vnder his shadow dwelt all people. Fayre and beautyfull was he in his greatnesse and in the length of his braunches, for his rote stode beside greate waters. c No Cedre tree myght hym him. In the pleasaunt garden of God, there was no fyrre tre lyke his braūches, the playne trees were not like the bowes of him. All the trees in the garden of God might not be compared vnto him in his beauty. Is fayre and goodlye had I made him with the multytude of his braunches: In so moche that all the trees in the pleasaunt garden of God, had enuye at him. d Therfore thus sayth the God: for so moche as he hathe lyfte vp him selfe so bygge and stretched his top into the cloudes, and setinge his herte is proude in his bygnesse: I will delyuer him in to the handes of the myghtye of amonges the heythen, whiche shall rote him out. Accordinge to his wyckednesse will I cast him awaye, the enemyes shal destroy him, and the myghtye men of the Heythen shall so scatter him that his braunches shall lye vpon all mountaynes and in al valleyes, his bowes shall be broken downe to the grounde thorow out the lande. Then all the people of the lande shal go from his shadow and forsake him. When he is fallen, all the e foules of the ayre shall syt vpon him, and all wylde beastes of the felde shall go about amonges his braunches: so that frome hence forthe, no tree in the water shall attayne to his bygnes, nor reache his toppe vnto the cloudes, neither shall any tree of the water stande so bygge, as he hath done. For vnto death shall they all be delyuered vnder the earth, and go downe to the graue, lyke other men.

f MOreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: In the daye when he goeth downe to the graue I will cause a lamentacion to be made, I wyl couer the depe vpon him, I will staunche his floudes, and the greate waters shal be restrayned. I shall cause Libanus to be sorow full for his sake, and all the trees of the felde shall be smytten.

Ezech.xxxi.e Ezech.xxxii.c I wyl make the heythen shake at the sound of his fall, when I cast him downe to hell, with them that descende in to the pytte. All g the trees of Eden, withal the chosen and best trees of Libanus, yea and all they that are planted vpon the waters, shal mourne with him also in the lower habytacyons: for they shall go downe to hell with him, vnto them that be slayne with the swerde, which dwelt afore vnder the shadowe of his arme among the heythen. To whom shalte thou be lyke? thou art so glorious and great, amonge the trees of Eden? yet art thou cast downe vnder ꝑ erth (amonges the trees of Eden) wher thou must lye amonges vncircumcysed, with them that be slayne with the swearde. Euen thus is it with Pharao and all his people, sayth the Lorde God.

¶ The Prophete is cōmaunded to bewayle Pharao. He prophecyeth that destruction shall come vnto Egypt styrringhe the kynge of Babylon.

CAPI. XXXII.

IN the. xij. yeare, the fyfte daye of the xij. moneth, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take vp a lamentacion vpon Pharao kynge of Egypte, and saye vnto him: Thou art counted as a lion of the heythen, and as a whale fishe in the see.

Thou castest thy waters about the, thou troubledst the waters with thy fete, and stampest in their floudes. Thus sayth the Lorde God: I wyll spred my net ouer the, amonge a greate multytude of people: these shall bryng the in to my yarne, for I will caste the vpon the lande, and let the lye vpon the fielde that all the foules of the ayre maye syt vpon the: I wyll gyue all the beastes of the felde ynough of the.

Toy fleshe wyll I caste vpon the hilles, & fyll the valleyes with thy bygnesse. I wyll water the lande with the aboundaunce of thy bloude euen to the mountaynes, and the valleyes shall be full of the. When thou art put out, I will couer the heauen, and make his starres dymme. I will spreade a cloude ouer the Sunne, and the Moone shal not gyue her lyght.

All the lyghtes of heuen wyll I put oute ouer the, and bryng darckenesse vpon thy land sayth the Lorde God. I wyl trouble the hertes of many people, when I bryng thy destruction amonges the Heythen & countryes whom thou knowest not. Yea I will make many people wonder at thee, their kynges so afrayde thorowe the, that their heere shall stand vp, when I shake my swearde at their faces. And deynly shall they be astonyed, euery man in him selfe, at the daye of thy fall.

For thus sayth the Lorde God: the kynge h of Babylons swearde shall come vpon the, with the swerdes of the worthyes wyll I smyte downe thy people.

All they that be myghtye amonge the Gentyles, shal waste the pryde pompe of Egypte, and dyspach downe al her people. All the cattel also also of Egypte wyll I destroye, that they shall come no more vpon the waters: so that neither mans fote nether beastes clawe, shal here them any more. Then wyll I make their waters cleare, and cause their floudes to runne lyke oyle, sayth ꝑ Lord God: when I make the lande of Egypte desolate, and when the countreye with all that is therin, shall be layde waste: and when I smyte all them whiche dwell in it, that they maye knowe, that I am the Lord. This is the mourninge, that ꝑ doughters of the heythen shal make: Yea a sorow and lamentacion shal they take vp, vpon Egypte and all her people, sayth ꝑ Lorde God.

i In the. xij. yere, the. xv. daye of the moneth came the worde of the Lorde vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, Take vp a lamentacion vpon the people of Egypte, and cast the downe, yea and the myghtye people of the heythen also euen with the that dwell beneth: and with them that go downe in to the graue. Downe (howe fayre so euer thou be) and laye the with the vncircumcised. Amonges those that be slayne with the swerde, shall they lye.

The swerde is geuen alredye, he shall be drawn forth and al his people. The myghtye worthyes & his helpers, that be gone downe and lye with the vncircumcised & with them that be slayne with the swerde: shall speake to him out of the myddest of hell.

Assur is there also with his company, and their graues rounde about, which were slayne and kylled with ꝑ swerde, whose graues lye be syde him in the lowe pyt. His commons are buryed rounde about his graue: all togither wounded and slayne with the swerde, which ones afore tyme brought feare into the land of the lyuynge.

There is Elam also with all his people, & their graues rounde about: which all being wounded and slayne with the swerde, are gone downe vncircumcysed vnder the earth, which neuertheles sometyme brought feare into the lande of the lyuynge: for the whiche they bare their shame, with ꝑ other that is gone downe to the graue.

Their burial is geuen them and all their people, amonges them that be slayne. Their graues are rounde about all them which be vncircumcysed, and with them that be slaine thorowe the swerde: for seinge that in times past they made the lād of the lyuyng afrayde, they muste nowe beare their owne shame, with them that go downe to the pyt, & lye amonge them that be slayne.

There is Mesech also and Tubal, & their people, and their graues round about. These all are amonges the vncircumcysed, and the that be slayne with the swerde, because afore tyme they made the lande of the lyuynge afrayed.

Shulde not they then lye amonges the worthyes, and vncircumcysed Gyauntes? which with their weapons are gone downe to hell: whose swerdes are layed vnder their heades, whose wickednesse is vpon their bones: because that as worthyes, they haue brought feare m to the lande of the lyuyng? Yea amonges ꝑ vncircumcysed shalt thou be destroyed, and slepe with them, that perysshed thorow the swearde.

There is the lande of Edom with her kinges & prynces also, which with their strength are layed by them that were slayne with the swearde, yea amonge the vncircumcised, and them whiche are gone downe into the pit. j Jerem.xlix.b Ezech.xxv.b xxxv.a.

Moreouer, there be all the princes of the north, with all the Sidonians, whiche are gone downe to the slayne.

With their feare & strength they are come to confusyon, and lye there vncircumcysed, amōges those that be slayne with the swerde and beare their owne shame, with them that be gone downe to the pyt.

Nowe when Pharao seith this, he shal be comforted ouer all his people, that is slayne with the swerde: both Pharao and all his hoost, sayth the Lorde God. For I haue geuen my feare in the land of the lyuyng. But Pharao and al his people shall lye amonges the vncircumcysed, and amonges them that be slayne with the swearde sayth the Lorde God.

¶ He setteth out the office of a preacher. He strengtheneth them that offende, and boldeneth them with the promyse of mercy. As the former ryghtousnesse helpeth not the ryghtous, yf he geue hym selfe agayne to synne: so the synnes done before are not imputed to the wycked that amendeth. The worde of the Lorde agaynst the rest of the people. Agaynst the mockers of the wordes of the Prophet.

CAPI. XXXIII.

A Gayne, the worde of the Lorde came vnto me sayinge: Thou sonne of man Speake to the chyldren of thy people, and tell them: When I sende a swearde vpon a lande, yf the people of the land take a man of their countrey, and sette him to be their watchman: the same man (when he seyth the swerde come vpon the. lande) shall blowe the trompette, and warne the people. k Preachers be watchmē. iiii.Reg.ix.d

If a man now heare the noyse of the trompet and wyll not be warned, and the swerde come and take him awaye: his bloude shall be vpon his owne heed: for he herde ꝑ sound of the trompette, and wolde not take hede, therfore his bloude be vpon him. But yf he wyll receyue warnynge, he shall saue his lyfe.

Agayne, yf the watchman se the swearde come and shewe it not with the trompet, so ꝑ the people is not warned: if the swerd come then, and take any man from amonges the: the same shall be taken awaye in his owne synne, but his bloude wyll I requyre of the watchmans hand.

And nowe (O thou sonne of man) I haue Ezechie.iii.c made the a watchman vnto the house of Israel:

tael: that where as thou heareſt any thynge out of my mouth, thou mayſte warne them on my behalfe. If I ſaye vnto the wycked thou wycked, thou ſhalte ſurely dye: and yͤ geueſt hym not warninge, that he maye beware of his vngodly waye: euen ſhall the wycked dye in his own ſynne, but his bloud will I requyre of thy hande. Neuertheles yͤ thou warne yͤ wicked of his way, to turne from it, whe as he yet will not be turned from it, he ſhal dye because of his ſynne, but thou haſte delyuered thy ſoule.

Therfore (O thou ſonne of man) ſpeake vnto the houſe of Iſrael. Yea ſay thus: Our offences and ſynnes lye vpon vs, and we be corrupte in them: how ſhulde we then be reſtored vnto lyfe? Tell them: As truly as I lyue ſayth the Lorde God, I haue no pleaſure in the death of the wycked, but rather that the wicked turne from his waye and lyue. Turne you, turne you from youre vngodly wayes, O ye of the houſe of Iſrael. Ezech.33.d. Ezech.18.d. Ezech.18.d. Ezech.33.d. Ioan.3.a. Ezech.33.d. Ezech.18.d. Ezech.33.d. Ezech.18.d. Ezech.33.d. synge thou lapest wayte for blonde, therfore shall blond persecute the. Thus will I make the mount Seir wyldernesse and waste, and bring to passe that there shal no man go thither, ne come from thence. His mountaynes will I fil with his slayne men: thy hylles, dales, and valeys shall lye full of them that are slayne with the swerde. I will make the a perpetuall wyldernesse, so that no man shal dwell in thy cityes: that ye maye knowe how that I am the Lorde.

And bycause thou hast sayd: what, bothe
these nacions, and bothe these landes muste
be myne, and I will have them in possession,
where as the Lorde was there. Therfore,
thus sayth the Lord God: As truly as I liue
I will handle the accordynge to thy wrathe
and gelousye, lyke as thou hast dealte truelly with them: that I maye be knowen among them, howe I have punyshed the. Yea, and that thou mayst be sure that I the Lorde have herde all thy despytfull wordes, which thou hast spoken agaynste the mountaynes of Israel, sayinge: Lo, they are made waste, and given vs to devoure. Thus with your mon-thes ye have made youre boaste agaynste me, yea, and multiplyed youre proude wordes
agaynste me, whiche I have herde all together. Wherunto thus sayth the Lorde God:
When the hole worlde is in wealthe, then will I make the waste. And lyke as thou (O mount Seir) wast glad, bycause the heritage of the house of Israell was destroyed: even so will I do vnto the also, that thou and hole Edom shal be destroyed, and know that I am the Lorde.

The prophet declareth deliueraunce from the Gentyles vnto Israel. The benefytes done vnto the Jewes are to be ascribed to the mercye of God, not vnto their deseruynges. God reneweth our hertes that we maye walcke in his commaundementes.

CAPI. XXXVI.

Thou sonne of man, prophecie vpon the mountaynes of Israel, and speke. Heare the worde of the Lorde. O ye mountaynes of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Beause youre enemye hath sayd vpon you: Aha, the hye euerlastynge places are now become ours: Prophecye therfore and speake: thus sayth the Lorde God: Seing ye be wasted and troden downe on euery syde, and become a possession vnto the residue of the Gentiles, whiche have brought you in to mennes mouthes, and vnto an euyll name amonges the people. Therfore heare the worde of the Lorde God, O ye mountaynes of Israell: Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto the mountaynes and hylles, valleyes and dales, to the voyde wyldernesses, and desolate cyties, whiche are spoyled, and have in derision on euery syde, amonge the residue of the Heathen: Yea, euen thus sayth the Lorde God: In the fyre of my gelousye have I taken a deuyce, agaynste the residue of the Gentyles, and agaynst all Edom: whiche have taken in my lande vnto them selues for a possession, whiche also reioyced from their hertes, with a despytefull stomache to waste and to spoyle it.

Prophecye therfore vpon the lande of Israell, speake vnto the mountaynes and hylles, to valleys and dales, thus sayth the Lord God. Beholde, this have I denised in my gelousye and terrible wrathe: For so muche as ye have suffred reproffe of the Heathen: therfore, thus sayth the Lorde God: I thinke fworne that the Gentyles which lye about you, shall beare youre confusyon them selues. And as for you (O mountaynes of Israell) ye shall shoute vnto youre braunches, and bringe forthe youre fruite to my people of Israell: for it is harde by that will come. Beholde, I come vnto you, and vnto you will I tourne me, that ye maye be tylled and sowen.

I wyl sende you moche people, which shal be all of the house of Israel: the cityes shall be inhabited, and the decayed places shall be repayred agayne. I will prouyde you with moche people & cattel, which shal encrease and bringe fruite. I will restore you also to youre olde estate, and shewe you more kyndenesse then euer ye had before: whereby ye shall knowe that I am the Lorde. Yea, people wil I sende vnto you (O my folke of Israell) whiche shall have the in possession, and thou shalt be their inheritaunce, so that thou shalt no more be without them. Agayn, thus sayth the Lorde God: for so moche as they saye vn to you: Thou art an eater vp of men, & a waster of thy people: therfore thou shalt eate no mo men, neyther destroye thy people any more, sayth the Lord God. And I will not suffer the to heare thyne owne confusyon amonge the Gentyles from henceforth. Thou shalt not deare the reproffe of the nacions, nor cause thyne owne people any more, sayth the Lorde God.

Moreouer, the worde of the Lord came vn to me, saying: O thou son of man, when the house of Israel dwelt vpon their own grounde they defyled therm selues with their owne wayes and ymagynacions: so that in my syght their waye was lyke the vncleannesse of a menstruous womā. Wherfore I poured my wrath full displeasure vpon them, bycause of the bloude that they had shed in the lande, and bicause of their ydols, wherwith they had defyled them selues. I scatred them also among the Heathen, so that they were dispersed about in the landes. According to their wayes, and after their own inuencions, so dyd I punyshe them.

Nowe when they were gone vnto the Heathen, and come in amongst them, they pronoured my holy name: so that it was sayd of them: Are these the people of God, and must go out of their owne land? Then spared I my holy name which the house of Israel had dishonoured amonges the Gentyles, to whom they came. Therfore tell the house of Israell: Thus sayth the Lorde God: I worke not for youre sakes (O house of Israell) but for my holye names sake, whiche ye dishonoured amonge the Heathen, when ye came to them. Therfore, I will halowe my greate name agaynst, whiche amonge the Gentiles is euyl spoken of: for ye your selues have dishonoured it amonge them. And the Gentiles shall knowe that I am the Lorde, when I am honoured in you before their eyes, sayth the Lord God.

As for you, I will take you from amonges the Heathen, and gather you together out of all countreyes, and bringe you agayne in to youre owne lande. Then will I poure cleare water vpon you, and ye shall be clene: yea from all your vncleannesse, and from all your idols shall I clense you. A newe herte also will I geue you, and a newe spirite will I put into you: As for that stonye herte, I will take it oute of youre bodye, and geue you a fleshly herte. I will geue my spirite amonge you, and cause you to walke in my commaundmentes, to kepe my lawes, and to fulfyl them.

And ye shall dwell in the lande that I gaue to your forefathers, and ye shall be my people, and I will be youre God. I will helpe you out of all youre vncleannesse. I will call in the corne, and will encrease it, and will let you have no hongre. I will multiplye the fruite of the trees, and the encrease of the felde for you, so that ye shal beare no more reproffe of honger amonge the Heathen. Then shall ye remembre youre owne wicked wayes, and your ymaginacions, whiche were not good: so that ye shall take displeasure at your owne selues, by reason of your synnes and abhominacions.

Not I will not do this for youre sakes (sayth the Lorde God) be ye sure of it. Therfore, O ye house of Israell be ashamed of your synnes. Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God: what tyme as I shall clense you from all youre offences, then will I make the cityes to be occupyed agayne, and will repayre the places y be decayed. The desolate land shall be tylled agayne, whiche afore tyme laye waste in the syght of all them that wente by.

Then shall it be sayd: this waste lande is become lyke a gardeyn of pleasure, and the voyde, desolate and broken downe cities are nowe stronge and fensed agayne. Then the residue of the Heathen that lye rounde about you, shall knowe that I am the Lorde which repayre that was broken downe, and plante agayne that was made waste. Even I the Lorde have spoken it, and will do it in dede.

Thus sayth the Lorde God: I will yet ones be founde agayne of the house of Israell, and do this for them: I shall encrease them as a flocke of men. Lyke as the holy flocke, and the flocke of Jerusalem are in the tyme of solemne feastes: so that also the wyde wasted cityes be fylled with flockes of men: and they shall knowe that I am the Lorde.

The prophet seth the bringynge agayne of the people by vnyte in captyuyte. He sheweth the vnyon of the ten tribes with the two. Christ is the kynge of the Christen people alone, and the onely euerlastynge shepherde therof.

CAPI. XXXVII.

The hande of the Lorde came vpon me, and caryed me oute in the spirite of the Lorde, & let me downe in a playne feld, that laye full of bones, and he led me rounde about by them: and beholde the bones that laye vpon the felde were verye manye, and marueylous dry also. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man: tyrnyshl thou these bones maye lyue agayne? I answered: O Lord God, thou knowest. And he sayde vnto me: Prophecye thou vpon these bones, and speake vnto them: Ye dry bones, heare the worde of the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lorde God vnto these bones: Beholde I wyl put breth in to you, that ye may liue: I will geue you sinewes, and make fleth grow vpon you and couer you ouer with skin, and so geue you breth that ye maye lyue and knowe that I am the Lorde. Genes. 2.

So I prophecied as he had commaunded me. And as I was prophecyinge, there came a noyse and a greate motion, so that the bones came euery one to an other. Now when I had loked, beholde, there had synewes, and fleth grew vpon them, and above they were couered with skynne, but there was no breth in them: Then sayd he vnto me: Thou sonne of man, prophecye thou towarde the wynde: prophecye, and speake to the wynde: Thus sayth the Lorde God: Come (O thou ayre) from the foure wyndes, and blow vpon these slayne, that they maye be restored to lyfe. So I prophecied, as he had cōmaunded me, then came the breth in to them, and they receyued lyfe, and stode vp vpon their fete, a marueylous great hoste. 1. Corinth. 15.

Moreouer, he sayd vnto me: Thou sonne of man, these bones are the hole house of Israel. Beholde, they saye: Oure bones are dryed vp, oure hope is gone, we are clene cut of. Therfore prophecye thou, and speake vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde God: Beholde, I will open your graues (O my people) and take you oute of your sepulcres, and bringe you in to the lande of Israell agayne. Ezec. xxxiiii.

So shal ye knowe that I am the Lorde, whē I open youre graues, and bringe you oute of them. My spirite also will I put in you, and ye shall lyue: I will sette you agayne in your owne lande, and ye shall knowe, that I am the Lorde, whiche have sayd, and fulfylled it in dede.

The worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thou sonne of man, take a stycke and wryte vpon it: Vnto Juda and to the chyldren of Israell his companions. Then take an other sticke, and wryte vpon it: Vnto Joseph y stok of Ephraim, and to all the house-holde of Israel his companions. And the take both these stickes together in thyne hande, so shall there be one ſtycke therof. Now yͤ the chyldren of thy people ſaye vnto the: wylte thou not ſhew vs what thou meaneſt by theſe? the gyue them this aunſwere: thus ſayth ỹ Lorde

God: beholde I will take the ſtocke of Ieſeph, whiche is in the hande of Ephraim, and of the tribes of Iſrael his felowes, and will put them to the ſtocke of Iuda, and make the one ſtocke, and they ſhall be one in my hand.
And the two ſtyckes wherupon thou writeſt ſhalt thou haue in thyne hand, that they may ſe, and ſhalt ſaye vnto them:

Thus ſayth the Lorde God: beholde, I will take awaye the chyldren of Iſrael from among the heathē, vnto whom they be gone and wil gather them togyther on euery ſyde,
and bryng them agayn in to their owne land.
yea I will make one people of the in ỹ land
vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael, and they al ſhall haue but one kyng. They ſhall no more be two peoples fromhenceforthe, neyther
be deuyded in to two kyngdomes: they ſhall
also withe them ſelues no more with their ab hominacions, idols, and all their wicked de-uyces. I will helpe them out of al their dwel-lyng places wherin they haue ſynned, & will ſo clenſe them, that they ſhall be my people, and I their God.

David my ſeruaunt ſhall be their kynge,
and they all ſhall haue one ſhepeherde onely.
They ſhall walke in my lawes and my commaundementes that they bothe kepe and ful-fyll. They ſhall dwell in the lande that I gaue vnto Jacob my ſeruaunt, where as your fathers alſo haue dwelt. Yea euē in the ſame lande ſhall they, their children, and their chyldren chyldren dwell for euer more: and my ſeruaunte David ſhall be their euerla-ſtynge prynce.

Moreouer, I will make a bonde of peace
with them, which ſhal be vnto them an euerlaſting couenaunt. I will ſettle them alſo, and multiply them, my Sanctuarye will I ſet among them for euermore. My dwellyng ſhal be with them: yea I will be their God, and they ſhal be my people. Thus the heathē alſo ſhall knowe that I the Lorde am the holy maker of Iſrael: when my ſanctuary ſhal be amonges them for euermore.

The prophecyeth that Gog and Magog ſhal come with an appoynted hoſt in to the lande of promiſe.
Their intent. He reherſeth that the commynge of Gog was before prophecyed of the Prophetes.
The deſtruction of hym.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

AND the worde of the Lorde came vn-
to me, ſayinge: Thou ſonne of man, toueme thy face towarde Gog in the lande of Magog, whiche is the chiefe prynce
at Meſech and Tubal: Prophecye agaynſte him, and ſaye: Thus ſayth the Lorde God:
O Gog thou chiefe prynce Meſech and Tu-bal: Beholde, I will vpon the, and will tourne the about, and put a bytte in thy chawes: I will bringe the forth and all thyne hoſte, bothe horſe and horſe men, whiche be all weaponed of the beſt ſacyon, a great people, that handle all togyther ſperes, ſhyldes, and ſwordes: the Perſes, Moreans, and with them the Lybians, whiche all beare ſhyldes
and helmettes: Gomer and all his hoaſtes:
the houſe of Thogorma oute of the North quarters, and all his hoſtes, yea and moche people with the.

Therfore prepare the, ſet thy ſelfe in a-raye with all thy people that are come vnto
the by heapes, and be thou their defence.
After many dayes thou ſhalte be viſited, and in the latter yeres thou ſhalte come in to the lande, that hathe bene reſtored with the ſwerde, and now is replenyſhed agayn with dyuers people vpon the mountaynes of Iſ-rael, whiche haue longe lyen waſte. Yea, they be broughte oute of the nacyons, and dwell all ſafe. Thou ſhalte come vp lyke a ſtormye weather, to couer the lande, and as it were a darke cloude: thou with all thyne hoaſtes, and a greate multytude of people with the.

Moreouer, thus ſayth the Lorde God: At the ſame tyme ſhall many thynges come in to thy mynde, ſo that thou ſhalte ymagen myſ-chiefe and ſay: I will vp to yonder playne land ſeing they lye at eaſe, and dwell ſo ſafely (for they dwel all without any walles, they haue neyther barres nor wores) to ſpoyle them, to robbe them, to laye hande vpon them ſo well inhabited wyldernelle: agaynſt that people, that is gathered togyther from amonge the heathen, whiche haue gotten cattell and good, and dwell in the myddeſt of the land.
Then ſhall Saba and Dedan, and the mar-chauntes of Tharſis with all their worthies
ſaye vnto the: Art thou come to robbe? haſt thou gathered thy people togyther, becauſe thou wylte ſpoyle? to take ſylver and golde to cary awaye cattell and good: and to haue a greate praye?

Therfore, O thou ſonne of man, thou
ſhalte prophecye, and ſaye thus vnto Gog:
Thus ſayth the Lorde God: In that dayt
thou ſhalte knowe that my people of Iſrael dwelleth ſafe: and ſhalte come frō thy place out of the North partes: thou & moche people with the, whiche ryde vpon horſes, that of there is a great multitude and an innumerable ſorte. Yea, thou ſhalte come vpon my people of Iſrael, as a cloude to couer the lande. This ſhall come to paſſe in the latter dayes. I will bring the vp in to my land, that the heathen maye knowe me, when I gette me honoure vpon the, O Gog, before their eyes.

Thus ſayth the Lorde God: Thou art
he, of whome I haue ſpoken afore tyme, by my ſeruaunters the Prophetes of Iſrael, whi che prophecyed in thoſe dayes and yeres, that I ſhould bringe the vpon them. At the ſame tyme, when Gog commeth vp in to the lande of Iſrael (ſayth the Lorde God) ſhall
my indignacion goo forthe in to my wrathe.
For in my gelouſye and hoote diſpleaſure I ſpake

ſpake demyſed, that there ſhall be a great tro ble in the lande of Iſrael at that tyme. The verye fyſhes in the ſee, the foules of the ayre, the beaſtes of the feilde, and all the men that are vpon the earthe, ſhall tremble for feare of me.

The hylles alſo ſhall be couered vp ſyde downe, the ſtayres of ſtone ſhall fall, and all walles ſhall ſyncke to the grounde. I will call for a ſwerde vpon them in all my moun-taynes, ſayth the Lorde God: ſo that euery mans ſwerde ſhal be vpon an other. With peſtilence and bloode will I punyſhe hym:
ſtompe rayne and hayle ſtones, fyre & brymſtone will I cauſe to rayne vpon him, and al
his heape: yea and vpon all that great people that is with him. Thus will I be magnified, honoured, and knowen amonges the heathen: that they maye be ſure how that I am the Lorde.

The forewyth the deſtruction of Gog and Magog.
The grace of Gog and of his hoſte. He prophecyeth that Gog and his company ſhal be deuoured of byr-des and beaſtes. wherfore the houſe of Iſrael is bleſſed. Their byenge ageyne from captyuyte is promyſed.

CAPI. XXXIX.

THerfore, O thou ſonne of man, prophe cye agaynſte Gog, and ſpeake. Thus ſayth the Lorde God: Beholde, o Gog thou chiefe prince at Meſech and Tubal: I will vpon the, and tourne the about, and caye the forthe, and lede the from the North partes, and bringe the vp to the mountaynes of Iſrael. As for thy bowe I will ſmyte it out of thy left hande, and caſt thyne arowes out of thy right hand. Thou with al thyne heape and all the people that is with the, muſt fall vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael. Then will I gyue the vnto the foules and wyld beaſtes of the feld, to be deuoured: there muſt thou lye
vpon the felde: for euen I the Lorde haue ſpoken it, ſayth the Lorde God.

Into Magog, and amonge thoſe that lye
ſecurelye in the yles: will I ſende a fyre,
and they ſhall knowe, that I am the Lorde.
I will make alſo the name of my holynelle
to be knowen amonges my people of Iſrael:
& I will not let my holy name to be euyll ſpo-
ken of any more: but the verye heathen alſo ſhal knowe ỹ I am the Lorde, the holye one of Iſrael. Beholde it commeth and ſhall be fulfylled in dede, ſayth the Lorde God. This is the day wherof I haue ſpoken: They that dwell in the cyties of Iſrael, ſhall goo forth and ſet fyre vpon the weapons, and burne
them: ſhyldes and ſperes, bowes and arowes hylles and clubbes: ſeuen yeres ſhall they be burnynge therof, ſo that they ſhall eſies bryng no ſtyckes from the felde, neither haue nede to hewe downe any ouſe of the wodde:
for they ſhal haue weapons ynough to burne.
They ſhall robbe thoſe that robbed them,
and ſpoyle thoſe that ſpoyled them, ſaith the Lorde God.

At the ſame tyme will I gyue vnto Gog
a place to be buryed in, in Iſrael: euen the valey, wherthorow men go from the Eaſt to the ſee ward. Thoſe that trauaile therby ſhal abhorre it: There ſhall Gog and all his people be buryed: and it ſhal be called the valey of the people of Gog. Seuen monethes long ſhall the houſe of Iſrael be burying of them, that they maye clenſe the lande. Yea all the people of the land ſhall bury them. O it ſhal be a glorious daye, when I get me that ho-noure, ſayth the Lorde God. They ſhall ordeyne men alſo to be dede buryers, euer goynge thorow the lande, and appoynte them certayne places to burye thoſe in which re-mayne vpon the feilde, that the lande may be clenſed. From ende to ende ſhall they ſeke, that ſeuen monethes longe. Now thoſe that go thorow the lande, where they ſe a mannes bone, they ſhal ſet vp a token by it, til the dede buryers haue buryed it alſo, in the valey of ỹ people of Gog. And the name of the cite ſhal be called ỹ Hamonah: Thus ſhall they make the land clene.

And thou ſonne of man: thus ſayth the Lord God: Speake vnto al the foules, and euery byrde, yea and to all the wylde beaſtes of the feilde, heape you togyther and come, gather you roūd about vpon my ſlaughter, that I haue ſlayne for you: euen a great ſlaughter
vpon the mountaynes of Iſrael: eate fleſhe, and drynke bloode. Ye ſhall eate the fleſhe of the worthyes, and drynke the bloode of the princes of the land: of the wethers, of the lā-bes, of the gotes, and of the oxen that be all ſlayne at Baſan. Eate the fat your belye full, and drynke bloode tyll ye be dronken of the ſlaughter which I haue ſlayne vnto you. Fyll you at my table, with horſes and ſtronge horſe men: with captaynes and all men of warre ſayth the Lorde God.

I will bringe my glorye alſo amonges
the Gentyles, that all the heathen maye ſe my iudgement that I haue kepte, and my hande whiche I haue layde vpon them: that the houſe of Iſrael maye knowe how that I am the Lorde their God, from that day forth.
And the heathen ſhal knowe, that where as the houſe of Iſrael were led in to captiuitie
it was for their wickednelle ſake, becauſe they offended me.

For the whiche cauſe I hydde my face frome them, and deliuered them in to the handes of their ennemyes, ſo that they myghte
all be ſlayne with the ſwearde. Accordynge to their vnclennelle, and vnfaythfull dealynges, ſo haue I entreated them, and hydde my face from them. Therfore thus ſayth the Lorde God: Now will I bring agayne the captyues of Jacob, and haue mercye vpon the hole houſe of Iſrael, and be gelous for my ho lye names ſake. All their confuſion and offence, that they haue done agaynſt me, ſhal be taken awaye, and ſo ſafely ſhall they dwel in their lande, that no man ſhall make them afearde. And when I haue brought the agayne from amonges the people, when I haue gathered them togyther out of their ennemyes

bondes, and am prayed in them before ma-nye Heathen: then shall they knowe that I am the Lorde their God, which suffred them to be ledde in to captiuitie amonge the Heathen, but now haue brought them agayne in to their owne land, and not lett one of them ponder.

After that will I hide my face no more from them, but will poure out my spirite vpon the Ezec. xxxix. house of Israel, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The restoryng of the cytie and of the temple
that was to come is shewed vnto the Prophete.

CAPI. XL.

IN the.xxv yere of our captiuitie, in the begynnynge of the yere, the tenth day of the moneth: that is the.xiiij. yere after that city was smytten downe: the same day came the hand of the Lord vpon me, and caried me forth, euen in to the lande of Israell brought me in to the visions of God: & set me downe vpon a marueylous hye mountayne, where-vpon there was a buyldyng (as it had ben of a city) towarde the north.

Therher he caried me: and beholde, there was a man, whose similitude was like brasse whiche had a threde of flaxe in his hande, and a measured also. He stode in the wore and sayde vnto me: marke well with thyne eyes, harken to with thine eares, and fasten it in thine hert what so euer I shal shewe the, for to the intent that they myght be shewed the, therefore were thou brought hyther, and what so euer thou sest, thou shalt certifie the house of Israel therof.

B Beholde, there was a wall on the outsyde rounde about the house: the measured that he had in his hand was five cubites long and a spanne. So he measured the bredth of the buyldyng, which was a measured, & the height
also a measured. Then came he vnto the East dore, and went vp the steyres, and measured the postes of the dore, whereof euery one was a measured thicke. Euery chambre was a mete rod longe and brode, betwene the chambres were fyue cubites. The post of the dore within the porche, was one measured. He measured also the porche of the innermer wore, whiche contayned a measured. Then measured he the entrye of the dore that contayned eight cubi-tes, and his pillers two cubites: and this en-trye stode inwarde.

The chambres of the dore Eastward, were C three on euery syde, alyke brode and long. The pyllers also that stode of both the sides, were of one measure. After this, he measured the wideuelle of the dore, which was ten cubites,
and the length of the dore thyrtene cubytes.
The edge before the chambres was one cubit
brode vpon both the sides, and the chambres five cubites wide of either side. He measured the roofe from the rygge of one chambre to an other, whose wydenelle was.xxv.cubites, and one dore stode against an other. He made pillers also fyue score cubites hye, rounde about the courte dore. Before the inwarde part was to the fore entrye of the innermer dore, were fyftye cubites. The chambres and their pillers within, rounde about vnto the wore,
hadde fyue wyndowes: So hadde the fore en-trye also, whose wyndowes wente rounde about within. And vpō the pillers there stode date trees.

Then broughte he me in to the fore courte, D
where as were chambres and paued workes,
made in the fore court rounde about thyrtye chambres vpon one paued worke. Now the paued worke was alonge beside the doores, and that was the lower paued worke. After this, he measured the bredth from the lower doore vnto the innermer court of the out side which had an hundred cubites vpon the East and the North parte. And the doore in the vttermost courte towarde the North, measured he after the length and bredth, his eye chambres also on either syde, with his pillers and fore entreyes, whiche had euen the measure of the fyrst doore. His length was fifty cubites, the bredth.xxv. cubites: his wyndewes and porches with his date trees, had euen lyke measure as the doore towarde the East, there were seuen steppes to go vp vpon and their porche before them. Now the wore of the innermer courte stode streyght ouer against the wore that was towarde the North East. From one wre to an other he measured an hundred cubites.

After that, he broughte me to the South
syde, where there stode a doore towarde the South: whose pillers and porches he measured, eyche had the first measure, and with their porches, they had wyndowes rounde about,
lyke the first windowes. The length was. L.
cubites, the bredth.xxv. with steppes to go vp vpon: his porche stode before him, with his pyllers and date trees on either syde. And the wore of the innermer court stode towarde the South, and he measured from one wore to an other an hundred cubites.

So he brought me in to the innermer court thorow the wore of the South syde, which he measured, and it had the measure afore sayd.
In lyke maner his chambres, pyllers, & fore
entreyes, had euen the fore sayd measure also.
And he had with his porches rounde about wyndowes of fyftye cubites length, and fyue and twenty cubites brode. The porches rounde about were.xxv. cubites longe, and fyue cubytes brode: and his porche reached vnto the vttermost courte: vpon his pyllers there were date trees, and eyghte steppes to goo vp vpon.

He brought me also in to the innoste E courte vpon the East syde, and measured the wore, accordynge to the measure afore sayd.
His chambres, pyllers, and porches had euen
the same measure as the first had: and with his porches he had wyndowes round about.
The length was fiftye cubites, the breadth
xxv. cubites: His porches reached vnto the vttermost courte: his pyllers also hadde date trees on either syde, and eyght steppes to goo vp vpon.

And he brought me to the north dore, and measured it, whiche also had the fore sayde measure. His chambres, pyllers and porches had windowes rounde about: whose length was. L. cubites, & the bredth.xxv. His pillers stode towarde the vttermost courte, and vpō them both were date trees, and eyght steppes to go vp vpon. There stode a chambre also, whose entraunce was at the dore pyllers and there the burntofferynges were washed.

In the dore porche, there stode on either side
two tables for the slaughtynge: to slaye the burntofferynges, lynneofferynges and trefspasseofferynges therupon. And on the outside as men go forth to the north dore, there stode
two tables. Foure tables stode on either side of the dore, that is eyght tables, whereupon they slaughted. Foure tables were of hewen stone for the burntofferynges, of a cubyte and a halfe longe & brode, and one cubyte hyghe:
whereupon were layed the vessels and ornaments, whiche were vsed to the burnt and slayne offerynges, when they were slaughted.
And within ther were bokes foure fyngers
brode fastened rounde aboute, to hang flesh vpon and vpon the tables was layde the offrynge flesshe. On the outsyde of the inner-mer dore were the syngers chambres in the inwarde courte beside the North dore ouer against the south. There stode one also, beside the east dore northwarde.

F And he sayde vnto me: This chambre on the South syde belongeth to the priestes that kepe the babyracion: and this towarde the North, is the Priestes that wayte vpon the aulter: whiche be the sonnes of Sadoch, G to steppe before the Lorde in steade of the children of Leui. So he measured the fore warre, whiche had in length an. C. cubytes, and as moche in bredth by the foure corners.
Stode the aulter stode before the house: And he brought me to the fore entry of the house and measured the walles by the entry dore:
which were fyue cubytes long on either side.
The thicknesse also of the dore on either side was fyue cubytes. The length of the porche was.xx. cubytes, the bredth. xi. cubytes, and vpon steppes went men vp to it: by the wal les also were pyllers, on either syde one.

¶ The disposicion and deuyce of buyldyng agayn
the temple, and of the other thynges therto belongyng.

CAPI. XLI.

AFter this he brought me to the temple and measured the postes: which were
of both the sydes. vi. cubites thicke, accordynge to the wydenesse of the tabernacle.
The bredth of the dore was. x. cubytes & the walles of the dore on either syde fyue cubites.
He measured the length therof, whiche con-teyned fourty cubytes, and the bredth.xx. The dore he ma, s measured to the dore postes, whiche were two cubytes thicke: but the dore it selfe was syxe cubites, and the bredth of the dore was seuen cubytes. He measured the length & bredth therof, which were euery one
xx. cubites before the temple.

And he sayde vnto me: this is the holyest
of all. He measured also the wall of the house, whiche was syx cubytes. The chambres that stode rounde about the house, were euery one foure cubytes wyde, and one stode harde vpon
another, wherof there were thyrtie and thre.
And there stode postes beneth by the walles rounde about the house, to beare the vp: but in the wal of the house, they were not fastened.
The syde chambres were the hygher & wyder, and had steppes thorowe them rounde about the house. Thus was it wyder aboue, that from the lowest men myght go to the hyghest and myd chambers. I sawe also that the house was very hyghe rounde aboute.
The foundacion of the side chambres was a meterod (that is. vi. cubytes) brode. The thic nesse of the syde wall without, conteyned. v.
cubytes, and so hyd the out wall of the chabres in the house.

Betwene the chambres, was the wydenes
xx. cubytes rounde about the house. The cha- B
bre dores stode ouer against the outwall, & one dore was towarde the northe, the other toward the South: and the thicknesse of the outwall was fyue cubytes rounde aboute.
Now the buyldynge that was seperated to-warde the west, was thre score and ten cubi-tes wyde: the wall of the buyldynge was. v cubites thicke rounde about, and the length foure score cubites and ten. So he measured the house whiche was an. C. cubytes longe, and seperated buyldynge with the wal were an. C. cubytes longe also. The wydenesse before the house and of it that was separated towarde the east, was an. C. cubytes.

And he measured the lengthe of the buyldynge before and behinde with the chambres C vpon both the sydes: and it conteyned an. C cubytes. The innermer temple, the porch of the fore courte, the syde postes, these thre had syde wyndowes, and pyllers rounde aboute
ouer against the postes, from the grounde vp to the wyndowes.

The windowes them selues were syled ouer with bordes: and thus was it aboue
the wre, vnto the inmost house, and without also: yea the hole wall on euery syde bothe within and without was syled ouer with greate bordes.

There were Cherubyns and date trees made also, so that one date tre stode euer betwixt D two Cherubyns: One Cherub hadde two faces, the face of a man loking alyde toward the date tree, and a lyons face on the other syde.

Thus was it made rounde about in al the house: Yea the Cherubins and date trees were made from the grounde vp aboue the dore and so stode they also vpon the wall of the temple.

The by postes of the temple were foure squared, & the fashyon of the Sanctuary was euen as it appeared vnto me afore in the vision. The table was of wod. iij cubytes highe
and. ij. cubytes longe: his corners, the length
and

and the walles were of wod.

And he sayde vnto me: This is the table that shall stande before the Lorde. The temple and the holyest of all had either of them twoo dores & euery doze had twoo lytle wicketes whiche were folden in one vpon another, on euery syde two. And vpon the dores of the temple there were made Cherubins & date trees, like as vpon the walles: & a greate thicke balke of wod was before on the oute syde of the porche. Upon both ſ sydes of the walles of the porche, there were made depe windowes and date trees, hauyng beames & balkes, lyke as the house had.

¶ Of the chambres of the temple for the preastes, and the holy thynges.

CAPI. XLII.

Then caryed he me oute in to the fore courte towarde the north and brought me into the chambre that stode ouer agaynste the backe buylding northward, whiche had the lengeth of an. C. cubytes whole dore turned towarde the north. The wydenesse contayned. L. cubytes: ouer againste the. xx. cubytes of the innermost court, and against the paued worke that was in the fore courte. Beside all these this, there stode pylles, one ouer agaynst an other: And before this chambre, there was a walkynge place of. x. cubites wyde, and within was a waye of one cubite wyde, and their dores towarde the north. Thus the hyghest chambres were alway na lower then the lowest and myddemost of the buylding: for they bare chambre vpon chambre & stode thre togyther one vpon an other not hauynge pylles lyke the fore courte: coer fore were they smaller euen those whereby e in the myddest, to take frome the grounde vpwarde.

The wall without that stode by the chambres towarde the vttermost court vpon the fore syde of the chambres, was. L. cubytes lōg for the length of the vttermost chābres in the fore courte was. L. cubytes also: but the length therof before the temple was an. C. cubites. These chambres had vnder the an intraunce of the east syde, whereby a man myght go in to them oute of the fore courte, (before ſ thicke wall of the fore courte toward ſ east, eyght ouer againste the seperated buylding. Before ſ same buylding vpō this syde there were chambres also whiche had a way vnto them, lyke as ſ chambres on the north syde. of the same length & wydenesse.

Their intraunce, fashyon and dores were also of the same manner. Yea euen lyke as the other chambres were, so were those also of the southside. And before the way towarde the syngers steppes on ſ east syde, there stode a dore to go in at. Then sayde he vnto me: The chambres toward the north he and the fore wych stand before the backe buylding those be holy chābres, wherein the preastes that do scruyce before the Lorde, muste eate the moste holy offrynges: and there muste they laye the most holy offrynges: meate offrynges, synne offrynges & trespasse offrynges for it is an holy place. Whē the preastes come therin, they shall not go oute in to the fore court: but (leuynge they be holye) they shall leaue the clothes of their mynystracion, and put on other garmētes, when they haue ony thynge to do with the people.

Now when he had measured all the inner house, he brought me forth thorowe the east porte, and measured the same rounde about. He measured the east syde with ſ meteyrod, whiche rounde aboute conteyned fyue C. meterrodes. And the north syde measured he, whiche conteyned rounde about euen so moche. The other twoo sides also toward the south and the west (which he measured) conteyned eyther of them. v. C. meterodes. So he measured all the foure sydes where there went a wall rounde about. v. C. meterodes longe, and as broke also which separated the holy from the vnholy.

¶ He seyth the glory of God goynge in to the temple, from whence it had before departed. He mencioneth the Idolatrye of the children of Israel, for whiche they were consumed and brought to nought. He is commaunded to call them agayne to repentaunce.

CAPI. XLIII.

So he brought me to the dore, that lyeth towarde the east. Beholde, then came ſ glory of ſ God of Israel from out of the east, whose voyce was lyke a greate noyse of waters, and the earth was lyghtened with his glory. His syghte to loke vpon was lyke the syghte, that I sawe, when I went in, what tyme as the cyte whiche he came to destroyed: and lyke the vysyon that I sawe by the water of Cobar. Then fell I vpon my face, but the glory of the Lorde came into the house thorowe the east dore. So a wynde toke me vp, and brought me in to the vttermost court: and beholde, the house was full of the glory of the Lorde.

I herde one speakyng vnto me out of the house, and there stode one by me, that spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, this is the place of my seate, and the place of my feete steppes: where as I will dwell amonge the children of Israel for euer more: so that the house of Israel shal no more defyle my holy name: neyther they, ne their kynges, thorowe their whordome thorowe their lyghe places, and thorow the dead bodyes of their kynges: which haue builded their thresholdes in maner harde vpon my thresholdes, and their postes almost at my postes: so that there is but a barr betwyxt me and them.

Thus haue they defyled my holy name with their abhominacions, that they haue committed. Wherefore I haue destroyed them in my wrath: But now they shall put away their whordome and the dead bodyes of their kynges out of my syghte, that I maye dwell among them for euermore. Therfore O thou sonne of man, shewe thou the house of Israel a temple, that they maye be ashamed of their wickednesse, and measure them selues an example therat.

And when they be ashamed of all their actes, then shewe them the fourme and fashyon of the temple: the cōpynge in, the goynge out, all the maner and description therof, yea all the vses and ordynaunces of it, that they may kepe and fulfyl all the fashions and customes therof.

This is the discrypcyon of the house: About vpon the mount rounde aboute all the coostes, it shall be the holyest of all. Beholde, that is the discrypcion and fashyon of the house. This is the measure of the aulter (after the cubyte: whiche is a spanne longer then an other cubyte) his become in the myddest was a cubite longe and wyde, & the ledge that went rounde about it, was a spanne wide. This is the heigth of the aulter: From the grounde to the lower steppes the length is two cubytes, and the breede one cubyte: and from the lower steppes to the higher are foure cubites, and the breede but one cubyte.

The aulter was foure cubytes hyghe, and from the aulter vpwarde stode foure horns, and it was. xij. cubytes longe and. xij. cubytes brode, vpon the foure corners: the compasse of the aultare was. xxij. cubytes lōg and brode vpon the foure corners, and the ledge that went rounde about, had halfe a cubite: and the botome therof rounde about was cubite: this steppes stode towarde the east. And he sayde vnto me: Thou sonne of man, thus sayeth the Lorde God: These are the ordynaunces & lawes of the aulter, in the daye when it is made to offer burntoffrynges, and to sprincle bloude therupon. To the preastes, euen Leuites that be of the sede of Sadoch and trade before me to do me seruice, sayeth the Lorde God: Unto them gyue thou a yonge bullocke, for a synne offrynge: and take the bloud of him and sprincle the foure horns therwithal and the foure corners of the aultre compasse, with the ledge that goeth rounde about: thus shalte thou clense it, and reconsile it. Thou shalte take ſ bullocke also of ſ sinoffrynge, & burne him in a sencrall place without the Sanctuarye.

The nexte daye, take a gotebocke without blemysh for a synoffrynge, to reconsile the aulter withall: lyke as it was reconcyled with the bullocke. Lowe when thou hast made it clene, then offer a yonge bullocke without blemyshe, and a ramme out of the flock without blemysh also: Offer them before ſ Lorde and let the preest cast salt therupon, and sprue them so vnto the Lorde for a burntoffrynge. Seuen dayes shalte thou dresse, euerye day a gotebocke. A yonge bullocke and a rāme of the flocke (both without blemyshe) shal they offer. Seuen dayes shall they reconcyle and clense the aulter, and offre vpon it. Whē those dayes are expired, then vpon the. viij. day and so forth, the preastes shall offer their burntoffrynges and healthy offrynges vpon the aulter: so will I be mercyfull vnto you sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ He sheweth what doze of the temple is shutte: He is commaunded to vpbrayde the people with theyr offence. The vncircumcysed in herte and in the flesshe, who are to be admytted to the seruyce of the temple, and who to be refused. He sheweth what preastes he wolde haue admytted in to the holy place, and also theyr offyce.

CAPI. XLIIII.

After this, he brought me agayne to ſ outwarde dore of the Sanctuarye on the east syde, and that was shut. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: This daze shal be styll shut, and not opened for any man to go thorowe it, but onely for the Lorde God of Israel: yea he shall go thorowe it, els shal it be shutte styll. The prynce hym selfe shall come thorow it, that he maye eate bread before the Lorde. At the porche shall he come in, & theer shal he go out agayne. Then brought he me to the dore, vpon the North side of the house. And as I loked about me, beholde, ſ glory of the Lord fylled the house, and I fell downe vpon my face. So the Lorde spake vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marke this & thyne herte, beholde, and take diligent hede to all that I wyll saye vnto the, concerning all the ordynaunces of the Lorde, and all the lawes: ponder well with thyne herte the entrynge in of the house and the goynge forthe of the Sanctuarye: and tell that obstynate house holde of Israel: Thus sayeth the Lord God: O house of Israel, ye haue now done enoughe with all youre abhominacions, seynge that ye haue brought into my Sanctuary straungers, hauynge vncircumcysed hertes and flesshe, where thorowe my Sanctuary is defyled, when ye offre me bred, fat, and bloude.

Thus with all youre abhominacions ye haue broken my couenaunte, and not kepte the holy ordinaunces of my Sanctuary: but set keepes of my Sanctuary, euen after your owne mynde. Therfore thus sayeth the Lorde God: Of all the straungers that dwell amonges the children of Israel, no straunger (whose herte & flesh is not circumcysed) shall come within my Sanctuarye: No, not the Leuites that be gone backe fro me, and haue deceyued the people of Israel with all errours, goyng after their idols: but they shal beare their owne wickednesse. Shulde they be set & ordeyned to mynister vnder ſ dores of the house of my Sanctuarye? And to do seruyce in the house: to slaye burntoffrynges and sacrifyces for the people to stand before them, & to serue them: seing the scruple that they do them, is before their idols, & cause ſ house of Israel to fomble thorowe the wickednesse? For the which cause I haue pluckt out myne hande ouer them (sayeth the Lord) so that nowe they muste beare their owne iniquyte, and not to come nyghe me, to serue me with their preastlode, in my Sanctuarye, & molte holyest of all: that they maye beare

their owne shame and abhominations, whi che they haue done. Shulde I vse them to be ministers of the house, and to all the seruyce is done therin? But the preistes the Leuytes the sonnes of Sadoch, that kept the holy ordynaunces of my sanctuarye, when the children of Israel were gone fro me: shall come to me, to do me seruyce, to stande before me,
and to offre me the fat and the bloude, saythe
the Lorde God.

Ezech. 40. Chap. 42. Chap.

C They shall go in to my Sanctuarye, and they shall come before my table, to do me seruyce, and to wayte vpon myne ordynaunces. Now whe they go in at the dores of the innermer court
they shall put on lynen clothes, so that no woollen come vpon them: whyle they do ser-uyce vnder the dores of the innermer court, and within. They shall haue fayre lynnen bonettes vpon their heades, and lynnen breches vpon their lopnes, whiche in their laboure they shall not put aboute them: And when they go forth to the people in to the outwarde court, they shal put of the clothes wherein they haue mynistred, and laye them in the habitacion of the Sanctuary, and put an other apparel, lest they vnhalow the people with their clothes.

They shall not shaue their heades, ne no-rysshe the bushe of their heere, but rounde their heades only. And the preistes that go in to the inmost courte, shall drinke no wyne.
They shal mary no widow, neither one that is put from her husbande: but a mayde of the sede of the house of Israel, or a wydow, that hath had a preist before.

Leuit. xxi. 1 Ezech. xliii. They shall shewe my people the differēce betwene the holy, and vnholy, betwixte the clene and vnclene. If any discorde arise, they shall discerne it, and geue sentence after my Leuit. xviii. Deut. xxv. iudgementes. Thy lo. comne feastes, my lawes and ordynaunces shal they kepe, and halowe my Sabbothes. They shal come at no dead persone, to defyle them selues (except it be father or mother, sonne or daughter, brother or syster, that hathe had yet no husbande) in dede they maye be defyled.

G And when he is clensed, there shall be re-kened vnto him. vij. dayes: and whe he goeth
the Sanctuarye agayne to do seruyce, he shal
bringe a synneoffrynge sayth the Lorde God.
They shall haue an heritage, yea I my selfe Deut. xviii. & Ezech. xliv. wyll be their heritage: ye shall geue the no possion in Israel, for I am their possion.
The meatoffrynge, synneoffrynge, and trespaceoffrynge shall they eate, and euery dedicate thinge in Israel shall be theirs.
The firstlynges of all the fyrste fruites, and all ye will offrynges shall be the preistes.

Ye shall geue vnto the preiste also the firstlynges of your dowe, that God maye prosper Ezech. xliv. a. the resydue. But no dead carpon shall preiste eate, ne suche as is deuoured of wilde beestes, foules or cattell.

¶ Out of all the lande of promyse are there seuerall foure portyons, of whiche the fyrste is geuen to the preistes and to the temple, the seconde to the Leuites the thyrde to the cyte, the fourth to the Prynce.
An exhortation to the heades of Israel. Of false weights and measures. Of fyrste fruites &c.

CAPI. XLV.

When ye deuyde the land by the lot, ye shall put a syde one parte for the Lord, to be holye fro me other landes: namely. xxv. M. metecordes longe, and. x. M. brode.
This shall be holy, as wyde as it rounde about. Of this parte there shall belong vnto the Sanctuarye. v. C. metecordes in all the foure corners, & l. cubytes wyde rounde about to ye suburbes. And from this measure, mete ly of. xxv. M. metecordes long, and. x. M. broo thou shalte measure, wherin the Sanctuary
and the holyest of all maye stande.

The residue of that holy grounde shall be the preistes, whiche do seruyce in the Sanctuary of the Lorde, & go in before the Lord to serue hym, that they may haue rowme to dwell in.

As for the Sanctuary: it shall stande for it selfe: and to the Leuites that serue in the house, there shal be gruen xx. habitacions, of the xxv. M. length: and. x. M. breth, ye shall geue also vnto the cyte a possessyō of v. M.
metecordes brode, and. xxv. thousande longe beside the parte of the Sanctuary: that shall be for the hole house of Israel. Vpon both sydes of the Sanctuaryes parte, and by the cy-te ye, there shall be gruen vnto the prynce, whatsoeuer lyeth ouer against the cyte, as farre as reacheth westwarde and eastwarde whiche shall be as longe as one parte, from ye west vnto the east.

This shall be his owne lande in Israel, & my princes be no more chargeable, vnto my people. And suche as remayneth yet shall lance, shall be gruen to the house of Israel acco; dynge to their tribes. Thus saythe the Lorde God: O ye princes, ye haue inough pressed & destroyed pilongyng now leaue of the newe acco; dynge to the stocke, that is equal and lawfull: and thrust out my people no more, sayth the Lorde God. Ye shall haue a true weight, a true Ephah, & a true Bath. The Ephah and the Bath shall be like. One Bath shall conteyne the tithe of an Homer, and so shall one Ephah be their measure shall be after the Homer. Or Sycle maketh. xx. Gras. Or. x. Sycles, xx. and. xv. Sycles make a pounde. Thus the meatoffrynge, that ye shall geue vnto heaued: namelye, the xvi. part of an Ephah out of an Homer of wheate: & the xvi. part of an Ephah, out of an Homer of barly. Ex-ple shall be measured with the Bath: return the tenth parte of one Bath vnto an Lor.

Ten Bathes make one Homer: in an Homer fylleth ten Bathes. And one lambe from two hundreth slepe out of the pasture of Israel, for a meatoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge, to reconcyle them, sayth
the Lorde God.

All the people of the lande shall geue this heaueoffrynge with a free wyll. Agaynst it shall be the princes parte to offre burntoffrynges, meate offrynges, and drynkofffrynges vnto the Lorde, in the holy dayes,
at

newe Moones, Sabbothes and in all the hyghe feastes of the house of Israel. The sinoffrynge, meatoffrynge, burntoffrynge and healthoffrynge shall he gyue, to reconcyle
the house of Israel. Thus sayth the Lorde God: The fyrste daye of the fyrste moneth thou shalte take a yonge bullocke without blemyth, and clense the Sanctuary. So the preist shall take of the blood of the sinneoffrynge, and sprinckle it vpon the postes of the house, and vpon the foure corners of the altar, with the dorepostes of the innermer court. And thus thou shalte do also the. vij. daye of the moneth (for such as haue synned of ignorāce, or be yonge disceyued) to recon cyle the house withall. Vpon the. xiij. daye of the fyrste moneth ye shall kepe Easter.
Seuen dayes shall the feaste contynue, wher in there shall no sowre ne leuened bread be eaten.

E Vpon the same daye shall the prince proui-de for hym selfe and all the people of the lande
a bullocke for a synneoffrynge. And in the feaste of the seuen dayes he shall offre euery day a bullocke and a ramme, that are without ble myth, for a burntoffrynge vnto the Lorde: & a yonge gote dayly for a synneoffryng. For the meatoffringes, he shal gyue euer an Ephah to a bullocke, an Ephah to a ramme, and an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Vpon the. xv. daye of the seuenth moneth, he shall kepe the feast dayes holye one after an other, euen as in the other seuen dayes: with the synneofferynge, burntoffrynge, meatoffrynge, & with the oyle.

(The ordynaunces of the Sabboth and of the newe moone. Thinghe whiche doores they must go in, or come out of the temple, &c.

CAPI. XLVI.

Thus sayethe the Lorde God: the dore
of ye innermer courte toward the East, shall be shut the vi. worke dayes: but in the Sabboth and in day of the newe mone it shall be open. Then shall the prince come in the dore porch, and stande vpon within by the dore cheke. So the preistes shall offre his burnt and healthoffrynges. And he shall worshyp at the doreposte, and go his way forth agayne: but the dore shal no more
be shut vp till the euenynge.

Euthe same maner shal the people of the lande also do their worshyp before the Lord in their dore vpon the Sabbothes and newe Moones. This is now the the burnt offrynge, that the prince shall bringe vnto the Lord vpon the Sabboth: sixe lambes with out blemyth, and a ram without blemyth, and an Ephah for a meatoffrynge, with the lambes for the lambes, he maye gyue as ma ny meatoffrynges to them, as he wyll, and an hin of oyle to an Ephah. In the daye of the newe moneth, it shal be a yong bullocke without blemyth, sixe lambes and a ram al so without blemyth. With the bullock he shall gyue an Ephah, and with the ramme an Ephah also for a meatoffrynge: but to the C lambes, what he may come by: And gyue an hin of oyle to an Ephah. When the prince commeth he shall go vnder the dore of the porche, and there departe forth agayne. But when the people of the lande come before the Lorde in the yrgh solempne feaste, as many as come in by the north dore to do worshyp, shall go out agayne at the South dore.
And they that come in at the South dore, shal go forth agayne at the North dore. There shall none go out at the dore where he came in, but shall go forth right ouer on the other syde and the prince shal go in and out among
them.

Upon the solemne and highe feaste dayes D
this shall be the meatoffrynge: An Ephah to a bullocke and an Ephah to a ram, and to the lambes: as many as he wil, but gyue an hin of oyle to an Ephah. Lowe when the prince bringeth a burntoffrynge or an healthoffe-rynge vnto a free wyll vnto the Lorde, the east dore shall be opened vnto him, that he maye do with his burnt and healthoffrinnges, as he doth vpon the Sabboth, and whe
he goeth forth, the dore shal be shut after hym agayne. Ye shall dayly bring vnto the Lord C a lambe of a yere olde without blemyth for a burntoffrynge: this shall he do euery mo rynge. And for a meatoffrynge he shal gyue
the sixte part of an Ephah, and the thyrde part of an hin of oyle (to mynyle with the cakes) euery morynge. Yea this shall be a dayly meatoffrynge vnto the Lorde, for an euerlastynge ordinaunce: and thus shal the lambe, the meatoffrynge and oyle be gyue euery morynge, for a dayly burntofferynge.

Moreouer, thus sayth the Lorde God. E
If the prince gyue a gyfte vnto anye of his sonnes, then shall it be his sonnes heryta ge perpetuall, that he may possesse it. But if he Leuit. xxv. b wyl gyue one of his seruauntes some of his Num. xxvii. c
heritage, it shall be his to the yere of fre dom, and then to returne agayne vnto the prince: for 3. Reg. xxi. & his heritage shall be his sonnes onely. The 2. Reg. xiii.
prince also shall take none of the peoples en
heryt aunce, ne put them from their possessiō
but to his owne sonnes shal he gyue his possessiō, that my people be not scattered abrode,
but that euery man maye haue his owne.

And he brought me thorow the entraunce G at the syde of the dore to the habytacion of the Sanctuarye, that belonged to the prests and stode toward the north, and beholde
there was a place vpon the West syde, then sayde he vnto me: This is the place, where the preistes shall dyght the trespace and syn-offrynges, and bake the meatoffrynges: that they nede not beare them in to the outward court and so to vnhalowe the people. So he brought me in to the vtter most courte, rounde about all the foure corners. Beholde, in eue ry corner of the foure courte, there was yet a litle court.

Yea in all the foure corners of the courte
there was a lytle courte of. xl. cubytes lōge & xxx. cubites brod: these foure litle courtes were

were of one lyke measure, and there wente a ryngge wall rounde about them al foure, vnder the wiche there were hatches made rounde about. Then sayd he vnto me: This is the kitchin, where the mynysters of ỹ house shal dyght the slayne offringes of ỹ people.

¶ The vyson of the waters that come out of the temple. The costes of the lande of promysse, and the deuysyon therof by tribes.

CAPI. XLVII.

A Fter this he brought me agayne before the dore of the house: and behold there gusshed out waters from vnder the postes of ỹ house eastward (for the house stode towarde the east) that ranne downe vpon the ryght syde of the house, whiche lyeth to the suther south ward. Then caried he me out to the nozthe doze, and brought me forth there rounde about by the vttermost doze that turneth eastwarde. Beholde, there came forthe the water vpon the ryghte syde. Nowe when the man that had the measrod in his hande went vnto the east doze, he measured a. M. cubites, and then he brought me thorowe the water, euen to the ancles: so he measured yet a thousande, and brought me thorowe the water agayne vnto the knees: yet measured he a thousand, and brought me thorowe the water vnto the loynes. After this he measured a thousande agayne, then was it such a ryuer, that I myght not wade thorowit: The water was so depe, ỹ it was needefull to haue swymmed, for it myght not be waded ouer. And he sayd vnto me: hast ỹ sene this, O thou sonne of man? and with that, he brought me to the ryuer banche agayne.

B Nowe when I came there, there stode many trees vpon either syde of the ryuer backe. Then sayd he vnto me: This water that goeth out toward the east, & runneth downe in to the playne felde, commeth into the see: and from the see it runneth out, and maketh the waters hole. Yea all that lyue and moue whereunto this ryuer commeth, shall recouer. And where this water commeth, there shall be moch fysh. For all that comme.h to this water, shall be lusty and hole. By this ryuer shal the fysshers stande from Engaddi vnto En Eglaim, & there spreade out their nettes: for there shal be great heapes of fysh lyke as in the mayne see. As for his clay-pyttes, they shal not be hole, for why, it shal be occupyed for salte.

C By this ryuer vpon bothe the sydes of the shore, there shall growe all maner of frutful trees, whose leaues shall not fall of, neither shall their frute perysh: but euer be rype at their monethes, for their water runneth out of their Sanctuary.

His frute is good to eat, and his leafe profitable for medycine. Thus sayth the Lorde God: Let this be the border, wherin ye shal deuide the lande vnto the xij. tribes of Israel with the lyne.

Parte it indifferently vnto one as vnto an other: of the whiche lande I swore vnto youre fathers, that it shulde fall to your inheritaunce.

This is the border of the lande vpon the D nozthsyde, from the mayne see, as men goo to Zadada: namely Hemath, Berothe, Sibraim: from the borders of Damascus and Hemath vnto Hazar Hichō, and that lyeth vpō the costes of Hauteram.

Thus the borders from the see forth, shall be Hazar Enan, the border of Damascus the nozth, and the borders of Hemath: that is the nozth parte.

The east syde shall ye measure from Hauteran and Damascus from Galead and the land of Israel by Jordan and so forth, from the see cost, that lyeth eastwarde: and this is the east parte.

The southsyde is, from Thamar forthe to the waters of stryfe vnto Cades, the ryuer, to the mayne see: and that is the southe parte.

The west parte: namely the greate see hō the borders therof tyll a man come vnto Hemath: this is the west parte.

This lande shall ye part amonge you, according to the tribes of Israel, & deuyde it to be an heritage for you, & for the straūgers that dwell amonge you, and beget children. For ye shal take them amonge ỹ children of Israel, lyke as thoughe they were of youre owne housholde & cōtrey, and they shal haue heritage with you amonge the children of Israel.

Loke in what trybe the straunger dwelleth, in the same tryde shall ye gyue him his heritage, sayeth the Lorde God.

¶ The lottes of the seuen trybes. The partes of the possessyon of the prestes and of the temple, of the kenytes, of the cytye, of the prynce, are reherced. The lottes of the other trybes. The gates of the cytye.

CAPI. XLVIII.

THese are the names of the trybes that lye vpon the nozthsyde, by the waye of Hetlon, tyl thou cōmest vnto Hemath and Hazar Enam, the borders of Damascus towarde the Nozthe beside Hemath: Dan shall haue his portion frome the east quarter vnto the west. Vpon the borders of Dan frome the east syde vnto the west, shall Aser haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Aser from the east part vnto the west shal Nephthali haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Nephthali from the east quarter vnto the west, shall Manasses haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Manasses from the east syde vnto the west, shall Ephraim haue his portion.

Vpon the borders of Ephraim frome the east part vnto ỹ west, shall Ruben haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Ruben frome the

the east quarter vnto the west shal Juda haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Juda from the east parte to the west, ye shal set aside one portion of xxv. M. meteroddes longe & brode, (lyke as an other portion from the east syde vnto the weste) therin the Sanctuarye shall stande.

As for the portion that ye shal separate out for the Lorde, it shal be xxv. M. longe, and ten thousand brode. Which separated holy portiō shal belong vnto there: namely to the prestes towarde the nozth xxv. M. and toward ỹ west ten thousand brode, toward the east ten thousand brode also, and toward the south xxv. M. long, wherin the Sanctuary of the Lord shal stand. Yea this same place shal be the prestes that are of the children of Sadoch, and haue kept my holy ordinaunce, which went not astraye in the errour of the children of Israel, like as the Leuites are gone alleay: and this separated pece that they haue of the lād, shal be the moost holy, harde vpon the borders of the Leuites.

And next vnto the prestes, shal the Leuites haue xxv. thousande long, and ten M. brode. This shal be on euery syde xxv. M. long, and ten M. brode. Of this portion they shal sel nothing, ne make any permutation therof, leest the chefe of the lande fall vnto other, for it is halowed vnto the Lorde.

The other fyue. M. after the bredeth that lyeth by the xxv. thousand, shall be common: it shal belong to the city and to the suburbes for habitations, and the cityе shall stande in the midst therof. Let this be ỹ measure: toward the nozth part fyue hundred and four. M. toward the south part, fyue. C. and four. M. toward the east part. v. C. and four. M. toward the west part. v. C. and four thousand.

The suburbes hard vpon the city, shal haue toward the north. l. and two. C. towarde the south. l. and two. C. toward the east. l. and. C. toward the west also. l. and two hundred. As for the residue of the length ỹ lyeth harde vpon the separated holy grounde: namely. x. M. toward the east, and ten. M. towarde the west, vnto the holye portion: it and the encrease therof, shall serue for their meate that laboure in the cityе. They ỹ labour for the welth of the city, shal mayntein this also, out of what tribe so euer they be in Israel.

L All that is separated of the xxv. thousande long and xxv. thousand brode on the four parts, that shall ye put a syde for the separated portion of the sanctuary, and for the possessiō of the city. The residue vpon both the syde of the sanctuary and possession of the city shal belong to the prince, before the place of the xxv. thousande vnto the east ende, and before the place of the xxv. M. westwarde, vnto the borders of the cityе: this shall be the princes portion. This shall be the holy place, and the house of the sanctuary shall stand in the midst. Moreouer, from the Leuites and ỹ cities possession that lye in the middest of the princes part: loke what remayneth betwixt the borders of Juda and the border of Benjamin, it shal be the princes.

Now of the other tribes.

From the east part vnto the west shal Benjamin haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Benjamin from the east syde vnto the weste, shal Simeon haue his portion. Vpon ỹ borders of Symeon from the east part vnto the west shall Isahar haue his portion. Vpon the border of Isahar frome the east syde vnto the west, shal Sabulon haue his portion. Vpon the borders of Sabulon from the east part vnto the west shal Gad haue his portion. Upon the borders of Gad southward, the costes shal reache from Thamar forthe vnto the waters of stryfe to Cades, and to the brode, euen vnto the mayne see.

This is the land with his portions which ye shall distrybute vnto the tribes of Israel sayeth the Lord God. Thus with shal the cityе reache: Vpon the nozth part fyue. C. and foure thousande measures. The portes of the cityе shall haue the names of the tryбes of Israel. Three portes of the north syde: one Ruben, another Juda, the thirde Leui.

Upon the east syde fyue. C. and foure thousand measures, with three portes: The one Joseph an other Benjmin, the third Dan. Upō the south syde fyue hundred and four thousand measures, with the three portes: the one Symeon, an other Isahar, the third Sabulon. And vpon the west syde fyue. C. and foure. M. measures, with three portes also, the one Gad an other aller, ỹ third Nephthali. Thus shal it haue. xviij. thousand measures round about. And from that time forth the name of the city shalbe: The Lorde is there.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Ezechiel.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE DANIEL.

¶ The Prophet: Hewyth the captyuyte of Joakym kynge of Juda. Of the fonnes that were in captyuyte, the kynge commaundeth to chose whyche of them shulde be taught the lernyng and language of the Caldees. They are alowed the kynges kytynge. Daniel abstayneth from the meate of the kynge of Babylon. The lernyng and instruction of these thyldren.

CAPI. I.

a Jim. 2. reyth. 2 & 24. Pa. xxxvi. d

IN the thyrde yere of the raygne of Joakim kynge of Juda, came Nabuchodonosor kynge of Babylon vnto Jerusalem, and besieged it: and the Lorde delyuered Joakim the kynge of Juda in to his handes: with certayne ornamentes of the house of God: which he caryed awaye vnto the land of Sennar, to the house of his God, and there he broughte them in to his goddes treasury. And the kynge spake vnto Asphenaz the chiefe chamberlayne, that he shulde brynge hym certayne of the children of Israel that were come of the kinges seed, and of Princes, yonge spryngolde withoute any blemysshe, but faire and well fauoured in facion in all wysdome, conning and vnderstandynge, which were able to stande in the kinges palace, to rede, and to lerne for to speake Caldeith.

b Unto these the kynge appoynted a certeyn porcion of his owne meate, and of the wyne, wyche he dranke hym selfe, so to nourysshe them thre yere, that afterwarde they myght stande before the kynge. Amonge these nowe were certayne of the chyldren of Juda, name ly Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias. Unto these the chefe chamberlayne gaue other names, and called Daniel Balthasar: Ananias Sydrach: Misael Misach: and Azarias Abednago. But Daniel was at a poynte with hym selfe, that he wolde not be defyled thorowe the kynges meat, nor the wyne whiche he dronke. And this he desyred of the chiefe chamberlayne, lest he wolde be defyled hym selfe. So God gaue Daniel fauour and grace before the chiefe chamberlayne, that he sayde vnto hym: I am afrayde of my lorde the kyng, whiche hath appoynted you your meate and dryncke, lest he spye youre faces to be worse lyke kynge then the other spryngoldes of youre age, and so ye shall make me lose my heed vnto the kynge.

Gene. 41. d Dan. 2. b Jud. 2. g. 12. a

Then Daniel answered Melasser, whome the chiefe chamberlayne had set ouer Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias, and sayde: O proue but ten dayes with thy seruauntes, and let vs haue potage to eate, and water to drynche / then loke vpon oure faces, and ouerys that eate of the kynges meate. And as thou lerest, so deale with thy seruauntes. So he consented to them in this matter, and proued them ten dayes. And after the ten dayes theyr faces were better lykynge, and fatter then all the yonge spryngoldes which ate of the kynges meate.

Thus Melasser toke away their meat and wyne, and gaue them potage therfore. God gaue nowe these foure spryngoldes cunnyng and lernyng in all lettres and wysdome, but vnto Daniel specially he gaue vnderstandyng of all visions and dreames. Nowe when the tyme was expyred that the kyng had appoynted to brynge in these yonge spryngoldes vnto him: the chiefe chamberlayne broughte them before Nabuchodonosor, and the kynge communed with them. But amonges them all were founde none suche as Daniel, Ananias, Misael, and Azarias.

Therfore stode they before the kynge, whyche in all wysdome, and matters of vnderstandyng that he enquyred of them, found them ten tymes better then all the sothesayers and charmers, that were in al his realme. And Daniel abode styll vnto the fyrste yere of kynge Cyrus.

¶ The dreame of Nabuchodonosor, he calleth vnto hym sothesayers, and requyreth of them, both the dreame and the interpretacion therof. They answere that they can not shewe it. The kynge commaundeth all the wyse men of Babylon to be slayne. Daniel requyreth tyme to solue the question. The Lorde openeth the mystery vnto Daniel. Daniel is brought vnto the kynge, and sheweth him his dreame and the interpretation therof. Of the foure chefe kynge kyngdome of Christe. The stone Christe. Daniel is exalted and promoted of the kynge.

CAPI. II.

IN the seconde yere of the raygne of Nabuchodonosor, had Nabuchodonosor a dreame where thorowe his spirite was troubled, and his slepe brake from hym. Then the kynge commaunded to call togyther all the sothesayers, charmers, wytches and Caldees, for to shewe the kyng his dreame. So they came and stode before the kynge. And the kyng sayd vnto them: I haue dreamed a dreame, and my spirite was so troubled therwith, that I haue clene forgotten what I dreamed. Upon this the Caldees answered the kynge in the Syryans speche: O kynge, God saue thy life for ever. Shewe thy seruauntes the dreame, and we shal shewe the what it meaneth. The kynge gaue the Caldees theyr answere, and sayde: It is gone fro me: If ye will not make me vnderstande the dreame, with the interpretation therof, ye shall dye, and your houses shall be pylled. But yf ye tell me the dreame and the meanynge therof, ye shall haue of me gyftes, rewardes, and great honoure: onely, shewe me the dreame and the signification of it.

They

They answered agayne and sayde: The kynge maye shewe his seruauntes the dreame and so shall we declare what it meaneth. Then the kynge answered, sayinge: I perceyue of a certeyne, that ye do but prolonge the space: for so moche as ye se that the thyng is gone fro me. Therfore ye will not tell me the dreame, ye shal all haue one iudgement. But ye lyenge and dissemble with vayne wordes, whyle ye speake before me, to put of the tyme.

Therfore tell me the dreame, and so shall I knowe ye can shewe me what it meaneth. Then the Caldees gaue answere before the kynge, and sayde: there is no man vpon earth that can tell the kynge, whyche the kynge speaketh of: Yea, there is neyther kynge, Prynce nor Lorde, that euer asked suche thynges at a sothesayer, charmer or Caldee: for it is a harde matter, that the kynge requyreth. Neyther is there any, that can shewe the kynge therof, excepte the goddes: whose dwellynge is not among the mortals.

For whyche cause the kyng was wrothe with greate indignacion, and commaunded to destroye all the wyse men at Babylon, and the proclamacion went forthe, that the wyse men shulde be slayne. They sought also to slee Daniel with his companions. Then Daniel enquyred Arioch the kynges stewarde, of iudgement and sentence, that was gone forthe alredye to kyll suche as were wyse at Babylon.

He answered and sayd vnto Arioch beinge chefe kinges deputte: Why hath the kyng proclayned so cruell a sentence? Ye Arioch shewe Daniel the matter. Upon this went Daniel, and desyred the kynge that he myght haue leasure to shewe the kyng the interpretacion: and then came he home agayne, and shewed the thyng vnto Ananias, Misael, and Azarias his companions, that they shulde beseche the God of heuen for grace in this secret, that Daniel and and his felowes, with other lyche as were wyse in Babylon, perysshed not.

Then was the mistery shewed vnto Daniel in a vysyon by nyght. And Daniel praysed the God of heuen. Daniel also cryed loude and sayd: O that the name of God might be prayed for euer and euer, for wysdome & strength are his owne / he chaungeth the tymes and ages: he putteth downe kynges / he setteth vp kynges: he geueth wysedome vnto the wyse, and vnderstandynge to those that vnderstande: he openeth the depe secretes: he knoweth the thynge that lyeth in darknesse, for the lyght dwelleth with him. I thanke the, and prayse the (O thou God of my fathers) that thou hast lent me wysedome and strength, and hast shewed me the thynge that we desired of the, for thou hast opened the kinges matter vnto me.

Upon this went Daniel in vnto Arioch, whome the kynge had ordeyned to destroye all wyse at Babylon: he went vnto him and sayd: destroye not suche as are wyse in Babylon, but bynge me in to the kynge, and I shall shewe the kynge the interpretacion.

Then Arioch broughte Daniel in to the kyng in all the haste, and sayde vnto him: I haue founde a man amonges the prysoners of Juda, that shall shewe the kynge the interpretacion. Then answered the kynge, and sayd vnto Daniel, whose name was Balthasar: Art thou he that canst shewe me the dreame, whyche I haue sene, and the interpretacion therof? Daniel answered the kynge to his face, and sayd: As for this secret, for the whyche the kynge maketh inquisicion: it is neyther the wyse, the sorcerer, the charmer, ne the deuyll coniurer, that can certifye the kynge of it: Onely God in heauen can open secretes, and he it is that sheweth the kyng Nabuchodonosor, what is for to come in the latter dayes. Matth. 24. d

Thy dreme, and that whych thou hast sene in thyne heed, vpō thy bed, is this: O kyng, thy thoughtes came in thy mynde what shulde come hereafter. So he that is the opener of misteries, telleth thee what is for to come. As for me, this secret is not shewed me for any wysdom that I haue more then any other lyuyng: but only that I myght shewe the kynge the interpretacion, and that he might know the thoughtes of his owne hert. Thou kyng sawest, and beholde, there stode before the a great ymage, whose figure was maruelous great, and his vysage grymme. The ymage here was of fyne golde, his brest and armes of syluer, his bodye and loynes were of copper, his legges were of yron, his fete were parte of yron and parte of earthe.

This thou sawest, tyll the tyme (that without any handes) there was hewen of a stone, whyche smote the ymage vpon the fete, that were bothe of yron and erth, and brake the to pouther: then was the yron, the erth, the copper the syluer and gold broken all togyther in peces: and became lyke the chaffe of corne, that the wynde bloweth awaye from the commen floores, that they can no more be found. But the stone that smote the ymage became a greate mountayne, which fulfilleth the hole erth: this is the dreme. And now will we shew before the kinge, what it meaneth. Matth. 21. c Luke 20. b

O kynge, thou arte a kyng of kynges: For the God of heauen hathe gyuen the a kyngedome, tycheffe, strengthe, and maiestye: and hathe delyuered the all thynges that are amonges the children of men: the beastes of the feld, and the foules vnder the heuen, and gyuen the dominion ouer them all. Thou arte that golden heed. After the, there shall aryse an other kyngdome, whiche shall be lesse then thyne. The thyrde kyngdome shall be lyke copper, and haue dampnacion in all landes. The fourthe kyngdome shall be as stronge as yron. For lyke as yron breaketh and breaketh all thynges: Yea euen as yron beateth euerye thynge downe, so shall it beate downe and destroye. Daniel. 2. d

Where as thou sawest the feete and toes parte of earth and parte of yron, that is a deuyded kyngdome, whyche neuer shall

haue some of the yron grounde myxte with it for so moche as thou hast sene the yron myxte with claye.

The toes of the fete that were part of yron and part of claye, signifieth that it shall be a kyngdome partly stronge, and partly weyke. And where as ye sawest yron mixt with claye, they shall mynegle them selues with the seed of symple people, and yet not continue one with an other, lyke as yron will not be sowldered with a potsherd.

Clay.2.b 6 In the dayes of these kynges, shall the God of heuen set vp an euerlastynge kyngedome, whiche shall not perysshe, and his kyngdome shal not be gyuen ouer to an other people: yea the same shall breake and destroy all these kyngdomes, but it shall endure for euer.

Hebr.xiii.c And where as ye sawest that without anye handes there was cut out of the mount a stone, wyche brake the yron, the copper, the erth, the syluer and golde in peces: by that hathe the great God shewed the kynge what wil come after this. This is a true dreme, and the interpretacion therof is sure.

Then the kynge Nabuchodonosor fell downe vpon his face, and bowed him self vnto Daniel, and commaunded that they sholde offre sacrifices and swete sauours vnto him. The kynge answered Daniel, and sayd: yea of a truthe youre God is a God a bone all goddes, a Lorde aboue all kynges, and an opener of secretes, seinge thou canste discouer this misterie. So the kyng made Daniel a great man, and gaue him many & great gyftes.

He made him ruler of all the countreyes of Babylon, and lorde of all the nobles that were at Babylon. Nowe I anthi entreated the king for Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago so that he made them rulers ouer all the officers in the lande of Babylon. But Daniel him selfe remayned styll in the courte by the kynge.

¶ The kynge setteth vp a golden Image, whiche he commaundeth to be worshypped. Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago are accused, because they disobeyed the kynges commaundement. They are brought vnto the kynge and commaunded to worshyp the Image. They refuse to do it, and are put in to a burnynge ouen. By byleue in God, they are delyuered from the fyre. Nabuchodonosor confesseth the power of God after the sight of the myracle.

CAPI. III.

1 NAbuchodonosor the kynge caused a golden ymage to be made, which was thyrtye cubites hygh, and fyue cubites thik. This he made to be set vp in the felde of Dura in the lande of Babylon, and sente oute to gather togyther the dukes, lordes, and nobles, & iudges and officers, the debities & tyrantes, with all the rulers of the land: that they myghte come to the dedicacion of the ymage which Nabuchodonosor the kynge hadde set vp. So the dukes, lordes and nobles / the iudges and officers, deputyes and tyrantes with all the rulers of the lande gathered them togither, and came vnto the dedicating of the ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

Nowe when they stode before the ymage, whiche Nabuchodonosor sette vp, the herehed out with all his myght: O ye people, kynredes and tunges, to you be it sayd: that when ye heare the noyse of the trompetters wyche shall be blowen, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonyes, and all maner of musyke: ye fall downe and worshyp the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge hathe set vp. Who so then falleth not downe and worshyp him selfe, shall euen the same houre be cast in to an hote burnynge ouen. Therfore, when all the folke herde the noyse of the trompetters that were blowe, with the harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonyes, and all kynde of melodye: then all the people, kynredes and nacions fell downe, and bowed them selues vnto the golden ymage that Nabuchodonosor the kynge had set vp.

2 Now were there certayne men of the Caldees that went euen then and accused the Iewes, and sayd vnto the kynge Nabuchodonosor: O king, God saue thy lif for euer. Thou being kynge, hast gyuen a commaundement, that all men, when they heare noyse of the trompetters, harpes, shawmes, psalteries, symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: shall fall downe and bow them selues towarde the golden ymage: who so then fell not downe, and worshypped not, that he sholde be cast in to an hote burning ouen.

3 Now are there certeyn Iewes, whom thou hast set ouer the offices of the land of Babylon: namely, Sidrach, Misach and Abednago. These men (o kyng) regarde not thy commaundement, yea they will not serue thy goddes, ne bow them selues to the golden ymage that thou hast set vp.

Then Nabuchodonosor in a cruell wrathe and displeasure, commaunded, that Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago sholde be brought vnto him. So these men were brought before the kyng. Then Nabuchodonosor spake vnto them and sayd: what? O Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, will not ye serue my goddes? nor bowe your selues to the golden ymage, that I haue set vp? well be redye hereafter, when ye heare the noyse of the trompettes blowe with & harpes, shawmes, psalteryes, symphonyes, and all the other melodyes: that ye fall downe and worshyp the ymage which I haue made. But yf ye worshyp it not, ye shall be caste immediatlye in to an hote burnynge ouen. Lette se, what God is there, that maye delyuer you oute of my handes?

4 Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago answerd the kynge, and sayde: O Nabuchodonosor, we ought not to consent vnto the in this matter, for why? oure God whome we serue, is able to kepe vs from the hote burnynge ouen (O kynge) and can rydde vs out of thy handes. And though he will not shall thou knowe (O kynge) that we wyl not serue thy goddes, nor doo reuerence to the ymage, which thou hast set vp. Then was Nabuchodonosor full of indignacion, so that the countenaunce of his face chaunged vpon Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago. Therfore he charged & commaunded that the ouen sholde be made seuen tymes hoter then it was wont to be, and spake vnto the strongest worthyes that were in his hoste, for to binde Sidrach, Misach and Abednago, and to cast them in to the hote burnyng ouen.

So these men were bounde in their cotes, hosen, hoes, with their other garmentes, and all into the hote burning ouen: for the kings commaundement was so straite, and the ouen was exceadyng hote. As for the men that put in Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, the flame of the fyre destroyed them. And these three men: Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, fell downe in the hote burnynge ouen, being fast bounde.

Then Nabuchodonosor the kyng maruey-led, and rose vp in all haste: he spake vnto his counsell and sayde: dyd ye not cast three men bounde in to the fyre? They answered, and sayde vnto the kynge: Yea, O kynge. He answered and sayde: Lo for all that, yet wo I se fourr men goynge loose in the myddest of the fyre, and nothynge corrupte, and the fourthe is lyke an aungell to the sone.

Upon this wente Nabuchodonosor vnto & mouth of the hote burninge ouen & spake also, and said: O Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, ye seruaunts of the hye God, go forth and come hyther. And so Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago went oute of the fyre. Then the dukes, lordes, and nobles, and the kynges counsell came togyther to se these men, vpon whom the fyre had no maner of power in their bodyes. In so moche & the very heere of their hed was not burnt, and their clothes vnchaunged: yea there was no smell of fyre hit vpon them.

Then spake Nabuchodonosor and sayde: Blessed be the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago: whiche hathe sente his aungell, and defended his seruauntes, that put their trust in him / that haue altered the kynges commaundement, and iooparde their bodyes rather then they wolde serue or worshyp any other God, excepte their owne God onely.

Therfore I wyll and commaunde, that euery people, kynredes and tunges, whiche speake anye blasphemye agaynste the God of Sidrach, Misach, and Abednago, shall dye, and their houses shall be pyld: Bycause there is no God that maye saue, as this. So the kynge promoted Sydrach, Misach, and Abednago, in the lande of Babylon.

Nabuchodonosor dreameth agayne. Daniel interpreteth. Nabuchodonosor is put out of his wyt, and eateth with beastes. He is restored by the helpe of God, and is restored in to his kyngdome.

CAPI. IIII.

1 NAbuchodonosor kynge vnto all people, kynredes and tunges that dwell vpon the hole earthe: peax be multiplyed amonges you: I thought it good to shew the tokens and maruelous workes, that the hye God hath wrought vpon me. O howe greate are his tokens, and how mighty are his wonders? His kyngdom is an euerlastyng kyngdome, and his power lasteth for euer and euer. Psal.lxxb Daniel.vii.d Luke.i.d

2 I Nabuchodonosor beynge at rest in myne house, and flourysshynge in my palace, sawe a dreame, whiche made me afrayde / and the thoughtes that I had vpon my bed, with the visions of my heed troubled me. Then sent I out a commission, that all they which were of wysdome at Babylon sholde be brought before me, to tell me the interpretacyon of the dreame.

3 So there came the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and conuerers of deuyls / to whome I tolde the dreame, but what it betokened they could not shew me: tyl at the last there came one Daniel (otherwyse called Balthasar, accordynge to the name of my God) wyth the spirite of the holy goddes in him: to whome I tolde the dreame, sayenge: O Balthasar, thou Prynce of sothesayers: & for so moche as I knowe that thou hast the spirite of the holy Goddes, and no secrete is hyd from the: tell me therfore what the vysyon of my dreame (that I haue seen) maye signifye. I sawe a vision in my heed vpon my bed: and beholde there stode a tre vpon the grounde whiche was very hyghe, greate, and myghtye: the very th reached vnto the heuen, and the breadthe extended to all the endes of the earthe: the leaues were fayre, & he had very moche fruite, so that euery man had ynoughe to eate therin.

4 The beastes of the felde had shadowes vnder it, and the foules of the ayre dwelte in the bowes therof. Shortly, all creatures fed of it. I sawe in my heed a vysion vpon my bedde: and beholde, a watcher came downe from heuen, and cryed myghtyly, sayenge: Hewe downe the tree, breake of his braunches, shake of his leaues, and scatter his fruite abrode: that all the beastes maye gette them away from vnder him, and the foules from his braunches. Neuertheles, leaue the grounde of his roote styll in the earthe, and bynde him vpon the playne felde, with chaynes of yron and stele. With the dewe of heuen shall he be wet, and he shall haue his part in the herbes of the grounde with other wylde beastes.

5 That mannes herte of his shall be taken from him, and a beastes heere shall be geuen him, till seuen yeres be come and gone vpon him.

This erraude of the watcher, is a commaundement grounded and sought oute in the counsell of him that is moste holye: to teache men for to vnderstande that the highest hath power ouer the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom it lyketh him, & byndeth the vyle vnder them ouer them.

This is the dreame that I kynge Nabucho-nozor haue sene: therfore, O Balthasar, tell thou me what it signifieth: for so mothe as all the wyse men of my kyngdome are not able to shewe me what it meaneth. But thou canst do it, for the spirite of ỹ holy god-des is in the.

Then Daniel (whose name was Balthasar) helde his peax by the space of an hour, and his thoughtes troubled him. So the kynge spake, and sayd: O Balthasar, let neither the dreame ne the interpretation therof fear the.
Balthasar answered, saynge: O my Lorde,
this dreame happen to thyne enemies, & the the interpretation to thyne aduersaryes. As for the tree that thou sawest, whiche was so greate and mighty, whose heyght reached vnto the heuen, & his brede vnto all ỹ worlde, whose leaues were fayre, and the fruite moch vnder whiche the beestes of the felde had their habitacion, and vpon whose braunches
the foules of the ayre dyd syt.

Euen thou, O kynge, art the tree, great and stronge. Thy greatnesse encreaseth, and reacheth vnto the heuen, & thy power to the endes of the erth. But where as the king sawe a watcher, euen an holy aungell, that came downe frome heuen, and sayde: hewe downe the tree, and destroye it: yet leaue the grounde of the roote in the earthe: and bynd him vpon the playne felde, with cheynes of yron and stele. He shall be wet with the dewe of heauen, and his parte shall be with the beastes of the felde, tyll seuen yeres be come and gone vpon him. This (O kynge) is the interpretation, yea it is the very sentence of him that is hyest of all, and it toucheth my Lorde
the kynge.

Thou shalte be cast oute frō men, and thy dwellynge shall be with the beastes of the felde: with grasse shalte thou be fed lyke an
oxe. Thou must be wet with the dewe of heauen: Yea, seuen yeres shall come and goo vpon the, tyll thou knowe that the hyest hath power vpon the kyngdomes of men, and gyueth them to whom he will. Moreouer, where as it was sayd that the roote of the tree shulde be lefte styll in the grounde: it betokeneth ỹ thy kyngdome shall remayne hole vnto the,
after thou hast learned to knowe, that the power commeth from heauen. Wherfore, O kynge, be content with my counsel, that thou mayste loose thy synnes with righteousnesse, and thyne offences with mercy to poore people: for so suche thynges shal prolong thy peax.
All these thynges touche the kyng Nabucho donosor.

So after twelue monethes, the kyng walked vp and downe in the palace of the kyngdome of Babylon, and sayd: This is ỹ great citye of Babylon, which I my selfe, with my power and strengthe) haue made a kynges courte for the honour of my maiestie. While these wordes was yet in the kynges mouthe,
there fell a voyce from heuen saying: O kyng Nabuchodonosor, to the be it spoken: Thy kyngdome shall departe from the, thou shalt be cast out of mens company: thy dwellynge shall be with the beastes of the felde, so that thou shalt eate grasse lyke as an oxe, til seuen yeres be come and gone ouer the, euen vntyll thou knowest that the hyest hath power vpō
the kyngdomes of men, and that he maye
gyue them vnto whome it pleaseth him.
The verye same houre was this matter fulfylled vpon Nabuchodonosor / so that he was caste out of mennes companye, and eate grasse lyke an oxe. His bodye was wet with ỹ dewe of heuen, tyll his heeres were as great as Egles fethers, and his nayles like byrdes clawes.

When this tyme was past, I Nabuchodonosor lyfte vp myne eyes vnto heauen, and myne vnderstandynge was restored vnto me againe. Then gaue I thankes vnto ỹ highest.
I magnified and praysed him that lyueth for euer more, whose power endureth allwaye, and his kyngdom from one generacion to another: in comparyson of whom, all they that dwelle vpon the earthe, are to be reputed as nothynge.

He handleth accordyng to his will among the powers of heuen, and amonge the inhabitauntes of the earth / and there is none that maye withstande his hande, or saye: what doest thou? At the same tyme was myne vnderstandynge gyuen me agayne, and I was restored to the honour of my kingdome, to my dignitie, & to myne owne shape agayne. My great states and princes sought vnto me, and I was set in my kyngdome agayne, so that I had yet greater worshyp.

Then dyd I Nabuchodonosor loue, magnifie and prayse the kynge of heuen, for all his workes are true, and his wayes right. As for those that goo proudly, he is able to bringe them downe.

¶ Balthazar kynge of Babylon abusynge the vessels of the temple, seith an hande writyng vpon wall. The coniectors called of the kynge, cannot expounde the writynge. Daniel is called, whiche readeth it, and interpreteth it also. Balthazar kynge slayne, Darius succedeth in his rowme.

CAPI. V.

KYng Balthazar made a great banket to a his thousande Lordes: with all these thousand he made great cheere, and whē
he was dronken with wyne, he commaunded to bring him the golden & syluer vessels, whyche his father Nabuchodonosor had take out of the temple at Jerusalem: that the kyng & g his lordes with his quens and concubines might dynke therin.

So they brought the golden vessels ỹ were taken oute of the temple of the lordes house at Jerusalem. Then the kynge and his lordes with his quene and concubynes dronke of them. They dronke wyne, and praysed their idolles of golde, syluer, copper, yron, wod and stone.

In the verye same houre there appeared fyngers, as it had bene of a mans hande writ tynge, right oure agaynste the candelstycke
vpon the playne wall in the kynges palace:
and the kynge sawe the palme of the hande that wrot. Then chaunged the king his countenaunce, and his thoughtes troubled him, so that the ioynres of his bodye broke, and his knees smote one against the other. Wherfore the king cryed myghtely, that they shuld bringe him the charmers, Caldees and coniurers of deuyls. The kyng spake also to the wise men of Babylon, and said: Who so can rede this writinge, and shewe me the playne meanynge therof: shall be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about his necke, and rule the thyrde parte of my kingdome.

Vpon this, came all the kynges wyse men:
but they coulde neither reade the writing, ne shew the king what it signified. Then was the kinge sore afrayed: in so moche, that his colour chaunged, and his lordes were sore vexed. So by reason of this matter, that had happened to the king and his lordes, ỹ quene went vp her selfe into the banket house, & spake vnto the kinge, saynge: O king, God geue thy lyfe for euer: Let not the thoughtes trouble the, and let not thy countenaunce be chaunged. For why? there is a man in thy kingdom, that hathe the spirite of the holye goddes within him, as it was seene in thy fathers dayes. He hath vnderstandynge & wisdome lyke the goddes. Yea the kinge Nabuchodonosor thy father made this man cheife of the sothsayers, charmers, Caldees and dyuyll coniurers: because that such an abundaūt spirite, knowledge and wysdome (to expoūde dreames, to ope secretes, and to declare hard doubtes) was found in him: yea euen in Daniel, whome the king named Balthazar. Let this same Daniel be sent for, and he shall tell, what it meaneth.

Then was Danyel brought before the kinge. So the kinge spake vnto Danyel, and sayde: Arte thou that Danyel, one of ỹ prysoners of Juda, whome my father the kynge brought out of Jurye? I haue herde speake of the, that thou hast the spirite of the holy goddes, experience and vnderstandynge, and that there hath bene great wysdome founde in ỹ. Now haue there ben brought me, wyse and cunnynge charmers to reade this wrytynge and to shewe me the meanynge therof. But they coulde not tell me, what this matter signified. Thē herde I saye, that thou canst expounde darcke thynges, and declare harde doubtes. Wel than, yf thou canst rede this wrytynge, and shewe me the meanynge therof: thou shalte be clothed with purple, haue a cheyne of golde about thy necke, and rule the thirde parte of my kingdome.

Daniel answered, & sayd before the king:
As for thy rewardes, kepe them to thy selfe, & gyue thy gyftes to an other: yet not withstāding, I will reade the writtinge vnto ỹ king and shewe him the interpretacion therof. O kyng, God the hyghest gaue vnto Nabuchodonosor thy father, the dignitie, & a kinge, with worshyp and honoure: so that all people, kynredes & tonges stode in awe and fear of him, by reason of the hyghe estate that he had let him. For why, he slew whom he wolde: he smote, whome it pleased him.

Agayne: whom he wolde, he set vp: & whom he lyst, he put downe. But because his heerte was so proude, and his stomache set so fast vnto wylfulnesse: he was deposed from his kyngly trone, and his maiestye was taken from him. He was shot out from amonges men, his heert was lyke a beastes heerte, & his dwellyng was with the wylde asses: he was fayne to eate grasse like an oxe, and his body was wet with the dewe of the heauen: tyll
he knewe that the hyghest had power vpon
the kingdomes of me, and setteth ouer them whom he lyst.

Daniel.iiii.d.

And thou his sonne (O Balthazar) for al
this, hast not submytted thine heert, thoughe thou knewest al these thinges: but hast magnyfyed thy selfe aboue the Lord of heuen, so that ỹ vessels of his house were brought before the: that thou, and thy Lordes, with thy quene & concubines, might drincke wyne therin. And hast praysed the Idols of syluer and gold, copper and yron, of wod and stone.
As for the God in whose hande consysteth thy breth and all thy wayes: thou hast not loued him.

Baruch.vi.

Therfore is the palme of this hande sent hither from him, to token vp this writtynge.
And this is the interpretacion, that is written vp:
Mane, Thecel, Phares. Now the interpretacion of the thing is this: Mane, God hath nombred thy kyngdom, and brought it to an ende: Thecel, thou art weyed in the balaūce & arte found to light: Phares, thy kingdom is delte in partes, and gyuen to the Medes and Perses.

Then commaunded Balthazar, to clothe Danyel with purple, to hange a cheyne of gold about his necke, and and to make a proclamacyon concernynge him, that he shuld be the ruler of the thyrde parte of his kyngdome. The very same nyght was Balthazar
the king of the Caldees slayne, and Darius out of Medea tooke the kyngedome, beynge lxij yere of age.

Esay.xlvii.b

Daniel.ix.a.

¶ Daniel is made ruler ouer the lordes. The imagenacyon of an acte against Daniel. The proclamacyon of the acte, wherof Daniel is accused vnto the kynge as a transgressour. He is put in to a dennē of lyons by the commaundement of the kyng. He is delyuered by trayth in God. Daniels accusers are put in to the lyons to be tozne in sonder. Darius by the proclamacyon of a decree, magnifyeth the God of Daniel.

CAPI. VI.

IT pleased Darius to sette ouer his king- a dom an. C. and xx. Lordes, which shulde be in all his kyngdom about. Ouer these he set three Peyncers (of whome Daniel was one) that the lordes myght gyue accomptes vnto

vnto them, and the kynge to be vnthrallede.

But Daniel exceded all theſe princes and lordes, for the ſpirite of God was plenteous in him: ſo that the kynge was mynded to ſet him ouer the hole realme. Wherfore the Princes and Lordes ſought̃e, to pycke oute in Daniel ſome quarell againſt the kingdom yet could they fynde none occaſion ne faute vpon him. For why? he was ſo faythfull, that there was no blame ne dishoneſtye founde in him.

Then ſayde theſe men: we wyll get no quarell agaynſte this Daniel, except it be in the lawes of his God. Upon this, wente the prynces and lordes together vnto the kinge, and ſayde thus vnto him: kinge Darius God ſaue thy lyfe for euer. All the great eſtates of the realme: as the princes, Dukes, Senatours, and Judges, are determed to put out a commaundement of the kynge, & to make ſure ſtatute namely, that who ſo deſireth any petition, either of any God or man (within this .xxx. dayes) except it be only of the, O kinge: the ſame perſon maye be caſt into the lyons denne. Wherfore, O kinge confirme this ſtatutes, and make a wrytyng that the thinge which the Medes and Perſes haue ordeyned be not aultered ne broken.

So Darius made the wrytynge, and confirmed it. Nowe when Daniel vnderſtode that the wrytinge was made, he went into his houſe: and the windowes of his hall, towarde Jeruſalem ſtode open. There kneled he downe vpon his knees, thre tymes a day there he made his petition, and prayſed his God, lyke as his maner was to doo afore tyme.

Then theſe men made ſearche, and founde Daniel makinge his petition, and prayenge vnto his God: So they came to the kynge, & ſpake before him concernynge his commaundement, ſayinge: O kynge, haſte thou not ſubſcribed the ſtatute, that within thirty dayes who ſo requyreth his petition of anye God or man but only of thy ſelf, O kyng: he ſhal be caſt into the den of the lyons? The kinge anſwered, and ſayde: yea it is true. It muſt be as a law of the Medes and Perſes, that maye not be broken.

Then anſwered they, and ſayde vnto the kinge: Daniel one of the priſoners of Juda O king, regardeth neither the, ne thy ſtatute that thou haſt made, but maketh his petition thre tymes a day. When the kynge heard theſe wordes, he was ſore greued, and wold haue reſcued Daniel, to delyuer him & put of the matter, vnto the Sunne went downe to the intent that he myght ſaue him.

Theſe men perceyuynge the kinges mynde ſayde vnto him: knowe this, O kynge, that the lawe of the Medes and Perſes is that the commaundement and ſtatute which the kinge maketh, may not be altered. Then the kynge had them bynd Daniel, and they caſt him into the lyons den.

The kynge alſo ſpake vnto Daniel, and ſayd: thy God, whom thou alwaye ſerueſt, euen he ſhall delende the. And there was brought a ſtone, and layde vpon the hole of the den, this the kinge ſeled with his owne ringe, & with the ſignet of his princes: that the kynges commaundement concernynge Daniel, ſhulde not be broken.

So the kinge went into his palace, and kept him ſober all nyght, ſo that there was no table ſpred before him, neither coulde he take any ſlepe. But by tymes in the morninge at the breake of the daye, the kynge aroſe, and went in all haſte vnto the denne of the Lyons.

Now as he came nygh vnto the denne, he cryed with a pyteous voyce vnto Daniel: & the kinge ſpake, and ſayde vnto Daniel: O Danyel, thou ſeruaunt of the lyuynge God is not thy God (whom thou alway ſerueſt) able to delyuer the from the Lyons? Daniel ſayde vnto the kinge: O kinge, God ſaue thy lyfe for euer. My God hath ſent his aungell, which hath ſhut the Lyons mouthes, ſo that they myght not hurte me. For why? myne vngiltyneſſe is founde out before him. And as for the, O kynge, I neuer offended the.

Then was the kynge exceding glad, and commaunded to take Daniel out of the den. So Daniel was brought out of the denne, & no maner of hurt was founde vpon him. For he put his truſte in his God. And as for thoſe men which had accuſed Daniel, the kinge commaunded to bringe them, and to caſte them in the lyons denne, them thre children and their wyues. So the Lyons had the maſtry of them, and brake all their bones a ſondre, or euer they came at the grounde.

After this, wrote kynge Darius vnto all people kyndredes, and tunges, that dwelte in all landes: peace be multeplyed with you: My cõmaundement is, in all my dompynion and kyngdome, that men feare and ſtande in awe of Daniels God.

For he is the lyuynge God, which abideth euer: his kyngdome ſhall not fayle, and his power is euerlaſtynge. He is he that delyuereth, & ſaueth: he doth wõders & marueylous workes, in heauen and in earthe: he hathe preſerued Daniel from the power of the lyons. Thus Daniel proſpered in the regyment of Darius and Cirus of Perſia.

¶ Viſion of foure beaſtes is ſhewed vnto Daniel. The vyſion is interpreted of foure kyngdomes of the world. Of the power and increaſe of Antichriſt. Of the euerlaſtynge kyngdome of Chriſte.

CAPI. VII.

In the fyrſte yeare of Balthazar kynge of Babylon, ſawe Daniel a dreame, and a viſyon was in his heade vpon his bedde. Whiche became he wrote, and the ſumme of the matter is this: Daniel ſpake and ſayde, I ſawe in my viſyon by nyght, and beholde the foure windes of the heauen ſtroue vpon the ſee, and foure greate beaſtes came vp frõ the ſee one vnlyke an other.

The fyrſt was as a lyõ, and yet had he Egles wynges. I ſawe, that his wynges were plucke from him, and he taken awaye from the earth, that he ſtode vpon his fete as a man and that there was gyuen hym a mans heart.

Beholde, the ſeconde beaſt was lyke a beer, & ſtode vpon ſyde. Amonges his teeth in his mouth he had thre greate long teeth, & it was ſayde vnto him: Ariſe, eate vp, moche fleſhe.

Then I loked, and beholde, there was another lyke vnto a Leoparde: this had wynges as a foule, euen foure vpon the backe. This beaſt had foure heades, and there was power gyuen him.

After this I ſawe in a viſion by nyght, & beholde the fourth beaſt was geyrnge horrible, and meruelous ſtronge. It had greate yrons with, it deuoured and deſtroyed, and ſtamped the reſidue vnder his fete. It was farre vnlyke the other beaſtes that were before it: for it hadde ten hornes, wherof I take good hede.

And beholde, there came vp among them another lytle horne, before whome there were thre of the fyrſte hornes pluckte away. Beholde this horne had eyes lyke a man, and a mouth ſpeakyng preſumptuous thynges. I loked tyll the ſeates were prepared, and tyl the old aged ſat hym downe. His clothing was as whyte as ſnowe, and the heares of his heed lyke the pure woll. His trone was lyke the fyry flame, and his wheles as the burnynge fyre. There drewe forthe a fyrye ſtreme, and went out from him. A thouſande tymes a thouſande ſerued hym, & x. M. tymes ten thouſande ſtode before him. The iudgement was ſet, and the bokes opened. Then take I hede therunto, becauſe of the voyce of the proude wordes, which that horne ſpake I beheld, tyll the beaſt was ſlayne, and his body deſtroyed, and gyuen ouer to be brente in the fyre.

As for the power of the other beaſtes alſo it was taken awaye, but theyr lyues were prolonged for a tyme and ſeaſon. I ſawe in viſion by nyght, and beholde, there came one in the cloudes of heauen lyke the ſonne of a man, whiche went vnto the olde aged, before whom they brought him: Then gaue he hym power & dignytie regall, that all people, feyres and tunges ſhulde ſerue him. His power is an euerlaſtynge power, which ſhall neuer be put downe: and his kingdome endureth vnoorrupt. My herte was vexed, and I Daniel had a troubled ſpirite within me, & the viſions of my head made me afrayde: till I came vnto one of them that ſtode by, to knowe the truth, concernynge all theſe thinges. So he tolde me, and made me vnderſtãde the interpretacion of theſe thynges.

Theſe foure great beaſtes, are foure kynges whiche ſhal aryſe out of the earth. Theſe ſhall take in the kyngdome of the ſayntes of the moſt hygheſt, and poſſeſſe it tyll more and more for alonge ſeaſon. After this I requyred diligently to knowe the truthe, concernynge the fourth beaſte, which was ſo farre vnlike the other beaſtes, & ſo horrible: whoſe teeth were of yron, and his nayles of braſſe: which deuoured and deſtroyed, and ſtamped the reſydue vnder his fete. I deſyred alſo to knowe the truth, as touchinge the ten hornes that he had vpon his heade, and this other whiche came vp afterwarde, before whoſe face there fell downe thre: which horne had eyes and a mouth that ſpake preſumptuous thinges, and loked with a grymmer vyſage then his felowes. I beheld, and ſame horne made battayle agaynſt the ſayntes, yea and gat the victorye of them vntyl the tyme that the old aged came, that the iudgemente was gyuen to the chiefeſt ſayntes: and tyll the tyme that the ſayntes had the kyngdome in poſſeſſyon. He gaue me this anſwere: That fourth beaſt ſhall be the fourth kyngdome vpon earth: it ſhall be more then all other kyngdomes, it ſhall deuoure, treade downe, and deſtroye all other landes.

The ten hornes, are ten kinges, that ſhall aryſe out of the kingdom, after whome there ſhall ſtande vp an other, which ſhal be greater then the fyrſte. He ſhall ſubdue thre kinges, and ſhall ſpeake wordes agaynſte the vpgheſt of all: he ſhall deſtroye the ſayntes of the moſt hygheſt, and thynke, that he may chaunge tymes and lawes. They ſhal be gyuen vnder his power, vntyll a tyme, two tymes, and halfe a tyme.

But the iudgement ſhall be kepte, ſo that his power ſhal be taken from him, for he ſhal be deſtroyed, and peryſhe at the laſte. As for the kyngdome, power, and all myght that is vnder the heuen: it ſhall be gyuen to the holye people of the moſt hygheſt, whoſe kyngdome is euerlaſtynge / yea all powers ſhall ſerue and obeye hym. Thus farre extende the wordes. Neuertheleſſe, I Daniel was ſo vexed in my thoughtes, that my countenaũce chaunged but the wordes I kepte fyll in my herte.

¶ Vyſyon of a ſtryfe betwene a ramme and an he gote. The vnderſtandyng of the vyſyon, is of the battell betwene the kynge of Perſia, and the kynge of the Grecians. Of the chamelelle kynge Antichriſte.

CAPI. VIII.

In the thyrde yere of the reyne of kynge Balthazar, there appeared a vyſyon vnto me Daniel, after that I had ſene the firſt I ſawe in a viſyon (and when I ſaw it, I was at Suſis in the chiefe city, whiche lieth in the lande of Elam) and in the viſion me thought I was by the ryuer Ulai.

Then I loked vp, and ſawe: and beholde, there ſtode before the ryuer, a ramme, which had hornes: and theſe hornes were hygh, but one was hygher then an other, & the higheſt came vp laſte.

I ſawe that this ramme puſhed with his hornes, agaynſte the weſte, agaynſt the north and & agaynst the southsyde that no beastes might stande before hym, nr defende them from his power: but he dyd as him lysted, and waxed greatly. J toke hede vnto this, and then came there an he goote from the weste ouer the hole earth, and touched not the grounde.

B This goote had a maruellous goodly horn betwixte his eyes, and came vnto the ramme þ had the .ij. hornes (whom J had sene afore by the ryuer Ulai) and ranne fearcely vpon him with his might. J sawe hym drawe nigh vnto the ramme, beinge verye fearce vpon hym: yea he gaue him suche a stroke, that he brake his two hornes: Neither had the ram so moch strength as to stande before hym: but he cast him downe, trod him vnder his fete: and no man was able to deliuer the ram out of his power.

C The goote waxed exceadynge greate, and when he was at the strongest, his great horn was broken also. Then grewe there other foure suche lyke in the stede, towarde the .iiij. wyndes of the heauen. Yea out of one of the Da. vij. e. vi. a & Machab. i. a lest of these hornes, there came vp yet an other horne, whiche waxed meruyllous great: towarde the southe, towarde the east, and towarde the fayre pleasaunt lande. It grewe vp to the hoste of heauen, wherof it dio cast some downe to the grounde, and of the starres also, and trode them vnder fete.

Yea it grewe vp vnto the prince of the hoost, from whom the dayly offerynge was taken, and the place of his Sanctuary caste downe. And a certayne season was geuen vn to it, ayaynst the dayly offerynge (because of wyckednesse) that it myght caste downe the beryce to the ground, and so to prospere in al thinges, that it went about.

D Upon this J herd one of the Saintes speakinge, whiche sayde vnto one that asked this question: How long shall this vysyon of the dayly sacrifyce and of þ wastyng abhomynacion endure: that the Sanctuary and the power shall so be trodden vnder fote? And he answered him: Vnto the euenynge & the morynge, euen two thousande and thre hundreth dayes: then shall the Sanctuarye be clensed agayne.

E Nowe when J Daniel had sene this vysyon, and sought for the vnderstandynge of it: beholde, there stode before me a thynge lyke vnto a man. And J herd a mans voyce in the ryuer of Ulai, whiche cryed, and sayd: O Gabryel, make this man vnderstande the vision. So he came, and stode by me. But J was afeareyde at his commynge, and fel downe vpō my face.

Then sayd he vnto me: O thou sonne of man, marke well, for in the laste tyme shall this vysyon be fulfylled. Nowe as he was speakynge vnto me, J waxed sayne, so that J stucke downe to the grounde. But he toke hold vpon me, and set me vp agayne, saying: Beholde, J wyll shewe the, what shall happen in the laste wrath: for in the tyme appoynted it shall be fulfylled.

The ramme whiche thou sawest with the two hornes, is the kinge of the Medes and Perses: but the goote is the kyng of Grecia lande: the greate horne that stode betwixte his eyes, that is the principall kinge. But where as it brake, and foure other rose vp in the steade: it signifyeth, that out of this people shall stande vp foure kyngdomes, but not so myghty as it.

After these kyngdomes (whyle vngodlynesse is a growynge) there shall aryse a kinge of an vnshamefast face, whyche shall be wise in darke speakinges.

He shall be myghty and stronge, but not in his owne strength. He shall destroy aboue measure, and all that he goeth about shall prospere: he shall slaye the stronge and holy people. And throwe his craftynesse, falsehed shall prospere in his hande, his herte shall be proude, and manye one shall he put to death in his welthynes, he shall stande vp agaynste the Prince of Princes, but he shal be stryken F without handes. And this vysion that is shewed vnto the, is as sure as the euenynge and the morynge. Therfore wyrte thou vp these syghtes, for it wyll be longe or it come to passe.

Upon this was J Daniel very sayntie, so that J laye sycke certayne dayes: but when J rose vp, J went about the kynges busynesse, and marueyled at the vysyon, neuerthelesse no man knewe of it.

¶ Daniel desyreth to haue that performed of God whiche he had prophesied concernynge the returne of the people from theyr banyshment in Babylon. A true confessyon. Danes prayer is harde. Gabryel the Aungell expoundeth vnto hym the visyon of the thre score and ten wekes. The annoynteynge of Christe. The buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem vnder Nehemias. The death of Christe. The destruccyon ouer the wycked Jewes.

CAP. IX.

IN the fyrste yere of Darius the sonne of Assuerus, whiche was of the sede of the Medes, and was made kinge ouer the realme of the Caldees: yea euē in the fyrst yere of his raygne, J Daniel desyred to know the perely nombre out of the bokes, wherof the Lorde spake vnto Jeremy the Prophet: that Jerusalem shulde lye wast thre score and ten yeres: and J turned me vnto God the Lord for to praye & make myne intercessyon, with fastyng, sackcloth and asshes, J prayed before the Lorde my God, and knowledged, sayinge:

O Lorde, thou greate and fearfull God, thou that kepest couenaunt and mercy with them, which loue the, and do thy commaundementes: We haue synned, we haue offended, we haue vene vngodlye & gone backe yea we haue departed from all thy precepies and iudgementes.

We wolde neuer folowe thy seruauntes the Prophets, that spake in thy name to our kynges and prynces, to our fore fathers and to al the people of the lande. O Lorde, ryght is thy iustyfyynge but open shame: as it is vnto vs falle this daye vnto euery man of Iuda, and to them that dwell at Jerusalem: Yea vnto al Israel, whether they be farre or nyghe thorow out all landes: whervnto thou hast drowed them, because of the offences þ they had done ayaynste the.

Yea O Lorde, vnto vs to our kynges and prynces, to oure forefathers: euen to vs all, that haue offended þ, belongeth open shame. But vnto the, O Lorde our God, perteyneth mercy and forgyuenesse. As for vs, we are gone backe from him, and haue not obeyed the voyce of the Lord our God, to walke in his lawes, whiche he layed before vs by his seruauntes the Prophetes: yea al Israel haue transgressed, and gone backe from thy lawe, so that they haue not herkened vnto thy voyce.

Wherfore the curse and oth, that is written in the lawe of Moses the seruaunte of God (ayaynst whom we haue offended) is powred vpō vs. And he hath performed his wordes, which he spake ayaynste vs, and ayaynst our iudges that iudged vs: to bringe vpon vs suche a great plage, as neuer was vnder heuen lyke as it is nowe come to passe in Jerusalem. Yea all this plage, as it is wryten in the lawe of Moses, is come vpon vs. Yet made we not oure prayer before þ Lorde our God, that we myght turne ayayne from our wyckednesse, & to be lerned in thy veryte. Therfore hath the Lorde made haste, to bringe this plage vpon vs: for the Lord our God is ryghteous, in all his workes whiche he hath for why, we wolde not herken vnto his voyce.

And now, O Lorde oure God, thou that hath a myghty hande hast brought thy people out of Egypt, to get thy selfe a name, whe reas we haue synned, we haue done wickedly ayaynste all thy righteousnes: yet let thy wrothfull displeasure be turned awaye (J beseche the) fro thy cyte Jerusalem thy holy hyl. And whye for our synnes sake and for the wickednesse of our fore fathers is Jerusalem and thy people abhorred, of all them that are about vs. Lowe therfore, O oure God, here the prayer of thy seruaunte, and his intercessyon. O let thy face shyne ouer thy Sanctuary, that lyeth wast.

O my God, enclyne thyne eare, and here (at the leest for thyne owne sake) open thyne eyes: behold how we be desolated, yea and the cyte also, whiche is called after thy name: for we do not cast oure prayers before the in our owne ryghteousnesse, no: but only in thy great mercyes, O Lorde, heare: O forgyue Lorde: O Lorde consyder, tarye not ouer longe: but for thyne owne sake do it. O my God: for thy cyte and thy people is called after thy name.

As J was yet speakinge at my prayers, knowledgynge myne owne synnes, and the synnes of my people, makynge so myne intercessyon before the Lorde my God, for the holy hyls sake of my God: yea whyle J was yet speakinge in my prayer, beholde, the man Gabriel (whom J had sene afore in the visyon) came flyinge to me, and touched me aboute the offerynge tyme in the euenynge. He informed me and spake vnto me: O Daniel sayde he, J am nowe come to make the vnderstande it: For as soone as thou beganneste to make thy prayer, it was so deuised, & therfore am J come to shewe the. And why? for thou Daniel. x. c. d art a man greatly beloued.

Wherfore, ponder the matter well, that G
thou mayste lerne, to vnderstande the vision, thre score and ten wekes are determed ouer thy people, and ouer the holye cyte: that the wickednesse maye be consumed, that the sin maye haue an ende, that the offence maye be reconcyled, and to bringe in euerlastinge ryghteousnesse, to fulfyll the visions and the prophetes, and to anoynte the moost holye one. Understande this then, and marcke it well that frome the tyme it shall be concluded, to go & reparye Jerusalem agayne, vnto Christe (or the anoynted) prince: there shall be seuē wekes. Then shall the stretes and walles be buylded agayne, lxij. wekes, but with harde troublous tyme. After these lxij. wekes, shal Christe be slayne, and they shall haue no pleasure in hym. Then shall there come a people with the prince, and destroye the cyte and the Sanctuarye: and his ende shal come as the water floude. But the desolacion shall contynue tyll the ende of the battayle.

He shall make a stronge bonde with manye, for the space of a weke: and when the weke is halfe gone, he shall put downe the slayne and meatofferyng. And in the tem- Matth. xxiiij. xvij.
ple there shall be an abhomynable desolacion, tyll it haue destroyed all. And it is con- 2 Thessa. ij.
cluded, that this wastynge shal contynue vn to the ende.

¶ There appereth vnto Daniel a man clothed in lynen, whyche sheweth hym wherfore he is sent.

CAP. X.

IN the thyrde yeare of kynge Cirus of Persia, there was shewed vnto Daniel (other wise called Balthasar) a mater, yea a true matter, but it is yet a longe tyme vnto it. He vnderstode the mater wel & perceyued what the vysion was. At the same tyme, J Daniel mourned for the space of thre wekes, so that J had no lust to eat brede: as for flesh & wyne there came none within my mouthe. No, J dyd not ones anoynte my selfe, tyl the hole thre wekes were out. A

Upon the xxiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, J was by the greate floude, called Tigris: J lifte vp myne eyes, and loked: and beholde, a man clothed in lynnen, whose loynes were gyrded vp with fyne golde of Arabye: his body was lyke the Chrysolite stone, his face (to loke vpon) was lyke lyghtenynge, his eyes as the flame of fire, his armes and fete were lyke fayre glysterynge metall, but the voyce of his wordes was lyke the voyce of a multytude. Daniel. viij. & Apocal. i.

J Daniel

I Danyel alone sawe this vision, the men
Daniel.iii.c that were with me, sawe it not: but a greate Ia.xl.a fraufulnesse fell vpon them, so that they fled awaye and hyd them selues. I was left there my selfe alone, and sawe this greate vision,
so long tyl there remayned no more strength with me: yea I loste my colloure cleane, I wasted awaye, and my strength was gone.
Yet herde I the voyce of his wordes, and as soone as I herde it, I sayntnesse came vpon me, and I fel downe flat to the the ground vpon
my face. And beholde, an hande touched me, which set me vp vpon my knees and vpon
palmes of my handes, sayinge vnto me: O
Daniel.b Daniel, thou well beloued man: take good heede of the wordes, that I shall saye vnto
the, and stande right vp, for vnto the am I nowe sent.

And when he had sayde these wordes, I stode vp tremblynge. Then sayde he vnto me, feare not Daniel: for why sence the fyrst daye that thou set thyne herte to vnderstand & humble thyne self before thy God: thy wordes have bene herde. And I have come vnto the, whe thou begannest to speake had not the prince ouer the kingdome of the Per ses withstande me. xxi. dayes. But lo Michae Iosue.v.d el one of the chiefest princes, came to helpe
Dan.x.xii.a me, wherfore I left by the king of Persia, & am come to shewe the what shall happen vn
to thy people in the latter dayes: For it yet is longe yet for the vysyon be fulfylled.

Nowe when he had spoken these wordes
vnto me, I cast downe my heed to the ground and helde my tunge. Beholde, there touched my lyppes one very lyke vnto a man. Then opened I my mouth, & sayde vnto him, that stoode before me: O my Lorde, my toyntes are lowsed in the vision, and there is no more strength within me: howe may my Lordes
seruaunt then talke with my Lorde? seinge
there is no strength in me, so that I can not take my breth? Eftsones this there touched me agayne, one more lyke a man, and comfor ted me sayinge: O thou man so wel beloued, Daniel.b feare not: be content, take a good herte vnto
the, and be stronge.

So when he had spoken vnto me, I recou
ered, and sayd: Speake on my Lord, for thou hast refresshed me. Then sayde he: knowest thou wherefore I am come vnto the? nowe will I go agayne to fyght with the prince of the Perses. As soone as I go forthe, lo, the prince of Grecia shal come. Neuertheles,
I will shewe the that, that is faste noted in the scripture of truthe. And as for all pon der matters, there is none that helpeth me
in them, but Michael youre prince.

CAP. I. XI.

AND in the fyrst yere of Darius of Me dia, I stode by him, to comforte him, & to strengthe him, and now wyl I shew
the the truthe. Beholde, there shall stande vp yet thre kinges in Persia, but the fourthe shall be farre rycher then they all. And when he is in the chiefest power of his riches, he shall prouoke euery man agaynst the realme of Grecheland. Then shal there arise yet a myg hty king that shall rule with greate dominy on, and do what him list. And as soone as his kingdome cometh vp, it shall be destroyed, &
deuided towarde the foure windes of the hea
uen. They that come after him, shal not have such power and dompynge as he: but his kingdome shall be scattered, yea euen amonge others then those. And the kynge of the southe shall be myghtyer, then his other prin
ces. Agaynste hym there shall one make him selfe stronge, and shall rule his dompynge with greate power.

But after certayne yeares they shal be ioy ned togyther, and the kinges doughter of south shall come to the kynge of the North,
for to make frendshyp, but she shall not ob tayne the power of that arme, neither shall
she be able to endure thorowe his myght:
but she, and suche as brought her (yea and he
that begat her, & comforted her for his mayd shall be delyuered vp. Out of the braunches of her rote, there shal one stand vp in his stede
which with power of armes shal go thorow
the kinges land of the north, and dawble his actorynge to his strength.

He for their Idols and princes, with their costly Jewelles of golde and syluer, he shall carry them awaye captyues into Egypte, &
shal prouayle agaynste the kinge of the north certayne yeares. And when he is come in to kynges realme of the south, he shall be fayne to turne agayne in to his owne lande. Wher fore his sonnes shall be displeased, and shall gather togyther a myghtye greate hoste of people: and one of them shall come, and o thorowe like a water floude then shall he re turne, and go forth with defynge & battinge
vnto his owne lande.

Then the kynge of the south shal be angry and shall come forth to fyghte agaynste the kynge of the northe, yea shall bringe a great multytude of people togyther, and a great heape shal be geuen into his hand, that shall he carry awaye with greate pryde, for so much as he hath cast downe so many thousandes, neuertheles he shall not prouayle. For the kinge of the northe shall gather (of the mens a greater heap of people the afore, and come forth (after a certayne time and yeares) with a myghtye hoost and exceadyng greate goods.

At the same tyme there shall many ryse vp agaynst the kinge of the south, & the vn wicked children of thy people also shall re
aise them selues (to fulfyll the vision) & they shall fall.

So the kynge of the north shall come & caste vp a hye, and to take the stronge stedfast

ties: and the power of them of the southe shall not be able to abyde him, and the best men of the people shall not be so stong as to withstande him. Shortly, when he commeth, he shal do with him as he lyst, and no man shall be so mighty as to stande agaynst him. He shal stande in the pleasaunt countrey, which thorowe him shall be destroyed. He shal set his face with al his power to ouerthrow his kyngdome, and to de stroye it. Yea that shall he do, and geue him vn to the doughters amonges women, to de stroy him. But he shall fayle, neither shal he atteyne his purpose.

After this shall he set his face vnto the yles, and take many of them. A prince shal stop him, to do him a shame, beside the confusyon that his shall come vnto him. Thus shall he come agayne to his owne land, stomble and fall, and be no more founde: so he that came vpon him, and dyd him vyolence, shall stande
in his place, and haue a pleasaunt kingdome:
but after few dayes he shal be destroyed, and that neither in wrath, ne in battayle. In his stede there shall aryse a vyle person, not hol den worthye of a kynges dignitie: this shall come in subtelye, and obteyne the kynge dome with fayre wordes: he shall fyghte a gaynste the armes of the myghtye (and de stroye them) yea, and against the prynce of the couenaunt.

So after that he hath taken truce with him,
he shall humble & deceyte fully: that he maye get vp, and ouercome him with a small flocke,
and to with craftynesse to get him to the fat nesse of the lande, and to deale other wyse then either his fathers or graundfa thers did. For he shal destroye the thinge that they robbed and spoyled, yea and all their substaunce, ymagenynge thoughtes against the stronge holde, and that for a tyme. His pa lace and herte shal be stryred vp with a great armye agaynst the kinges of the south, where thorowe the kynge of the south shall be mo
ued them vnto battell with a great and migh ty hoste also. Neuertheless he shall not be able to stande, for they shal conspyre against him. Yea, they that eate of his meat shal burst him, so that his hoste shal fall, and manye be slayne downe.

Thise two kynges shal be minded to do mis chefe, and talke of deceyte at one table / but they shal not prospere: for why? the ende shal not come yet, vnto the time appoynted. Then shal he go home againe in to his own land in great goods, and set his herte against the holy couenaunt, he shall be busy against it, and the same done. At the tyme appoynted he shal come agayne, and go towarde the south. So shall it happen otherwyse then at the fyrst tyme and agayn. And why? the shyppes of Cithim shall come vpon him, that he may be smytten & turne agayne, that he may take indigna tion against the couenaunt of holynesse, & wreake suche vnto him as leaue the holye
couenaunt.

He shall set myghtye men to vnhalowe
the sanctuarye of strengthe, to put downe
the dayly offeringe, and to set vp the abho minable desolation, and suche as breake the couenaunte shall he flatter with fayre wor
des. But the people that wyll knowe their God, shall haue the ouer hande and prosperr.
Those also that haue vnderstandyng amonge
the people, shal enstructe the multitude:
and for a longe season they shall be persecu
ted with swerde, with fyre, with captyvitie,
and with the takyng awaye of their goodes.
Nowe when they fall, they shall be holpe vp with a lytle helpe, but many shall cleue vnto them fayneely.

Yea some of those which haue vnderstanding shal be persecuted also, that they may be tri ed, purified and clensed, tyll the time be ouer, for there is yet an other time appointed. The kynge shal doo what him lyst, he shall exalte
and magnifye him self aboue al, that is God.
Yea he shall speake maruelous thynges a gainst the God of all goddes, wherin he shall prosperr, so longe tyl the wrath be fulfylled, for the conclusion is deuised alreadye. He shal not regarde the God of his fathers, but his lust shall be vpon women: Yea he shall not care for any God, for he shall magnifye him self aboue all. In his place shall he worshyp the myghty gods: and the God whome his fathers knewe not, shal he honoure with gold and syluer, with precyous stones, and plea saunt iewels.

This shall he doo, seknynge helpe and suc
cour at the myghtye gods and straunge god
des. Suche as wyl receyue him, and take him for God, he shall geue them greate worshyp and power: yea and make them lordes of the multitude, and geue them the lande with re wardes.

In the latter tyme shall the kynge of the south stryue with him, and the kynge of the North in lyke maner shall come agaynste him with charrettes, horsemen, and with a great many of shyppes. He shal come in to the landes, ouerthrowe and go thorowe: he shal entre also in to the fayre pleasaunt land. Many cy tyes and countreys shal decaye, except Edom, Moab, and the best of the cytizens of Ammon which shall escape from his hande. He shall stretche forth his handes vpon the countreys,
and the lande of Egypt shall not escape him.
For thorow his going in, he shal haue domi nion ouer the treasures of syluer and golde, &
ouer all the precious iewels of Egypte, Ly bia, and Ethiopia.

Neuertheless the tidynges out of the East and the North shall trouble him, for the whi che cause he shal goo forth to destroye & cuttle
a greate multitude. The tentes of his palace shal be pytched betwixt the two sees, vpon the hylle of the noble Sanctuarye, for he shall come to the ende of it, and then shall no man helpe him.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE OSEAS.

¶ The tyme wherin Oseas prophecyed. Oseas by cõmaundement taketh to his wyfe, signifyenge the Idolatrye of the people. The destruction of the offsprynge of Iehu, and of the Israelites is prophecyed.

CAPI. I.

THis is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Oseas the sonne of Beery i the dayes of Oseas, Joathã, Achas, and Ezechias kynge of Juda: and in the dayes of Jeroboam the son of Joas kynge of Israell.

2 Firste when the Lord spake vnto Oseas, he sayd vnto him: Go thy waye, take an harlot to thy wyfe, and get chyldren by her: for the land hath committed great hoordom agaynst the Lorde. 3 So he went, and toke Gomer the doughter of Debelaim: which conceyued and brought forth a sonne. And the Lorde sayd vnto him: cal his name Jesrael, for I will shortlye auenge the bloode of Jesrael vpon the house of Iehu, and will dyenge the kyngdome of the house of Israel to an ende. 4 Then will I breake the bowe of Israel in the valey of Jesrael.

5 She conceyued yet agayne, and bare a doughter. And he sayde vnto him: Call her name Lorubamah (that is, not obteynynge mercye) for I will haue no pitie vpon the house of Israell, but forget them, and put them clene out of remembraunce. 6 Neuertheles, I will haue mercy vpon the house of Juda, and will saue theym, euen thorowe the Lorde their God. But I will not helpe them thorowe anye bowe, swerde, battel, horses or horsemen.

7 Now when she had weaned Lorubamah, she conceyued agaynst, and bare a sonne. 8 Then sayde he: call his name. Loamy. For ye are not my people, therfore will not I be yours. And thoughe the nombre of the chyldren of Israell be as the sande of the see, whi the can neither be measured ne tolde: yet in the place, where it is sayde vnto them, ye be not my people: euen there shall it be thus reported of them: they be the children of the lyuynge God. 9 Then shal the children of Juda, and the chyldren of Israell be gathered together, & chose them selues one head, & then Departe out of the land: for great shal be the daye of Jesrael.

¶ The people is called vnto repentaunce.

CAPI. II.

1 Tell your brethren, that they are my people: and youre systeren, that they haue obteyned mercy. 2 Ca for your mother, ye shall chyde with her, and reproue her: for she is not my wyfe, neyther am I her husbande, that she put away her hoordome out of my sight, and her aduoutrye from her breastes. 3 Lest I strip her naked, and set her euen as she came in to the worlde: yea, I shal lay her waste, and make her lyke a wyldernesse, and let her for thyrste. 4 I shall haue no pitie also vpon her children, for they be the children of fornication.

5 Their mother hathe broken her wedlocke, and she that bare them, is come to confusion. For she sayde, I will goo after my louers, that geue me my watter and my breed, my wolle and flaxe, my oyle and my drynke. 6 But I will hedge her waye with thornes, and stoppe it, that she shall not fynde her foote-steppes: 7 and thoughe she runne after her louers, yet shall she not get them: she shal seke them, but not fynde them. Then shall she say wel, I will goo fourne agayne to my fyrste husbande, for at that tyme was I better at ease, then nowe. 8 But this wolde she knowe, where as I yet gaue her corne, wyne, oyle, silver and golde, whiche she hath hanged vpon Baal.

9 Therfore nowe will I go take my corne and wyne agayne in theyr season, and set agayne my wolle and my flaxe whiche I gaue vnto couer her shame. 10 And now will I discouer her foolyshenesse, euen in the syght of her louers, and no man shall deliuer her oute of my handes. 11 Moreouer, I will take away all her myrth, her holy dayes, her newe moones, her Sabothes, and all her solemne festes. 12 I will destroye her vynyardes and figge trees, thoughe she saythe: lo, here are my rewardes that my louers haue geuen me. I will make it a wodde, and the wylde beestes shall eate it vp: 13 I will punysshe her also for the dayes of Baal, wherin she censed him, decked him with her eare ringes and cheynes: when she folowed her louers, and forgat me, saith the Lorde.

14 Therfore beholde, I wyl call her agayne, bringe her in to a wyldernesse, and speake frendlye vnto her: there will I geue her her vynyardes agayne: yea, and the valleye of Achor also to shewe her hope and comforte. Then shall she synge there, as in the tyme of her youthe, and lyke as in the daye when she came out of the land of Egypt.

15 Then (sayth the Lorde) she shall saye vnto me: O my husbande, and shall call me no more Baal: 16 for I will take awaye those names of Baal from her mouth, yea she shal neuer remembre theyr names any more. 17 Then will I make a couenaunte with them, with the wild beastes, with the foules of the ayre, and with euery thyng that creepeth vpon the earthe.

18 As for bowe, swerde and battayle, I will destroye suche oute of the lande, and will make them to slepe safely. 19 Thus will I marye the vnto myne owne selfe for euer more:

yea, euen to my selfe will I marye the, in ryghtousnesse, in equitie, in louynge kyndenesse and mercye. 20 In fayth also will I marye the vnto my selfe, and thou shalte knowe the Lorde. 21 At the same tyme will I shewe my selfe frendly and gracyous vnto the heuens, sayeth the Lorde; and the heuens shall helpe the earth, 22 and the earth shal helpe the corne, wyne and oyle. And they shall helpe Jesrael. 23 I will sowe them vpon earthe, for a seed to myne owne selfe, and will haue mercye vpon her that was wythoute mercye. And to them whiche were not my people, I will saye: thou art my people. And he shall saye: thou art my God.

¶ Of the loue of God towarde the people.

CAPI. III.

1 Then sayd the Lorde to me: Go yet thy waye, and wowe an aduoutrous woma whome thy neyghbour loueth, as the Lorde doth the chyldren of Israel: how be it they haue respecte to straunge goddes, and loue the wyne cannes. 2 So I gat her for .xv. syluerlynges, and for an Homer and an half of barleye, and sayde vnto her: thou shalte byde with me a long season, but se that thou playest not the harlot, and lyue thou medels with none other mã, and then will I kepe my selfe for the.

3 Thus the chyldren of Israel shal sye a great whyle without kyng and prynce, without offering and aulter, without preest and reuelacion. 4 But afterwarde shal the cyldren of Israel conuert, and seke the Lord theyr God, and Dauid theyr kynge: and in the latter dayes they shall worshyp the Lorde, and his louing kyndnesse.

¶ A complaynte agaynst the people and the preestes of Israel.

CAPI. IIII.

1 Heare the worde of the Lorde, O ye chyldren of Israell: for the Lorde muste punysshe them that dwell in the lande. And why? There is no faythfulnesse, there is no mercye, there is no knowlege of God in the lande: 2 but swearynge, lyenge, manslaughter, thefte, and aduoutrye, haue gotten the ouer hande, and one bloudgiltynesse followeth an other. 3 Therfore shall the lande be in a miserable case, and all thy that dwel therin, shall mourne. The beastes in the felde, the foules in the ayre, and the fysches in the see shall dye. 4 Yet is there none that will chasten nor reproue an other. The preestes whiche shoulde reboureme other men, are become lyke the people.

5 Therfore stomblest thou in the daye tyme and the Prophet with the in the nyght. I will dynge thy mother to silence, and why? my people perysshe, because they haue no knowlege. Seinge then that thou hall refused vnderstandynge, therfore wyl I refuse the also:

so that thou shalt no more be my preest. And for so moche as thou hall forgotten the lawe
of thy God, I wyll also forget thy children.
The more they increased in the multytude,
the more they synned agaynste me, therfore
wyll I chaunge their honoure in to shame.
They eate vp the synnes of my people, and courage them in their wyckednesse. Thus the preest is become lyke the people. Wherfore I wyll punysshe them for their wycked wayes, and rewarde them accordyng to their owne ymagynacions. They shall eate, and not haue ynoughe: They haue vsed hooredome, therfore shall they not prospere: and why? they haue forsaken the Lorde, and not regarded him.

Horedome, wyne, and dronkennesse take the herte awaye. My people aske counsell at their stockes, their staffe must tell them. For an hoorysshe mynde hath deceyued them, so that they commyt fornication agaynste their God. They make sacrifices vpon the hye mostayns, and burne their incense vpon the hyls, yea amonges the okes, groues and bus-shes, for there are good shadowes. Therfore youre doughters are become harlottes, and youre spouses haue broken their wedlocke, I wyll not punysshe youre doughters for besynge defyled, and youre brydes that became hoores: seinge the fathers them selues haue medled with harlottes, and offered with vnchasters: but the people that wil not vnderstande must be punysshed.

Though thou Israel arte disposed to play
the harlot, yet shouldest not thou haue offended, O Juda: thou shouldest not haue runne
to Galgala, nor haue gone vp to Bethauen, ne haue sworne, the Lorde lyueth. For Israel is gone backe lyke a wanton cowe. The Lorde therfore shall make her fede as the lambe that goeth astraye. And where as Ephraim is become partaker of ydolles, well let him goo. Their dronkennesse haue put the backe, and brought them to hoordome. Their rulers loue rewardes, bringe (saye they) to their owne shame. A wynde shall take holde at their feethers, and they shall be confounded in their offerynges.

¶ Agaynst the preestes and rulers of Israel. The helpe of man can do nothynge agaynst God.

CAPI. V.

O Ye preestes: heare this, take hede, O
thou household of Israel: geue eare, O thou kynglye house: for this punishment wil come vpon you that are become a snare vnto Mysphah, and a spred net vnto the mount of Thabor. They kyll sacrifices by heapes, to begyle the people therwith: therfore wyll I punish them all. I know Ephraim wel inough and Israell is not hyd to me: for Ephraim is become an harlot, & Israel is defiled. They are not mynded to turne vnto their God, for they haue an hoorish hert, so that they can not knowe the Lorde.

But the pryde of Israell wyll be rebuked him in his face: yea both Israel and Epha-
im shall fall for their wickednesse, and Juda with them also. They shall come with their shepe and bullockes to seke the Lorde, but they shall not fynde him, for he is gone from them. As for the Lorde, they haue rebuked him and brought vp bastarde children: a monthe therfore shall deuour them, with their porc-
ons. Blowe with the trompes at Gabaa, with the trompet in Ramah, crye out at Bethauen vpon the backesyde of Benjamin.
In the tyme of the plage shall Ephraim be layde waste, therfore dyd I faythfully warne the tribes of Israel. Yet are the princes of Ju da become like them that remoue the landemarkes, therfore wil I poure out my wrathe
vpon them lyke water.

Ephraim is oppressed, & can haue no right of the lawe: for why? they folowe the doctrines of men. Therfore wyll I be to Epha-im as a moth, and to the house of Juda as a caterpyller.

When Ephraim sawe his sycknesse, and Ju da his disease: Ephraim went vnto Assur, &
sent vnto king Jareb, yet could not he helpe
you, nor ease you of youre payne. I am vnto Ephraim as a lyon, and as a lyons whelpe to the house of Juda. Euen I wyll spoyle them and goo my wape. I wyll take them with me and no man shall rescue them. I wyll go, and returne to my place, tyll they wake layme,
and seke me.

¶ Affliction coueth a man to returne to God. The wyckednesse of the preestes.

CAPI. VI.

IN their aduersitie they shall seke me, and saye: come lette vs tourne agayne to the Lorde: for he hath smitten vs, and he shal heale vs: he hath wounded vs, and he shall bynde vs vp agayne: after two dayes shall he quicken vs, in the thyrde daye he shall rayse vs vp, so that we shall lyue in his syght. Let vs that we haue vnderstandynge, and endeuour
our selues to knowe the Lorde. He shall goo forthe as the spryngе of the daye, and come vnto vs as the euenyng and mornyng rayne
vpon the earth.

O Ephraim, what shall I do vnto the? O Juda how shall I entreate the? Seinge your loue is like a mornyng cloude, and like a dewe that goeth early awaye. Therfore haue I cut downe the Prophetes, and slayne them with the wordes of my mouthe, and let them be slayne
for my wordes sake: so that thy punishment shall come to light.

For I haue pleasure in louyng kyndnesse, &
not in offrynge: yea in the knowlege of God more then in burntsacrifice. But euen like as Adam did, so haue they broken my couenaunt and set me at nought. Galaad is a cyty of wicked wetes, of malicious people & bloudthirstes. The multytude of the preestes is lyke an hepe of theues, murtherers, and bloudthurs-

for they haue wrought abhominacion. Double thynges haue I sene in the house of Is rael, there playeth Ephraim the harlot, and Israell is defyled: but Juda shall haue an harueste for him selfe, when I returne the cap tyuite of my people.

¶ Of the vices and wantonnesse of the people.

CAPI. VII.

WHen I vndertake to make Israel hole,
then the vngracyousnesse of Ephraim,
and the wyckednesse of Samaria commeth to lyghte: then goo they about with lyes. At home they be theues, and without they fall to robbynge. They consydre not in their hertes that I remembre all their wyckednesse. They goo about with their owne inuentions, but I se them well ynoughe.
They make the kynge and the Princes to haue pleasure in their wyckednesse and lyes.
All these burne in aduoutrye, as it were an ouen that the baker heateth, when he hathe
lefte kneadynge, tyll the dowe be leuended.
Euen so goeth it this daye with oure kynges
and Princes, for they begynne to be wodde drunken thorowe wyne: they vse familiarit-ie with suche as discerne them. They with the ymagination of their hertes are lyke an ouen, their slepe is all the nyghte lyke the slepe of a baker, in the mornyng is he as hote
as the flame of fyre: they are all togyther as hote as an ouen.

They haue deuoured their owne Judges,
all their kynges are fallen, yet is there none of them that calleth vpon me. Therfore must Ephraim be mixte amonge the Heathen. Ephraim is become lyke a cake, that no man turneth: Straungers haue deuoured his strengthe, yet he regardeth it not: he wareth full of grepe hoores, yet wyll he not knowe
it: and the pryde of Israell is cast downe
before their face, yet wyll they not tourne vnto their God, nor seke him for all this.

Ephraim is lyke a doue that is begyled and hath no herte. Lowe call they vpon the Egyptians, nowe goo they to the Assirians:
But whyle they be goynge here and there, I shall spreade my nette ouer them, and drawe them downe as the foules of the ayre: and accordynge as they haue ben warned, so wyll
I punysh them. Wo be vnto them, for they haue forsaken me.

They must be destroyed, for they haue set me at nought. I am he that haue redemed them, and yet they dissemble with me. They call not vpon me with their hertes, but lye bow-linge vpon their beddes. Where as they come togyther, it is but for meate and dynke, and at wyll they not corne. I haue taught them and defended their arme, yet do they ymag-ine mischefe agaynste me, they tourne them selues, but not aryghte, and are become as a broken bowe. Their princes shall be slayne with the swerde, for the malice of their tunges, suche blasphemyes haue they learned in the lande of Egypte.

¶ The destruction of Juda and Israel, because of their Idolatrye.

CAPI. VIII.

SEt the horne to thy mouthe, and blowe:
set the (spirytly (as an Egle) vnto the house of the Lorde: for they haue broken my couenaunt, and transgressed my lawe. Israel can saye vnto me: thou art my God, we know the, but he hath refused the thynge that is good, therfore shall the enemy folowe vpō
him. They haue ordeyned kynges, but not tho row me: they haue made princes, and I knowe not of it. Of their syluer & golde haue they made them ymages, to bring them selues to destruction.

Thy calfe, O Samaria, shall be taken awaye, for my wrothfull indignacion is gone forth agaynst the. Howe longe wyll it be, or they can be cleansed? For the calfe came from Israel, the workeman made it, therfore can it be no God, but euen to a spyders webbe shall the calfe of Samaria be tourned. They haue sowne wynde, therfore shall they repe a storme.

Their sede shall beare no eare, there shall no mele be made of their encrease: thoughe they repe, yet shal straungers deuoure it vp. Israel shall perish, the Gentyles shall entreate him as a foule vessell. Seuen they went vp to the Assyrians, they are become lyke a wylde
asse in the wildernesse.

Ephraim gyueth rewardes to get louers,
therfore are they scattered amonge the Heathen, there wyl I gather them vp. They shal soone be weery of the burden of kynges and princes. Ephraim hathe many aulters to doo wyckednesse, therfore shall the aulters tourne to his synne. Thoughe I drewe them my lawe neuer so moche, they counte it but straunge doctryne. Where as they doo sacri-fyce, offeryng the fleshe, and eatynge it:
the Lorde wyll haue no pleasure therin: but wyll remembre their wyckednesse, and pu-nysshe their synnes. Israell tourneth agayne in to Egypte, they haue forgotten him that made them, they buylde churches, and Juda maketh many stronge cityes: therfore will I sende a fyre in to their cityes, and it shal consume their places.

¶ Of the hunger and captyuitye of Israel.

CAPI. IX.

DO not thou triumphe, O Israel, make no boastynge more then the Heathen, for thou hall commyt.ed aduoutrye a-gaynst thy God: thy straunger wages hast thou loued, more then all the corne flores.
Therfore shall they no more enioye the corne flores and wine presses, and their sweete wine shall fayle them. They wyll not dwell in the Lordes lande, but Ephraim tourneth agayne

into Egypte, and eateth vncleane thynges amonge the Assyrians. They poure oute no wyne for a dyrnke offerynge vnto the Lorde, nether gyue they hym their slayne offerynges: but they be vnto me as mourners meates, wherin all they that eate them are defiled. For the breed that they haue suche lust vnto, shall not come in to the house of the Lorde. What wyl ye do then in the solemne dayes, and in the feaste of the Lorde? Loo, they shall get them away for the destruction, Egypte shall receyue theym, and Noph shall bury them.

The nettles shall ouergrowe their pleasaunt goodes, and burres shal be in their habytacles. Be ye sure (O Israel) the tyme of visitacion is come, the dayes of recompensynge are at hande. As for the Prophete, ye holde him for a foole: and him that is ryche in the spirete for a madde man: so greate is youre wyckednelle and malyce. Ephraim hathe made hym selfe a watche man of my God, a Prophete that is become a snare to wo turte in cuerye strete, and abhomination in the house of his God. They be gone to farre, and haue destroyed them selues, lyke as they did afore time at Gabaa. Therfore their wickednelle shall be remembred, and their synnes punyshed.

I founde Israell lyke grapes in the wyldernelle, and sawe their fathers as the fyrste fygges in the top of the frygge tree, but they are gone to Baal Peor, and runne awaye from me to that shametull ydoll, and are become as abhompnable as their louers. Ephraim fleeth lyke a bryde, so shall their glorye also. Ye to moche that they shall nether begette, conceyue ne beare chyldren. And though they bringe vp any, yet will I make them chyldelelle among men. Yea wo shal come to them, when I departe from them. Ephraim (as me thynk) is planted in welthynelle, lyke as Tyrus, but now must the bringe her owne chyldren forth to the manslear.

O Lorde thou shalt gyue them: what shalt thou gyue them? Gyue them an vnfrutefull wombe, and dryye breastes. All their wickednes is come at Galgal, there wo I abhorre them. For the vngratiousnelle of their owne inuentions, I will dryue them oute of my house. I will loue them no more, for all their princes are vnthryftull. Ephraim is hewen downe, their rote is dryed vp, so that they shal bryng no more frute: yea, and though they bringe forth any, yet will I slee euen the best beloued frute of their body. My God shall cast them awaye, for they haue not ben obedient vnto hym, therfore shall they goo alteaye amonge the Heathen.

¶ Against Israel and his Idols.

CAPI. X.

ISrael was a goodly vyne, but he bathe brought forth vnprofitable frute: yea the more frute he had, ye mo aulters he made: the more good I dyd to their lande, the more frent thyr shewed they vnto them ymages. Their herte is deuyded, therfore wyll they be destroyed. The Lorde shall breake downe their ymages, he shall destroye their aultres. Then shall they saye: we haue no kynge: for why? we haue not feared the Lorde. And what shal then the kyng do to vs? They common together, and sweare dayne othes: they be confederate together, therfore groweth their punyshment, as the weedes in the forowes of the lande.

They that dwell in Samaria haue worshypped the calfe of Bethauen: therfore shal the people mourne ouer them: yea, and the preestes also that in their welthynelle reioyced with theym: and why? It shall passe awaye from them. It shall be brought to the Assyrians for a present vnto kynge Jareb. Ephraim shall receyue full punyshment: Israell shall be confounded for his owne ymaginacions / Samaria with his kynge shall vanyshe awaye as the scomme in the water. The hye places of Auen, where Israel hath synned, shal be caste downe: thystles and thornes shall growe vpon their aultres. Then shall they say to the mountaynes, couer vs/and to the hylles, fall vpon vs.

O Israel, thou hast synned as Gaba dyd afore tyme, where they remayned: shall not the battayle then come vpon the wycked children as well as vpon the Gabaonites? I will chasten them, euen after myne owne desyre, the people shall be gathered together ouer them, when I punyshe them for their great wyckednelle.

Ephraim was vnto me, as a cowe that is vsed to go to plow, therfore I loued hym, and fell vpon his fayre necke. I dyde Ephraim, Juda plowed, and Jacob played the husbandman: that they myght sowe vnto rychteousnelle, and reape the frutes of well doing: that they myght plowe vp their freshe lande, and seke the Lorde, tyll he came, and learned them rychteousnelle.

But nowe they haue plowed them wyckednelle, therfore shall they reape synne, and eate the frute of lyes. Bringe thou puttest thy confidence in thyne owne wayes, and leanest to the multitude of thy worthyes: there shall growe a sedition amonges thy people. All thy stronge cytyes shall be layde waste, euen as Salmana was destroyed with his symplettes, whose wo dyde that was auenged of Rebell in the daye of battayle, where the mother perysshed with her chyldren. Euen so shall it goo with you (O Bethel) by cause of your malicious wickednelle. Lyke as the morninge goeth awaye, so shall the kynge of Israel passe.

¶ Against the vnkyndenelle of Israel.

CAPI. XI.

WHen Israel was yong, I loued him, and called him my sonne out of the lande of Egypt. But the more they were called, the more they went backe, offeryng vnto Idols and censynge Images: I lerned Ephraim to go, and bare them in myne armes, but they regarded not me, that wolde haue holpen them. I led them with cordes of frendshyp, and with bandes of loue. I was euē he, that layed the pocke vpon their neckes. I gaue them their fodder my selfe, that they shulde not go agayne into Egypte. And nowe is Assur their kinge: For they wolde not turne vnto me. Therfore shall the sweorde begynne in their cities, the floze that they haue layed vp, shall be destroyed and eaten: and that be cause of their owne ymaginacions. My people hath no lust to turne vnto me, their prophetes lay the pocke vpon ehe, but they ease them not of their burthen.

What great thynges haue I gyuen the, O Ephraim? how faythfully haue I defended the, O Israel? haue I dealt with the as with Adama? or haue I intreated the lyke Zeboim? Nay: my hert is otherwyse mynded.

Yea my mercy is so feruent: therfore haue I not turned me to destroye Ephraim in my wrothful displeasure. For I am God and no man, I am euen that holy one in the myddest of the, though I come not within the eyen.

The Lorde rozeth lyke a lyon, that they may folowe him: yea as a lyon rozeth he that they may be afrayde lyke the children of the see: that they maye be scattered awaye from Egypt, as men scare byrdes: and fraped awaye (as doues vse to do) from the Assyrians land: and that because I wolde haue them stay at home, saieth the Lorde. But Ephraim gob about me with lyes, and the house of Israel dissembleth. Only Juda poleeth hym with God, and with the true holy tynges.

¶ Against the vayne trust of the people.

CAPI. XII.

EPhraim kepeth the ayre, and foloweth after the east wynde: he is euer increasing lyes and destruction. They confederate with the Assyrians, their oyle is caryed in to Egypt. The Lorde hath a courte to holde w Juda, and wyll punysh Jacob: After their owne wayes accordyng to their owne inuencions, shal he recō pēse the. He toke his broyder by the hele, when he was yet in his mothers wombe: in his strengte he wrestled with God. He stroue with the angel, and gat the victorye: so that he played and desyred hym. He found him at Bethel, and there he talked with vs.

Yea the Lorde God of hoostes, euen the Lorde hym selfe remembre hym: Therfore turne to thy God, kepe mercy and equite, and hope styll in thy God. But the marchaunt hath a falle weight in his hande, he hath a pleasure to occupy extorcion. Ephraim sayeth thus Truly, I am rych, I haue goods ynough: In all my workes shall not one faut be founde, that I haue offended. Yet am I the Lorde thy God, euen as whē I brought the out of the lande of Egypt, and set the in thy tentes, and as in the dayes of the feaste.

I haue spoken thorow the Prophetes, and shewed dyuerse visions, and declared my selfe by the myny stracion of the prophetes. But at Galaad is the abhompnacion, they are fallen to vanitie. At Galgall they haue slayne oxen: and as many heapes of stones as they had in their lande for owres, so many aulters haue they made. Jacob fled into the lande of Syria, and Israel serued for a wyfe, and for a wyfe he kept shepe.

By a Prophete the Lorde brought theym out of Egypte, and by a Prophet he preserued them. But Ephraim hath prouoked him to displeasure thorow his abhompnacyōs, therfore shall his blond be poured vpon him selfe and the Lorde his God shall rewarde hym his blasphempes.

¶ Of the abhominacyons of Israel.

CAPI. XIII.

THe abhomination of Ephraim is come also into Israel. He is gone backe to Baal, therfore muste he dye. And nowe they synne more and more: of their siluer they make the molte Images, lyke the Idolles of the Heathen, and yet all is nothynge but the worke of the craftesman. Notwithstandyng they preache of the same: who so wyll kysse the calues, offereth to men. Therfore they shal be as the morynge cloude, and as the dewe that early passeth awaye, and lyke as the dust that the winde taketh away from the floure, and as smoke that goeth out of the chymney.

I am the Lorde thy God, whiche brought the out of the land of Egypt: that thou shuldest knowe no God but me onely: and that thou shuldest haue no Sauioure but onely me. I take diligent hede of the in the wyldernelle that dyre lande. But when they were wel fed and had ynough, they waxed proude and forgat me. Therfore wyl I be vnto them as a lyon, and as a Leopardell the waye of the Assyrians. I wyll come vpon them as a she beer, that is robbed of her whelpes, and I wyll breake that stubburne beest of theirs. There wyll I deuoure them as a lyon: yea the wyl de beastes shall teare them.

O Israel, thou wost but destroye thy selfe. In me onely is thy helpe. Where are thy kinges nowe, that shulde helpe the in all thy cities? Yea and thy iudges, of whom thou saidest, gyue me a kynge and Princes? well, I gaue the a kynge in my wrath, and in my displeasure wyll I take him from the agayne. The wyckednelle of Ephraim is bounde together, and his synne layed vpon. Therfore shall sorowes come vpon him, as vpon a woman that trauayleth. An vndiscrete sonne is he, for he consydereth not, that he shulde not haue bene able to haue endured in ye tyme of his byrth, had not I defended him from the graue, and delyuered him from death.

O death, I wyll be thy death: O helle, I wyl be thy stynge. Yet can I se no comforte, for for when he is nowe the goodlyest amonge the brethren, the east wynde (euen the wynde of the Lorde) shall come downe from the wildernesse, and dire vp his conduites, and drinke vp his welles: he shall spoyle the treasure of all pleasaunt vessels.

As for Samaria, they shal be made waste, and why? they are disobedyente vnto their God. They shall perysshe with the swerde, their children shall be slayne and their women great with childe shall be rypte vp.

¶ The destruction of Samaria.

CAPI. XIIII.

Ierem.xviii.a Ezech.xviii.a xxxiii.a Ioel.ii.c

OIsrael, turne the nowe, vnto the Lorde thy God, for thou hast taken a greate fal thorow thy wickednes. Take these wordes with you, when ye turne to ℣ Lorde and saye vnto him: O forgiue vs al our sinnes receyue vs graciously, and then wyl we offre the bullockes of our lyppes vnto the. Assur shall be no more oure helper, neither wyll we ryde vpon horses any more. As for the workes of oure handes, we wyll no more call vpon them: For it is thou that arte our God, thou the wilt euer mercye vnto the fatherlesse.

(Oyf they wolde do this) I shulde deale there fore: yea with all my herte wolde I loue them: so that my wrath shulde clene be turned awaye from them. Yea I wolde be vnto Israell as the dewe, and he shulde growe as the lylye, and his rote shulde breake oute as Libanus. His braunches shulde spreade out abrode and be as fayre as the olyue tree, and smell as Libanus. They that dwel vnder his shadowe, shulde come againe, and growe vp as the corne, and florysshe as the vyne: the shulde haue as good a name, as the wine of Libanus.

O Ephraim what haue I to do with Idols any more? I will graciously heare him, & lede him forth. I wyll be vnto the as a grene Fyre tree, vpō me shalt thou finde thy frute. Who so is wise, wil vnderstand this: and he that is vpright consydre it, wyll regarde it. For the wayes of the Lorde are rightous such as the Godly wyll walke in them: As for the wycked, they wyll stomble ther in.

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Oseas.

THE BOKE OF IOEL THE PROPHETE.

¶ The prophecye against the Iewes. He exhorteth the priestes to prayer and fastynge, for the myserye that was commynge at hande.

CAPI. I.

THis is the worde of the Lorde, that came vnto Joel the sonne of Phatuel: Heare, O ye elders: ponder this wel all ye that dwell in the land: if euer there hap pened suche a thinge in youre dayes, or in the dayes of youre fathers. Tell youre children of it, and let them shewe it vnto their children, and so they to cerrtayne their posterite therof. Loke what the caterpyller hath left, that hath the grashopper eaten vp: what the grashoppe left, that hath the locust eaten vp: and what the locust hath left, that hath the blastynge consumed. Wake vp ye dronkardes, and wepe: mourne all ye wynesupers, because of youre swete wyne, for it shal be taken awaye from youre mouthe. Yea a myghtye and an innumerable people shall come vp in to my land: whose haue teeth like the teeth of lyons, and chaft bones lyke the lyonesses. They shal make my vineyard waist they shall pyll of the barckes of my frygtres, scrape them bare, take them awaye, & make the braunches whyte.

Make thy mone as a virgin dothe that gyrdeth her self with sack, because of her husbe grome. For the meate and drinckoffrynge shal be taken awaye from the house of the Lorde: and the priestes the Lordes ministers shall mourne. The felde shall be wasted, the lande shall be in a myserable case: for the corne shall be destroyed, the swete wyne shal come to confusion, and the oyle vtterlye desolate. The housbande men and the wyne gardeners shal take pyteously & make lamentande for the wheate, wyne and barly, and because the harueste vpon the felde is so cleane destroyed. The grape gatherers shall make greate mone, when the vyneyarde and frygtres be so vtterlye wasted.

Yea all the pomgarnetes, palmetrees, & apple trees, and the other trees of the felde shal wyther awaye. Thus the the merye cheare of the chyldren of men, shall come to confusion.

Gyrde you, and make youre mone, O preystes: mourne ye mynysters of the aulter go youre waye in, and slepe in sack clothe, ye officers of my God: for the meate and drinkoffrynge shall be taken awaye from ℣ house of youre God. Proclayme a fastynge, cal the congregacion, gather the elders and all the inhabyters of the lande to gether into ℣ house of the Lorde your God, and crye vnto ℣ Lord alas, alas, for this daye. And why? the daye of the Lorde is at hande, and commeth as a destroyer dystroyer from the almyghtye. Shal not the meate be taken awaye before oure eyes, the myrth also and ioye from the house of oure God? The seed shal perysh in the ground, the garners shal lye wast, ℣ floores shalbe broken down, for the corn shal be destroyed. O what a lyghtinge make the catel? the bullockes are very euell lykinge, because they haue no pasture: and the shepe are sampysshed awaye.

O Lorde, to the wyll I crye: for the fyre hath consumed the goodlye pastures of the wyldernesse, and the flame hath brent vp all the trees of the felde. Yea the wylde beastes crye also vnto the: for the water ryuers are dryed vp, and the fyre hath consumed the pastures of the wyldernesse.

¶ The prophecyeth the commynge and cruelnye of the enemyes. Exhortation to moue them to amende.

CAPI. II.

BLowe out the trompet in Sion, & crye vpon my holy hyll, that all suche as dwell in the the lande, maye tremble at it: for the day of the Lorde commeth, and is harde at hande: a darcke day, a gloomyng day a cloudy day, yea & a stormy day, lyke as ℣ morninge spreadeth out vpon the hylles: Namely, a great and myghtye people: suche as haue not bene sene sens the begynninge, neither shal be after them for euermore. Before him shall be a consumynge fyre and behynde him a brennynge flame. The lande shall be as a garden of pleasure before him, but behynde him shall it be a desy waste wyldernesse, and there is no man, that shall escape him. They are to loke vpon lyke barded horses, & runne lyke horsmen. They skyppe vp vpon the hilles, as it were the sounde of charrettes, as the flame of fyre that consumeth the strawe, and as a mighty people redy to the battel.

The folke shall be afrayed of him, all faces shall be as blacke as a pot. These shall runne lyke gyauntes, and leape ouer ℣ walles lyke men of warre. Every man in his goinge shall kepe his strayte, and not go out of his path. There shal not one hyrue an other, but eche shall kepe his owne way. They shal breake in at the wyndowes, and not be hurt. They shal come into the cite, and runne vpō the walles: They shall clyme vp vpon the houses, and slyp in at the windowes lyke a theefe. The earth shall quake before him, yea the heauens shall be moued: The sonne and Moone shall be darckened and the starres shall withdraw their shyne. The Lord shall gyue his voyce before his host, for his hoste is greate, stronge and mighty to fulfyll his commaundement. This is that greate and merueylous fearfull daye of the Lorde: And who is able to abyde it.

Nowe therfore sayeth the Lorde: Turne you vnto me with all youre hertes, with fastynge weepynge and mournynge, rent youre hertes, and not your clothes. Turn you vnto the Lorde your God, for he is gracyous and merciefull longe sufferinge and of great compassion: and redy to pardon wickednes. Who (no doubte) he also shal turne, and forgyue: & after his chastenynge, be shall let youre increase remayne, for meat and drinckoffrynges vnto the Lorde youre God: Blowe out with ℣ trompet in Sion, proclayme a fastinge, cal the congregacyon, and gather the people together: warne the cōgregation, and gather the elders, bring the children and sucklynges to gyther. Let the the brydgrome go forthe of his chambre, & the bryde out of her closet. Let the preistes serue the Lorde betweene the porche and the aulter weepinge and sayinge: be fauourable, O Lorde, be fauourable vnto thy people: let not thyne heritage be brought to suche confusion, leest the Heithen be lordes therof. Wherfore shulde they saye amonge the heithen where is nowe their God?

Then shall the Lorde be gelous ouer his lande, and spare his people: yea the Lorde shall answere, and saye vnto his people: Beholde, I wyll sende you corne, wine, & oyle, so that ye shal haue plentye of them: and I wyll no more geue you ouer to be a reproue amonges the heithen. Agayne, as for hym of the north, I shall dryue him farre from you: and thrust him out in to a dry and waste land his face towarde the east see, and his hyndre partes toward the vttermost see. The stynck of hym shall go vp, and his fylthy corruptiō shal sal vpon him selfe, because he hath wrought so proudely.

Feare not (O land) but be glad and reioice for the Lorde wyl do great thinges. Be not ye afrayed neither (O ye beastes of the felde) for the pastures shall be grene and the trees shal beare their frute: the frygtrees and vine yardes shal geue their increase.

Be glad then (O ye chyldren of Sion) and reioyce in the Lorde youre God, for he hath geuen you a teacher of rightousnesse: and he shall sende you downe showres of rayne, early and late in the fyrste moneth: so that the garners shall be full of corne, and the presses plenteous in wine and oyle. And as for the yeres that the grashopper, locuste, blastynge and caterpyller (my greate hoaste, which I sent amonge you) haue eaten vp, I shall restore the to you agayne: so that ye shall haue ynough to eate, and be satysfyed: & praise the name of the Lord your God, that so marueylously hath dealte with you.

And my people shal neuer be confounded any more. Ye shal wel knowe, that I am in the myddest of Israel, and that I am youre God yea & ℣ there is none other, & my people shall no more be brought to confusion.

After this, wil I poure out my spirite vpō all flesshe: and youre sonnes and doughters shall prophecye: youre old men shal dreame dreames, and youre yonge men shall se visions. yea those dayes wyll I power oute my spirite vpon seruauntes and maydes. I wyl shew wonders in heauen above, and tokens in the earthe beneth: bloude and fyre, and the vapoure of smoke. The sonne shall be turned

Joath.iii.c Luke.xxi.c Roma.x.b turned into darcheneſſe, and the moone in to bloude: before the greate and notable daye of the Lorde come. And the tyme ſhall come that who ſo euer calleth on the name of the Lorde, ſhall be ſaued. For vpon the mounte Sion and at Jeruſalem, there ſhall be a ſaluacion, lyke as the Lord hath promyſed: yea and amonge the other remnaunt, whom the Lorde ſhall call.

¶ Of the iudgement of God agaynſt the enemyes of his people.

CAPI. III.

A For take hede: in thoſe dayes & at ſ̄ ſame tyme when I turne agayne the captyuitie of Juda and Jeruſalē: I ſhal gather all people togithee, and bringe theym in the valleye of Joſaphat: and there wyll I reaſon with them: becauſe of my people and heritage of Iſrael: whome they haue ſcattered about in the nacions, and parted my land: yea they haue call lottes for my people the yong mē haue they ſet in ſ̄ bzodel houſe, and ſolde the Damſels for wyne that they myght haue to dzincke. Thou Tirus and Sidon and all ye bordees of the Philiſtines: B Ezech.xxvi.a xxviii.xxviii Amos.i.b what haue ye to do w̄ me? Wyl ye defy me? wel, if ye wil nedes defye me, I ſhal requyte you, euen vpon youre heade, and that ryghte ſhortly: for ye haue taken awaye my ſyluer and golde, my fayre and goodly Jewels, and bzought them into youre goddes houſes. The chyldzen alſo of Juda and Jeruſalem haue ye ſolde vnto that Grekes, that ye myghte bryngе them farre frome the bozders of theyr owne countreyes.

Beholde therfore, I wyll rayſe them out of the place, where ye haue ſolde them, & will rewarde you euen vpon youre heade. Youre ſonnes & youre doughteres wyl I ſel thozowe the handes of the chyldzen of Juda, and ſo they ſhall gyue them forth to ſel, vnto them Jeremi.xxx.a Ezech.xxv.b of Saba, a people of a farre countrey, for the Lorde hym ſelfe hath ſayde it. Cry out theſe thinges amonge ſ̄ Gētyles, proclayme warre wake vp the gyaunts, let them dzawe nygh, let them come vp all the luſty warryours of the. Make you ſwordes of youre plowſhares, C Joel. and ſpeares of youre ſyckes and wythis. Let the weake man ſaye: I am ſtronge. Make you, and come, al ye Gētyles rounde about: gather you together, there thi the Lord lay al the gyauntes to the grounde. Let the people ariſe, and get them to the valley of Joſaphat: for there wyll I ſyt, and iudge all Gētyles rounde about. Laye to youre ſickes, for the harueſt is ripe, come get you downe, the wynepreſſe is ful, yea the wynepreſſes runne ouer, for their wickednelle is waxen great.

In the valley appoynted, there ſhal be many, many people, for the day of the Lorde is nyghe in the valley appoynted. The ſunne & moone ſhall be darckened, and the ſtarres ſhal withdrawe their ryght. The Lorde ſhal roze out of Sion, and crye out of Jeruſalem, that the heuens and the earth ſhal quake wythal. But the Lord ſhalbe a defēce vnto his owne people, & a refuge for the chyldzen of Iſrael. Thus ſhall ye knowe, that I the Lord your God dwell vpon my holy mount of Sion. Then ſhal Jeruſalem be holy, and there ſhal no ſtraungers go thozow it eny moze. Then ſhall the mountaynes dzoppe ſwete wyne, & the hilles ſhal flowe with mylke. All the ryuers of Juda ſhal haue water ynough, and out of the Lordes houſe there ſhal flowe a ſpryngе to watre the broke of Sittim. But Egypte ſhal be layed waſte, and Edom ſhal be deſolate: becauſe they haue deale ſo cruelly with the chyldzen of Juda, and ſhed innocēt bloude in their lande. Agayne, Juda ſhalbe inhabyted for euermoze, and Jeruſalem from generacion to generacō: for I wyll not leaue their bloude vnauēged. And the Lorde ſhal dwel in Sion.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AMOS.

¶ The tyme of the prophecye of Amos. The word of the Lorde agaynſt Iſrah, agaynſt Tyre, agaynſt Gaza, and agaynſt the ſonnes of Ammon.

CAPI. I.

THeſe are the ſermōs that were ſhewed vnto Amos (whyche was one of the ſhepherdes at Thecua) vpon Iſrael, in the tyme of Oſiah kinge of Juda, & in the time of Jeroboam the ſonne of Joah kinge of Iſrael, two yere before the earth quake. And he ſayd: The Lord ſhall roze out of Sion, & ſhewe his doyce frō Jeruſalem: ſo that the paſtures of the ſhepherdes ſhall be in a miſerable caſe, and ſtop of Charmel dyed vp. Thus ſayth the Lord: for the and foure wickednelles of Damaſcus, I will not ſpare yee: becauſe they haue threſhed Galaad with yron ſtarles: But I will ſende a fyre into the houſe of Hazael, which ſhal conſume the palaces of Benadab. Thus will I breake the barres of Damaſcus, and rote out the inhabitor from the felde of Auen, and him that holdeth the ſcepter, out of the pleſaūt houſe ſo ſ̄ the people ſhal be caryed out of Egypte Syria, ſaith the Lord.

B Thus ſaith the Lorde: For the and foure wickednelle of Gaza, I wyll not ſpare yee: becauſe they make the priſoners yet moze captyue, and haue dryuen them in to the lāde of Edom. Therfore will I ſende a fyre in to the walles of Gaza, whyche ſhall deuoure her houſes. I wyll rote out them that dwel at Aſdod and him that holdeth the ſcepter of Aſcalon, and ſtretch out myne hande ouer Accaron, that the remnaunt of the Philiſtines ſhal peryſhe ſayth the Lorde.

C Thus ſaith the Lorde: for the and foure wickednelles of the cytye of Tire, I wyl not ſpare her: becauſe they haue increaſed the captiuite of the Edomytes, and haue not remembred the brotherly couenaunt. Therfore wyll I ſende a fyre in to the walles of Tire that ſhall conſume her palaces. Thus ſayth the Lorde: For the and foure wickednelles of Edom I will not ſpare him, becauſe he perſecuted his brother with the ſworde, deſtroyed his mothers wombe, bare hatred deep lōg and ſo kept indignacion alway by him. Therfore will I ſende a fyre into Theman whyche ſhall deuoure the palaces of Bozra.

D Thus ſayth the Lorde: For the and foure wickednelles of the chyldzen of Ammon I will not ſpare them: becauſe they rypte vp ſ̄ women great with chylde in Galaad, to make the bordres of theyr landes the wyder. Therfore I wyll kyndle a fyre in the walles of Rabbath, that ſhall conſume her palaces with a greate crye, in the daye of battayle, in tempeſt and in the day of ſtorme: ſo that their kinge ſhall go into captiuitie he and his priūces together, ſayth the Lorde.

A Gaynſt Moab, Juda, and Iſrael.

CAPI. II.

THus ſayth the Lorde: For the and foure wickednelles of Moab, I wil not ſpare him: becauſe he burnte the bones of the king of Edom to aſhes. Therfore wyll I ſende a fyre into Moab, whiche ſhall conſume the palaces of Carioth: ſo that Moab ſhall periſhe with a noyſe and the ſounde of a ſhawme. I will rote oute the iudge from amonge them and ſlaye all his princes with him ſayth the Lorde. Thus ſayth the Lorde: for the and foure wickednelles of Juda, I wyll not ſpare him: becauſe he hath caſte aſyde the lawe of the Lorde, and not kept his commaundementes: for why, they wolde nedes be diſceyued with ſ̄ lyes, that their forefatheres folowed. Therfore wyl I ſend a fyre into Juda, which ſhall conſume the palaces of Jeruſalem.

Thus ſayth the Lorde: for the and foure wickednelles of Iſrael, I wil not ſpare him: becauſe he hath ſolde the ryghtous for money, and the poore for ſhoes. They treade vpon poore mens heades, in the duſte of the earth, and croke the wayes of the meke. The ſonne and ſ̄ father go to the harlot, to diſhonoure my holye name, they lye beſyde euery aulter vpon clothes taken to pledge, and in the houſe of their goddes they drynke ſ̄ wine of the oppreſſed.

Yet deſtroyed I the Amorite before theym that was as hygh as the Cedre trees, and as ſtronge as the okes: not withſtandynge I deſtroyed his frute frome aboue and his rote frome vnder.

Agayne: I brought you oute of the lande of Egypte, and led you. xl. yeares thozowe the wildernelle, that ye myghte haue the Amorites lande in poſſeſſion. I rayſed vp Prophetes amonge your chyldzen, and abſtayners amonge youre yonge men. Is it not ſo, O ye chyldzen of Iſrael, ſayth the Lorde? But ye gaue the abſtayners wine to drynke, yea ye commaunded the prophetes, ſaying, Prophecy not. Beholde, I wil craſche you in ſondre lyke as a wayne craſcheth, that is ful of ſheues, ſo that the ſwyfte ſhall not eſcape, neyther the ſtronge be able to do any thinge, no, the giaunt ſhall not ſaue his owne lyfe. The archer ſhall not abyde, & the ſwyfte of foote ſhall not eſcape. The horſman ſhall not ſaue his lyfe, and he that is as manly of ſtomache as a giaunt, ſhall in that daye be faine to runne his waye naked, ſayth the Lorde.

¶ The reproueth the houſe of Iſrael of wyckednes.

CAPI. III.

Heare

A HEare, what the Lorde speaketh vnto you, O ye children of Israel) namely, vnto all the tribes, whom I brought out of Egipt and said: you only haue I accepted from all the generations of the earthe: therfore will I visite you in all youre wickednesses. Care ye twayne walke togither except they be agreed amōg them selues? Doth a lyon rore in the wod, except he haue a pray? B Or cryeth a lyons whelpe out of his denne, except he haue gotten some thinge? Or he a byrde fal in a snare vpon the earth where no fouler is? Taketh a man his snare vp frō the grounde, afore he catch somwhat? Crye they oute Alarum with the trompette in the citie, and the people not afrayde? Commeth there any plage in a city but it be ℣ Lordes worke? Nowe doth the Lorde God no mācr or thinge, but he reuelyth his secrete before vnto his seruauntes the prophetes. When a lyon roreth, who will not be afrayed? Seinge then that the Lorde God hath selfe spokē, who wyl not prophecye?

C Preache in the palaces at Asdod, and in the palaces of the lande of Egypt, and saye: gather you togither vpon the mountaynes of Samaria. Lo shall ye se great murther and vyolent oppressyon amonges them: for why, they regard not the thyng that is right saith the Lorde, they gather to gether cuell gotten goodes, and laye robbery in their houses.

Therfore thus sayth the Lord God: This D lande shall be troubled and besieged rounde about, thy strength shal be pluckte from the, and thy palaces robbed. Thus sayth ℣ Lord, Like as an herdeman taketh two legges or a pece of an eare out of the lyons mouth: Euen so the children of Israel (that dwell in Samaria, vpynge their couches in the corner, and their beddes at Damascus) shall be pluckte awaye. Heare, and beare recorde in the house of Jacob (sayth the Lorde God of hoostes) that when I begyn to vysyte the wyckednesse of Israel, I will vysyte the aulters at Bethel also: so that the hornes of ℣ aulter shall be broken of, and fall to the grounde.

Amos. iii. Hos. x. xiii.

As for the winter house and sōmer house, I will smyte them downe: and the houses of Iury, yea and many other houses shal perysshe, and be destroyed, sayth the Lorde.

¶ Against the gouernors of Samaria.

CAPI. IIII.

A OHeare this wo, de ye fat kyne, that be vpon the hyll of Samaria: ye that do poore men wronge, and oppresse the nedy: ye that saye to youre lordes: bring hither let vs drinke. Therfore ℣ Lord hath swoorne by his holynesse: The dayes shall come vpon you, that ye shall be lyfte vp vpon speares, & your posterite caryed away in fyshers pannyers. Ye shal get you out at ℣ cloppes one after an other, and in Armon shal ye be cast away, sayth the Lorde.

Psal. xxiii. b

Ye came to Bethel for to worke vngracyousnesse, and haue increased youre synnes at Galgal: ye brought your sacrifices in the morninge and your tythes vnto the thirde daye. Ye made a thanckoffrynge of leuen, ye proclamed & preached frewyllofferynges, and proclaymed them. Such lust had ye, O ye children of Israel, sayth the Lorde God. Therfore haue I gyuē you pure teeth in all youre cytyes, and scarcenesse of bred in all your places yet wolde ye not turne vnto me (sayth the Lord). When there were but thre monethes vnto the haruest, I withholde the rayne from you: yea I rayned vpon one citie, and not vpon an other one pece of groūd was moysture with rayne and the grounde that I rayned not vpō was dry. Wherfore two, yea thre cytyes came vn to one to drincke water: but they were not satisfyed. yet wil ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde.

Amos. iv. Hag. ii. Deut. xxviii.

I haue smytē you with drought & blasting and loke how many orchardes, vineyardes, gardeners and olyue trees ye had: the caterpiller hathe eaten them vp. But yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayth ℣ Lord. Yea I haue I sent among you, as I dyd in Egypte youre yong men haue I slayne with the sworde and caused your horses be taken captyue: I made the stinckinge sauoure of your tentes to come vp in to your nostrels: Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Some of you haue I ouerthrowen, as I ouerthrew Sodome and Gomorre: so that ye were as a brande pluckt out of the fyre. Yet will ye not turne vnto me, sayth the Lorde. Therfore thus will I handle the agayne, O Israel, & euen thus will I handle the. Make thee ready then to mete thy God, O Israel. For lo, he maketh the mountaynes, he formeth the wynde, he sheweth man what he is about to do, he maketh the mornynge and the darknes, he treadeth vpon the hygh places of the earth: the Lorde God of hoostes is his name.

Gen. xix. Deut. xxix. Esay. i. Hier. xxiii. Amos. v. Amos. iv. Amos. v. Amos. iv. Amos. v. Amos. iv

The Lorde God shewed me suche a vysion: beholde: there stode one that made grene Coppers, euen when the corne was shotinge forth, after the kynge had clypt his shepe.

Nowe when they vndertoke to eate vp all the grene thynges in the lande, I sayde: O Lorde God, be mercyfull I beseche the: who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was gracious therin, and the Lorde sayde: well, it shall not be.

Agayn the Lorde shewed me this vision: beholde, the Lorde God called the fyre to punysshe withall, and it deuoured the greate depe: yea it consumed a parte alredye. Then sayd I: O Lorde God, holde thyne hande: for who shoulde elles helpe vp Jacob that is brought so lowe? So the Lorde was mercyfull therin, and the Lorde God sayd: well, it shall not be.

Moreouer he shewed me this vysion: Beholde, the Lorde stode vpon a plastered walle, and a maions trowell in his hande. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maions trowell. Then sayde the Lorde: Beholde, I will laye the trowell amonge my people of Israell, and will no more oueršie theym: but the hyghe wyll chapelles of Isaac muste be layde waste, and the churches of Israell made desolate, and as for the house of Jeroboam, I will stande vp agaynst it with the swerde.

Vpon this sente Amaziah the Preest to Bethel, vnto Jeroboam the kynge of Israel, sayinge: Amos maketh the house of Israell to rebell agaynste the, the lande can not awaye with his wordes. For Amos sayth, Jeroboam shall dye with the swerde, and Israel shall be led awaye captyue oute of theyr owne lande.

And Amaziah sayde vnto Amos: Get the hence (thou that canste se so well) and flee in to the land of Juda: get the there thy liuing and prophecye there, and prophecye no more at Bethel, for it is the kynges chapell, & the kynges courte.

Amos answered and sayde to Amaziah: As for me, I am neyther Prophete ne Prophetes sonne, but a keper of cattell. Now as I was breakynge downe mulberyes, and goynge after the cattell, the Lorde toke me, and sayde vnto me: Goo thy waye and prophecye vnto my people of Israell. And therfore heare thou now the worde of the Lord: Thou sayest: prophecye not agaynste Israell, and speake not ynge agaynste the house of Isaac. Wherfore thus sayth the Lorde: Thy wyfe shall be defyled in the cyte, thy sonnes and doughters shall be slayne with the swerde, and thy lande shall be measured out with the lyne. Thou thy selfe shalte dye in an vncleane lande, and Israell shall be dryuen out of his owne countrey.

¶ Agaynst the rulers of Israel. The Lorde wytnesseth that he will fulfyll the thynges whiche he hath determyned agaynst Israel.

CAPI. VIII.

The Lorde God shewed me this vision and behelde, there was a maunde with sommer frute. And he sayde Amos, what seest thou? I answered: a maunde with sommer frute. Then sayde the Lorde vnto me: the ende commeth vpon my people of Israel, I will no more oversee them. In that daye shall the songes of the temple be turned to sorowe, sayth the Lorde God. Many dead bodyes shall lye in euerye place, and be caste forth secretly.

Heare this, O ye that oppresse the poore, and destroye the nedye in the lande, sayinge: When will the newe moneth be gone, that we may sell vytayle, and the Sabboth, that we maye haue scarcenesse of corne: to make the bushell lesse, and the sycle greater? We shall set vp falce waygh tes, that we may get the poore vnder vs with their money, and the nedye also for shoes: yea let vs sell the chaffe for corne.

The Lorde hath sworne agaynst the pryde of Jacob: these workes of theirs will I neuer forget. Shall not the land tremble, & all they that dwell therin mourne for this? Shall not their destruction come vpon them lyke a water steame, and flowe ouer them, as the floode of Egypt? At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde God) I shall cause the sunne to go downe at none, and the lande to be darke in the clere daye. Your hye feestes will I turne to sorow, and youre songes to mournynge: I will bynge sacke clothe vpon all your backes, and baldnesse vpon euery head: yea suche a mournyng will I sende them, as is made vpon an onely begotten sonne, and they shall haue a miserable ende.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde God) that I shall sende an hunger in to the earthe, not the hunger of breed, nor the thyrste of water: but an hunger to heare the worde of the Lorde: so that they shall goo frome the one see to the other, yea from the Northe vnto the East, runnynge about to seke the worde of the Lorde, and shall not fynde it. In that tyme shall the fayre virgins and the younge men perysshe for thyrste: yea euen they that sweare in the offence of Samaria, and saye: as truly as thy God lyueth O Dan, and as truly as thy God lyueth at Berlaba. Those shall fall, and neuer ryse vp agayne.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Israel. No man can escape the hande of God.

CAPI. IX.

I Sawe the Lorde standynge vpon the aulter, and he sayde: smyte the wooze chyst, that the postes maye shake withall. For theyr couetousnesse shall fall vpon all their heades, and their posteritie shall be slayne with the swerde. They shall not flee awaye, there shall not one of them escape, ne be deliuered.

Though they were buryed in the hell, my hande shal fetche them from thence: though they clymme vp to heauen, yet shall I caste them downe: though they hyde them selues vpon the toppe of Carmel, yet shall I seke them oute, and bynge theym frome thence: Though they creepe downe fro my syghte in to the depe of the see, I shall commaunde the serpent euen there to byte them: Yf they go awaye before their ennemies in to captiuitie, then shall I commaunde the swerde there to slee them.

Thus will I set myne eyes vpon theym, for euyll thynge, and not for theyr welth. For when the Lorde God of hoostes toucheth a lande, it consumeth awaye, and all they that dwelle therin, muste nedes mourne: And why? theyr destruction shall aryse as euerye streame, and sunne ouer them as the floode in Egypte.

He that hath his dwellynge in heuen, and groundeth his tabernacle in the earthe: He that calleth the waters of the see, and powreth them out vpon the playne grounde: his name is the Lorde. O ye chyldren of Israell are ye not vnto me, euen as the Moryans, sayth the Lorde? haue not I brought Israell oute of the lande of Egypte, the Philistynes frome Capthor, and the Sirians frome Kyr? Beholde, the eyes of the Lorde are vpon the realme that synneth, to roote it cleane out of the earthe: Neuertheles I will not vtterly destroye the house of Jacob sayth the Lorde.

For lo, this I promyse: though I syfte the house of Israell amonges all nacyons (lyke as they vse to syfte in a syue) yet shal not the smallest grauell stone fall vpon the earthe: But all the wicked doers of my people, that sey: Ah, the plage is not so nye, to come so hastely vpon vs: those shall perysshe with the swerde.

At that tyme will I buylde agayne the tabernacle of David, that is fallen downe, and hedge vp his gappes: and loke what is broken, I shall repayre it: Yea I shal buylde it agayne, as it was afore tyme, that they maye possesse the remnaunte of Edom / yea, and all suche people as call vpon my name with them, sayth the Lorde, whiche doth these thynges.

Beholde, the tyme commeth (sayth the Lorde) that the plowman shall ouertake the mower, and the treader of grapes hym that soweth seed. The mountaynes shall droppe swete wyne, and the hylles shall be molten, and I will tourne the captiuitie of my people of Israell: they shall repayre the waste cytyes, and haue them in possession: they shal plante vynyardes, and drynke the wine therof: they shall make gardens, and eatoye the frutes of theym. And I will plante theym vpon theyr owne grounde, so that I will neuer roote them out agayne fro theyr lande which I haue geuen them, sayth the Lorde thy God.

THis is the vysyon that was shewed vnto Abdi: Thus hath sayde the Lord God spoken vpō Edom: We haue herd of the Lorde that there is an imbassage sent amonges the heathen: Vp, lette vs aryse and fyght agaynste them. Beholde, I wyll make the small amonge the heathen, so that thou shalt be vtterly despysed. The pryde of thyne herte hath lyfte the vp, thou that dwellest in the strong holdes of stone, and hast made thy habytacion hye: Thou sayst in thyne herte: who shall caste me downe to the grounde? But though thou wentest vp as hye as the Egle, and madest thy nest aboue amonge the sterres: yet wolde I plucke the downe frome thence. If the theues and robbers came to the by nyght, thou takynge thy rest, shoulde they not steale, tyll they hadde ynoughe? If the grape gatherers came vpon the, wolde they not leaue the some grapes? The ende of the prophecye of Abdi.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE IONAS.

Of the flyght of Jonas when he was sent to preache. He tempeth ye sayler, and casteth him in the se for his disobedience.

CAPI. I.

THe worde of the Lorde came vnto Jonas the sonne of Amithai, sayinge: Aryse, and get the to Ninine that great cyte, & preache vnto them, how that their wickednesse is come vp before me. And Jonas made him redye to flye vnto Tharsis from the presence of the Lorde, and gat him downe to Joppa, where he found a shyp redye for to goo vnto Tharsis. So he payde his fare, & went aborde, that he might goo with them vnto Tharsis, from the presence of the Lorde. But the Lorde hurled a great wynde in to the see, and there was a myghty tempest in the see, so that the shyppe was in iopardye of goynge in peces. Then the mariners were afrayde, and cryed euery man vnto his god: and the goodes that were in the shyppe, they cast in to the see to lighten it of them. But Jonas gat him vnder the hatches, where he layde him downe and slept.

1

So the master of the shyp came to him and sayd vnto him, why slombrest thou? Vp, call vpon thy God: yf God (happily) will thinke vpon vs, that we perysshe not. And they sayd one to an other: come, let vs cast lottes, that we may knowe for whose cause we are thus troubled. And so they caste lottes, and the lot fell vpon Jonas.

2

Then sayd they vnto him: tell vs for whose cause are we thus troubled? what is thyne occupacion? whence commest thou? what countrey man art thou, and of what nacion? He answered them: I am an Ebrue, and I feare the Lorde God of heuen, whiche made bothe the see and drye lande. Then were the men exceadingly afrayde, and sayde vnto him: why hyddest thou so? (for they knewe that he was fled from the presence of the Lorde, because he had tolde them) and sayd moreouer vnto him: What shalde we do vnto the that the see maye ceasse from troublynge vs? (for the see wrought and was troublous) he answered them: Take me and cast me in to the see, so shall it let you be in rest: for I wote, it is for my sake, that this great tempest is com vpon you.

Neuertheles, the men assayed with rowynge to bringe the shyp to lande, but it would not be, because the see wrought so, and was so troublous agaynste them. Wherfore they cryed vnto the Lorde, and sayd: O Lorde, let vs not perysshe for this mans death, neyther laye thou innocent bloude vnto oure charge, for thou, O Lorde, haste wrought euen as thy pleasure was.

So they toke Jonas and cast him in to the see, and the see lefte ragynge. And the men feared the Lorde exceadingly, doing sacrifices and making vowes vnto the Lorde.

Jonas is swallowed of a whale. The prayer of Jonas.

CAPI. II.

BVt the Lorde prepared a great fyshe to swalowe vp Jonas. So was Jonas in the belly of the fish, thre dayes and thre nightes. And Jonas prayed vnto the Lorde his God out of the fishes belly, and sayd: In my trouble I called vnto the Lorde, and he herde me: out of the belly of hell I cried, and thou herdest my voyce. Thou haddest caste me downe depe in the myddest of the see, and the floude compassed me about: yea all thy waues and rowles of water wente ouer me, I thoughte that I had ben cast awaye oute of thy syghte, but I wyll yet agayne loke towarde thy holye temple.

The waters compassed me, euē to the very soule: the depe laye about me, and the wedes were wrapt about myne heed. I went downe to the bottome of the hylles, and was barred in with erth for euer. But thou, O Lorde my God, hast brought vp my lyfe agayne out of corruption. When my soule fainted within me, I thought vpon the Lorde, and my prayer came in vnto the, euen in to thy holy temple. They that holde of vayne vanities will forsake his mercy. But I will do the sacrifice of the voyce of thankesgyuynge, and will paye that I haue vowed: for why? saluation commeth of the Lorde. And the Lorde spake vnto the fyshe, and it cast out Jonas agayne vpon the drye lande.

D

Jonas is sende agayne to Ninive. The repentaunce of the kynge of Ninive.

CAPI. III.

THen came the worde of the Lorde vnto Jonas agayne, sayinge: vp & get the to Ninive that great cyty, and preache vnto them the preching which I bad the. So Jonas arose, an went to Ninive at the Lordes commaundemente. Ninive was a great cyte vnto God, namely of thre dayes iourney.

a Josue.i.a

And Jonas went to, & entred in to the cyte euē a dayes iourney, and cried, sayinge: Yet are yet xl dayes, and then shal Ninive be ouerthrowen. And the people of Ninive byleued God, and proclaymed fasting, and arayed them selues in sackecloth, as well the great as the small of them. And the tidinges came vnto the king of Ninive, which arose out of his seate, & did his apparell of, and put on sackecloth, and sat him downe in asshes.

b

And it was cried and commaunded in Ninive, by the authoritie of the king and his lordes sayinge: se that neyther man nor beest, ore or shepe taste ought at all, and that they neyther fede, ne drynke water, but put on sackecloth both

man and beeth,& cry mightyly vnto God: yea se that euery man turne from his euil waye,&
from the wickednesse that he hath in hand.

D Who can tell? God may turne,and repent Ioel.ij.viii.d and cease frō his fearce wrath,that we perish not.And when God sawe their workes,how they turned from their wicked wayes, he repented on the euil which he sayd he wolde wo vnto them,and did it not.

¶ Jonas is reproued of God.

CAPI. IIII.

A Therefore Jonas was sore discontent and angry.And he prayed vnto the Lorde,& sayd: O Lord was not this my saying (I pray the) when I was yet in my countrey?
therfore I hasted rather to fle vnto Tharsis,
for I know wel ynough that thou art a mercyful God,ful of compassion,longe suffering, and of great kyndnesse, and repentest when thou shouldst take punishment.And now, O Lorde, iii.Reg.xix.a take my lyfe frō me (I beseche the) for I had rather dye then lyue.Then sayde the Lorde:
art thou so angry? And Jonas gat him out of the city,and sate downe on the east side therof
and there made him a boothe,and sat vndre it in the shadowe tyll he might se, what shulde chaunce vnto the city.

And the Lord God prepared a wylde vyne, which sprange vp ouer Jonas,that he might haue shadowe aboue his heed to defende him oute of his payne. And Jonas was exceedinge glad of the wylde vyne. But vpon the nexte morow against the spring of the day, the Lorde ordeyned a worme, whiche smote the wylde vyne,so that it withered awaye. And when the sunne was vp, God prepared a feruent East
wynd: and the sunne bet ouer the head of Jonas that he fainted agayn, and wished vnto his soule,that he might dye, and sayde: It is better for me to dye,then to lyue. And God sayd vnto Jonas: Art thou so angrye for the wylde vyne? And he said: yea,very angry am I,euen vnto deth. And the Lorde sayd: thou hast compassion vpon a wylde vyne, whereon
thou bestowedst no labour,ne madest it grow:
which sprang vp in one night,and perished in an other,and should not I then haue compassi on vpon Nineue that great city,wherin there are aboue an hundred and twenty thousande persons, that knowe not their ryghte hande frome their lefte, besydes moche cattell?

¶ The ende of the prophecye of Jonas.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE
MICHEAS.

¶ Of the destruction of Samaria, because of their Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

THis is the worde of the Lorde that came vnto Micheas the Mo-rasthite,in the dayes of Jothan, Achas and Ezechias kinge of Iu
da: which was shewed him vpō Samaria and Jerusalem. Heare al ye people marke this well, O earthe,and that therin is: Yea the Lorde God him self be witnesse amonge you,euen the Lorde from his holye temple. For why? beholde,the Lord shal go out of his place,and come downe, and trede vpon the hyghe thinges of the earth. The mountaynes shall consume vnder him,and the valleyes shal cleaue a sondre: lyke as wax cō meth at the fyre,and as the waters runne downwarde. And al this shal be for the wickednesse of Jacob,& the synnes of the house of Israel.

But what is the wickednesse of Jacob? Is not Samaria? Which are the high places of Juda? Is not Jerusalem? Therfore I shal make Samaria an heape of stones in the felde to lay about the vineyard: her stones shal I cast in to the valley,and discouer her foundacions. Al her Images shalbe broken down and all her winninges shall be brent in the fyre,yea all her Idols will I destroye: for why,they are gathered out of the hyre of an hore,and into an hores hyre shal they be tur ned agayne. Wherfore I wyll mourne and make lamentacion,bare and naked will I go I must mourne like the dragons, and take sorowe as the Estriches: for their wounde is past remedy: And why? it is come in to Juda and hath touched the port of my people at Jerusalem alredye. Wepe not, lest they at Geth perceyue it.

Thou at Beraphra,welter thy selfe in the dust and asshes. Thou that dwellest at Sephir,get the hence with shame. The proude shall dooste no more for very sorowe: & why?
her neighboure shal take from her what she hath. The rebellyous citie hopeth, that it shall not be so euel: but for al that,the plage shal come from the Lorde,euen into the porte of Jerusalem. The great noyse of the charettes shal feare them: that dwel at Lachis, which is an occasion of the synne of the doughter of Sion,for in came vp the wickednes of Is rael. Yea she sent her coursers into the lande of Geth.

The houses of Lyes wyll deceyue the kinges of Israel. And as for the (O thou that dwellest at Horasha) I shall bringe a possessi oner vpon the,and the plage of Israell shall reach vnto Odolla. Make the balde,& shaue the,because of thy tender children: Make the stanke balde as an Ezle for they shall be ca-ryed awaye captyue from the.

¶ The threatenynges agaynst the synful people.

CAPI. II.

WO vnto them,that ymagyn to doo harme,and deuyse vngratiousnes vpō their beddes,to perfourme it in the clere daye: for their power is agaynst God. Whē they couet land,they take it by violence,they rob men of their houses.

Thus they oppresse a man for his house, & euery man for his heritage. Therfore thus sayth the Lord: Behold agaynste this bonk-holde haue I deuysed a plage, wherout ye shal not plucke your neckes: Ye shal no more go so proudly,for it will be a perlous tyme.
In that daye shall this terme be vsed, and a mournynge shall be made ouer you on this maner: We be vtterly desolate,the portyon of my people is translated. When wyll he part vnto vs the land,that he hath taken frō vs? Iii.We.xvi

Neuertheles there shall be no man to deuide the thy portion in the congregacion of the Lord. Tush,holde your tunge(say they) Je shall not fall vpon this people, we shall not come so to confusion,sayth the house of Jacob? Is the spirite of the Lorde so cleane awaye? or is he so mynded? Truth it is,my wordes are frendly vnto the that lyue right but my people both the contrarye, therfore must I take parte agaynste them: for they take awaye both coote and cloke frome the symple. B Num.xxvi.iii

Je haue turned youre selues to fighte,the women of my people haue ye shot out from their good houses,and taken away my excel lent giftes frō their children. Vp,get you hēce for here shall ye haue no rest. C

Because of their Idolatrye they are corrupt,and shall myserably perysh. If I were a fleshly felowe and a preacher of lyes,& told the that they myght lye bybbyng & bollinge and be dronken: O that were a Prophet for this people. But I wyll gather the in dede, D O Jacob,and driue the remnaūt of Israel al togither I shal cary them one with an other as a flocke in the folde,and as the cattell in their stalles,that they maye be disquyeted of other men. Who so breaketh the gappe,he shal go before. They shal breake vp the port and go in,and out at it. Their kinge shall go before them,and the Lorde shal be vpon the heade of them.

¶ Agaynst the tyrannye of prynces, and false prophetes.

CAPI. III.

HEare, O ye heades of the house of Jacob,and ye leaders of the house of Is rael: Should not ye knowe,what were lawfull and right? But ye hate the good, & loue the euel: ye plucke of mens shynnes, & A Deu..xvii.b Jeremi.v.a Psal.lxxxii.a
the

the fleshe from their bones: ye eate the fleshe of my people, flaye of their skynne: ye breake their bones, ye chop them in peces as it were into a caudrō, and as flesh into a pot. Nowe the tyme shall come, that when they call vnto the Lord, he shall not heare them, but hide his face from them, because that they haue their owne ymaginacions they haue dealt so wickedly.

B And as concernynge the Prophetes that deceyue my people, thus the Lorde sayth against them: When they haue anye thyng to byte vpon, then they preache that all shal be well: but yf a man put not some thyng in to their mouthes, they preache of warre against him.

C Therfore your vision shall be turned to nyght, and youre prophecying to darcknesse. The sunne shall go downe ouer those Prophetes, and the daye shal be darcke vnto the. Then shall the vision seers be ashamed, and the sothsayers confounded: yea they shal be fayne, all the packe of them, to stoppe their mouthes, for they haue not Gods worde. As for me, I am full of strengthe, and of the spirite of the Lord, full of iudgement and boldnesse: to shewe the house of Jacob their wickednesse, and the house of Israel their synne.

D O heare this ye rulers of the house of Jacob, and ye iudges of the house of Israel: ye that abhorre the thinge that is iaultull, and wrest all the thinge that is streight: Ye that builde vp Sion with bloude, and Jerusalē with vnryghtwousnesse. O ye iudges, ye geue sentence for gyftes: O ye prestes, ye teache for lucre: O ye prophetes, ye prophecy for money. Deut.xvii.b Ezechi.xxii.b Yet will they be taken as those that holde vpon God, and saye: Is not the Lorde amōg vs? Truly, there can no mysfortune happen vs. Therefore shall Sion (for your sakes) be plowed lyke a feld, Jerusalem shal become an heape of stones, and the hyll of the temple shall be turned to an hye wod. Jeremy. xxvi.b

¶ Of the callynge of the Gentyles, and conuersion of the Jewes.

CAPI. IIII.

BVt in the latter dayes it shall come to passe that the hyll of the Lordes house shall be set vp hyer then any mountayns or hilles: Yea the people shal preasse vnto it, and the multitude of the Gentyles shal haste them thither, sayinge: Come, let vs goo vp to the hyll of the Lorde, and to the house of the God of Jacob, that he may teache vs his waye, and that we maye walke in his pathes. For the lawe shall come out of Sion, and the worde of God from Jerusalem, and shall geue sentence amonge the multytude of the Heathen, and reproue the people of farre countreys: so that of their swerdes they shall make plowestaues, and spyches of their speres. Esay.xi.a Psal.lx.a Esay.ii.b

B One people shall not lyfte vp a swerde against an other, yea, they shall no more learne to fyght: but euery man shall syt vnder his vyneyarde and vnder his fygtre, and no man shall feare him at all: for the mouthe of the Lorde of hoostes hath spoken it. Therfore where as all the people haue walked euery man in the name of his owne God we will walcke in the name of oure God for euer and euer. At the same tyme sayeth the Lord, will I gather vp the lame and the out caste and suche as I haue chastened: and will geue rest vnto the lame, & make of the outcastes a greate people and the Lorde him selfe shall be their kinge vpon the mount Sion, from this tyme forth for euermore. And vnto the (O thou towre of Eder, thou stronge holde of the doughter Sion) vnto the shall it come: euen the lordship and kingdom of the doughter Jerusalem. Why then arte thou nowe so heuye? is there no kinge in the? are thy counceilers awaye that thou arte so payned, as a woman in her trauayle? And nowe (O thou doughter Sion) be sory, let it greue the as a wife labouringe with childe: for now must thou get the out of the cytye, and dwel vpon the playn feld: Yea vnto Babylon shalte thou go, there shalt thou be deliuered, & there the Lord shal lowle the from the hand of thine enemyes. Gen.xlix.a Esay.xxxvii.b Esay.xxxix.b

D Nowe also are there many people gathered togither against the, sayinge: what lyon is cursed we shall se oure luste vpon her. But they knowe not the thoughtes of the Lorde, they vnderstand not his counsel, that shall gather them togyther as the sheues in the barne.

Therfore get the vp, O thou doughter Sion, and tryesshe out the corne: For I will make thy horne yron, and thy clawes brasse, that thou mayste grynde many people: their goodes shalt thou appropryate vnto the Lord and their substaunce vnto the ruler of the hole worlde.

¶ Of the destruction of Jerusalem.

CAPI. X.

AFter the shalt thou be robbed thy selfe, O thou robbers doughter: they shall laye siege against vs, and smyte the iudge of Israel with a rodde vpon the cheke. And thou Bethleem Ephrata, arte lytle amonge the thousandes of Juda, Out of the shall come vnto me, whiche shall be the gouernoure in Israel: whose out goynge hath bene from the begynnyge, and from euerlastynge. Genes.xlix.a Ioan.vii.b

In the meane whyle he plageth them for a season, vntyl the tyme that she (which shal beare) haue borne: then shall the remnaunt of his brethre be conuerted vnto the childre of Israel. He shall stande fast, and geue fode in the strength of the Lorde, and in the maiesty of the name of the Lorde his God: when they be conuerted, he shall be magnifyed vnto the farthest partes of the worlde. Ezechi.xxxvii.b Ioan.xii.b

Then shall there be peace, so that the Assirian maye come into oure landes, and treade in oure houses. We shall bringe vp seuen shepherdes and eyght princes vpon them: that shall subdue the lande of Assur with the swerde, and the lande of Nimrod with their naked weapons. Thus shall he deliuer vs from the Assirian, when he commeth within oure lande, and setteth his foote within oure borders. Genes.x.a

C And the remnaut of Jacob shalbe amōges the multytude of people, as the dew of the Lorde, and as the droppes vpon the grasse, that tarryeth for no man, and waiteth of no body. Yea the residue of Jacob shall be amōg the Gentyles and the multytude of people, as the lyon amonge the beastes, of the woode, and as the lyons whelpe amonge a flocke of sheepe: which when he goeth thorowe treadeth downe, teareth in peces, and there is no man that can helpe. Thine hande shall be lyfte vp vpon thine enemyes, and all thyne aduersaryes shal perish.

D The tyme shall come also, sayeth the Lord, that I will take thine horses from the, and destroye thy charettes. I will breake downe the cytyes of thy lande, and ouerthrowe all thy stronge holdes. All witchecraftes will I put oute of thine hande, there shall no more sothsayenges be within the. Thyne Idols and thyne Images will I destroye out of the, so that thou shalt no more bowe thy selfe vnto the workes of thyne owne handes. Thy groues will I plucke vp by the rotes, and breake downe the citties. Thus will I be auenged also, vpon all the heythen that will not heare. Exod.xxxiiii.b

¶ An exhortation to heare the iudgemēt against Jerusalem, and beleyng vnkynde, what maner of sacrifyces doth please God.

CAPI. VI.

HEeken now what the Lorde sayth: Vp reproue the mountaynes, and let the hylles heare thy voyce. O heare the complaynt of the Lorde, ye mountaynes and ye myghtye foundacions of the earthe: for the Lord will reproue his people, and reason with Israel: O my people, what haue I done vnto the? or wherin haue I hurt the? geue me answere. Because I brought the frō the lande of Egypt, and deliuered the out of the house of bondage? Because I made Moses, Aron and Miriam to lede the? Remēbre (O my people) what Balach the king of Moab had ymagined against the, and what answere that Balaam the sonne of Beor gaue him, from Sethim vnto Galgall, that ye maye knowe the louinge kindenesse of the Lorde. Deut.xxiii.b Iosue.iii.b

What acceptable thinge shall I offre vnto the Lorde? shall I bowe my kne to the high God? Shall I come before him with brente offrynges, and with calues of a yere olde? Hath the Lorde a pleasure in manye thousande rammes, or innumerable streames of oyle? Or shal I geue my fyrstborne for mine offences, and the frute of my body for the sin of my soule? I will shewe the, o man, what is good, and what the Lord requireth of the: Namely, to do ryght, to haue pleasure in louinge kindnesse, to be lowlye, and to walcke with thy God: that thou mayst be called a citye of the Lord, and that thy name may be ryghtousnesse. Heare (O ye tribes) who wold els geue you suche warnynge? Should I not be displeased, for the vnrighteous good in the houses of the wicked, and because the measure is mynished? Or should I iustifye the false balaunces and the bagge of disceyt full weyghtes, among those that be full of eyches vnryghtously gotten: where the citizyns deale with falshed, speake lyes, & haue disceytful tunges in their mouthes? Leuit.xix.g Deut.xxv.c Prouer.xx.b Ezech.xxii.b

D Therfore I will take in hande to punyshe the & to make the desolate, because of thy sinnes. Thou shalt eate, and not haue ynough: yea thou shalte dynge thy self downe. Thou shalt flee, but not escape: and those that thou wouldest saue, will I deliuer to the swerde. Thou shalt sowe, but not reape: thou shalte preselle oure olyues, but oyle shalte thou not haue to anoynte thy self withall: thou shalt treade out swete muste, but shalte drincke no wine. Ye kepe the ordynaunces of Amri, and all the customes of the house of Achab: ye followe their pleasures, therfore will I make the waste, and cause thy inhabyters to be abhorred: O my people: and thus shalte thou beare thine owne shame. Deut.xxviii.g iii. Reg.xvi.a

¶ A complaynt of the lyttel nombre of the ryghtous. Against the truthe ought we not to holde with our greatest frendes.

CAPI. VII.

WO is me: I am be come as one, that geeth a gleaynge in the harueste. There are no mo grapes to eate, yet wolde I fayne (with al my hert) haue of the best frute. There is not one ryghtous amonge men. They laboure all to shed bloude, and euery man hunteth his brother to death: yet they saye they do well when they do euyl. As the prince will so sayeth the iudge: that he maye doo him a pleasure agayne. The greate man speaketh what his herte desyreth: and the hearers allowe him. The best of them is but as a thistle and the most righteous of them is but as a byer in the hedge. But when the daye of thy preachers commeth, that thou shalte be visyted: then shal they be wasted away. Let no man beleue his frend, ne put his confidence in a prince. Kepe the porte of thy mouthe, frō her that lyeth in thy bosome, for the sonne shall pute his father to dishonour, the doughter shall rise agaynste her mother, the doughter in lawe agaynste her mother in lawe: & a mans foes shall be euen they of his owne household. Ezechi.xxii.b

Neuertheles I will loke vp vnto the Lord I will paciently abyde God my sauyoure: my God shall heare me. O thou ennemye of myne reioyse not at my fal, for I shall aryse vp agayne: and thoughe I syt in darcknesse yet the Lorde is my lyght. I will beare the punyshment pumpfhment of the Lorde(for why, I haue offended him)tyl he fit in iudgement vpō my cause,& se that I haue ryght. He will bringe me forthe to the lyght,& I shal se his rygh-teousnesse.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE ABACVC.

¶ The complaynt agaynst Israel.

CAPI. I.

THis is the heuye burethen, which the prophete Abacuc dyd se. O Lorde, how longe shal I crye, and thou wilte not heare? how longe shall I complayne vnto the sufferynge wrong & thou wilte not helpe? Why settest thou me se werynesse and laboure? Tyranny and dyolence are before me: power ouergoeth right: for the law is tozne in peces, and there can no right iudgement go forth. And why? the vngodly is mozе set by then the ryghteous: this is the cause, þ wrong iudgement proceedeth. Beholde amonge the heithen, and loke well: wonder at it, and be a basshed: for I wyll do a thinge in youre time whiche thoughe it be tolde you, ye shall not beleue.

For lo, I wyll rayse vp the Caldees, that bytter and swyfte people: which shall go as wyde as þ land is, to take possession of dwellynge places, that be not theirs owne. A grym and doysfull people is it, of whē shall yssue iudgement & punyshmēt. Their horses are swyfter then the cattes of the wodde, & byte sozer then the wolues in the euenyng. Their horsemen come by greate heapes from farre, they fle hastely to deuoure as the Egle.

They come all to spoyle: out of them commeth an east wynde, which blowyth and gathereth their captiues, lyke as the sand. They shall mocke the kynges, and laugh the princes to scorne.

They shall not set by any strange holde, for they shall laye ordynaunce agaynst it, and take it. Then shall they take a fresh courage vnto them, to go forthe and to doo moze euell, and so ascryde that power vnto their God.

But thou O Lorde my God, my holy one thou arte from the begynnyng, therfore shal we not dye. O Lorde, thou hast ordeyned the for a punyshment, and set them to reproue the myghtye.

Thine eyes are cleane, thou mayste not se vnpitifully: thou canst not beholde the thynge that is wicked. Wherfore then doest thou loke vpō the vngodlye, and holdest thy tunge when the wicked deuoureth the man that is better then him selfe? Thou makest mē as the fysh in the see, and lyke as the creepinge beestes, þ haue no gyde. They take vp all with their angle, they catche it in their nette, and gather it in their yarne: wherof they reioyce and are glad. Therfore offre they vnto their net, and do sacrifice vnto their yarne: because that their portion is become so fat, and their meate so plenteous. Wherfore they cast out their net agayne, & neuer cease to slaye the people.

¶ Of the vysion of the prophete. Agaynst pryde, couetousnesse, and Idolatry.

CAPI. II.

I Stode vpon my watch, and set me vpon my dul wozke, to loke & se what he wolde say vnto me and what answere I sholde gyue vnto him that reproueth me. But the Lorde answered me, and sayde: Wryte the vision playnly, vpō the tables, that whoso cōmeth by, may rede it: for the vision is yet farre of for a time, but at the last it shal come to passe and not fayle. And though he tary, yet wayte thou for him, for in very dede he wyll come, and not be slacke. Beholde, who so wyll not beleue his soule shall not prospere: the iuste shall lyue by his fayth. Lyke as the wyne bitrayeth the dronkarde, euen so the proude shall fayle and not endure. He spreadeth his desyre wyde vp as the hell, and is as vnsatysfyable as death. All heythen gathereth he to him, and heapeth vnto him all people.

But shal not all these take vp a prouerbe agaynst him, and mocke him with a by wyrde, & saye: Wo vnto him that heapeth vp other mens goodes? How longe wyll he lade him selfe with thicke claye? O how sodenly will they stande vp, that shall byte, and awake, þ shall teare the in peces? yea thou shalte be their praye. Seinge thou hast spoyled many heythen, therfore shall the remnaunt of the people spoyle the: because of mens bloude, and for the wronge done in the lande, in the citie and vnto all them that dwell therin.

Wo vnto him, that couetously gathereth euell gotten goodes into his house: that he may set his nest an hyghe, to escape from the power of misfortune. Thou hast deuysed the shame of thyne own house, for thou hast slayne to manye people, and hast wylfully offended: so that the very stones of the wall shall crye out of it, and the tymbre that lyeth betwixt the ioyntes of the byldynge shal answere. Wo vnto him, that buyldeth þ towne with bloude, & maynteyneth the citye with vnrighteousnesse. Shall not the Lorde of hostes bringe this to passe, that the laboures of the people shall be brent with a greate fyre, and that the thynge wherupon the people haue wereyed them selues, shall be lost? For the earthe shall be full of knowledge of the Lordes honoure, lyke as the waters that couer the see.

Wo vnto him that giueth his neyghbour drynke, to gette hym wrathfull displeasure for his dronkennesse: that he maye se his priuytees. Therfore with shame shalte thou be fylled, in steade of honoure.

Dryncke thou also, tyl thou slombre with all: for the cuppe of the Lordes right hande shall compasse the about, and shamfull spewinge in the stede of thy worshippe. For the wronge wrong that thou hast done in Lybanus, shall ouerwhelme the, & the wild beestes that make the afrayde, because of mens bloude, & for the wrong done in the land, in the citie, and vnto all suche as dwel therin.

What helpe then wil the ymage to, whom the worke man hath facioned? Or the dayne talke ymage, wherin because the craftesman putteth his trust, therfore maketh he domme goddes? Woo vnto him that sayth to a pece of wode: aryse/ and to a domme stone: stande vp. For what instruction may suche one giue? Beholde, it is layde ouer with golde and syluer, and there is no breth in it. But the Lorde is in his holy temple is he, whom all the worlde shulde feare.

¶ Prayer of the Prophete Habacuc for the ignorant.

CAPI. III.

O Lorde, when I herd speke of the, I was afrayde. The worke that thou hast taken in hand, shalt thou performe in his time, o Lorde, and when the time commeth, þ shalt declare it. In thy deep wrath thou thinkest vpon mercy. God commeth frome Theman, & the holy one from the mount of Pharan. Selah.

His glorye couereth the heauens, and the earth is full of his prayse. His shyne is as the lyght, and beames of lyghte goo oute of his handes, there is his power hyd. Destruction goeth before him, and burnyng coelles go from his feete. He standeth and measureth the earth. He loketh, and the people consume afraye, the mountaynes of þ worlde fal downe flatlinge, and the hylles are layne to bow the selues, for his goinges are euerlastynge and fast.

I sawe that the pauylyons of the Moryans, and the tentes of the lande of Madian were dred for weepynesse. Was thou not angry, O Lorde, in the waters? Was not thy wrath in the floudes, and thy displeasure in the see? Yes, when thou satteste vpon thyne horse, and when thy charettes had the victorye. Thou shewedst thy bowe openly, lyke as thou haddest promysed with an othe vnto the tribes. Selah.

Thou dyddest deuyde the waters of the earth. When the mountaynes sawe the, they were afrayde, the water stremme went awaye the depe made a noyse at the lyftynge vp of thyne hande. The sunne and moone remayned styll in their habitation. Thyne arowes went out glysterynge, and thy speares as the shyne of the lightening. Thou tradest downe the lande in thyne anger, and dyddest tryesshe the heathen in thy displeasure. Thou camest forthe to helpe thy people, to helpe thyne annoynted. Thou smotest downe the head, the house of the vngodlye, and discouerest his foundacions: euen vnto the necke of hym. Selah. Iosue.p.c

Thou cursest his septers, the Capytayne of his men of warre, whiche come as a storme wynde to scatter me abrode, and are glad when they maye eate vp the poore secretlye. Thou makest awaye for thyne horses in the see, euen in the mudde of great waters. When I heare this, my bodye is vexed, my lyppes tremble at the voyce therof, my bones corrupt, I am afrayde where I stande. O that I myghte rest in the daye of trouble, that I myght goo vp vnto our people, which are alredye prepared.

For the frygge tree shall not be grene, and the vynes shall beare no fruite. The laboure of the olyue shall be but lost, and the lande shall bringe no corne: the shepe shall be taken out of the folde, and there shall be no catell in the stalles. But as for me, I wyll be glade in the Lorde, and wyll reioyce in God my sauioure. The Lorde God is my strength, he shall make my feete, as the feete of Hartes: and he which gyueth the victorye, shall bryng me to my hygh places, singing vpon my psalmes. (?) Psal.xviii.b

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE SOPHONY.

¶ Threatenynges agaynst Juda and Jerusalem, because of theyr Idolatrye.

CAPI. I.

THis is the worde of the Lorde, whiche came vnto Sophony the sonne of Chusi, the sonne of Gedolias, the sonne of Amarias the sonne of Ezechias in the time of Josias the sonne of Amon kynge of Juda.

4. Reg. xxi. xxii. I wyll gather vp all thynges in the lande (sayth the Lorde) I wyll gather vp man and beest. I will gather vp the foules in the ayre, and the fysshe in the see (to the greate decaye of the wycked) and wyll vtterly destroye the men oute of the lande, sayth the Lorde.

I wyll stretche oute myne hande vpon Juda, and vpon all suche as dwell at Jerusalem.

Thus wyll I roote oute the remnaunte of Baal from this place, and the names of the Kemaryms and Prestes: yea, and suche as vpon their house toppes worshyp and bowe them selues vnto the hoste of heuen, whiche swere by the Lorde, and by theyr Malchom also: whiche starte a backe from the Lorde, and neyther seke after the Lorde, ne regarde hym.

Deute. xvii. b Jerem. v. b

Be styll at the presence of the Lorde God for the daye of the Lorde is at hande: yea the Lorde hath prepared a slayne offeryng, and called his gestes thereto, and thus wyll it happen in the daye of the Lordes slayne offering: I wyll vysite the pryuces, the kynges chyldre, and all suche as weare straunge clothyng. In the the same day also wyll I vysyte all those that treade ouer the threshelde so proudlye, whiche fyll their Lordes house with robbery and falsehed.

iiii. Reg. xxiii. b Jerem. xxxix. b

At the same tyme (sayth the Lorde) there shall be herde a great crye from the fyshporte, and an howlynge from the other porte, and a great murther from the hilles. Howle ye that dwel in the myll, for all the marchaunt people are gone, and all they that were laden wyth syluer, are rooted out.

At the same tyme will I seke thorow Jerusalem with lanternes, and vysyte them that continue in theyr dregges, and saye in theyr hertes: Dusshe, the Lorde wyll doo neyther good, nor euyll. Their goodes shall be spoyled, and theyr houses layde waste: they shall buylde houses, and not dwell in them: they shall plante vynyardes, but not drynke the wyne therof. For the great daye of the Lorde is at hande, it is harde by, and commeth on a pace. Horrible is the crye of the Lordes daye, then shall the graunt crye out: for that daye is a daye of wrathe, a daye of trouble and heynesse, a daye of bitter destruction and myserye, a darke and glomynge daye, a cloudye and stormye daye, a daye of the noyse of trompetters and shawmes, against the stronge cities and highe towres.

Jerem. v. b Jerem. vi. c Deute. xxviii. c Jerem. xxxiii. c

I will bringe the people into suche distruction, that they shal go about like blynd men because they haue synned against the Lord. Their bloude shall be shed as the dust, and their bodyes as the myre. Neither their syluer ne their golde shall be able to deliuer them in the wrothfull daye of the Lord, but the hole lande shal be consumed thorow the fyre of his gelousye: for he shall soone make cleane ryddaunce of all theym that dwell in the lande.

¶ He mourth to returne to God, prophecying vnto the one destruction, and to the other deliuerannce.

CAPI. II.

COme togyther and gather you, O frowarde people: or the thinge go forth that is concluded, and or the tyme be passed awaye as the dust: or the fearefull wrath of the Lorde come vpon you, yea or the daye of the Lordes sore displeasure, come vpon you. Seke the Lorde all ye meke herted vpon earthe, ye that worke after his iudgemente: seke righteousnesse, seke lowlynesse: that ye maye be defended in the wrothfull daye of the Lorde. For Gaza shall be destroyed, and Ascalon shal be layd wast. They shall cast out Asdod at the noone day, and Accaron shall be pluckte vp by the rotes.

Amos. i. Jere. xlvii. Zach. ix.

Wo vnto you that dwell vpon the see cost ye murtherous people: the worde of the Lord shall come vpon you, O Canaan thou lande of the Philistines, I wyll destroy the, so that there shall no man dwell in the any more: as for the see coost, it shal be heedmens cotages and shepe foldes: yea it shall be a porcion for suche as remayne of the house of Juda, to fede thee vpon. In the houses of Ascalon shal they rest towarde night: for the Lord their God shall vysyte them, and turne away their captyuytye. I haue herde the dyspyte of Moab, and the blasphemyes of the children of Ammon howe they haue shamefully intreted my people, and magnifyed them selues withyn the borders of their lande. Therfore as truely as I lyue (sayth the Lorde of hoostes the God of Israel) Moab shal be as Sodome, and Ammon as Gomorra: euen dry thorne hedges, salte pyttes and a perpetuall wyldernesse.

Ezech. xxv. Amos. i. Jere. xlviii. Jere. xlix. Ezech. xxv. Amos. i.

The residue of my folke shall spoyle the, the remnaunt of my people shall haue them in possession. This shall happen vnto them for their pryde, because they haue dealte so shamefully with the Lord of hoostes people, and magnyfyed them selues aboue them. The Lorde shall be grym vpon them, and destroye all the goodes in the lande. And all the Iles of the heathen shal worshyp hym euery man in his place.

Ye Moryans also shall perisshe with my sworde:

yea he shal stretche out his hand ouer the North, and destroye Assur. As for Ninive, he shal make it desolate, dry and waste. The flockes and all the beestes of the people shall lye in the myddest of it: pellicanes and storkes shall abyde in the vpper postes of it, foules shall syng in the wyndowes, and rauens shal sytte vpon the balkes, for the bowers of Cedre shal be ouer-throwne downe. This is the proude and wanton cyty, that sayd in her herte: I am, and there is els none. O how is she made so waste that the beastes lye therin? Who so goeth by mocketh her, and poynteth at her with his finger.

¶ Against the gouernors of Jerusalem. Of the callynge of all the Scriptures. I comfort to the reliques of Israel.

CAPI. III.

WO to the abhominable, fylthy and cruel cyty: which wil not heare, ne be refourmed. Her trust is not in the Lorde, neither wyll she holde her to her God. Her rulers within her, are as rorynge lyons: her iudges are as wolues in the euenyng, whiche leaue nothyng behynd them till the morowe. Her Prophetes are lyghte persons and vnfaythfull men: her preastes polyshe the Sanctuarye, and do wronge vnder the pretence of the lawe. But the iust Lorde that dothe no vnryght, was amonges them, euery morenyng shewyng them his lawe clerely, and ceased not. But the vngodly wil not learne to be ashamed. Therfore wil I rote out this people, and destroye theyr cytyes: yea and make their stretes so voyde, that man shall go therin. Their cytyes shall be broken downe, so that no body shal be left, ne dwell there any more.

I sayd vnto them: feare me, and be contente to be refourmed, that their dwellinge be not destroyed, and that there happen vnto theym none of these thynges, wherewith I shal visite them. But neuertheles, they stande vp early to folowe the lyghtynesse of their owne ymaginations. Therfore ye shall wayte vpon me sayth the Lorde, tyl the time that I stand vp: for I am determined to gather the people, and to bring the kyngdomes togyther, that I may powre out myne angre, yea all my wrathfull displeasure vpon them. For all the worlde shal be consumed with the fire of my gelousy. And then wil I clense the lyppes of the people, that they may euery one call vpon the name of the Lorde, and serue him with one shoulder. Such as I haue subdued, and my chyldren also who I haue scatred abrode, shall bring me presentes beyonde the waters of Ethiopia.

In that time shalt thou be no more confoūded for all thy ymaginacions, wherin now thou hadest offended me: for I will take awaye the proude boastes of thyne honour frō the, so that thou shalt no more tryumphe vpon cause of my holy hyl. In the also wil I leaue a small poore symple people, which shal trust in the name of the Lorde. The remnaunt of Israel shal do no wickednesse, nor speke lies: neyther shall any deceptfull tonge be founde in their mouthes. For they shall be fedde, and take their rest, and no man shall make them afrayde. Syng thankes, O daughter Syon, be ioyful, O Israel: reioyce and be glad from thy hole hert, O daughter Jerusalem, for the Lorde hath taken awaye thy punyshement, and turned backe thyne enemyes. The kyng of Israell, euen the Lorde him selfe is with the, so that thou nedest no more to feare anye misfortune.

In that tyme it shal be sayd to Jerusalem: feare not, and to Sion: let not thyne eyes be slacke, for the Lorde thy God is with the, he is he that hath power to saue: he hath a speciall pleasure in the, and a maruelous loue towarde the: yea he reioyseth ouer the with gladnesse. Suche as hathe ben in heynesse, wyl I gather togyther, & take out of thy congregacio: yea and the shame and reproche that hath ben layde vpon the, shall be taken from the. And lo, in that tyme wyll I destroye all those that vexe the: I wyll helpe the lame, and gather vp the cast awaye: yea I wyl get them prayse and honoure in all landes, where they haue ben put to shame. At the same tyme will I bring you in, and at the same time wil I gather you. I wyll get you a name and a good reporte amonge all people of the earthe, when I turne backe your captiuitie before youre eyes, sayth the Lorde.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE AGGEVS.

¶ The tyme of the prophecye of Aggeus. An exhortacion to buylde the temple agayne.

CAPI. I.

a IN the seconde yeare of kynge Darius, in the fyrth moneth, the fyrst daye of the moneth, came the word of the Lorde (by the Prophete Aggeus) vnto Zorobabel the son
a Esdr. vi. a Dan. v. c. vi. a of Salathiel the prynce of Juda, and to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, b Esa. liii. liiii. b sayinge: Thus speaketh the Lorde of hostes, and sayth: This people dothe saye: The tyme is not yet come to buylde vp the Lordes house. Then spake the Lorde by the Prophete Aggeus, and sayd: Ye your selues can fynd tyme to dwell in syled houses, and shall this house lye waste?

B Jeremi. xxii. a Now consider now your owne wayes in youre herres, sayeth the Lord of hostes, ye sow moch but ye bryng lytle in: ye eate, but ye haue not ynough: ye drynke, but ye are not fylled: ye decke your selues, but ye are not warme: and he that earneth any wage, putteth it in a broken purse.

Leuit. xxvi. d Mych. vi. a Deut. iii. b Mychach. iii. b C Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Consydre youre owne wayes in youre herres, get you vp to the mountayne, fetche wodde, and buylde vp the house, that it maye be acceptable vnto me, and that I maye shewe myne honour, sayeth the Lorde. Ye loked for moch, and lo, it is come to lytle: and thoughe ye bryng it home, yet do I blowe it awaye. And why so sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes? Euen bycause that my house lyeth so waste, and ye ren euery man vnto his owne house. Wherfore the he-

c Leuit. iii. b. vi. c Deut. xi. b the earthe is forbydden to gyue you encrease.
xxviii. b I haue called for a drouthe, bothe vpon the lande, and vpon the mountaynes, vpon corne vpon wyne, and vpon oyle, vpon euery thyng that the grounde bryngeth forthe, vpon men and vpon catell/ yea and vpon all handye labource.

D Now when Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, with the remnaunt of the people, herde the voyce of the Lorde theyr God, and the wordes of the Prophete Aggeus (lyke as the Lorde their God had sent him) the people did feare the Lorde. Then Aggeus the Lordes aungell sayd in the Lordes message vnto the people: I am with you sayth the Lorde. So the Lord waked vp the spirite of Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and the spirite of Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, & the spirite of the remnaunt of all the people, that they came and laboured in the house of the Lorde of hostes their God.

¶ Sheweth that the goodlynesse of the seconde temple shall excede the fyrste, bycause of the comyng of Christe.

CAPI. II.

VPon the .xxiij. daye of the syxte moneth in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, the one and twenty day of the seuenth moneth, came the worde of the Lord by the Prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel prince of Juda, & to Jesus the sonne of Josedech the hye preest, and to the residue of the people, & say: Who is left amonges you, that sawe this house in her first beauty? But what thinke ye now by it? Is it not in your eyes, euen as thoughe it were nothing? Neuertheles be of good chere Ezech. O Zorobabel (sayeth the Lorde) be of good chere, O Jesus thou son of Josedech hye preest: take good hertes vnto you also, all ye people of the lande, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and doo accordynge to the worde (for I am with you sayeth the Lord of hostes) like as I agreed with you, when ye came oute of the lande of Egypte, and my spirite shall be amonge you, feare ye not.

B Aggeus. For thus sayethe the Lorde of Hostes: yet ones more wyll I shake heauen and earthe, the see, and the drye lande: yea, I will moue all heathen, and the comforte of all heathen shall come, and so wyl I fyll this house

C The .xxiiij. daye of the nyneth moneth, in the seconde yere of kynge Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto the Prophete Aggeus, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde God of hostes: Aske the preestes concernynge the lawe, and saye: yf one beare holye fleshe in his cote lap, and with his lap doo touche the Jerem. xlv. bread, potage, wyne, oyle, or any other meat: shall he be holye also? The preestes answered and sayd: No. Then sayd Aggeus: Now yf one beyng defyled w a dead carcase, touche Leuit. xxii. Numer. xix. anye of these, shall it also be vnclene? The preestes gaue answere and sayd / yea, it shall be vnclene. Then Aggeus answered, and said: euen so is this people and this nation before
D me, sayeth the Lorde, and so are all the workes of their handes / yea, and all that they offre is vnclene.

And now (I praye you) consydre from this daye forthe, and how it hathe gone with you afore, or euer there was layde one stone vpon
Agrida. an other in the temple of the Lord, that whe ye came to a corne heape of twenty bushels, there were scarce ten/ and that when ye came to the wyne presse for to poure oute fifty pottes of wyne, there were scarce twentye. For I smote you with beat, blastyng and hayle stones in all the labours of youre handes: yet was there none of you that wolde turne vnto me sayth the Lorde.

Consyde

Consyder then from this daye forth and a-D fore, namely from the foure and twenty daye of the nyneth moneth, vnto the daye that the foundacion of the Lordes temple was layde: marke it wel, is not the seed yet in the barne? haue not the vynes, the figge trees, the pome granates, and olyue trees ben yet vnfruitfull? but from this daye forth, I shall make them to prospere.

E Moreouer the four and twenty day of the moneth, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Aggeus agayne, sayinge: Speake to Zorobabel the prynce of Juda, and say: I wyl shake both heuen and erth, and ouerthrowe the seat of the kyngdomes, yea and wtroye the mighty kyngdome of the heathen. I wyll ouerthrowe the charettes, and those that sytte vpon them, so that bothe horse and man shal fall downe, euerye man throwe his neyghbours swerde. And as for the, O Zorobabel, (sayth the Lorde of Hostes) thou sonne of Salathiel my seruaũt: I wil take the (sayth the Lord) at the same time and make the as a seale, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

CAPI. I.

a IN the eyght moneth of the seconde yere of kinge Darius, came the worde of the Lord vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophete
Mat. xxviii. c saying: the Lord hath bene sore displeased at your fore fathers. And saye thou vnto them: thus sayth the Lorde of hostes. Turne you vn-

Jere. xliii. c Be not ye like your fore fathers vnto whom the Prophetes cryed afore time, saying: thus
Pla. iii. d. f sayth the Lorde God of hostes. Tourne you Ezec. xiii. a Toby. xiii. b from your euill wayes, and from your wicked ymagynacions. But they wolde not heare, ne regarde me, sayeth the Lorde.

What is now become of your fore fathers
Ezech. xxxiii. c Jere. xliii. a xxv. c and the Prophetes? are they yet styll alyue? But dyd not my wordes and statutes, which I commaunded by my seruauntes the Prophetes) touche your fore fathers? Upon this they gaue answere, and said: like as the Lord of hostes deuised to worke vnto vs, according to our owne wayes and ymaginacions, euen so hath he delt with vs.

Upon the .xxiiij. day of the .xi. moneth, whi-
b che is the moneth Sebath, in the seconde yere of Darius, came the worde of the Lorde vnto Zachary the son of Barachias, the son of Addo the Prophet, saying: I sawe by nyght, and lo, there sate one vpon a red horse, and stode stil among the Myrte trees that were beneth vpon the groũd: and beyond him were there red, speckled, and white horses. Then sayd I: O my Lorde, what are these? And the aungel that talked with me, sayde vnto me: I will shewe the what these be. And the man þ stode amonges the Myrte trees answered and said: These are they whom the Lorde hath sent to goo thorowe the worlde. And they answered the aungel of the Lord that stode among the Myrte trees, and said: We haue gone thorow the worlde, and beholde all the worlde dwelt at ease, and are carelesse.

Then the Lordes aungell gaue answere,
c and sayd: O Lorde of hostes, how long wylt Jerem. xvi. d thou be vnmercyful to Jerusalem, and to the xxxiii. b cities of Juda, with whom thou hast ben displeased nowe these three score & ten yeres? So i. Esdr. i. d the Lorde gaue a louynge and comfortable answere vnto the aungell that talked with me. And the aungell that talked with me, sayd vnto me. Crye thou, and speake: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: I am exceedynge gelous ouer Jerusalem and Syon, and sore displeased at the carelesse heathe: for where as I was but a lytle angrye they dyd ther best that I might destroye the. Therfore thus Zacharj.viii.b saythe the Lorde: I will tourne me agayne in mercye towarde Jerusalem, so that my house shall be buylded in it, saythe the Lorde of hoostes: yea, and the plommet shall be layde abrode in Jerusalem, saythe the Lorde of hoostes.

D Crye also, and speake: Thus saythe the Lorde of hoostes: My cityes shall be in good prosperitie agayne, the Lorde shall yet comforte Sion, and chose Jerusalem. Then lyfte I vp myne eyes and sawe, and beholde, foure hornes. And I sayd vnto the aungel that talked with me: what be these? he aunswered me: These are the hornes which have scatered Juda, Israel, and Jerusalem abrode. And the Lorde shewed me foure carpenters. Then sayd I, what wyll these doo? He aunswered and sayd: those are the hornes, which have so strowed Juda abrode, that no man durst lyfte vp his heed: but these are come to fray them away, and to cast out the hornes of the Gentyles, which lift vp their horne ouer the lande of Juda, to scatter it abrode.

¶ The renewynge of Jerusalem and Juda.

CAPI. II.

E I Lyfte vp myne eyes agayne and loked/ and Ezec.xlviii.b beholde, a man with a measure lyne in his Apoca.xxi.c handes. Then sayde I: whyther goest thou? And he sayd vnto me, to measure Jerusalem, that I may se how long and how brode it is. And beholde the aungel that talked with me went his way forth. Then went there out another aungel to mete him and sayd vnto him: Run, speke to this yong man, and saye: Jerusalem shal be inhabited without any wal, for the very multitude of people and cattell that shal be therin. Yea I my self (sayth the Lord) will be vnto her a wall of fyre round about and will be honoured in her.

F O get you forth, O fle from the land of the North, sayth the Lord, ye whom I have scattered vn to the four wyndes vnder heuen, sayth the Lord. Saue thy selfe, O Sion: thou that dwellest with the doughter of Babylon, for thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: with a glorious power hath he sent me out to ye heathē

H Be glad and reioyce, O doughter of Syon for lo, I am come to dwell in the myddest of the, sayth the Lorde. At the same tyme there shall many heathen cleaue to the Lorde, and shall be my people. Thus will I dwell in the myddest of the, and thou shalte knowe that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto the. The Lorde shall haue Juda in possession for his parte in the holy grounde, and shall chose Jerusalem yet agayne. Lette all flesshe be styll before the Lorde, for he is ryssen out of his holy place.

B Now Jesus was clothed in vncleane rayment, & stode before the angel: which answered and sayd vnto those that stode before him take awaye the foule clothes from him. And vnto him he sayd: Beholde, I have taken awaye thy synne from the, and wyll decke the with chaunge of rayment. He sayd moreouer, let a fayre myter vpon his head. So they set a fayre myter vpon his head, and put on clothes vpon him, and the aungell of the Lorde stode there.

C Then the aungel of the Lord testifyed vn to Jesus, and spake: thus sayth the Lorde of hoostes: Yf thou wylte walke in my wayes, and kepe my watche: thou shalte rule my house, and kepe my courtes, and I wyll graue the place among these that stande here. Heare O Jesus thou hye preest, thou and thy frendes that dwell before the, for they are wonderous people.

D Beholde, I wil bring forth the braunche of my seruaūt: for lo, the stone that I have layd before Jesus / vpon one stone shall be seuen eyes. Beholde, I wyll hewe him oute (sayth the Lorde of hoostes) and take away the synne of that lande in one daye. B So I aunswered and spake to the aun no my lorde. He aunswered and sayde vnto me: This is the worde of the Lorde vnto Zorobabel, sayinge: Neyther thorowe an hoste of men, nor thorowe strengthe, but thorowe my spirite, sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes. What arte thou, thou greate mountayne, before Zorobabel? thou must be made euen. And he shall brynge vp the fyrste stone, so that men shall crye vnto him: good luche good luche.

No my

E Moreouer, the worde of the Lorde came vn
to me, sayinge: The handes of Zorobabell have layde the foundacion of this house, his handes shal also fynish it, that ye may knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hathe sente me vnto you.

F For he that hath ben despysed a lytle sea

Then aunswered I, and sayde vnto him: What are these two olyue trees vpon the ryghte and lefte syde of the candelstycke? I spake moreouer, and sayd vnto him: what be these two olyue braunches (which thorow me two golden pypes) empeye them selues in to the golde? He answered and sayd: knowest thou not what these be? And I sayd, no my Lorde. Then sayd he: These are the two olyue braunches that stande before the ruler of the hole erth.

¶ The vysyon of the flyeing boke, signifyinge the curse of theues and suche as abuse the name of God. By the vysyon of the measure, is signifyed the bringe ynge of Juda to Babylon.

CAPI. V.

1 SO I tourned, me lyfteynge vp myne eyes and loked, and beholde a flying boke. And he sayd vnto me: what seest thou? I answered: I se a flyenge boke of twenty cubyts longe, and ten cubytes brode. Then sayde he vnto me: this is the curse that goeth forth ouer the hole earthe: for all theues shall be iudged after this boke, and all sweerers shall be iudged accordynge to the same, I wil bring it forthe (sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes) so that it shall come in to the house of the theefe, and to the house or him that falsely sweereth by my name: and shall remayne in his house and consume it, with the tymbre and stones therof.

2 Then the aungel that talked with me, wēt forth, and sayd vnto me: lyfte vp thyne eyes and se, what this is that goeth forth. And I sayd, what is it? He answered: this is a measure goynge oute. He sayde moreouer: Euen thus are they (that dwel vpon the hole erth) to loke vpon. And beholde, there was lyfte vp a talent of leade: and lo, a woman sat in the myddell of the measure. And he sayde this is vngodlynesse. So he caste her in to the middell of the measure, and threwe the lompe of lead vp in to an hole.

Then lyfte I vp myne eyes, and loked/ and D
beholde there came out two women, and the wynde was in their wynges (for they had wynges lyke the wynges of a storke) and they lyfte vp the measure betwixte the earth and the heauen.

Then spake I to the aungell that talked with me: whyther wyll these beare the measure? And he sayd vnto me: in to the lande of Synear, to buylde them an house, whiche Gene.x.d when it is prepared, the measure shall be set there in his place.

¶ By the foure charettes, he descryebeth the prosperyte of the foure kyngdomes.

CAPI. VI.

MOreouer I tuened me, lyfting vp myne G
eyes and loked: and behold there came Zachary.i.d foure charettes out from betwixt two Apoca.vi.a hylles, whiche hylles were of brasse: In the fyrste charet were redde horse, in the seconde charet were blacke horse, in the thyrde charet were whyte horse, in the fourth charet were horses of dyuers colours, and stronge. Then spake I, and sayd vnto the aungell that talked with me: O Lorde, what are these: The aungell aunswered and sayd vnto me: These Jeremy.xliii.d are the foure wyndes of the heauen, whiche be come forthe to stande before the ruler of all the erth.

That with the blacke horse wente in to H
the lande of the North, and the whyte followed them, and the speckled horses wente forth towarde the South. These horses were verye stronge, and went oute, and sought to go and take their iourney ouer the hole erth. And he sayd: get you hence, and go thorowe the worlde. So they wente thorowe oute the worlde. Then cryed he vpon me, and spake vn to me, saying: behold: these that go toward the North, shall stylle my wrath in the North countrey.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, I saying: Take of the prysoners that are come from Babylon: namely Heldai, Tobiah, and Idaia: and come thou the same daye, and go in to the house of Josiah the son of Sophony. Thē take gold and syluer, and make crownes therof, and set them vpon the heed of Jesus ꝓ son of Jesedech the hye preest and speke vnto him: thus sayth the Lord of hoostes: Behold Zachary.vi.b the man whose name is the braunche, and he Platerus vn.a that shal spring vp after him, shal buylde vp the temple of the Lorde. Yea euē he shal buylde Apoc.iii.b.v.b the temple of the Lorde. He that beare ꝓ praise he shall syt vpon the Lordes trone, and haue the domination.

A preest shal be also vpon his trone, and K
a peaceable counsell shall be betwixte them both. And the crownes shall be in the temple Platerus Hebr.v.vi.vii. of the Lorde, for a remembraunce vnto Hel viii.ix.x. dem, Tobiah, Idaia, and Hen the sonne of Sophony. And such as be farre of, shall come and buylde the temple of the Lorde, that ye maye knowe how that the Lorde of hoostes hath sent me vnto you. And this shall come to passe, yf ye wyl harken diligently vnto the voyce of the Lorde your God.

¶ The estymation of fastynge without mercye. The delpytynge of charitye, and the obstinacye of the people.

CAPL VII.

IT happened also in the fourthe yere of kyng Darius, that the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zachary, in the fourth daye of the nynoth moneth, whiche is called Casleu, what time as Sarasar and Rogomelech and the men that were with them sent vnto Bethel for to praye before the Lorde: and that they shoulde saye vnto the Prestes whiche were in the house of the Lord of hostes, and to the Prophetes, shoulde I wepe in the fyfth moneth, and abstayne as I haue done nowe certayne yeres?

Then came the worde of the Lorde of hostes vnto me sayinge: Speake vnto all the people of the lande, and to the prestes, and saye, when ye fasted and mourned in the fyue and seuenth moneth (nowe this thre score and ten yeres) dyd ye fast vnto me? When ye ate also and dronke, dyd ye not eate and drynke for youre owne selues? Are not these the wordes whiche the Lorde spake by his Prophetes afore tyme, when Jerusalem was inhabited and welthye, she and the cityes rounde about her: when there dwelte men, bothe towarde the South, and in the playne countrees.

And the worde of the Lorde came vnto Zacharye, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: Execute true iudgement, shewe mercy and louynge kyndnesse, euerye man to his brother. Do the wydow, the fatherlesse, the straunger, and poore no wronge: and let no man ymagyn euyll agaynst his brother in his herte.

Neuertheles, they wolde not take hede, but tourned theyr backes, and stopped theyr eares, that they shoulde not heare: yea, they made theyr hertes as an Adamante stone, lest they shoulde heare the lawe and wordes, whiche the Lorde of hostes sent in his holye spyryte by the Prophetes afore tyme.

Wherfore the Lorde of hostes was verye wrothe at them. And thus is it come to passe that lyke as he spake, and they wolde not heare: euen so they cryed, and I wolde not heare (sayethe the Lorde of hostes) but scattered them among all Gentyles, whom they knewe not. Thus the lande was made so desolate, that there trauayled no man in it nether to nor fro, for that pleasaunt lande was vtterly layde waste.

¶ Of the returne of the people vnto Jerusalem, and of the mercy of God towarde them. Of good workes. The callynge of the Gentyles.

CAPL VIII.

SO the worde of the Lorde came vnto me, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: I was in a gelousye ouer Sion, yea I haue ben verye gelouse ouer her in a great displeasure, thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: I wyll tourne me agayne vnto Sion, and wyll dwell in the myddest of Jerusalem: so that Jerusalem shal be called a faythful and true citye, the hyll of the Lorde of hostes, yea an holy hyll.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet olde men and women dwell agayne in the stretes of Jerusalem: yea and such as goo with staues in theyr handes for very age. The stretes of the citye also shall be full of younge boyes and damosels playinge vpon the stretes.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: ye the residue of this people thyncke it to be impossible in these dayes, shoulde it therfore be impossible in my syghte, sayethe the Lorde of Hoostes? Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: Beholde, I wyl delyuer my people from the lande of the East and West, and wyll bringe them agayne, that they maye dwelle at Jerusalem. They shall be my people, and I wyll be theyr God in truthe and righteousnesse.

Thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: lette youre handes be stronge, ye that nowe heare these wordes by the mouthe of the Prophetes whiche be in these dayes, that the foundacyon is layde vpon the Lorde of Hoostes house, that the temple maye be buylded. For why? before these dayes, neyther mennes ernest coulde wynne any thynge, neuther myght anye man come in and oute in rest, for trouble: but I let euerye man goo agaynst his neyghbour.

Neuertheles, I wyll now intreate the residue of this people no more as afore tyme, sayethe the Lorde of hostes, but they shall be a sede of peax. The vyneyarde shall gyue her frute, the grounde shall gyue her increase, and the heauens shall gyue theyr dewe: and I shall cause the remnaunte of this people to haue all these in possession. And it shall come to passe, that lyke as ye were a curse amonge the Heathē (O ye house of Juda and ye house of Israel) euen so wyll I helpe you, that ye shall be a blessyng: feare not, but let youre handes be stronge.

For thus sayethe the Lorde of hostes: lyke as I decreed to punyshe you, what tyme as your fathers prouoked me vnto wrath, sayeth the Lorde of hostes, and spared not. Euen so am I determyned now in these dayes, for to do wel vnto the house of Juda and Jerusalē, therfore feare ye not. Nowe the thinges that ye shall do, are these: Speake euery man the truth vnto his neyghbour, execute iudgement truelye, and peaceablye within youre portes, none of you ymagyn euyll in his herte against his neyghbour, and loue no false othes: for all these are thynges that I hate, sayethe the Lorde.

And

And the worde of the Lorde of hostes came vnto me, sayinge: thus sayth the Lord of hostes: The fast of the fourth moneth, the faste of the fyfth, the faste of the seuenth, and the fast of the tenth, shall be ioye and gladnesse, and prosperous dayes vnto the house of Juda: Onely, loue the truth and peax.

Thus sayth the Lorde of hostes: There shall yet come people, and the inhabiters of many cytyes: and they that dwell in one citie shall go to an other, sayinge: Vp, let vs go, & praye before the Lorde, let vs seke the Lorde of hostes, I wyll go with you: yea mooch people and mighty peithen shall come and seke the Lord of hostes at Jerusalem, and to pray before the Lorde. Thus sayth the Lord of hostes: In that tyme shall ten men (out of all nacyons of languages of the Gētyles) take one Jewe by the hemme of his garment, & saye: we will go with you, for we haue herd, that God is amonge you.

¶ The conuersyon of the Gentyles. The clynynge of Goddes spiritynge on an Jewe.

CAPL IX.

THE worde of the Lorde shall be receyued at Adrach, and Damastus shall be his offeringe: for the eyes of all men & of the tribes of Israel shall loke vp vnto the Lorde. The borders of Hemath shal be hard thereby, Tyrus also and Sidon, for they are very wyse.

Tyrus shall make her selfe stronge, heape vp siluer as the sande, and golde as the clay of the stretes. Beholde the Lorde shall take them, & haue her in possession: he shal smyte downe her power in to the see, and she shall be consumed with fyre. This shall Ascalon se and be afrayde. Gaza shal be very sory, so that Accaron also, because her hope is come to confusion. For the kinge of Gaza shall perisshe, & at Ascalon shall no man dwell.

Straungers shall dwel at Azdod, and as for the pryde of the Philistines, I shall rote it out. Their blonde wyl I take away from their mouth and their abhominacions from amōgst their teeth. Thus they shall be lefte for our God, yea they shal be as a prince in Juda, & Accaron like as Jebusy. And so wyll I compasse my house round about with my men of warre goynge to and fro: that no oppressour come vpon them any more. For that haue I seene nowe with myne eyes.

Reioyce thou greatlye, O doughter Sion be glad, O doughter Jerusalem. For lo, thy kinge commeth vnto the, euen the righteous and Sauyoure: lowly and symple is he, he rydeth vpon an asse, and vpon the foale of an asse. I wyll rote out the charettes from Ephraim and the horse from Jerusalem, the battelbowes shall be destroyed. He shall gyue the tydinge of peax vnto the heythen, and his dominyon shall be from the one see to the other, and from the floudes to the endes of the worlde.

Then also thorowe the blonde of thy cou-nannt shalt let thy prysoners out of the pitte wherin is no water. Turne you nowe to the stronge holde, ye that be in pryson, and longe sore to be delyuered: And this daye I bringe the worde, that I wyll rewarde the double agayne. For Juda haue I bent out as a bowe for me, and Ephraim haue I fylled. Thy sonnes (O Sion) wyl I reyse vp against thy Grekes, and make the as a gyauntes swerde: the Lorde God shal be sene aboue them, and his dartes shall goo forthe as the lyghtenynge. The Lorde God shal blowe the trompette, and shall come forthe as a storme oute of the southe.

The Lorde of hoostes shal defend them, they shal consume and deuoure, and subdue them with slynge stones. They shall drincke and rage, as it were thorow wine. They shal be fylled lyke the basens, and as the hornes of all the aulter.

The Lorde their God shall delyuer them in the daye, as the flocke of his people: for they stones of his Sanctuarye shall be set vp in his lande. O howe prosperous and goodly a thinge shall that be? The corne shall make the yonge men chearefull, & the newe wine the maydens.

¶ The people is moued to requyre the Doctrine of truthe of the Lorde. The Lorde promyseth to helpe and comforte the house of Israel.

CAPL X.

PRaye the Lorde then by tymes to gyue you the latter rayne, so shall the Lorde make cloudes, and gyue you rayne ynough for all the encreasse of the felde: for vayne is the answere of Idols.

The sothsayers se lyes, and tell but vayne dreames: the comforte that they gyue, is no thinge worth. Therfore go they astraye like a flocke of shepe, & are troubled, because they haue no shepherde.

My wrothful displeasure is moued at the shepherdes, and I wyll vysyte the gotes. For the Lorde of hostes wyll graciously visite his flocke, the house of Juda, and holde them as a goodly fayre horse in the battayle. Out of Juda shall come the helmet, the nale, the battelbowe, and all the princes together. They shall be as the gyauntes, which in the battayle tredo downe the myre vpon the stretes. They shall fyght, for the Lorde shall be with them, so that the horsmen shall be confounded.

I will comforte the house of Juda, and preserue the house of Joseph. I wyll turne them also, for I pytye them: and they shall be like as they were, when I had not cast them of. For I the Lord am their God, and wyl heare them.

Ephraim shall be as a gyaunte, and their herte shall be cherefull as thorowe wyne: yea their children shall se it, and be glade, & their their herd shall reioyce in the Lorde. I will blow for them and gather them together, for I will redeme them. They shall increase, as they increased afore. I will sowe them amog the people, that they maye thinke vpon me in farre countreyes: they shal lyue with their children, and turne againe. I will bring the againe also from the lande of Egypte, and gather them out of Assiria. I will carye them into the lande of Galaad and to Libanus & they shall want not rowme. He shall go vpon the see of trouble, and smyte the waues: so that all the depe floudes shal be dryed vp. The proude boastinge of Assur shall be cast downe and the scepture of Egypt shal be take away. I will comforte them in the Lorde, that they maye walke in his name, sayeth the Lorde.

Esay.x.a Ezech.xxix.

¶ The destruction of the temple. The care of the shepthull is committed to Christe, by the father. Grieuous vengeaunce vpon Jerusalem and Juda.

CAPI. XI.

OPen thy doores, O Libanus, that the fyre maye consume thy Cedre trees. Howle ye Fyre trees, for the Cedre is fallen, yea all the proude are wasted awaye. Howle (O ye okē trees of Basan) for the migh tye strong wod is cut downe. Wen may heare the shepherdes mourne, for their glory is destroyed. Wen may heare the lyons whelpes roore for the pryde of Jordane is wasted awaye.

Thus sayeth the Lorde my God: Fede the shepe of the slaughter, whych shall be slayne of those that possesse them, yet they take it for no synne, but they that sell them saye: The Lorde be thanked, I am rich: yea their owne shepherdes spare them not. Therfore will I no more spare those that dwell in the lande (sayeth the Lorde) but lo, I will delyuer the people, euery man in to his neighbours hād and in to the hande of his kinge: that they maye smyte the lande, and out of their handes will not I delyuer them.

I my selfe fed the slaughter shepe (a poore flocke deceipt) and toke vnto me two staues: the one I called louinge mekenesse, the other I called wo, and so I kepte the shepe. Thre shepherdes destroyed I in one moneth, for I might not alway be thē, neither had they any delyte in me. Then sayde I: I will fede you no more, eye tyinge that dyeth, let it dye: and that wyll perysshe, let it perisshe, and let the remnaunte eate, euery one the fleshe of his neyghbour. I toke also my louing meke staffe and brake it, that I might disanull the couenaunt, which I made with al people. And so it was broken in that daye.

Then the poore symple shepe that hadde a respecte vnto me, knewe therbye, that it was the worde of the Lorde. And I sayd vnto the yf ye thinke it good, bringe hither my price: yf no, then leaue. So they waged downe .xxx. syluer pens, the value that I was prysed at. And the Lord sayd vnto me: cast it the pot ter (a goodly pryce for me) to be valued at of them) and I toke the .xxx. siluer pens, and cast them to the potter in the house of the Lord. Then brake I my other staffe also (namelye bo) that I might lowse the brotherhede betwyxte Juda and Israel. And the Lorde sayd vnto me: Take to the also the staffe of a foolyssh shepherde: for lo, I wyl rayse vp a shepherde in the lande, whiche shall not seke after the thynges that be lost, ne care for suche as go astray: he shal not heale y wounded, he shal not norysh the thing that is hole: but he shall eate the fleshe of suche as be fat, & teare their clawes in peces.

O Idolles shepherde, that leaueth the flocke. The swerde shall come vpon his arme and vpon his eyghte eye. His arme shall be cleane dryed vp, & his eyght eye shall be sore blynded.

¶ Of the destruction and buyldynge agayne of Jerusalem.

CAPI. XII

THe heuye burthen whiche the Lorde hath denoūced for Israel. Thus sayeth the Lord, which spred the heuens abrode, layde the foundacion of the earthe, and gyueth man the breath of lyfe: Beholde, I will make Jerusalem a cuppe of surfet, vnto all the people that are round about her: Yea Juda him selfe also shall be in the siege agayns Jerusalem. At the same tyme will I make Jerusalem an heuy stone for all people, so that all suche as lyfte it vp, shal be sore and rent, and all people of the earth shal be gathered together agaynste it.

In that daye, sayeth the Lord, I will make al horses abasshed, and those that ryde vpon them, to be out of their wyttes. I will open mine eyes vpon the house of Juda, and smite all the horses of the people with blyndnesse. And the princes of Juda shal say in their hartes: The inhabiters of Jerusalem shall gyue me consolacion in the Lorde of hostes their God. In that tyme will I make the princes of Juda like an vnto burning oue with wod, and lyke a cresset of fyre amonge the strawe, so y they shal consume al the people rounde about them, both vpon the right hande and the left. Jerusalem also shall be inhabited agayne namely, in the same place where Jerusalem standeth.

The Lorde shall preserue the tentes of Juda lyke as afore tyme: so that the glorye of the house of David and the glorye of the inhabitauntes of Jerusalem, shall be but lytle regarded, in comparison of the glory of Juda. In y daye shall the Lorde defende the citizens of Jerusalem: so that the weakest shē amōgest them shal be as David: and the house of David shall be lyke as Gods house, and as the angel of the Lorde before them.

At the same tyme will I go about to destroye al suche people as come agaynst Jerusalem. Moreouer, vpon the house of Dauid and vpon the citezins of Jerusalem, will I poure out the spirite of grace and prayer, so that they shall loke vpon me, whome they haue pearsed: and they shall be wepe him, as men mourne for their onely begoten sonne: yea and be sory for hym, as men are sory for their fyrst chylde.

Then shall there be a greate mournynge at Jerusalem, lyke as the lamentacion at Hadremmon in the felde of Maggadon. And the lande shal bewayle euery kinred by them selues: The kinred of the house of Dauid them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues. The kinred of the house of Nathan them selues alone, and their wiues by them selues: The kinred of the house of Leui them selues alone and their wyues by them selues: The kinred of the house of Semei them selues alone, and their wyues by them selues: In like maner, al y other generacios, euery chone by them selues alone, & their wyues by them selues.

¶ Of the well of grace and truthe Christe. Of the false repentaunce of Idolatrye, and of the false prophetes.

CAPI. XIII.

IN that tyme shall the house of Dauid & the citezins of Jerusalē haue an open well to wash of sinne and vnclennes. And then (sayth the Lorde of hostes) I will destroye the names of Idolles out of the lande: so that they shall no more be put in remembraunce.

As for the false prophetes also and the vncleane spirite, I shall take them out of the lande: so that yf any of them prophecye any more, his owne father and mother that begat him, shall saye vnto him: Thou shalte dye, for thou speakest lyes vnder the name of y Lord, yea his owne father and mother y begat him, shall wounde him, when he prophecyeth.

And the shall those prophetes be cōfounded euery one of his vision when he prophecyeth neither shall they weare sackclothes any more, to disceyue men withal. But he shal saye: I am no prophete: I am an husbande man, for so am I taught by Adam in my youth vp.

And yf it be sayde vnto him: Howe came these wounides then in thine hādes? He shal answere: Thus am I wounded in the house of myne owne frendes.

Arise, O thou sweord, vpon my shepherde, and vpon the prince of my people, sayeth the Lord of hostes: Smyte the shepherde, & the shepe shall be scattered abrode, and so wil I turne myne hande to the lytle ones. And it shall come to passe (sayeth the Lorde) that in all the lande two partes shall be rooted out, but the thyrde parte shall remayne therin.

And the same thyrde parte will I bringe through the fyre, and will clense them as the siluer is clensed: yea & trye them like as golde is tryed. Then shall they call vpon my name and I will heare them: I will say: it is my people. And they shall say: Lorde my God.

¶ The wastynge of the churche vnder the figure of Jerusalem. Of the kyngdome of the Lorde.

CAPI. XIIII.

BEhold, the daye of the Lorde cōmeth, that thou shalte be spoyled and robbed for I gather together all the heithen, to fyghte againste Jerusalem: so that the cytye shall be won, the houses spoyled, and the wo men defyled. The halfe of the cirye shall go awaye into captyuytye, and the reliqe of y people shall not be caryed out of the cyrye. After that shall the Lorde go forthe to fyghte againste those heithen, as men vse to fyghte in the day of battayle. Then shal his fete stād vpon the mounte Oliuete, that lyeth vpon the east syde of Jerusalem. And the mount Oliuete shall cleaue in two, eastwarde, & westwarde, so that there shall be a greate valley: and the halfe mounte shall remoue towarde the north, and the other towarde the south. And ye shal flee vnto the valley of my hilles, for the valley of the hilles shall reche vnto Asal. Yea ye shal flye, like as ye flee for y earthquake in the dayes of Ozias kinge of Juda. And the Lorde my God shall come, and all sayntes with him. In that daye shall it not be lyght, but colde and frosty. This shall be that speciall day, which is knowne vnto the Lorde: neither daye ne nyght, but about the euenyng tyme it shal be lyght. In that tyme shall these waters of lyfe runne oute frome Jerusalem: the halfe parte of them towarde the east see, and the other halfe towarde the vttermost see, and shall contynue both somer and winter. And the Lorde him selfe shall be kinge ouer al the earthe.

At that tyme shall there be one Lorde and his name shall be but one. He shall go about the hole earth, as vpon a felde: frome Gibea to Remmon, y from the south to Jerusalem. She shall be set vp, and inhabited in her place: frome Ben Jamins porte, vnto the place of the fyrste porte, and vnto the corner porte: and frome the towre of Hananeel, vnto the kinges wine presses. There shall men dwel, and there shall be no more cursing, but Jerusalem shall be safely inhabyted. This shall be the plage, wherwith the Lorde will smyte al people, that haue fought agaynste Jerusalem: Namely, their flesh shal consume awaye, thoughe they stande vpon their fete: their eyes shal be corrupte in their holes, and their tunge shall consume in their mouth.

In that daye shal the Lorde make a great sedicion amonges them, so that one mā shal take an other by the hande, & laye his handes vpon the handes of his neyghbour. Juda shall fyght also againste Jerusalem, and the goodes of all heithen shall be gathered togyther rounde about: golde and and siluer and a very greate multytude of clothes. And so shall this plage go ouer horses, mules, camels, asses, and all the beastes that shall be in the

in the hoste, lyke as ponder plage was. Euery one that remaynyth then of al ỹ people, whi the came agaynste Jerusalem, shall go vp eare ly, to worshyp the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) and to kepe the feast of tabernacles. And loke what generacion vpon earth goeth not vp to Jerusalem, for to worshyppe the kinge (euen the Lorde of hostes) vpon the same shall come no rayne. If the kynred of Egypt go not vp, and come not, it shall rayne vpon thē neither.

D This shall be the plage wherewith ỹ Lord wyll smyte all heithen, that come not vp to kepe the feast of tabernacles: yea this shal be the synne plage of Egipt and the synne plage of all people, that go not vp to kepe ỹ feaste of tabernacles.

At that tyme shal the rydynge geer of the hoste be holy vnto the Lorde, and the ket tels in the Lordes house shall be lyke ỹ basens before the auiter: yea all the kettels in Jerusalem and Ju da, shall be holy vnto the Lord of ho stes: and all they that slaye offeringes, shall come take of theym, and bighte theym ther in. And at that tyme there shal be no mo Cana nites in ỹ house of the Lord.

¶ The ende of the prophecy of zachary.

THE BOKE OF THE PROPHETE MA= LACHI.

¶ Complaynt agaynst Israel and her prestes.

CAPI. I.

THe heuy burthen, ỹ which ỹ Lord shewed agaynst Israel by Ma lachy. I haue loued you (saith the Lorde) yet ye saye: wherin hast thou loued vs? Was not Esau Jacobs brother, (saythe the Lorde)? yet haue I loued Jacob and hated Esau: yea I haue made his hilles waste, and his heritage a wildernes for dragons. And though Edom saye I wel, we are destroyed, we wyl go buylde vp agayne the places that be waste: yet (saith the Lord of hostes) what they buylde that brake I downe: so that it was called a cursed lande, and a people, whom the Lorde hath euer bene angry with all.

Your eyes haue sene it, and ye youre selues must confesse, that the Lorde hath brought the land of Israel to greate honoure. Shuld not a sonne honoure his father, & a seruaunt his master? If I be now a father, where is myne honoure? If I be the Lord, where am I feared? (sayth the Lorde of hostes).

Now to you prestes, that dispise my name. And yet ye saye: wherin haue we dispysed thy name? In this, ỹ ye offre vncleane bred vpō myne auiter. And yet ye wyl say: wherin haue we offred any vncleane thinge vnto the? In this that ye saye: the auiter of the Lorde is not to be regarded. If ye ofre the blynde, is not that euyll? And yet ye offre the lame and syche, is not that euyll? Yea offre it vnto thy prynce, shall he be content with the, or ac cepte thy personne, (saythe the Lorde of hostes)?

And nowe make youre prayer before God that he maye haue mercye vpon vs: for such thinges haue ye done. Shall he regarde youre personnes, thinke ye, (sayth the Lorde of hostes)? Yea what is he amonge you, that wyll dose moche as to shut the doores, or to kindle the fyre vpon myne auiter for nought? I haue no pleasure in you, (sayth the Lorde of hostes) and as for the meateofferinge, I wyll not re cept it at youre hande. For from the rysinge vp of the sonne vnto the goinge downe of ỹ same, my name is greate amonge the Gentyles: yea in euery place shall there sacrifice be done, and a cleane meateffringe offred vnto my name: for my name is great among the Heithen, (sayth the Lorde of hostes). But ye haue vnhalowed it, in that ye saye, the auter of the Lord is not to be regarded, and the thinge that is set therupon, not worthye to be eaten.

Now say ye: It is but labour and trauayle and and thus haue ye thought scorne at it (saith the Lorde of hostes) offringe robbery, yea the lame and the syche. Ye haue brought me in a meatoffring, shulde I accept it of your hand (sayth the Lorde)? Cursed be the dissembler, which hath in his flocke one that is male, & vowe he maketh a bowe, offereth a spotted one vnto the Lorde. For I am a greate kynge (sayth the Lorde of hostes) & my name is feare full amonge the heithen.

¶ The reuenynges agaynst the prestes beyng lea ders of thy people.

CAPI. II.

AND nowe (O ye prestes) this commaū dement toucheth you: yf ye wyll not heare it ne regarde it, to gyue the glo ry vnto my name, (sayth the Lord of hostes), I wyll sende a curse vpon you, & wyll curse youre blessinges: yea curse them wyll I yf ye do not: take heede. Beholde, I shall correp your seed, and cast dounge in youre faces: euē the dounge of youre solempne feastes and it shall cleue fast vpon you. And ye shall know that I haue sent this commaundement vnto you: that my couenaunt which I made with him, myght stande (sayth the Lorde of hostes).

2 I made a couenaunte of lyfe and peace wt him: this I gaue him, that he myght stande in awe of me: and so he did feare me, and had my name in reuerence. The lawe of truthe was in his mouth, and there was no wicked nesse founde in his lyppes. He walked with me in peace and equyte, and dyd turne many one waye from their synnes. For the prestes lyppes shulde be sure knowledge, that men maye seke the lawe at his mouth, for he is a messenger of the Lorde of hostes. But as for you, ye are gone cleane out of the waye, and haue caused the multitude to be offended at the lawe: ye haue broken the couenaunte of Leui, (sayth the Lorde of hostes). Therefore wyll I also make you to be despysed, and to be of no reputacion amonge all the people: because ye haue not kept my wayes, but ben partiall in the lawe.

E Haue we not all one father? Hathe not one God made vs? why doth euerye one of vs then dispyse his owne brother, & so breake the couenaunt of oure fathers? Nowe hath Juda offended: yea ỹ abhompnacion is done in Israel and in Jerusalem, for Juda hath de filed the Sanctuary of the Lord, whiche he loued, & hath kept the doughter of a straūge God. But the Lorde shall destroye the man that doth this (yea both the master and the scholer) out of the tabernacle of Jacob, with him that offereth vp meatoffe. vnto the Lorde of hostes.

Now haue ye brought it to this poynte a gaine: ỹ the auter of the Lord is couered with teares wepynge and mournynge: so that I wyll no more regarde the meatoffeyng, nether that wyll I receyue of accepte any thinge at your handes. And yet ye saye: wherfore? Euē because that where as the Lorde made a co uenaunt betwyxt the & the wife of thy youth thou hast despised her: yet is she thyne owne companyon and maryed wyfe.

So dyd not the one, and yet had he an ex cellent spirite. What dyd then the one? He sought the sede promysed of God. Therfore loke well to your spirite, and let no man des pyse the wyfe of his youthe. If thou hatest her put her awaye (sayth the Lorde God of Israel) and giue her a clothing for the scorne (sayth the Lorde of hostes). Loke well then to your spirite, and despyse her not. Ye greue the Lorde with youre wordes, and yet ye saye: wherewith haue we greued him? In this that ye saye: All that do euell are good in ỹ syght of God, and suche please him. Or elles where is the God that punyssheth?

¶ Of the messengere of the Lorde, Johñ Baptyste. Of the daye of the Lorde, and of Elias.

CAPI. III.

BEholde, I wyll sende my messenger, wh he shall prepare the waye before me: and the Lorde whome ye wolde haue, shall soone come to his temple, yea euen the messenger of the couenaunte whome ye lōge for. q Mathei.11 Marke.1.a Luke.vii.c Gen.xlii.a v.b Esay.xl.a.c

Beholde, he commeth, sayth the Lorde of hoostes. But who maye abyde the daye of his commynge? Who shal be able to endure whē he appeareth? For he is like a goldsmy thes fyre, & like washers sope. He shal sit him downe to trye and to clense the syluer, he shall pourge the children of Leui, and purify them lyke as gold and syluer: that they may bringe meatofferinges vnto the Lorde in rightousnesse. Then shall the offeringe of Ju da and Jerusalem be acceptable vnto ỹ Lord lyke as from the beginnyng and in the yeres afore tyme. b

I will come and punysh you, and I my self wyl be a swyft witnesse agaynst the witches agaynste the aduouterers, agaynste false swe rers: yea and agaynst those, that wrongfully kepe backe the dyrelynges dewty which der the widdowes and the fatherlesse, & oppresse the straunger, and feare not me, sayth ỹ Lord of hostes. For I am the Lorde that chaunge not, & ye (O children of Jacob) wil not leaue of: ye are gone away fro myne ordynaunces & sens the tyme of your forefathers haue ye not kept them. Deut.xxvii.f iiii.Reg.xvii.c

Turne you now vnto me, and I will turne me vnto you, (sayth the Lorde of hoostes), ye saye: Wherin shall we turne? Shulde a mā vse falsheed and discepte with God as ye vse falsheed and discept with me? c Zacha.i.a

Yet ye say wherin vse we discepte with ỹ? In tythes and heaueofferynges. Therfore are ye cursed with penury, because ye dissemble with me, all the sorte of you. Leui.xxvii.d Agge.i.a

Bringe euerye tithe into my barne, that there maye be meate in myne house: & proue me wt hall (sayth the Lorde of hostes) yf I wyll

wyll not open the wyndowes of heauen vn to you, and poure you oute a blessinge with plenteousnesse. Yea I shall rebuke the consu mer for your sakes, so þ he shal not eate vp þ frute of youre grounde, neither shall the vyn earde be barren in the felde, sayth the Lorde of hostes: And so maye that all people shal say that ye be blessed, for ye shall be a pleasaunt land, sayth the Lorde of hostes.

Ye speake harde wordes agaynst me, sayth
the Lord. And yet ye say: What haue we spoken agaynst the? Ye haue sayd:

D It is but lost laboure, to serue God: What profyt haue we for kepinge his commaundmentes, and for walking humbly before the Lord of hostes? Therfore maye we say, that the proude are happy, and that they which deale with vngodlynesse, are set vp: for they tempte God, and yet escape.

But they that feare God, say thus one to an other: the Lorde considereth and heareth
it. Yea it is before him a memorial boke wri ten for suche as feare the Lorde, and remembre his name. And in þ day that I wyll make (sayth the Lord of hostes) they shal be myne
owne possession: and I wyll fauoure them, lyke as a man fauoureth his owne son, that doth him seruyce. Turne you therfore, and cō syder what difference is betwyxte the ryghteous & vngodly: betwyxt him that serueth

For marcke, the daye commeth that shall burne as an ouen, and al the proude, yea and all suche as do wickednesse, shall be stubble:
and the daye that is for to come, shall burne them vp (sayeth the Lorde of hostes) so that it shall leaue them neyther rote ne braunche.

But vnto you that feare my name, shall that Sonne of righteousnesse aryse, & health shall be vnder his winges: ye shall go forth & multeply as the fat calues. Ye shal treade downe the vngodlye: for they shall be lyke

¶ Josias holdeth passouer. After his death is Jechonias his sonne made kynge in his steade: whom the kynge of Egypte putteth oute, and setteth in his brother Joachim. Jerusalem is destroyed, and Sedech as taken.

CAP. I.

And Josias helde the feaste of Easter in Jerusalē vnto ꝓ Lorde and slewe the passouer the fourtenth daye of ꝓ fyrst moneth. He set the preestes also in ordre (according to their dayly courses) beinge arayed in long garmentes in the temple of the Lord. And he spake vnto the Leuites the holy ministers of Israel, that they shulde halowe them selues vnto the Lorde, to set the holy arcke of the Lord in the house that king Salomon the sonne of David hadde buylded and sayde: Ye shall no more beare the arcke vpon your shoulders. Now serue your Lorde, and take the charge of his people of Israell, after your byllages and your trybes: accordynge as kynge David the kynge of Israell hath ordeyned, and accordynge as Salomon his son hath honourably prepared: yea loke that ye all doo seruyce in the temple, accordynge to the ordynge and distribucion of the principall men, whiche are appoynted out of the trybes, to do seruyce for the chyldren of Israel. Kyll the Passeouer, and prepare offrynges for your brethren, and do accordyng to ꝓ commaundement of the Lord, which he gaue vnto Moses. And vnto the people that was found, Josias gaue .xxx. thousand shepe, lambes, kyddes and gotes, and thre thousand oxē. These the kynge (of his princely liberalitie) gaue vnto the people, according as he had promised: and to the preestes for the Passeouer he gaue two thousande shepe, and an hundred oxen. Moreouer Jechonias and Semeias, and Nathanael brethren, and Hasabias, Jehiel, and Jolabad gaue theym to the Passeouer, fyue thousande shepe, and fyue hundred bullockes.

And when these thinges were broughte to passe, the preestes and the Leuites stode goodly in their ordre, and had the vnleuened breed thoroughout the tribes. And after the ordrynge of the principall men in the trybes, they offred vnto the Lorde in the syght of the people, accordyng as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses, and so they rosted the Easter lambe, as accordynge was. As for the thankeofferynges and the other, they dyght them in kettels and pottes, and set them before the people with good wyll, and afterwarde before them selues, and the preestes. For the preestes offred the fatte, vntyll the tyme was expyred, but the Leuites prepared for them selues and for their brethren the chyldren of Aaron. The singers also the chyldren of Asaph, stode in their ordre, according as Dauid had ordeined. So did Asaph Zachary and Jouthum, whiche were appointed by the king. Moreouer the porters and the kepers stode by the wyes and that diligently, so that none went out of his station and seruice, for their brethē (the Leuites) prepared for them. Thus were all thinges performed, that belonged to the offrynge of the Lorde. In that day they held the Passeouer, and offred thankeofferynges beside the sacrifice of the Lorde, according to the commaundement of kyng Josias.

So the children of Israel which were then present, held an honourable Passeouer, and ꝓ feast of swete breed seuē dayes long. Yea surely a Passeouer was not kept in Israel from the time of the Prophet Samuel. And al the kynges of Israel held not suche an Easter as this which kyng Josias helde, and the preestes, the Leuites, the Jewes and all Israell, of all the that were at Jerusalem. And in the .xviij. yere of the raigne of Josias was this Passeouer kept. And with a perfect herte dyd kyng Josias ordre all his workes before the Lorde, and the thynges that were wrytten of him in tymes past, concerninge those that synned and were vngodly agaynste the Lorde before all people, and that sought not the worde of the Lorde vpon Israel.

After all these actes of kynge Josias, Pharao the king of Egypt went vp and came toward Carcamis by Euphrates, & Josias went to mete him. Then sent the kyng of Egypt vnto Josias, saying: what haue I to do with the, O king of Juda? I am not sent of the Lorde to fyght agaynst the, for my warre is vpō Euphrates, go thou thy waye home agayn in al the haste. And Josias wolde not turne again vpon his charet, but vndertoke to fyghte agaynst him, and harkened not vnto the worde of the Prophete, whiche he tolde him oute of the mouth of God, but pytched a battayle agaynst him in the felde of Mageddo. And the princes preased to kyng Josias. Then said the kyng vnto his seruauntes: Carye me awaye out of the battayle, for I am sore wounded. And immediatly his seruauntes toke him away out of the front of the battayle. The sat he vpon the seconde charet, came to Jerusalē, dyed, and was buried in his fathers sepulcre. And in all Jury they mourned for Josias, yea the rulers also with their wiues made lamentacion for him vnto this daye. And this was done euer sith in Israel.

These thynges are wrytten in the boke of the storyes of the kynges of Juda / namelye all the actes and workes of kynge Josias, his power royall and manlyke, his vnderstandynge in the lawe of God, and what he dyd / yea thynges whiche are not wrytten in the boke of the kynges of Israell and Juda. And the people toke Jechonias the sonne of Josias, and made him kynge in stede of Josias his father, when he was .xxiij. yere olde.

And he raigned ouer Israel.iij.monethes. And the kyng of Egypt put him downe, & he shold not raigne in Jerusalem, and rayled vp a taxe of the people: namely an hundred talentes of syluer and, one talent of golde. The kynge of Egypt also made Joachim his brother kynge of Juda and Jerusalem. As for them of ỹ kinges counsell with the king him selfe and Zaracles his brother, he toke them & caried them away prisoners in to Egypt. Fiue and twenty yere olde was Joachim, when he was made kyng in the lande of Juda and Jerusalem, & he did euil before the Lorde. After this Nabu
4.iiij.Re.xxiij.c chodonosor the kynge of Babylon came vp, bound him with bandes of yron, & caried him vnto Babylon. Nabuchodonosor also toke all the vessels that were halowed in the temple of the Lord, and all the iewels, & carped them vnto Babylon, and broughte them in to his owne temple at Babylon. Of his vnclennesse and vngodlynesse it is written in the boke of the actes of the kynges. And Joachim his son raigned in his stede. He was made kyng being xviij yere old, and raigned but thre monethes and.x. dayes at Jerusalem, and did euil before the Lorde. So after a yere Nabuchodonosor sent and caused him be brought vnto Babylo with the holy vessels of the Lorde, and made Sedechias his brother kynge of Juda and Jerusalem, when he was.xxj. yere olde, and he raigned.xj. yere.

And he did euil also in the sight of ỹ Lord, and cared not for the wordes that were spoke Jere.xxxvii.f vnto him by the Prophete Jeremye, at the mouth of the Lorde. And where as he hadde made an othe vnto kyng Nabuchodonosor, he manifolde him self, and fell from him, hauing a stiffe necke and hert, and transgressed all the statutes and ordinaunces of the Lord God of Israel. The rulers also and heedes of the people of the Lorde did moche euill, & became vngodly more then the heathen, being defiled in all maner of abhominations: yea and defiled the holy temple at Jerusalem. And the God of their fathers sent his messengers vnto thẽ, to turne them backe and to call them agayne from their synnes, for he wold fayne haue spared them, for his holy tabernacles sake. Ne
g uertheles they had his messengers in derisiõ: and loke what God spake vnto them by his Prophetes, they made but a sport of it. This drewe on so longe, til the Lorde was wrothe with his people for their vngodlinesse, and til he caused the kynges of the Caldees to come vp, which slew their yong men with ỹ swerde: yea euen in the compasse of their holy temple and spared no body, neyther yonge man nor olde, neyther mayden nor younge man: but they were al delyuered in to the power of the kynges of the Caldees, and al the holy vessels of the Lorde, and the kynges treasures toke they, and caryed them vnto Babylon. As for the house of the Lorde, they brent it, & brake downe the walles of Jerusalem, set fyre vpõ her towres, destroyed all her noble buyldynges, and brought them to nought, and the people that were not slayne with the swerde, they caryed vnto Babylon.

Thus became they prysoners and bondemen of the kynge of Babylon, till they were delyuered and raygned for them selues, * Jere.xxv. when the wordes of the Lorde were fulfylled, whiche he promysed them by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye, and till the land had her rest: namely all the tyme that it lay waste, hadde it rest and quyetnesse. lxxij. yeres.

Cirus graueth lycence to the Jewes to returne to Jerusalem, and restoreth them the vessels of the temple. After that are there letters sende to Artaxerxes, whiche accuse the Jewes for buyldynge of the cyte: and so is the buyldynge dyscontinued, vntyl the seconde yere of Darius.

CAPI. II.

NOw when kynge Cyrus raigned ouer the Persians, and when the Lorde wolde performe the worde that he had promysed by the mouth of the Prophete Jeremye: the Lorde rayled vp the spirite of Cyrus the kynge of Persians, so that he caused this writynge to be proclaymed throwe out his hole realme, saying: Thus sayth the kyng of Persians: the Lorde of Israel that hye Lorde hathe made me kynge of the lande and commaunded me to buylde him an house at Jerusalem in Jurye. If there be anye now of your people, the Lorde be with him, and goo vp with him to Jerusalem. And all they that dwell rounde about the place, shal helpe them, wherher it be with golde, with syluer, with ryches, with horses and necessarye catell, and all other thynges that are brought with a free wyll to the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem.

Then the prynceppall men out of the tribes and vyllages of Juda and Ben Jamin stode vp, so did the preestes also and the Leuites (whom the Lorde had moued) to goo vp and to buylde the house of the Lorde at Jerusalem. And they that were about them, helped them with all maner of golde, and syluer, and catell also, and with many lyberall gyftes, & this dyd many one, whose mynde was stered vp thereto. * Kyng Cyrus also brought forth the vessels and ornamentes that were halowed vnto the Lorde (whiche Nabuchodonosor the kynge of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem, and consecrated them to his idoll and ymage) and delyuered them to Mythridatus his treasurer, and by hym they were delyuered to Salmanasar the deputye in Jurye. And this was the nombre of them: Thre thousande and foure hundred syluer boulles, thirtye syluer basens, thirtye basens of golde two thousande and foure hundred vessels of syluer, and a thousande besyde. All the vessels of golde and syluer, were fyue thousande eyghte hundred and.lx. These were nombred vnto Salmanasar, and them that were come agayne with him to Jerusalem out of captiuite of Babylon. Now in the tyme of kynge Artexerxes the kynge of Persia, these men: Balemus, and Mythridatus, Sabellius, Ra-

thymus, Balchemus, Semellius the scrybe, and other that dwelte in Samaria and in other places vnder the dominion therof, wrote a letter vnto kynge Artaxerxes, wherin they complayned vnto the kynge of them in Jury and Jerusalem. The letter was made after this maner.

Vnto thy seruauntes, Rathimus the storye wryter, Sabellius the scribe, and other iudges of the courte in Celosyria, and Phenices. Be it knowen and manifest to our Lorde the kyng, that the Jewes which are come vp frõ you vnto vs in to the rebellyous and wycked cyte, begyn to buylde it agayne, and the walles aboute it, and to set vp the temple a new. Nowe yf this cyte and the walles therof be set vp agayne, they shall not onely refuse to geue tributes and tares, but also rebel vtterly agaynst the kyng. And for so moch as they take this in hande now about the temple, we thought it reason, to thynke no scorne of it, but to shewe it vnto our Lorde the kyng, and to aduyse him therof: to thintent that yf it please the kynge, he maye cause it be soughte in the bokes of olde, and thou shalt fynd suche warning written, and shalt vnderstande that this cyte hath alway ben rebellious and disobeisant, that it hath subdued kynges & cities, and that the Jewes which dwel therin, haue euer ben a rebellyous, obstinate, vnfaythful, and fyghtyng people, for the which cause this cyte is wasted. Wherfore now we certifye our Lorde the kyng, that if this cyte be buylded & stopped agayne, and the walles therof set vp new, thou canst haue no passage in to Celosyria, and Phenices.

Then wrote the kynge to Rathimus the storye wryter, to Balchemus, to Sabellius the scrybe, and to the other officers and dwellers in Sitia and Phenices, after this maner: I haue red the epystle whiche thou sentest vnto me, and haue commaunded to make diligent searche, and haue founde that the cyte hathe euer resysted kynges, that the same people are disobedient, and haue caused moch warre, and that myghtye kynges haue raygned in Jerusalem, whiche also haue rayled tyraces of Syria and Phenices. Wherfore I haue commaunded those people that they shal not buylde the cyte, that they make no more wrk, and that they procede no farther with the buyldyng: for so moche as it might brede cause of warre and displeasure vnto kynges.

Nowe when Rathimus and Sabellius the scrybe, and the rulers in the lande hadde red the wrytynge of kynge Artaxerxes, they sat them togyther, and came in all haste to Jerusalem, with an hoste of horsemen, and with moche people of foote, and forbad them to buylde. And so they lefte from buyldynge of the temple, vnto the seconde yere of kynge Darius.

Darius maketh a feest. The thre sentences of the younge men, of whyche the fyrste is declared.

CAPI. III.

KYnge Darius made a greate feast vnto his seruauntes, vnto all his courte, and to all the officers of Medea and Persia, yea to all the deputyes and rulers that were vnder him from India vnto Ethiopia, an hundred and.xxvij. countreys. So when they had eaten and dronken, being satisfied, and were gone home agayne. Darius the kynge went in to his chambre, layde him downe to slepe, and so awaked.

Then the thre younge men that kepte the kynges person, and watched his bodye commoned amonge them selues, and spake one to an other: let euerye one of vs saye some thynge, and loke whose sentence is wyser and more excellent then the other, vnto him shall kynge Darius geue great gyftes, and clothe him with purple, he shall drynke in vessels of golde to drynke in, clothes of golde and couerynges, he shall make him a costly charet, and a bridle of golde, he shal geue him a bonet of white silke, and a cheyne of golde about his necke: yea he shall be the seconde and principall next vnto kyng Darius, and that bicause of his wisdome, and shal be called the kinges kynsman.

So euerye one wrote his meanynge, sealed it, and layd it vnder the kynges pyllowe, and sayd: when the kynge aryseth, we wyll geue him oure wrytynges, and loke whose wrde the kynge and his chiefe lordes iudge to be the moost wysely spoken, the same shall haue the victorye. One wrote: Wyne is a strong thyng. The seconde wrote: The kyng is stronger. The thyrd wrote: Women haue yet more strengthe, but aboue all thynges the truth beareth awaye the victory. Now when the kynge was ryssen vp, they toke their wrytynges, and delyuered them vnto him, and so he red them. Then sent he forth to cal all his chiefe Lordes, all the deputyes and rulers of the countreyes of Medea & Persia. And when they were set downe in the counsell, the wrytynges were red before them. And he cõmaunded to cal for the yong men, that they might declare their meanynges thẽselues by mouth. So when they were sent for and came in, the king said vnto them: shewe vs and make vs to vnderstande what the thynges are that ye haue wryten.

Then began the fyrst (whiche hadde spo- D ken of the strengthe of wyne) and sayd: O ye Prouerb. 31.c men, wyne is marueylous strong, and ouer- wyne.
commeth them that drynke it: it disceyueth the mynde, and bryngeth both the poore man and the kynge to dotage and vanitie. Thus doth it also with the bondman and with the free: with the poore, and ryche: it taketh awaye their vnderstandyng, and maketh them careles and merye, so that none of them remembreth anye heuynesse, debte, or tribute: It causeth a man to thynke also that the kynge whiche he dothe is honest and good: and remembreth not that he is a kynge, nor that he is in auctoritie, and that he ought not to worshyppe such thynges.

Moreouer, when men are drynkynge, they forget all frendshyp, all brotherly faythfulnesse and loue: but as sone as they are dronken, they draw out the swerde and will fight: and when they are layd downe frō the wyne, and so risen vp agayne, they can not tel what they dyd: iudge ye now, is not wyne the strōgest? For who wolde els take in hande to wo suche thynges? And when he had spoken this he helde his tonge.

¶ The declaracyon of the two last sentences of the yonge men, propounded in the Chapter before: of which y last, that is, that veryte beareth the victorye in all thynges, is most commended and alowed. Darius wryteth letters to all the rulers vnder him, that they shulde ayde Zorobabel to the buyldynge of Jerusalem.

CAPI. IIII.

a The kynge. THen the seconde (whiche had sayde that the kynge was strongest) began to speke saying: O ye men, are not they the strōgest and moost excellent, that conquere the lande and the see, and all that is in the see, & in the earthe? Now is the kynge lorde of all these thinges, and hath dominion of them all: and loke what he commaundeth, it is doone. If he sende his men forth a warrefare, they goo, and breake downe hylles, walles, and towres. They are slayne, and slee (other men) them selues, and ouer passe not the kynges worde. If they get the victory, they bryng the kyng all the spoyle. Lykewyse the other that medle not with warres and fyghting, but til the grounde: when they reape they bryng tri bute to the kynge. And yf the kynge alone do but commaunde to kyll, they kyll: yf he commaunde to forgyue, they forgyue: yf he commaunde to smyte, they smyte: yf he byd dryue awaye, they dryue awaye: yf he commaunde to buylde, they buylde: yf he commaunde to breake downe, they breake downe: yf he commaunde to plante they plante. The common people and the rulers are obedient vnto him.

b And the kyng in the meane season sytteth him downe, eateth and drynketh, and taketh his rest: then kepe they watche rounde about the kynge, and not one of them dare gette him out of the waye to do his owne businesse, but must be obedient vnto the kynge at a worde. Iudge ye nowe, O ye men, how shulde not he goo farre above, vnto whom men are thus obedient? And when he had spoke this, he helde his tonge.

The thyrde, whose name was Zorobabel, whiche had spoken of women and of truthe, began to saye after this mance: O ye men, it is not the great kyng, it is not the multitude of me, neither is it wine that excelleth: Who is it then that hath the lordshyp ouer them? Haue not women borne the kynge and al the people that rule those thinges? Haue not women borne them, & brought the vp, that plante the vines wherout the wine commeth? They make garmentes for all me, they grue honour vnto all men, & without women can not men lyue. If they gather gold and syluer, & all precious thinges, and se a fayre welfauoured woman, they leane all togyther and turne their eyes onely vnto the woman, & gape vpon her and haue more desire vnto her, then vnto syluer and gold, or any maner of precious thing. A mā leaueth his father that brought him vp he leueth his own natural countrey & cleueth vnto the womā: yea he leeseth his life for the woman, and remembreth neither father, nor mother, ne countrey. By this ye must nedes know that women haue the dominiō ouer you. ¶ Dothe it greue you? A man taketh his swerde, and goeth his waye to steale, to kyll, to murther, to sayle vpon the see, and serue vpon, and goeth in the barchenelle: and when he hath stollen, discerned and robbed, he bryngeth it vnto his loue. Agayne, a man loueth his wyfe better then father or mother: yea, many one there be that renne oute of their wyttes, and become bondemen for their wyues sakes: many one also haue perished, and haue bene slayne, and haue synned because of women.

And nowe by leue me, I knowe a kynge, whiche is great in his power, and all landes stande in awe of him, and no man dare laye hand vpon him: yet did I se that Apame (the doughter of the great kynge Bartacus) the kynges concubyne, sat besyde the kynge vpon his ryghte hande, and toke of his crowne from his heed, and set it vpon her owne heed, and smote the kynge with her lefte hande. Moreouer the kyng loked vpon her wopen mouth: yf she laughed vpon him, he laugheth also: but yf she toke any displeasure with him, the kynge was fayne to flatter her, and to grue her good wordes, till he hadde gotten her fauour agayne.

O ye men, are not women then stronger? Great is the earth, and hye is the heuen that do these thinges. Then the king and the princes loked one vpon an other. So he began to speke of the truth. O ye men, are not women stronger? Great is the erth, hye is the heuen, swyfte is the course of the sunne, he compasseth the heuen rounde about, and fetcheth his course agayne to his owne place in one daye. Is he not excellent that doth this? Yea great is the truthe, and stronger then all thynges. All the erth calleth vpon the truth, the heuen praiseth it, all workes shake and tremble at it, and with it is no vnrighteous thing. Wine is vnryghteous: the kyng is vnrighteous, women are vnryghteous, all the children of men are vnryghteous, yea all their workes are vnryghteous, and there is no truthe in them, in their vnryghteousnesse also shall they be destroyed and perysshe. As for the truthe, it endureth, and is alwaye stronge: it liueth and conquereth, for euermore worde without ende.

The truthe accepteth no persōnes, it putteth no difference betwixte ryche or poore, betwyxte the myghtye or symple, but doth ryght vnto euery man, whether they be ryall of good, and all men are lyuingly dealt with all in the workes of it. In the iudgement of it there is no vnrighteous thinge, but strength, kingdom and power, & mastery for euermore. Blessed be the God of truth.

And with that he held his tonge, and al the people cryed and sayd: Great is the truthe, and above all. Then sayd the kyng vnto him: Aske what thou wylt, more then is appoynted in the wryteynge, and I shall grue it the, for thou arte founde wyser then thy compayons: thou shalte sytte nexte me, and be my kynsman. Then sayd he vnto the kynge: Remembre thy promyse and vowe whiche thou hast vowed and promysed (in the daye when thou camest to the kyngdome) to buylde vp Jerusalem, and to sende agayne all the vessels and iewels that were taken awaye oute of Jerusalem: whiche Cyrus separated whē he offred in Babylon, and wolde haue restored them agayne euen there. And thy mynde was to buylde vp the temple, whiche the Edomytes brent when Jerusalem was destroyed by the Caldees. This onely (O kynge) is the wynge that I require, this is the maieste, whiche I desyre and aske of the: that thou performe the vowe whiche thou with thyne owne mouth hast made vnto the kyng of heuen.

f Then Darius the kyng stode vp, and kissed him, and wrote a letre vnto all the deputies and shreues, to all the Lordes and nobles, that they shulde conuey him forth, & all them that wolde goo vp with him. He wrote a letter also vnto all the shreues that were in Celosyria and Phenice, & vnto Lybanus, that they shulde drawe Cedre trees from Lybanus vnto Jerusalem, to buylde the city withall. Moreouer he wrote vnto all the Jewes that were gone out of his realme in to Jury, thanke of the fredome, that no officer no ruler nor shreue, shold come to their dores: and that all their lande whiche they had conquered, shold be free and not tributary. And that the Edomites shold grue ouer the cities and villages of the Jewes which they had taken in: yea and that they shulde yerely grue.xx. talentes to the buyldyng of the temple, vntil the time that it were finished, and to the dayly halowing of the brent offrynges (as it is commaunded) ten talentes yerely also: and that al they which come from Babylon to buylde the city shold haue fre liberte, they and their chyldren and all the preestes.

He wrote the greatnesse also and commaundement of the holy garment shulde be grueu them wherin they ministred, and wrote that commaundementes shold be giuen to the Leuites vntil the day that the house were finished, & Jerusalem buylded vp: and commaunded that all they that watched the city shold haue their portions and wages.

He gaue ouer also al the vessels that Cyrus had separated from Babylon, and al that Cyrus had gruen in commaundement, the same charged he also that it shold be done and sent vnto Jerusalem. Now when this yonge man was gone forth, he turned his face toward Jerusalē, and prayed the king of heuē and said: Of the commeth the victory, of the commeth wysdome & clerenesse, and I am thy seruaunt. Blessed art thou whiche hast gruen me wysdome: the wyl I praise, O Lorde, thou God of our fathers.

And so he toke the letters, and wente vnto Babylon, and when he came there, he told this vnto all his brethren that were at Babylon, and they prayse the God of their fathers, that he hadde gruen them refreshynge and libertie to goo vp and to buylde Jerusalem, and the temple (which is there called after the name of the Lorde) and they reioyced with instrumentes and gleasantlie seuen dayes longe.

¶ They that returne to Jerusalem are nombred. They begyn to laye the foundacyon of the temple, but are let by the meanes of enemyes, and so is the buyldynge dyfferred of by the space of two yeres.

CAPI. V.

AFter this were the principal men of al the villages, chosen in the tribes & kynredes, that they shold go vp, with their wyues and chyldren, with their seruauntes and maydens, with all their catell and substaunce. And Darius the king sent with them a thousande horsemen, to conuey them safely vnto Jerusalem: and their brethren were glad, playing vpon instrumentes, and singing. And these are the names of the men whiche went vp out of the villages, accordyng to the kynredes. Of the preestes, the sonne of Phinees, the sonne of Aaron: Jesus the sonne of Josedec. Joachim the sonne of Zorobabell, the sonne of Salathiel (of the kynred of David, out of the kynred of Phares, of the tribe of Juda) whiche spake wonderfull thynges vnder Darius the kynge of Persia, in the seconde yere of his raigne in the first moneth of Nisan.

The preestes: The sonnes of Jeddus: The sonnes of Luther: The sonnes of Ol Jasib, three hundred three score and twelue. The sonnes of Emerus, two hundred fifty & two The sonnes of Phasurius, three hundred & lvij. The sonnes of Lacca, two hundres and.xxvij The Leuites: The sonnes of Jesus in Cadmihel & Banus, and Sereblas, and Lodas, fiue entre and foure.

The hole nombre of these from twelue yere was three thousande foure hundred. lxij. Of the sonnes, doughters and wyues, y hole summe was, a thousande, two hundred and foorye and two. The sonnes of the Preestes that prayed God in the temple: The sonnes of Asaph, of whome there were an hundred and xxvij. But the doore kepers were: The chyldren of Cimenus, the chyldre of Iater, the chyldren of Amon, the chyldren of Acuba, Hopa, the chyldren of Tobi, an hundred thyrtye and nyne in all.

The Preestes that serued in the temple: The sonnes of Hell, the sonnes of Gaspha, the sonnes of Tobloch, the sonnes of Carta. The sonnes of Sud, the sonnes of Helia, the sonnes of Labana, the sonnes of Agrapha, the sonnes of Accub, the sonnes of Utha, the sonnes of Cetua, the sonnes of Aggad, the sonnes of Ouay, the sonnes of Sinani, the sonnes of Canna, the sonnes of Gedur, the sonnes of Ar, the sonnes of Rabin, the sonnes of Delaaon, the sonnes of Nechoda, the sonnes of Caseba, the sonnes of Gaza, the sonnes of Ozul, the sonnes of Sinoua, the sonnes of Iaria, the sonnes of Pasikim, the sonnes of Asana, the sonnes of Bacuc, the sonnes of Nasiin, the sonnes of Acufa, the sonnes of Bagua, the sonnes of Agar, the sonnes of Sabnon, the sonnes of Pharaon, the sonnes of Psalalon, the sonnes of Saseda, the sonnes of Susa, the sonnes of Carcd, the sonnes of Barcus, the sonnes of Sarca, the sonnes of Tacil, the sonnes of Thamt, the sonnes of Agrua, the sonnes of Phadon: Salomon his sonnes, the sonnes of Nasophot, the sones of Phasida, the sonnes of Celi, the sonnes of Dedon, the sonnes of Gaddahel the sonnes of Zaphtus the sonnes of Aggia, the sonnes of Hacharet, the sonnes of Sabathem, the sonnes of Saroneth, the sonnes of Masiut, the sonnes of Anta, the sonnes of Hasus, the sonnes of Abdus, the sonnes of Huba, the sonnes of Cuna, the sonnes of Rabotis, the sonnes of Phut phat, the sonnes of Malmon. All these ministred in the Sanctuarye, and were seruauntes of Salomon: cccxxxv hundred thre score and ten.

These folowing are they, that went vp frō Thelmellat Thelarsa (whose pilers were Cherub & Adan and Emer) and might not shew whyther their cities and kynredes, how they were of Israel: the sonnes of Dalaeus, the sonnes of Tuben, the sonnes of Nechodaeus. Of the preestes that executed the office of the preesthode, and were not found: the sonnes of Obia, the sonnes of Achilos, the sonnes of Addin, whiche maryed one of the doughters of Phargelen, and were named after him. The writynge of the same kynred was sought in the register of their generacion, but it was not founde: and therfore were they forbydden to execute the office of the preesthode. Unto the said Nethemias & Athaeas, that they shulde haue no porcion in the Sanctuarye, tyll there rose vp an hye preest, that were well instruct in the playne declarynge and truth. Of all Israel (beside seruauntes and maydens) there were.xlij. thousande, three hundred and.xl. Howe were there of seruauntes and maydens, seuen. C. three hundred and.xxxvj. Of synginge men and singinge women, there were two.C. and.lvi. Foure hundred and.xxxv. Camels. Seuen. C and.xxxvj. horses. Two hundred thousande & foorye and fyue mules. Fyue thousande and xxv asses.

Diuers heedes also, and the rulers of the tribes, when they came to Jerusalem, and wolde buylde and set vp the temple of God agayne in his place, they gaue after their ability, vnto the temple, to the treasure, and to the seruyce of the Sanctuarye twelue thousande poundes of golde, fyue thousande of syluer, and an hundred preestes garmentes. And so dwelte the preestes and the Leuites, and the people that wente out to Jerusalem, and the countrey there aboute, the syngers also & the porters euery one of Israell in his owne lande.

So when the seuenth moneth came, and when the children of Israell were euery man at his busynesse, they came all with one consent in to the streate, whyche was before the Easte doore. And there stode Jesus the sonne of Josedec, and his brethren the preestes, and Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel, and his brethren, setting vp an aulter to offre brent offrynges vpon it, as it is written in the lawe of Moses.

There came people also of other countreys, & the heathen out of the landes to set vp y aulter in his place, and offred sacrifices and burnt offrynges vnto the Lorde in the morninge. And so they helde the feast of tabernacles as it is commaunded in the lawe: And dayly offred they as accordynge was and made the sacrifices appointed, the offeringes also of the Sabbothes and of the newe Moones, & all holy feastes. And all they that vowed offringes vnto the Lorde, beganne at the new Moone of the seuenth moneth to offre vnto God, for the temple of the Lorde was not yet buylded. And they gaue vnto y Masons & carpenters, money, meate, and drynke with clothynge. Unto them of Sidon also and Tyre they gaue carres, that they shulde cary Cedre trees frome Libanus to Betasles and beames, and that they shulde make shyppes in the hauen of Joppe, accordynge as it was appointed and ordeyned by Cyrus kinge of the Perslans.

And in the seconde yere they came in to the temple of God at Jerusalem. In the second moneth beganne Zorobabell the sonne of Salathiel, and Jesus the sonne of Josedec & their brethren the preestes and Leuites, and all they that were come vnto Jerusalem out of the captyuyte of Babylon, and layde the foundacion of the temple, in the newe mone of the second moneth in the second yere that they were come in to Jewry and Jerusalem. And they appointed the Leuites (that were xxxx. yere olde) vnto the seruyce of the Lorde: so Jesua and his sonnes and his brethren all the Leuites stode to gyther, and perfourmed the lawe and ordynaunce in the house of the Lorde.

And the preestes stode, and had their garmentes and trompettes, and the Leuites, the sonnes of Asaph hadde Cymballes, gyuynge thankes and prayses vnto the Lorde, accordynge as Dauid the kinge of Israel had ordeyned. And the songe that they dyd syng vnto the Lorde, was after this maner: O synge vnto the Lorde, for he is gracious, and his goodnes vpon Israel endureth for euer. And all the people blew out with trōpettes, and songe with loude voyce, prayinge the Lorde together in the settynge vp of the house of y Lorde. There came also frome amonge the Preestes and Leuites the rulers and elders, accordynge to the tribes and kinredes (suche as had sene the house afore) to the buyldynge of this temple with greate crye and greate mournynge, many also with trompettes and great ioye: In so moch, that the trompettes myght not well be heard for the wepynge and mournynge. For the commen people blew goodly vpon the trompettes.

Then came the ennemyes of the tribes of Juda and Ben Jamyn, to knowe what that trompettynge and noyse of shawmes myght be. And they spyed that it was they which were come agayne out of captyuyte, & wold buylde the temple vp a newe vnto the Lorde God of Israel. So they went to Zorobabel and Jesus, and to the rulers of the villages and sayde vnto them: Shal we buylde with you also? For we erke wyse haue herked your Lorde, and we walke after the same maner, from the dayes of Asbazareth the king of Assiria, which brought vs hyther. Then Zorobabel and Jesus and the rulers of the villages of Israel sayd vnto them: It is not mete that ye shulde buylde the temple of our God with vs: we oure selues alone wyll buylde vnto the Lorde, lyke as Cyrus the kinge of the Perslans hath commaunded vs. 1.Esdr.iij

But the heithen in the lande layde them selues agaynste those that were in Jewry, helde vp the buyldynge from them, layed wayte vpon them pryuyly, stopped suche as brought any thing to the, forbad the to build, and hyndered those that made them passage, that the buyldyng shuld not be so punyshed: and this contynued so longe as kinge Cyrus lyued: and so they put of the buyldynge for the space of two yeres, vntyll the raygne of kynge Darius.

¶ Aggeus and Zachary prophesye. They buyld the temple without let or hynderaunce, by the cōmaundement of Darius.

CAPI. VI.

NOt withstandinge in the seconde yere of the raygne of Darius, Aggeus and Zachary the sonne of Addo prophecied vpon them in Jewry and Jerusalem, in the name of the God of Israel. Then Zorobabel the sonne of Salathiel and Jesus the sonne of Josedec stode vp, and beganne to buylde y house of the Lorde at Jerusalem, when the Prophetes of the Lorde helped them. A 1.Esdr.v.c Agge.i.c

At the same time came Sisennes the vnder Shreue in Syria and Phenices, with the lāy lordes and his companyons, and sayde vnto them: Who hath bydden and commaunded you to buylde the house, to make the vofe & all other thynges agayne? And who are the worke men, that buylde them? Neuertheles the elders of the Jewes had suche grace of y Lord that they wold not be let (though they were prouoked therto) but buylded on styll, vntyl y tyme of kyng Darius were certifyed ther of, & an answere receyued from him. The lettre that these men sent vnto kynge Darius, was after this maner.

Sisennes the vnder Shreue in Syria and Phenices, and the landlordes with their cōpanyons, which are deade rulers in Syria & Phenices, sende their Salutation vnto Darius the kinge. We certifye oure Lorde the kynge, that we came into the lande of Jewry and went to Jerusalem: where we founde them buylynge the great house of God and the temple, with greate coste, fre stone and wil ly goodly tymbre for the walles: yea they make greate haste with the worke, and helpe one a nother, and it goeth lordly prosperously in their handes, and with greate diligence & worly prayse made.

Then asked we the elders, who had cōmaundement them to make vp the house and the buylde vp, & this we dyd to the intente that we myght certifye the perfourmynge vnto the, the names of their that were the rulers of the wozke. So they gaue, vs this answere: we are the seruaũtes of ꝑ Lord, which made heauen and erth: and as for this house it hath bene buylded & set vp afore tyme by ꝑ great and mygtye kinge of Israel. But whe our fathers prouoked God vnto wrath, and synned agaynst the God of Israel, he gaue them ouer in to the power of Nabuchodonosor kinge of Babylon the kinge of the Chaldees, which brake downe the house, and brent it, and caryed awaye the people pryseners vn to Babylon. Neuertheles, in the fyrst yere that kynge Cyrus raygned at Babylon, Cirus the kynge wrote and commaunded to buylde vp this house agayne: and all the ornamentes that Nabuchodonosor caryed away from Ieruſalem vnto Babilon, and appropriated vnto his own tẽple: these brought Cyrus forth agayne, & deliuered the to Zorobabel & to Balmanatar the vnder Dyrue commaundynge them that they shulde bring those same ornamentes agayne to Ieruſalẽ in to the tẽple, & to begyn frõ ꝑ tyme forth, to build ꝑ temple agayne in his own place. The Balmanatar layde the foundacion of the Lordes house at Ieruſalem, and euer sence haue they buylded, & yet is it not ended. And therfore, O kynge, yf thou thynckest it good, let it be sought in the Lybraryes and rolles of kinge Cyrus: yf it be founde them, that it is done with ꝑ counceil and consent of kinge Cyrus, and yf our Lorde the kyng be so mynded, let him wryte vnto vs therof.

Then commaunded kyng Darius, to seke in the Lybraries: and so at Ecbathanis in a syte cyte in Medea there was founde such a writynge: In the fyrste yere of the raygne of Cyrus the same kynge Cyrus commaunded that the house of the Lord at Ieruſalem shulde be buylded agayne (and aboutes to be made there cõtynually vnto the Lord) whose depth shall be .x. cubytes, and the bredeth .xl. cubytes, and .iij. square with thre hewen stones, with a sort of tymbre of the same coũtrey, yea with a newe sort, and the expences therof to be gyuen of the house of kinge Cyrus.

And the ornamẽtes of golde and syluer, ꝑ Nabuchodonosor toke out of the house of ꝑ Lorde at Ieruſalem, shall be set agayne in ꝑ temple at Ieruſalem, where they were afore. Dilennes also the vnder thefe in Syria and Phenices, the princes and they companyons, and the other that be heade rulers in Syria & Phenices, shall not medle nor haue any thing to do with that place.

Cirus haue cõmaunded also, that they shall buylde the house of the Lorde hole vp, and haue ordeyned them, to helpe those that be come out of captyuyte: tyll the house of the Lord be fynyshed: and out of the reuenute and taxinge that is yearely rayſed vp in Syria and Phenices, dylygently to gyue them a certayne summe to the offeringe of the Lord and the same to be delyuered vnto Zorobabel ꝑ officer, that he therwithal may ordeyne otes, rammes, lambes, and corne, salte, wyne and oyle, and that contynually euerye yere: after the expences whiche the preſtes that be at Ieruſalem, shewe to be made dayly: this shall be gyuen vnto them without delaye: that they may offer sacrifices dayly to the hyghest God, for the kynge and for his seruauntes, and to praye for their lines. Let it be prouided also on euery syde, that whosoeuer breketh or despyseth this commaundement of ꝑ kynge, shall be hanged vpon a galow (made of his owne good) and all his goodes salbe seasoned vnto the kinge.

The Lorde therfore (whose name is there called vpon) rote out and destroye all the kinges and people, that vndertake by violence to hinder the same, or to deale vnreuerently with the house of the Lorde at Ieruſalem. I Darius the kinge haue ordeyned, that these thynges shall be done with all dylygence.

¶ The temple is fynyshed and dedicate: and the feast of vnleuened breed is holden.

CAPL. VII.

Then Sisennes the vnderthirne in Celosyria, and Phenyces, and the other Landlordes with their companyons, obeyed the thinges that kynge Darius had ordeyned, were dylygent in thy holy workes and were felow helpers with the elder rulers of the Jewes. And so the worke of the Temple wente forth and prospered, when Aggeus and Zachary prophecyed.

And they performed all thinges thynke the commaundement of the Lorde God of Israel, and after the decree of Cyrus, Darius, and Artaxerxes kinges of perse.

And thus was ouer house fynyshed vnto the .xxij. daye of the moneth Adar in the .vj. yeare of kynge Darius. And the children of Israel the preſtes and the Leuites, and the other that were come out of captyuyte, and such as were ioyned vnto them, dyd accordynge as it is wrytten in the boke of Moses. And in the dedycation of the temple they offred an hundred otes, an hundred rammes. .iiij. hundreth lambes, and .xij. goates for the synnes of all the people of Israell, after the nombre of the trybes of Israel. The preſtes also & the Leuites stode arayed in the prestly garmentes, after the trybes, ouer al the workes of the Lorde God of Israel accordynge to the boke of Moses, and the porters by all the dores.

And the chyldre of Israel (with those that were come out of captyuyte) helde the passouer the .xiij. daye of the fyrste moneth, when the preſtes and the Leuites were sanctyfyed. They that came out of captyuite, were not all sanctified together: but the Leuites were all sanctifyed together. Also all they that came out of captyuite, kylled ꝑ easter lambe, for they brethren, for the preſtes and for them selues. And the chyldren of Israel that came out of captyuite, and escaped from all the abominacyons of ꝑ heathe, sought the Lord, and kepte the feaste of vnleuened breed, .iij. dayes longe, eatyng and drynkyng and were mery before the Lorde: that the Lorde had turned the herte of the kinge of Assiria, and comforted their handes to the workes of ꝑ Lorde God of Israel.

¶ Esdras teacheth the people to assemble and come together, and then readeth them the lawe. They kepe the feast of Tabernacles.

CAPL. VIII.

And after him, when Artaxerxes the kinge of the Persians raygned, there wente vnto him Esdras the sonne of Saraias, the sonne of Azarias, the son of Helchiah, the sonne of Sallum, the sonne of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amarias, the son of Azarias, the son of Boccus, the sonne of Abiſu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aarõ the fyrst preſt. This Esdras went vp frome Babilon (for he had good vnderstandinge in the lawe of Moses, that was gyuen of the Lord God of Israel, to be taught and done in dede. And the kinge fauoured him, and dyd him great worshyp and honoure, after all his desyres. There went vp with him also certayne of the chyldren of Israel, of the preſtes of ꝑ Leuites, of the syngers, porters and mynisters of the temple at Ieruſalem.

In the .vij. yere of the the raygne of kinge Artaxerxes, in the .v. moneth, that is in the iij. yeare of the raygne, they wente frome Babylon in the newe moone of the fyfth moneth, and came the hyghe waye to Ieruſalem after his commaundemente, lyke as the Lorde hadde prospered their iourney. For in deede Esdras gat greate instruction that he shulde leaue none of the thynges behynde, whiche are in the law and commaundementes of God. And he taughte hole Israell all ryghtoulnes and iudgement.

Then came the Secretaryes of kynge Artaxerxes, and delyuered the wrytynges (that were come from Artaxerxes the kinge) to Esdras the preſte and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: And this is the coppye of the letter.

Kinge Artaxerxes sendeth his greetynge vnto Esdras the preeste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde: Of feythyp and good will I haue ordeyned and charged, yf there be anye of the Jewes, of the preſtes and Leuites in my realme, which desyreth and is content to go with the vnto Ieruſalem, that he may do it. Therfore yf any be minded to beare the company, let them come together, & go with the (lyke as I am content and my seuen frẽdes my counseilers) to se what they do at Ieruſalem and in Jewry, and kepe the thinges standynge as thou hast in the lawe of the Lorde: and to bynge the gyftes vnto God ꝑ Lord of Israel, that I and my frendes haue promysed to Ieruſalem, and all the syluer & golde that is in the countrey of Babylon, vnto the Lord to Ieruſalem, with the thing that is gyuen for the people in the Lordes temple at Ieruſalem: Yea that the same syl-ner and golde maye be gathered, and oxen, rãmes, sheepe and gotes and other that be long to these thinges: and that they maye offer sacrifyces vnto the Lorde, whiche is at Ieruſalem,

And what so euer thou and thy brethren wyll doo with syluer and golde, that doo after thy mynde, and after the commaundemẽt of the Lorde thy God: & lyke wyse with all the holye vessels, that are gyuen the for ꝑ seruyce of the house of the Lord thy God: and other thinges whatsoeuer is necessary for the to the worke of the temple, that shal be gyuẽ ꝑ of the kynges treasure: and loke what thou with thy brethren wylte doo with the golde and syluer, that doo after the wyll of the Lorde.

And I kynge Artaxerres haue commaunded the keepers of the treasures in Syria and Phenices, that whatsoeuer Esdras the preste and reder of the lawe of the Lorde doth wryte, it shall be gyuen him: tyll an .C. talentes of syluer, and of golde in lyke maner: Of corne al so an hundreth measures, and tyll an hũdreth vessels of wine, and other plenteous thinges without nombre. Let all thinges be done after the law of the hyghest God, that ꝑ wrath of God aryse not in the realme of the kynge and of his sonnes. I commaũd you also, that ye requyre no tax nr tribute of the preſtes, Leuytes syngers, and ministers of the temple, ne of the writers: and that no man haue auctoryte to medle any thynge agaynst the. As for the (O Esdras) set thou iudges and rulers in the hole land of Syria and Phenyces, after the wysdome of God: and learne al such as are ignorannte in the law of God thy Lorde, & let al them that offende agaynst the lawe, be punyshed: whether it be by death with payne, to be condemned in money, or to be banyshed.

Then sayde Esdras the wryter. Blessed be the God of our fathers, that hath gyuen so good a mynde and wyll in to the herte of the kinge to magnifye his house that is at Ieruſalem, and hath made me to be accepted in the syght of the kynge, of his counsell, of his frendes and of his nobles.

And so I was stedfast in my mynde, accordynge as the Lord my God helped me, and I chose out men of Israel to go vp with me.

And these are the heades (after their kinredes and houses of their fathers) that went vp with me frome Babylon, out of the kingdome of Artaxerres: Of the sonnes of Phares, Gersonius. Of ꝑ sonnes of Hemaruth, Amenus. Of the sonnes of Dauid, Iccus, ꝑ sonne of Cecilia.

Of the sonnes of Phares, Zacharyas with him there turned agayne an hundred and fyfty men. Of the sonnes of the captayne of Moabylon, Zarei, and with him .ij. hundreth and .l. men. Of the sonnes of Zachyes, Jechonias, Zecholy, & with him .ij. C. and .l. men. Of the sonnes of Halamaasia ꝑ, Gotholie, & .lx. with him Of ꝑ sonnes of Zaphatia, Zarias Mychel, & with him .lxx. Of the sonnes of Job, Abdias Jehely, and with hym .ij. C. &

kwelue men. Of the sonnes of Bani, Helimoth the son of Iosaphia, & with hym an. C. & ix. mē. Of ȝ sonnes of Bebei, Zacharye, Bebei, and with him. xij C. and. lxij. men. Of the sonnes of Elcad, Johannes Ezechan, & with hym. C. & x. men. Of the sonnes of Adonicam those that were the last, and these are theyr names: Eliphalem the sonne of Gebell and Semetias, and with him. lxx. men. All these called I together by the water Thia, where we pytched oure tentes thre dayes, and there I mustered them.

As for the sonnes of the prestes and Leuites, I founde none there. Then sent I vnto Eleazar, and Ecelom, and Malman, and Walobam, and Nnathan, and Samea, and Zozibimathan, Lunagan, Zachary, Mosollamum (these were the leders and men of experience) and I sent them wyde, that they shulde come vnto Loddeus, which was by ȝ place of the treasurye, and cōmaunded them that they shulde speake vnto Loddeus and to his brethren and to those that were in the treasurye, to sende vs suche men, as myght execute the prestes office in the house of the Lorde oure God. And with the myghtye hande of our Lorde God, they brought vnto vs men of good experience, frome amonges the sonnes of Moolius, the sonne of Leui, the sonne of Israel, Sebedeiam and the sonnes and his brethren Albin and Amin, of whō there were. xviij. From amōges the children of the sonnes of Chananeus, and their sonnes were. xx. men. And of them that serued in the temple, whom David had ordeyned, and the pryncypall men that ministred for the worke vnto the Leuites in the temple two. C. and twentye men, whose names are all tokened vp in wrytynge.

Then commaunded I a fastynge vnto the yonge men before the Lorde, that I myght before of him a prosperous iourney & a good waye for vs, yea for vs, for our children, and for the catel, because of the layinges awaite, and I durst not require of the kynge men of horse and of fote, to conueye vs safely agaynst oure enemyes, for we had sayd vnto ȝ kynge, that the power of the Lorde our God shuld be with them, that seke hym with theyr hole herte. And therfore we besought God oure Lorde earnestlye because of these thynges, & he was mercyfull vnto vs, and hearde oure prayer. And I separated from amonge the rulers of the prople, and frō the prestes of the temple. xij. men, & Hebeia and Asania, and ten men of their brethrē with them. And I weied them the golde & the syluer and al the prestly ornamentes of the house of our God, which the kyng & his counsel, and his princes, & hole Israel had geuen. And whē I had weyed it, I gaue thē an. C. & L talētes in syluer, & C. talentes of syluer vessell, an. C. talētes of gold, & of golde vessell seuē tymes twentye, & vessels of other metall (yea of good metall). xij. glysterynge as the golde, & sayd vnto them: ye also are holy vnto the lorde, & the vessels are holy, & the golde and the syluer is promysed vnto the lord ȝ God of our fathers, Be diligent nowe and kepe it, vntyll the tyme that ye delyuer it to the rulers of the people, to the Prestes, for the Leuite, and to the pryncypall men of the ofyces of Israell in Jerusalem, and in the chambre of the house of our God.

So the prestes and the Leuytes which receyued of me the golde, the syluer and the vessell, brought it to Jerusalem into the temple of the Lorde. And from Thia we brake vp the. xij. daye of the fyrst moneth, tyll we came to Jerusalem. And when the thyrde day was past, the weyed golde & syluer was delyuered in the house of the Lord the fourth daye, vnto Marimoth the sonne of Joz the preste, and with him was Eleazar the sonne of Phineas, and with them were Josabdus the sonne of Jesue, Medias and the sonne of Banus, and certayne of the Leuytes to the nombre and to the weyght and the wayght of them were wrytten vp the same tyme. As for those that were come out of captyuyte, they offred sacrifyce vnto the Lorde the God of Israel: euen. xij. oxen for all Israel. lxxxij. rammes lxxij. shepe. xij. goottes for synne. xij. kyne for a thankofferyng, all to ȝ sacrifyce of the Lord. And the kynges commyssyon deliuered they vnto the stewardes and debtes of the kyng, and to the vnder rulers in Celesyria and Phenices.

Nowe when these thynges were done, the rulers came vnto me, and sayd: The generacyon of Israel, the Prynces, the prestes and Leuites, the straunge people and indwellers of the land, haue not put awaye their vncleanesse, from the Cananites, Hettites, Pherezites, from the Moabytes, Egyptyans and Edomytes.

For both they and their sonnes haue mengled them selues with the doughters of the, and the holy sede is myxte with the outlandyshe Heathen, and yea the begynnyng of theyr rayne haue the rulers and heades ben partetakers of theyr wyckednesse.

*As soone as I had herde these thynges immediatly I rente my holy garmentes, and pulled out the heare of my heade & my beard, & sat me downe sorowful & heuy. And al they that were moued thorow the worde of ȝ God of Israel, came vnto me: & I sat styll full of heuynesse vntyll the enenyng sacrifice. Then stode I vp frō fastyng, hauyng rente clothes and the holy garmēt, kneled downe vpon my knees, helde out my handes vnto the Lorde, & sayde: O Lorde, I am confounded & ashamed before thy face: for oure synnes are become many vpon our heedes, and our wickednesses are exalted vnto the heuē, for sence the tyme of our fore fathers, we are in great synne vnto this day. And for the synnes of vs & our fathers, we with our brethren and with oure prestes haue ben delyuered vnto the kynges of the erth, in to the swerde, and in to captyuite, and became a spoyle with confusion & shame vnto this daye. And now, O Lord God, how greate is the mercye that we haue gotten of the? in that thou hast left vs a rote & name in the place of thy Sanctuarye, to lyghte our eyen in the house of the Lorde our God, & graue vs meate at al tymes of our mynysterynge. And when we were in captyuyte, we were not forsaken of the Lorde our God: but he made the kinges of Persia gracious and fauourable vnto vs, so that they gaue vs vytayles and meate, yea and leaue to buylde vp the temple of oure Lorde God agayne, to repayre the wasted places of Sion, & to dwell in Jewry and Jerusalem. And nowe, O Lorde, what shall we saye, hauynge all these thynges in possession? for we haue broken thy cōmaundementes, whyche thou gauest vnto vs by the hāde of thy seruauntes the prophetes, sayinge: The land that ye go vnto, and that is geuen you for an heritage to haue in possession, is defyled with the vnclennes and fylthynesse of the heithen, and with their abhominacion haue they poluted it all together. Therfore shall ye not ioyne your doughters vnto their sonnes ne mary your sonnes vnto your doughters: Moreouer, ye shal neuer seke to make peax wt yͤm, ȝ ye may increase & eat ȝ best in the land: & that ye may dyuyde the inheritance of the lande vnto youre children for euermore. As for the thinge that nowe happeneth vnto vs, it commeth all for our wycked workes & great synnes, yet hast thou geuen vs suche a rote, ȝ we are come agayne into our owne lande: and we are so wycked that we haue broken thy statutes and commaundementes agayne, & mengled our selues with the vnclennes of the outlandyshe Heathen. O Lorde, arte thou angrye with vs? wylte thou rote vs cleane out? that our rote and name remayn no more? O Lorde God of Israell thou arte true, for our rote endureth yet vnto this present daye. And beholde, now we be before the in our synnes, now can we not stande before the in them.

And when Esdras with this prayer had knowledged the synne, weyynge, and lyenge flatte vpon the grounde before the temple, there gathered vnto hym from Jerusalem a great multytude of men and women, of yonge men & maydens, for there was a very greate weyng and mournyng in the congregacyō, & when Jechonias the sonne of Jehell one of the children of Israel cryed, he sayd vnto Esdras: we haue synned agaynst the Lorde, because we haue maryed outlandyshe wome of the heathen. Nowe arte thou ouer all Israel. We wyll swere an othe therfore vnto the Lorde, that we shall put awaye all oure wyues, whyche we haue taken of the heathē with their children: lyke as it is appointed the before our fore elders. Stande vp then, myn thou it, and declare it playnly vnto vs, accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde: for the matter belongeth vnto the, & we wyll helpe the, quyte thy selfe manly. So Esdras arose, and toke an othe of the rulers of the prestes and of the Leuites, and of Israel, to do after these thynges: and they sware.

After Esdras had read the lawe, the people put awaye their straunge wyues: and then returneth euery man merely vnto his owne dwellynge.

CAPI. IX.

Then Esdras stode vp from the court of the temple wtyh out, & went in to the chamber of Jonathas the son of Nasabus, and remayned there, and eat no meate nor dronke drynke, for the multytude of the wyckednes of ȝ people. And there was made a proclamacyon in al Jewry and at Jerusalem, for all suche as were gathered et Jerusalem out of captyuyte, that whosoeuer came not to Jerusalem within two or. xij. dayes accordyng to the iudgement of the olde lordes of councell) his goodes shulde be taken from him, and be excluded from the congregacyon of the captyuyte. And in thre dayes were all they of the tryde of Juda and Ben Jamin gathered together at Jerusalem, the. xx. daye of the. ix. moneth. And the hole multytude satte tremblynge in the courte of the temple, for it was winter. Do Esdras arose vp, and sayd vnto them: ye haue done vnrighteously, in that ye haue taken outlandyshe wyues to maryage, and so to encrease the synnes of Israel. And now knowledge the same, and giue prayse vnto the Lorde God of our fathers, and perfourme his wyll, departynge frome the Heathen of the lande, and from the outlandyshe wyues. Then cryed the hole multytude with loude voyce, and sayd: lyke as thou hast spoken, so wyll we do: but for so moche as the people are many, and the wynter here, we may not stād without the house agayne, this worke is not a thynge, that can be fynyshed in a daye or two, for we be many that haue synned in these thynges: Ordeyne therfore, that the rulers of the multytude & all they that dwell with vs, and as many as haue outelandyshe wyues, the Prestes also and iudges of euerye place may stande in the tyme appointed, tyl they lose vp the wrath of the Lorde in this busynes.

Then Jonathas the sonne of Ezell, and Ozias and Thecam receiued ȝ charge of this matter, & Zozomus, and Lelus, and Sabathens helped them therto. After this, all they stode vp that were come out of captyuite. And Esdras the preest chose vnto him the pryncypall men from amonge the fathers accordynge to their names, & in the new mone of the tenth moneth they satte together, to examen this matter. And so the matter was a determynge (concernyng the men that had outlandyshe wyues) vntyll the newe mone of the fyrst moneth. And of the prestes that had myxt them selues with out landish wyues, there were founde: of the sonnes of Jesu the sonne of Josedech and his brethren, Maazeas, Eleazar, Joribus, and Joadeus, whyche offred them selues to put away their wyues, and to offer a ram for their trespasse. And of the sonnes of Semmei, Walleas, and Elles, and Jeelech, Azanas. Of the sonnes of Fosetea, Limolias, Ofimach, Nathanea, Zuilio, Jabus and Dalias. And of the Leuites Josabdus, Semeis, and Colnis, Caletas, Faneas, Colnas, and Elionas. Of the syngers of the Sanctuarye, Eliarib, Zacharus. Of the porters

ters, Hallimus and Tolbanes. And of Israel, of the chyldren of Foro, Oli, and Remias, and Godolias, and Melchias, and Thelus, Eleazarus, Jemmerias, and Bannas. And of the children of Jolaman, Chanias, Zachari, Jezrelus, Jobdius, Semoth and Elias. And of the sonnes of Jethoim, Eliadas, Liasamus, and Tochias, Lasmoth, Habdis and Tebdias. And of the sonnes of Zebes, Johannes, Amanias, Zabdias, and Emmeus. And of the sonnes of Bannus, Olammus, Maluchus, Jeddus, Jasub, Asabus & Jerimoth. And of the sonnes of Addu, Naatus, and Moosias, and Lacus, and Baanas, Maasias, Mathatias, Besei, Bannus and Manasses. And of the sonnes of Nave, Nones, Eliceas, Melchias, Samcas, Simon, Benjamin, Malchus and Sarras. And of the sonnes of Asom, Sarsanus, Mathathias, Bannus, Elipalach, Manalles, Semei. Of the sonnes of Bannus, Jeremy, Moodias, Abiamas, Jobel, Baneas, Peliaas, Jona, Martmoth. Eliasib, Matheneus, Eliasis, Ozias, Dielus, Semebius, Zambris and Joseph. Of the sonnes of Nobeus, Jdelus, Mathathias, Sabadus, Zetheus, Sedmi, Jesseus, and Baneas. All these had taken ouriandysshe women to marryage, and they put the a waye with theyr chyldren. The prestes and Leuites, and all they that were of Israel, dwelt at Jerusalem and thereabout all the lande, in the newe moone of the.vij. moneth and the chyldren of Israel were in theyr dwellinges. And the hole multitude came together vpon the floore at the easte syde of the holy porte of the temple. And they spake vnto Esdras the hye prieste and reader, that he wolde bringe the lawe of Moses, whiche was geue of the Lorde God of Israel. So Esdras the hye priestе brought the lawe vnto the hole multitude, to man and woman, and to all presses, that they myght heare the lawe, in the newe mone of the.vij. moneth. And he red in the floze that is before the holy porte of the temple, from the mornynge early vnto the eurnyng, before men and women. And they applyed their mynde all vnto the lawe.

And Esdras the preste and reader of the lawe stode vp vpō a scaffolde of wood, which was made therfore: and vpō his right hand there stode by him Mathathias, Samus, Anamias, Azarias, Urias, Ezechias, and Baalsamus: Vpō his left hād stode Faldeus, Mysael, Malachias, Abuscas, Sabus, Nabadias and Zachary. Then take Esdras the boke before the hole multitude, for he was the principall, and had in moost honour of them all. And when he had red out the lawe, they stode all streyght vpon theyr fete. So Esdras prayed the Lorde the moste hygh God, the almyghty God of hostes. And all the people answered: Amen and held vp their handes, fell downe flat vpō ꝯ earth, & prayed ꝯ Lord. And Jesus, Beneas, Sarebias, Jaddinus, Accubus, Sabbatheus, Calithes, Azarias, Jozabus, Ananias, and Phelias the Leuites spake vp theyr handes vpwarde, and bowed theyr faces to the grounde, and prayed the Lord: Those were they which taught ꝯ lawe of the Lorde, and red the lawe of the Lorde in the congregacyō: and euery man set those before that vnderstode the lawe. Then spake Athanates vnto Esdras the hye preste and reder, and to ꝯ Leuites that taught the multytude, sayinge: This daye is holy vnto the Lorde: & all they that heard the lawe, wepte. So Esdras said: Departe your way thē, and eat the best and drynke the sweetest, and send gyftes vnto them that haue nothynge: for this daye is holy vnto the Lorde, and be not ye sorye. Then wente they theyr waye euerychone, ate and dronke, and were merye, and sent rewardes vnto them that had nothyng that they myght also eat with gladnesse: for they were exceedyngly reioyced, therowe the wordes that were red vnto them in ꝯ lawe.

And so they were all gathered together at Jerusalem to holde ꝯ feast, accordynge to the couenaunt of the Lord God of Israel.

¶ The people is reproued for theyr vnthankfulnesse. God wyll lynde an other people yf theyr wyll not be reformed.

CAPI. I.

THe seconde boke of the Prophet Esdras (ꝯ sonne of Saraias, the son of Azarias, the son of Helchia, the sonne of Sallum, the son of Sadoc, the sonne of Achitob, the sonne of Amerias, the sonne of Azarias the sonne of Maraioth, the son of Saahias, the sonne of Ozi, the sonne of Boccus, the sonne Abisu, the sonne of Phineas, the sonne of Eleazar, the sonne of Aaron, of the tribe of Leui: which was prysoner in the land of Medes, in the raygne of Artaxerxes king of Persia.

And the word of the Lord came vnto me, sayinge: go thy waye, and shew my people their synfull dedes, and their children their wickednesses, which they haue done against me, that they maye tell their childers children the same: for the sinnes of their fathers are increased in them. And why? they haue forgotten me and haue offred vnto straunge goddes. Am not I euen he, that brought the out of the land of Egypt, from the house of bondage? But they haue prouoked me vnto wrath, and despised my counsels. Pull thou out them the heer of thy heade, and cast al euell ouer them, for they haue not bene obedient vnto my lawe.

It is a people without lernyng and nourture. How longe shal I forbeare them vnto whom I haue done so moche good? Manye kynges haue I destroyed for their sakes: Pharao with his seruauntes and all his power haue I smytten downe and slayne: All the nacions haue I destroyed and roted oute before them, & in the east haue I brought two landes and people to nought, euen Cyre & Sydon, and haue slayne al their ennemyes. Speake thou therfore vnto them, sayinge: Thus sayethe the Lorde: I ledde you thorowe the see, and haue geuen you sure stretes fare the begynnynge. I gaue you Moses to be your captayne, and Aaron to be the prest. I gaue you lyght in a pyller of fyre, & greate wonders haue I done amonge you: yet haue ye forgotten me, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the almyghty Lorde: I gaue you quayles to eate, and tastes for your sustenaunce: Neuertheles ye murmured, and afterward not the prayer of your ennemyes vnto my name: yea this same daye do ye yet murmoure. Where are the benefites, that I haue done for you? When ye were hongry in the wyldernes, dyd ye not crye vnto me: Why hast thou brought vs in to this wyldernes, to kyll vs? It had bene better for vs, to haue serued the Egipcians, then to die in this wyldernesse. Then had I pitie vpon your mournynges, and gaue you Manna to eate. Ye are angels fode. When ye were thurstly, dyd not I hewe the harde stone, & caused water to flowe therout? For the heate I couered you with the leaues of the trees. A good pleasaunt lande gaue I you: I cast oute the Cananites, the Pherezites and Philistines before you. What shall I doo more for you, sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayeth the almyghty Lorde: When ye were in the wyldernesse, in the water of the Amorytes, beinge a thyefte and blasphemynge my name: I gaue you not eyre for youre blasphemyes, but caste a tree in to the water, and made the ryuer swete. What shal I doo vnto the, o Jacob? Thou Juda woldest not obeye me. I wyll tourne me to an other people, and vnto those wyll I gyue my name, that they maye kepe my statutes.

Seynge ye haue forsaken me, I wyll forsake you also. When ye desyre me to be gracyous vnto you, I wyll haue no mercye vpon you: when ye call vpon me, I wyll not heare you. For ye haue defyled youre handes with bloude, and youre feete are swyfte to commyt manslaughter. Ye haue not forsaken me (in a maner) but your owne selues sayeth the Lorde.

Thus sayethe the almyghtye Lorde: haue I not prayed you, as a father his sonnes, as a mother her doughters, and as a nurse her younge babes, that ye wolde be my people, and I shoulde be youre God: that ye wolde be my chyldren, and I shoulde be your owne father? I gathered you together, as an henne gathereth her chyckens vnder her wynges. But nowe what shall I doo vnto you? I shall cast you oute fro my face. When ye offer vnto me, I shall turne my face from you: for youre solemne feaste dayes, youre newe moones, and your circumcisions haue I forsaken, I sente vnto you my seruauntes the Prophetes, whom ye haue taken and slayne, and torne their bodies in peces, whose bloud I wyll requyre of youre handes, sayethe the Lorde.

Thus sayth the almyghtye Lorde: youre house must be desolate. I wyll caste you oute as the wynd doth the strawe: your children shall not be frutefull, for they haue despysed my commaundement, and doone the thynge that is euyll before me. Youre houses wyll I gyue vnto a people that shall come, and they that neuer herd me, shal bileue in me: & they vnto whome I neuer shewed token, shal doo the thynge that I commaunde them. They haue sene no Prophetes, yet shall they call their synnes to remembraunce, and knowlege them. I repose me vnto the grace, that I wil do for the people which is to com, whose chyldren reioyse in gladnesse: and thoughe they haue not sene me with bodyly eyes, yet in spirite they bileue the thynge that I saye.

And now brother, beholde what great worshyp and se the people that cōmeth from the East, vnto whom I wyll gyue the dukedom of Abraham, Isaac, and Jacob, of Oseas, Amos, and Micheas: of Joel, Abdi, Jonas, Naum, and Abacuc: of Sophony, Aggeus, Zachary, and Malachi, whyth is called also an aungell (or messenger) of the Lorde.

CAPI. II.

THus sayth the Lorde, I haue brought this people out of bondage, I geue the my commaundementes by my seruauntes the Prophetes, whome thou woldest not heare, but despysed my counsels. The mother that bare them, saythe vnto them: Goo your waye you chyldren, for I am a wydow and forsaken: I brought you vp with gladnesse, but with sorowe and heynesse haue I loste you: for ye haue synned before the Lorde youre God, and done the thynge that is euil before him. But what shall I nowe doo vnto you? I am a wydowe and forsaken: goo youre waye, o my chyldren and aske mercye of the Lorde. As for me, o father, I cal vpon the for a wytnesse ouer the mother of these chyldren, whiche wolde not kepe my couenaunt: that thou bringe them to confusion, and their mother to a spoyle, that she beare no more. Let their names be scatred abrode amonge the Heathen, let them be put oute of the erth, for they haue thought scorne of my couenaunt.

Woo be vnto the Assur, thou that hydest the vnrighteous by the. Thou wicked people, remembre what I dyd to Sodome & Gomorre whose lande is turned to pytche and asshes. Euen so also wil I do vnto all them that heare me not, sayth the almighty Lorde. Thus saith the Lorde vnto Esdras: tel my people, that I wil gyue them the kyngdom of Jerusalem which I wold haue gyuen vnto Israel: their glory also will I take vnto me, and giue the the euerlastynge tabernacles, whiche I had prepared for those.

The tre of lyfe shall be onto them a swete smellynge ointment: they shall neyther laboure nor be weryd. Goo ye your waye, and ye shall receyue it. Praye for your selues a fewe dayes, that they maye dwelle therin. Nowe is the kyngdome prepared for you, therfore watche, take heuen and erth to witnesse, for I haue broken the euil in prees, and created the good, for I lyue sayth the Lorde. Mother embrace thy chyldren, and bringe them vp with gladnesse: make their fete as fast as a spyder, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde.

And those that be dede will I rayse vp agayne from their places and bringe them out of the graues. For I haue knowē my name in Israel. Feare not thou mother of the chyldren, for I haue chosen the, sayth the Lorde.

Gene.xii.e

And for thy helpe, I shal send the my seruautes Esay and Jeremy, after whose counsel I haue sanctified and prepared for the twelue trees with dyuers fruites, and as many welles flowynge with mylke and hony, and seuen mountaynes, wherupon there grow roses and lylyes, wherin I wyll fyll my chyldren with ioye.

Execute iustyce for the widow, be iudge for the fatherlesse: giue to the poore, defende the comfortlesse, clothe the naked, heale the wounded & sicke, laugh not a lame man to scorne, defende the cripple, and let the blynd come in to the syght of my clernesse. Kepe the olde and yonge within thy walles, where so euer thou fyndest the dead, taken them, and bury them, and I shall gyue the, the fyrst place in my resurrection. Holde stil, o my people, and take thy rest, for thy quietnesse is come. Fede thy chyldre, o thou good nurse, stablish their fete. As for the seruautes whom I haue gyuē the, there shall not one of them perysshe, for I wyll seke them from thy nombre, were not thy selfe.

For when the daye of trouble and heynesse commeth, other shall wepe and be sorowfull, but thou shalte be merye and plentyous. The heathen shall be gelous, but they shall be hable to doo nothynge agaynste me, sayth the Lorde. My handes shall couerthe, so that thy children shal not se the fyre euerlastynge. Be ioyfull, o thou mother with thy chyldren, for I wyll delyuer the, sayth the Lorde. Remembre thy dead chyldren, for I shall bringe them out of the erth, and shewe mercy vnto them, for I am mercyfull sayth the Lorde almyghty.

Embrace thy chyldren vntyl I come, and shew mercy vnto the, for my welles run ouer and my grace shall not fayle.

I Esdras receyued a charge of the Lorde vpon the mount Oreb, that I sholde go vnto Israel. But whē I came vnto Israel they set me at nought, & despised the commaundemēt of the Lorde. And therfore I saye vnto you, o ye heathen, that heare & vnderstand: Loke for your shepherde, he shall gyue you euerlastynge rest: for he is nye at hande that shall come in the ende of the worlde. Be redy for rewarde of the kyngdom, for the euerlastynge lyght shal shyne vpon you for euermore. Flye the shadowe of this worlde, receyue the ioyfulnesse of youre glorye. I testifye my sauioure openly: O receyue the gyft that is geuen you, and be glad, gyuynge thankes vnto hym, that hathe called you to the heauenly kyngdome.

Aryse vp and stand fast: behold the nōbre of those that be sealed in the feaste of the Lorde which are departed from the chyldrē of the worlde, and haue receyued of the glorious garmentes of the Lorde. Fulfyll the nombre of Sion, and shut vp the nombre of Jerusalem, for I haue fulfylled the lawe of the Lorde. The nombre of thy chyldren whom thou longedest for is fulfylled: beseche the power of the Lorde that thy people, whiche haue ben called from the begynnyng, may be halowed.

I Esdras

I Esdras sawe vpon the mounte Syon a greate people, whome I coulde not nombre, and they al praysed the Lord with songes of thankesgyuynge. And in the myddes of them there was a yong man of an hye stature, more excellent then all they, and vpon euery one of their heades he set a crowne, and was euer hyger and hygher, whiche I marueyled at greatly. So I asked the aungell and sayde: Syr what are these? He aunswered and sayde vnto me: These be they that haue put of the mortall clothynge, and put on the immortal, and haue confessed and knowledged the name of God. Nowe are they crowned and receyue the reward.

Then sayd I vnto the aungel: what yong ymage is it that crowneth them, and geueth them the palmes in their handes? So he aunswered and sayd vnto me: It is the sonne of God, whome they haue knowleged in the worlde. Then began I greatly to commende them, that stode so stedfast for the name of the Lorde. And so the aungell sayd vnto me: Go thy waye and tell my people what maner of thinges, and how great wonders of the Lorde thy God thou hast sene.

¶ The wonderous worckes whiche God dyd for the people are reherced. Esdras marueileth that God suffereth the Babylonians to haue rule ouer his people, whiche yet are synners also.

CAPI. III.

IN the thrirtye yere of the fall of the cyty, I was at Babylon, and laye troubled vpon my bedde, and my thoughtes came vpon my herte: for I sawe the desolacyon of Syon, and the plentyous wealth of them that dwelte at Babylon, and my spirite was sore moued: so that I began to speake fearefull wordes to the hygheste, & sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, thou spakest at the begynnyng, when thou plantedst the earth (and that thy selfe alone) and gauest commaundement vnto the people, and a bodye vnto Adam, whiche was a creature of thy handes, and hadst brethed in hym the breth of lyfe: and so he lyued before the, and thou ledest him in to Paradyse, whiche gardeyn of pleasure thy ryghte hande had planted or euer the earthe was made. And vnto hym thou gauest commaundement to loue thy waye, whiche he transgressed, and immediately thou appoyntedst death in hym, and in his generations. Of hym came nacyons, tribes people and kynredes out of nombre. And euery people walked after their owne wyll, and dyd wyce thynges before the, but thy commaundementes they dispised. And in processe of tyme, thou broughtest the water floude vpon those that dwelte in the worlde, and destroyedst them. And as the deathe was in Adam, so was the water floude also in these. Neuertheles one of them thou lefte, euen Noe with his housholde, of whome came all ryghteous men. And it happened, that when they that dwelte vpon the earth began to increase, and hadde gotten many chyldren, and were a greate people, they began to be more vngodly then the fyrst. Nowe when they all lyued so wyckedlye before the, thou dyddest chose the a man amonge them, whose name was Abraham. Him thou louedst, and to him onely thou shewedst thy wyll, and madest an euerlastynge couenaunte with him, promysynge hym thou woldest neuer forsake his seed. And vnto hym thou gauest Isaac, vnto Isaac also thou gauest Jacob and Esau. As for Jacob, thou dyddest chose him, and put backe Esau. And so Jacob became a greate multitude.

And it happened that when thou leddest his seed out of Egypt, thou broughtest them vp to the mount Syon, bowynge downe the heauens, settynge fast the earthe, mouynge the grounde, makynge the depethes to shake, and troublynge the worlde: And thy glorye went thorowe foure portes of fyre, and earth quakes, and wyndes, and colde: that thou myghtest gyue the lawe vnto the seed of Jacob, and diligence vnto the generacion of Israel. And yet toke it thou not away from the that wycked dede, that thy lawe myght bring forth fruite in them. For the fyrst Adam bare a wycked herte, transgressed, and was ouercome, and so be all they that are borne of him. Thus remayned wyckednesse with the lawe in the herte of the people, with the wyckednesse of the roote: so that the good departed awaye, and the euyll abode styll. So the tymes passed awaye, and the yeres were brought to an ende. Then dyddest thou rayse the vp a seruaunte called Dauid, whome thou commaundedst to buylde a cītye vnto thy name, and to offre vp incense and a sacrifyce vnto the therin. This was doone nowe manye yeres. Then the inhabitauntes of the cīty forsoke the and in all thinges did, euen as Adam and all his generations had done: for they also had a wicked herte.

And so thou gauest thy cītye ouer in to the handes of thyne ennemyes. Are they of Babylon then better and more ryghteous then thy people, that they shall therfore haue the dominion of Syon? For when I came there, and sawe their vngodlynesse, and so greate wyckednesse that it coulde not be nombred: yea, when my soule sawe so many euyll dedes in the thirty yere, my herte fayled me: for I sawe how thou sufferedst them in such vngodlynesse, and sparedst the wycked dedes: but thyne owne people hast thou rooted out, and preserued thyne ennemies, and this hast thou not shewed me.

I can not perceyue howe this happeneth. Doo they of Babylon then better then they of Syon? Or is there any other people, that knoweth the lawnge the people of Israel? Or what generacion hath so diligent thy couenauntes, as Jacob? And yet their reward appeareth not, and their labour hath no frute. For I haue gone here and there thorowe the Heathen, and I se they be ryche and welthye, and thynke not vpon thy commaundementes.

Wepe thou therfore our wickednesse now in the ballaunce, and theus also that dwelle in the worlde, and so shall thy name be no where founde, but in Israell. Or where is there a people vpon earthe, that hathe not synned before the? Or what people hathe so kepte thy commaundementes? Thou shalte fynde that Israell by name hathe kepte thy preceptes, but not the other people and Heathen.

¶ The Aungel reproueth Esdras, because he semed to enuie in to the profounde iudgement of God.

CAPI. IIII.

AND the aungell that was sente vnto me (whose name was Uriel) gaue me an aunswere, and sayd: Thy hert hath taken to moche vpon it in this worlde, and thou thynkest to compasse the waye of the hyest. Then sayde I: Yea my Lorde. And he aunswered me and sayde: I am sent to shewe the thre wayes, and to set forth fore symilitudes before the: wherof yf thou canst declare me one, I will shewe the also the waye that thou desyrest to se, and I shal shew the whēce thy wycked hert commeth. And I sayd: Tell on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Go thy waye, wepe me the weyghte of the fyre, or measure me the blast of the wynde, or call me agayne the daye that is past. Then aunswered I and sayd: What man borne is able to do that? Why requirest thou suche of me? And he sayd vnto me: Yf I should aske the, how depe dwellinges are on the se? Or how greate water springes are vpon the firmament? Or how great water springes are in the begynnynge of the depe? Or whiche are the out gopynges of Paradyse? Peraduenture thou wouldest saye vnto me: I neuer wente downe yet in to the depe nor hel, neither cyd I euer clymme vp in to heuen. Neuertheles nowe haue I asked the but onely of fyre and wynde, and of the daye thorowe whiche thou hast trauayled, and from whence thou canste not be seuered: and yet canst thou gyue me no answere of them.

He sayd moreouer vnto me: Thyne owne thynges, and such as are growen vp with the can thou not knowe: how shoulde thy vessel then be able to compasse the way of the hyest, and now outwardly in the corrupte worlde to vnderstande the corruption that is euident in my syghte? Then sayde I vnto him: Ie were better we were not at al, then we shold lyue in wyckednesse, and suffre, & not to know wherfore. He answered me and sayd: I went in a wod, and the trees toke such a deuice and sayd: Come let vs go, and fyght agaynst the se, that it maye depart awaye before vs, and that we may make vs yet more wodes. The flouddes of the se also in like maner toke this deuyce and sayd: Come let vs go vp and fyght agaynst the trees of the wodde, that we may make our lande the wyder. The thought and deuyce of the wodde was but vayne, and nothynge worthe, for the fyre came and consumed the woode: The thought of the floodes of the se came lykewyse to nought, for the sand stode vp and stopped them. Yf thou were iudge nowe betwene these two, whom wouldest thou iustifye, or whom wouldest thou condemne? I aunswered and sayd: Verily it is a folysh thought that they hathe vayne inuyed. For the grounde is gyuen vnto the wod, and the se also hath his place to beare his flodes. Then aunswered he me and sayd: Thou hast gyuen a ryghte iudgement, why iudgest thou not thy selfe also? For lyke as the ground is gyuen vnto the wodde, and the se to his flodes: euen so they that dwell vpon erth maye vnderstande nothyng but that which is vpon erth: and he that dwelleth aboue the heuēs, maye onely vnderstande the thynges that are aboue the heuens. Esdras. 3. liue. 4. Esdras.

Then answered I and sayd: I beseche the O Lorde, let me haue vnderstandynge: for it was not my mynde to be curious of thy high thinges, but such as we dayly medle withall/ namely, wherfore that Israell is blaspheined of the Heathē, and for what cause the people (whome thou euer hast loued) is gyuen ouer to be punished of vngodly nacions: and why the law of our fathers is brought to nought, and the written couenaunces come to none effect, and we passe away out of the worlde as the grashoppers, and our lyfe is a very feare, & we are not worthy to obteyne mercy. What wyl he do then vnto his name, which is called vpon ouer vs? Of these thynges haue I asked question

Then answered he me and sayd: The more thou serchest, the more thou shalte marueyle, for the worlde hastely falle to passe away, and can not comprise the thynges, that are promysed for the righteous in tyme to come, for this worlde is full of vnrighteousnesse and wickednesse.

But as concernynge the thynges whereof thou askest me, I will tell the. The cupll is sowen, but the destruction therof is not yet come. Yf the cupll nowe that is sowen, be not ouercome when yche downe, and yf the place where the cupll is sowen, passe not away, then can not the thynge come that is sowen with good. For the corne of cupll seede hathe ben sowen in the herte of man from the begynnyng, and how many vngodlynesse hath he brought vp vnto this time? and how much shall he yet bringe forth vntyll ye come in to the barne?

Ponder nowe by thy selfe, when the corne of cupll shall is cut downe, how great a barne shall it fyll? I answered and sayd: How and when shal these thinges come to passe? Wherfore are oure yeres fewe and cupll? And he aunswered me, saynge: Haste not thou to moche vpon the hyest, for thy hastynesse to be about him is but vayne, thou makest to much ado. Yea not the soules also of the righteous aske question of these thynges in their bolnesse, saynge: * How longe shall I rype of this faction? When commeth the fruite of my reward? And vpon this Jeremiel barne, and my rewarde? And vpon this Jeremiel

uiel the Archaungel gaue them answere, and sayde: Euen when the nombre of the seedes is fylled in you: for he hath weyed the worlde in the balaūce: in measure and nombre hath he measured the tyme, and moueth it not, vntyll the same measure be fulfylled. Then answered I and sayd: O Lorde Lorde, how are we all full of synne, and for our sakes peraduenture it is not that the barne of the righteous shall not be filled, because of the synnes of them that dwell vpon the erth.

P So he aunswered me and sayde: Go thy waye to a woman with chylde, and aske of her when she hath fulfylled her nyne monethes/yf her childbed maye kepe the byrth a-ny longer within her. Then sayd I: No Lorde that can she not. And he said vnto me: In hel the secrete places of soules are lyke the pray chambre of a woman. For lyke as a woman that trauaileth, maketh haste when the time and necessitie of the byrthe is at hande: Euen so doeth she haste to delyuer it that is cōmitted vnto her. Loke what thou desyrest to se, that shal be shewed the from the begynnyng. Then aunswered I and sayde: Yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syght, and yf it be possible, and yf I be mete therfore, shewe me this: whether there be more to come then is paste, or more paste then is for to come? What is paste I knowe: but what is for to come, I knowe not.

And he sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon the right syde, and I shall expounde the symilitude vnto the. So I stode, and beheld, and behold, an hote burnynge ouen wente ouer before me: and it happened that when the flambe was gone by, the smoke habde the vpper hande. After this there wente ouer before me a watry cloude, and sent down moche rayne with a storme: and when the stormye rayne was past, the droppes remayned styll. Then sayde he vnto me: Lyke as the rayne is more then the droppes, and as the fyre exceadeth the smoke: euen so the measure of the thynges that are paste, hathe the vpper hande. Then bent the droppes and the smoke aboue: and I prayed and sayde: Shall I lyue (thynckest thou) vntyll that tyme? Or what shall happen in those dayes? He aunswered me, and sayde. As for the tokens whereof thou askest me, I may tell the of them in a parte: but as touchynge thy lyfe, I may not shewe the, for I am not sent therfore.

¶ Esdras and the Aungel commen togyther.

CAPI. V.

NEuertheles, as concernyng the tokens marke this. Beholde, the dayes shall come, that they which dwell vpon erth shal be taken in a great nombre, and the way of the truth shall be hyd, and the lande shall be barryn from fayth, but iniquitie shal haue the vpper hande. Lyke as thou hast sene now, and as thou hast herde long ago. And the land that thou seest now to haue rule, shalte thou shortly se walte. But yf God graunte the to lyue, thou shalt se after the thyrde trompet, that the sunne shall sodeynly shyne a-rayn in the nyght, and the mone thre tymes in a day, and bloude shall drop out of wod, and a stone shall gyue his voyce, and the people shall be vnquiet: and euen he shall rule, whome they hope not that dwell vpon erth, and the fowles shal flye, and the Sowmtith see shall cast out his fish, and make a noyse in the night, which many shal not know, but they shall all heere the voyce therof.

There shal be a confusion also in many places, and the fire shall be ofte sent agayne, and the wylde beastes shall go their way, and infectuous women shal beare monsters, and salte waters shall be found in the swete/one frend shall fight agaynst an other/then shal all wit and vnderstandyng be hyd and put a-way in to their secrete places, and shall be sought of many, and yet not be founde: then shall vnrighteousnesse, and voluptuousnesse haue the vpper hande vpon earthe. One lande also shall aske an other and saye: Is righteousnes gone thorowe the? And it shall say, no. At the same tyme shall men hope, but nothynge obteyne: they shall labour, but their wayes shall not prospere.

To shewe the suche tokens I had leue, and yf thou wilt pray agayne, and wepe as now, and fast seuē dayes, thou shalt heare yet greater thinges. Then I awaked, and a fearfulnesse went thorow al my body, and my minde was feble and carefull, so that I almost sowned withal. So the aungel that was come to talke with me, helde me, comforted me, & set me vp vpon my fete.

And in the seconde nyght it happened, that Salathiel the Capitayne of the people came vnto me, saynge: Where haste thou bene? and why is thy countenaunce so heuy? Knowest thou not that Israell is committed vnto the in the lande of their captiuitie? Up then and eat, and forsake vs not, as the shepherde that leaueth his flocke in the handes of wycked wolues. Then sayd I vnto him: Go thy waye fro me, and come not nye me: and he herd it/and as I sayd, so went he his waye fro me.

And so I fasted seuen dayes, mournynge and weppynge, lyke as Uriel the aungell commaunded me. And after seuen dayes, it happened that the thoughtes of my herte were verye greuous vnto me agayne, and my soule receyued the spirite of vnderstandynge, and I beganne to talke with the moste hyghest agayne, and sayd: O Lorde, Lorde, of euery woode of the earthe, and of all the trees therof, thou hast chosen the one onely vyneyard, and of al landes of the hole worlde thou hast chosen the one pyt: and of all floures of the ground, thou hast chosen the one lyly: and of all the depthes of the se, thou hast fylled the one ryuer/and of all buylded cityes thou hast halowed Syon vnto thy selfe: and of all the fowles that are created, thou hast named the one wue/and of al the catel that are made thou hast prouided the one sheepe, and among all the multitudes of folkes, thou hast gotten the one people, and vnto this people whō thou louedst thou gauest a lawe that is proued of all.

And nowe, O Lorde, why hast thou geuen this one people ouer vnto many? and vpon the one roote thou hast prepared other, and why hast thou scattered thy one onely people amonge many? whiche treade them downe, yea whiche haue ouer withstande thy promyses, and neuer obeyed thy commaundes? And though thou werest displeased vnto the people yet shouldest thou punysshe them with thyne owne handes.

Now when I had spoke these wordes, the aungel that came to me the nyght afore, was sent vnto me and sayde vnto me: Heare me & harken to the thynge that I saye, and I shall tell ♁ more. And I sayd: Speke on my Lorde. Then sayd he vnto me: Thou art sore vexed and troubled for Israels sake. Louest thou ♁ people better than him that made them? And I sayd: No Lorde, but of verye greife & compassion haue I spoken. For my sennes payne me euery houre, bycause I wolde haue experience of the waye of the moost hyest, & to seke out part of his iudgement. And he sayde vnto me: that thou mayst not. And I sayd: wherfore Lorde? Whereunto was I borne then? Or why was not my mothers chylobed then my graue? So had I not sene ♁ misery & trouble of Iacob, and the trauayle of my people of Israel.

And he sayde vnto me: nombre me the thinges that are not yet come / gather me togyther ♁ droppes that are scatred abrode: make me the flowres grene agayne that are wythered: open me the thynge that is closed: and bringe me forthe the wyndes that are shutte vp: Shewe me the ymage of a voyce, & then shall I declare the, the thynge that thou labourest to know. And I sayd: O Lorde, Lord who maye knowe these thynges, but he that hath not his dwellynge with men? As for me I am vnwyse: Howe maye I then speake of these thynges wherof thou askest me. Then sayd he vnto me: lyke as thou canst do none of these thynges that I haue spoken of, euen so canst thou not fynde out my iudgement, or in the ende the loue that I haue promysed vnto my people.

And I sayd: beholde, O Lorde, yet art thou nye vnto them that haue no ende: and what shall they doo that haue bene before me, or we that be nowe, or they that shall come after vs? And he sayde vnto me: I wyll lyken my iudgement vnto a ryng. Lyke as there is no slacknesse of the last, euen so is there no swiftnesse of the fyrste. So I answered and sayde: Couldest thou not make those (that haue bene made, and that be nowe, and that are for to come) in one, that thou mygthest shewe thy iudgement the sooner? Then answered he me and sayde: The creature maye not haste aboue the maker, neyther maye the worlde holde them at ones, that shall be created.

And I sayde: Howe hast thou sayde then vnto thy seruaunte, that thou lyuynge maker, haste made the creature lyuynge at ones, and the creature bare it? euen so might it now also beare them that be present at ones. And he sayde vnto me: Aske the childebedde of a woman, and saye vnto her: If thou bringest forthe chyldren, why dost thou it not togyther, but one after an other? Praye her therfore to bryng forth ten chyldren at ones. And I sayd: she can not, but must do it one after an other.

Then sayd he vnto me: Euen so haue I geuen a childebed vnto the earthe, for those that be sowen vpon it by processe of tyme. For lyke as a yonge chylde maye not bringe forthe the thynges that belonge to the age, euen so haue I ordeyned the worlde which I made.

And I asked and sayde: Seinge thou hast nowe geuen me a waye, I wyll speake before the: for our mother of whom thou dost tolde me, is yet younge, and nowe she draweth nye vnto age. He answered me and sayd: Aske a woman that beareth chyldren, and she shall tell the. Saye vnto her: wherfore are not they (whome thou hast nowe brought forth) lyke those that were before the, but lesse of stature: and they shal answere the: They that be borne in the youthe of strength, are of one facyon: and they that are borne in the tyme of age (when the childebed fayleth) are otherwyse. Consydre nowe thy selfe, howe that ye are lesse of stature then those that were before you, and so are they that come after you lesse then ye, as the creatures whiche nowe begyn to be olde, and haue passed ouer the strengthe of youthe. Then sayde I: Lorde I beseche the, yf I haue founde fauoure in thy syghte, shewe thy seruaunte, by whome doest thou dyrect thy creature?

¶ The Aungel instructeth Esdras, and geueth him answere to his questyons.

CAPI. VI.

And he sayde vnto me: In the begynnynge when the grounde was made: before the worlde stode, or euer the windes blewe, before it thondered and lyghtened, or euer ♁ foundacions of Paradyse were layde, before the fayre flowres were sene, & euer ♁ mouable powers were stablysshed, before the innumerable multitude of aungelles were gathered togyther, or euer the dygnitie of the ayre were lyfted vp, afore the measures of the fyrmament were named, or euer the chymneys in Syon were bore, and or the present yeres were sought out, and or euer the inuencyons of them that now synne were put asyde, before they were sealed that nowe gather fayth for a treasure: then dyd I consydre and ponder all these thinges, and they all were made thorow me, and thorowe none other, by me also they be ended, & by none other.

This

Then answered I and sayde: whiche shal be the partynge asunder of the tymes? Or when shall be the ende of the fyrste, and the begynnynge of it that foloweth? And he said vnto me: From Abraham vnto Isaac, when Jacob and Esau were borne of him, Jacobs hande helde fyrst the hele of Esau: for Esau is the ende of this worlde, and Jacob is the beginnynge of it that followeth. The hande of man betwixte the hele and the hande. Other question (Esdras) aske thou not.

I answered then, and sayde: O Lorde Lorde, if I haue founde fauoure in thy syght I beseche the, shewe thy seruaunt the ende of thy tokens, wherof thou shewdest me parte the last nyght. So he answered and sayd vnto me: Stande vp vpon thy fete, and heare the perfecte voyce and sounde. There shall come a greate mocion, but the place where thou standest shall not be moued. And therfore when thou hearest the wordes, be not afrayde: for of the ende shall the worde and foundacio of the earth be vnderstande. And why? the worde therof trembleth and quaketh for it knoweth, that it muste be chaunged at the ende. And it happened, that whe I had herd it, I stode vp vpon my fete, and herkened: and beholde there was a voyce that spake, & the sounde of it was lyke the sound of many waters, and it sayde. Beholde, the dayes come, that I wyll begynne to drawe nyghe, and to vysette them that dwell vpon earth, and wyll begynne to make inquisicio of them, what they be that hurt equyte with vnryghtousnes, and when the lowe estate of Syon shal be fulfylled: and when the worlde that shall vanysh awaye, shal be ouersealed, then will I do these tokens.

The bokes shall be opened before the firmament, and they shall se all togither, & the chyldren of a yere olde shal speake with their voyces: the women with chylde shall bring forth vntymely children of thre or foure monethes olde, and they shall lyue, & be raysed vp: & sodenly shal the sowne places appeare as the vnsowne, the ful store houses shall sodenly be found emptye, and the trompet shal geue a sounde, whiche when euery man heareth, they shall be hastely afrayde. At ♁ time shall frendes fight one against an other like enmyes, and the earth shall stande in feare with them.

The fyrynges of the welles shall stande styll, and in thre houres they shal not renne. Whosoeuer remayneth frō all these thinges that I haue tolde the, shall escape, and se my saluacion, and the ende of youre worlde. And the men that are receyued, shall se it, they that haue not tasted death frome their byrth: and the hert of the indwellers shal be changed, and turned into another meaning for euyll shall be put out, & diseyte shall be quenched: as for sayth, it shall flouryshe, corrupcio shalbe ouer come: and the truth, whiche hath bene so longe without frute, shalbe declared. And it happened when he talked wt me, that I loked demurely vpon him, before whom I stode, and these wordes sayde he vnto me: I am come to shew the, the tyme of ♁ nyght for to come.

If thou wilt praye yet more, and fast seuē dayes agayne, I shall tell the more thinges, and greater then before: for thy voyce is hearde before the hyghest: for why? the myghtye hath sene thy rightous dealynge, he hath sene also thy chastyte, whiche thou hast had euer sence thy youth: and therfore hathe he sent me to shewe the all these thinges, and to saye vnto the: Be of good comfort, & feare not, and haste not with the tymes that are past to thynke vayne thynges, and make not haste of the latter tymes.

And it happened after this, that I wepte agayne, and fasted seuē dayes in lyke maner that I myght fulfyll the thre weekes, whiche he tolde me. In the eyght night was my hert vexed within me agayne, and I beganne to speke before the hyghest: for my spirite was greatly set on fyre, and my soule was in distres, and I sayde: O Lorde, thou spakest vnto thy creature fom the beginninge (euen the fyrste daye) and saydest: Let heauen and erth be made, and thy worde was a perfecte worke. And then was there the spirite, and the darknesses were yet on euery syde, and silence: there was no mans voyce as yet frō the. Then commaundest thou a fayre lyght to come forth out of thy treasures, that thy worke myght appeare and be sene. Genesis

Upon the seconde daye thou madest the spirite of the fyrmament, and commaundedst it to parte a sunder, and to make a deuision betwixt the waters, that the one part might remayne aboue, and the other beneth. Upon the thyrde day thou broughtest to passe, that the waters were gathered in the seuēth part of the earth: Sixe partes hast thou dryed vp and kept them, to thintent that men myghte sowe and occupye husbandrye therin. As soone as thy worde went forth, the worcke was made. For immediatly there was great innumerable frute, and manye dyuers pleasures and deseyres of temptacion, flowres of chaungeable colour and smel, and this was done the thyrde daye.

Upon the fourth day thou commaundedst that the sonne should geue his lyght, and ♁ moone her lyght: the starres dydest thou set in order, and gauest them a charge to do seruyce vnto man: that was for to be made. Upon the fyft day thou saydest vnto the seuenth parte (where the waters were gathered) that they shulde bringe forthe diuerse beastes, foules, & fyshes. And so it came to passe, that the dom water & withoute soule, brought forth lyuynge beastes at the commaundement of God, that all people myghte praise thy wonderous workes. Then diddest thou preserue two soules, the one ♁ calledst Enoch and the other Leuiathan, & diddest separate the one frō the other: for the seuēth parte (namely, where the water was gathered togither) myght not holde them bothe. Unto Enoch thou gauest one parte, whiche was dryed vp the thyrde daye, that he shulde dwell in the same parte, wherin are a thou- Deut. xiii. Genes. i.

lande lyes. But vnto Leuiathan thou gauest the seuenth parte, namely the moyst, and hast kepte hym to deuoure what thou wylte and whan. Upon the lyxte daye thou gauest commaundement vnto the earth, that before the it shulde bringe forth beastes, catel, and all that crepe, and (besydes this) Adam also whom thou madest lorde of all creatures: Of hym come we all, and ye people also, whom thou hast chosen specially vnto thy selfe. All this haue I sayd nowe and spoken before the, that I myght shewe, how that the worlde is made for our sakes. As for the other people whiche also come of Adam, thou hast sayde that they are nothyng, but lyke a spettle, & hast lykened the aboundaunce of them vnto a droppe (that falleth) from the tote of the bouke.

Exod.xliii.

And nowe, O Lorde, the heathen whiche haue euer ben reputed as nothynge, haue begonne to be Lordes ouer vs, and to deuoure vs: but we thy people (whome thou hast called the tyrst borne, thy only begotten, and thy feruent louer) are geuen into their handes & power. If the worlde now be made for our sakes, why haue we not the inheritaunce in possession with the worlde? How longe shal this endure?

¶ The Angell sheweth Esdras many thynges to come.

CAPI. VII.

A And it happened after that I had spoke out these wordes, there was sent vnto me an aungell, which had ben by me also the nyghtes afore, and he sayd vnto me: Up Esdras, and heare the wordes that I am come to tell the. And I sayd: speake on Lorde my God. Then sayd he vnto me: The see is sette in a wyde place, that it myght be deepe and great: but the entraunce is narrow and small lyke a ryuer. For who wolde goo into the see, to loke vpon it, and to rule it? If he went not thorowe the narrowe, howe myght he come into the brode?

Item an other: A cyte is buylded and sette vpon a brode felde, and is full of goodes: the entraunce is narrowe and sodeyn, lyke as yf there were a fyre at the ryght hande, and a deepe water at the left, and as it were onlye one thynne path betwixte them bothe, too smal that there coulde but one man go there.

If this cyte now were geuen to an heyre, & he neuer went thorowe the perelous waye, howe wolde he receyue his inheritaunce? And I sayde: It is so Lorde. Then sayd he: Euen so is Israel also a porcyon. And why? for theyr sakes haue I made the worlde: and when Adam transgressed my statutes, then was the thynge iudged that was done. Then were the entraunces of the worlde made narrow, full of sorowe and trauayle: They are but fewe and euell, full of perels and laboure. For the entraunces of the fore worlde were wyde and sure, and brought immortal fruyte: If they now which entred into this worlde maye not comprehende these strayte and vayne thynges, muche lesse may they comprehende and vnderstande the secrete thynges: Why disquieteth thou thy selfe then, sayng thou arte but a corruptible man? And what wouldest thou knowe, where as thou art but mortall? And why hast thou not enquyred in to thyne owne herte the thyng that is to come, but that is present?

Then sayd I: O Lorde Lorde, thou hast ordeyned in thy lawe, that ye righteous shulde inherete these thynges, but that the vnfaythfull and vngodly shulde perysshe. Nuertheles the righteous shall suffre strayte thynges and hope for wyde: for they that haue lyued vngodly and suffred strayte thynges, shal not se the wyde. Deut.xi

And he sayd vnto me: There is no iudge aboue God, & none that hath vnderstanding aboue the hyest. For there be many that perysshe, because they despyse the lawe of God that is sette before them. For God hath geuen strayte commaundement to such as come, that they know what they do, and how they shulde lyue: and yf they kept this they shulde not be punysshed.

Nuertheles they were not obedient vnto hym, but spake agaynste hym: imagined vayne thynges, and purposed to lyue, & sayd moreouer that there was no God, and that God regarded it not. His wayes haue they not knowen, his lawe haue they despyced, & denyed his promyses: in his statutes and ordynaunces haue they not ben faythfull and stedfaste, and haue not performed his workes.

And therfore Esdras, vnto the full, plenty, and to the emptye, emptynesse. Beholde, the tyme shall come, that these tokens which I haue tolde the, shall come to passe, and the bryde shall appeare and the earth that now is hyd, shall be shewed: and whosoeuer is delyuered from the forelayd euelles, shall se my wonders. For my sonne Jesus shalbe openlye declared, with those that be with hym: and they that remayne, shall be merry in foure hundred yeares.

After these same yeares shall my sonne Christe dye, and all men that haue lyfe, and the worlde shalbe tourned into the olde sylence. vij. dayes, lyke as in the fore iudgmentes so that no man shall remayne. And after vij. dayes, the worlde that yet awaketh not, shal be raysed vp, and shall dye corrupte. And the earthe shall restore those that haue slepte in her, and so shall the dust those that dwell in sylence, and the secrete places shall deliuer those that be committed vnto them. And the moste hyest shall be openlye declared vpon the seate of iudgement, and all myserye shall be vanyshe away, and longe sufferynge shalbe gathered together. But the iudgment shall remayne, the truthe shall remayne, and fayeth shall waxe stronge, the worke shall folowe, and the rewarde shall be shewed, the righteousnesse shall waxe, and the vngodlynesse shall not be.

Then sayd I: Abraham prayed fyrst for the Sodomites, and Moses for the fathers that synned in wyldernes, & he that came after him for Israel, in the tyme of Achas and Samuel: and Dauid for the destruccyon, and Salomon for them that came in to the Sanctuary, and Elias for those that receyued raine and for the deed, that he myght lyue: and Ezechias for the people in the tyme of Sennacherib: and diuers other in lyke maner, which haue prayed for many.

Num.xvi. 1.Reg.viii. 2.Reg.xxiiii. 4.Reg.xx.

Euen nowe seynge the corrupte is growen vp, and wyckednes increased, and the righteous haue prayed for the vngodly, wherefore shall it not be so nowe also?

He aunswered me, and sayd: This present worlde is not the end: there remayneth moch honoure in it, therefore haue they prayed for the weake. But the daye of dome shalbe the ende of this tyme, and the beginnyng of immortalite for to come, wherin al corrupcyon, vanyshed, al be lustes and ioyes is lowed all mischefe taken away, righteousnesse growne, & and the veritie sprongen vp. Then shall no man be able to saue hym that is ouercomed, nor to oppresse hym that hath gotten the victorye.

I aunswered then, and sayd: This is my fyrst and last sayng: that it had ben better, not to haue geuen the earth vnto Adam: or els whē it was geuen hym, to kepe hym & he shuld not synne. For what profyte is it for men nowe in this present tyme to lyue in heynes, and after death to loke for punyshment? O thou Adam, what hast thou done? For though it was thou that synned, thou arte not fallen alone, but we all that come of the. For what profyte were it vnto vs, yf there be promysed vs an immortall tyme, where as we medle with deadly workes? and that there is promysed vs an euerlastynge hope, where as we our selues are cupll and vayne? & that there are layed vp for vs dwellynges of health and fredome, where as we haue lyued cupll? and that the worshyp of the hyest is kepte to defende them, which haue ledde a pacyent lyfe where as we haue walked in the moste wycked wayes of all? And yf there shalbe shewed a paradyse, whose fruite endureth for euer, wherin is fredome and medecyne, where as we shall not goo in? for we haue walked in vnpleasaunt places: And that the faces of the which haue abstayned, shal shyne aboue the starres, where as our faces shalbe blacke and darke? For whyle we lyued and dyd wrongh toufye, we consydered not, that we shulde suffre therfore after death?

Then aunswered he me, and sayd: This is the conclusyon & thought of the battayle, which man hath vpon earth: that yf he be ouercome, he shall suffre as thou hast sayde. But yf he gette the victorye, he shall receyue the thynge that I saye. For this is the lyfe, whereof Moses spake vnto the people, whyle he lyued, saying: Chose the lyfe, that thou mayst lyue. Neuertheles they beleued him not, neither the Prophetes after him. No nor me which haue spoken vnto them, that beynge shulde not teach vnto theym to theyr destruccyon lyke as sore is for to come ouer those, that haue suffred them selues to be enfeoffed in saluacyon.

I aunswered then and sayd: I know Lorde, that the hyest is mercyfull, in that he hath mercy vpon them, which are not yet in the worlde, and vpon those also that walcke in his lawe: and that he is pacyent and longe sufferynge, towarde those that haue synned in Roma.ii. & theyr workes: and that he is lyberall to geue where as it requireth: and that he is of great mercy, for he multiplieth his louynge kyndnesses towarde those that are present, and that are past, & to the whiche are for to come. For yf he multyplye not his mercyes, the worlde shall not be made lyuynge, with those that dwell therin: He spareth also, for yf he gaue not of his goodnesse, that they whiche haue done cuell, myght be eased, the ten thousand parte of men shulde not be made lyuynge. And yf the iudge forgaue not those that be healed with his word, and yf he wold destroy the multytude that stryueth, there shulde be very fewe left in an innumerable multytude.

¶ Esdras prayeth God rather to loke vpon his owne mercy, than on the synnes of the people.

CAPI. VIII.

A And he aunswered me, sayinge: The moost hyest made this worlde for many, but the worlde to come for fewe. I wyll tell the a symylitude, Esdras: As whē thou askest the earth, it shall saye vnto the, that it geueth moche moulde, where of earthen vesselles are made, but lyttle of it that gold commeth of, Euen so is it with the worke of this worlde. There be many created, Math.xx.b but fewe shal be preserued. Then answered I and sayd: Then I awake vp thy wyt (thou soule) & deuoure the vnderstandynge, for thou arte agreed to herken and to geue care, and wyll lynge to prophecye: for thou hast no longer space geuen the, but onlye to lyue. O Lorde wyll thou not geue thy seruaunt leaue, that we may pray before the, and that thou mayst geue sede vnto our herte, and buylde our vnderstandyng, that there may come fruite of it: and that euerye one which is corrupte, and beareth the state and place of a man, may lyue?

For thou art alone, & we al are one workemanshyp of thy handes, lyke as thou hast sayd, and lyke as the body is fashioned nowe in the chyldesbed, and thou geuest the members, and thy creature is preserued in fyre & water: and it monethes bothe thy worke suffre thy creature, which is fashioned in her but the thyng that preserueth and it that is preserued, shall bothe be kepte together: and when tyme is, the chyldesbed deliuereth the thyng, that is kepte and growne in her.

For thou hast commaunded the breastes to milke vnto the fruite, that the thyng which giue is created and fashioned, may be norished for a tyme: and than thou dysposest and ordrest it with thy mercy, bryngest it vp with thy ryghtousnes, nurtureſt it in thy lawe, and reformeſt it with thy vnderſtandynge, mortifyeſt it in as thy creature, and makeſt it lyuynge as thy worke. Seynge then that thou diſtroyeſt hym, which with ſo greate labours is created and faſhyoned thyſelfe thy commaundement, thou couldeſt lyghtly ordeyn, alſo that the thynge whiche is made, myghte be preſerued.

And this I ſpeake nowe of all men in generall, as thou knoweſt: but of thy people, for whoſe ſake I am ſory: and of thy inheritaunce: for whoſe cauſe I mourne, and of Iſrael, for whome I am wofull: and for Iacob, for whoſe ſake I am greued: therfore begynne I to praye before the, for my ſelfe and for them, for I ſe the fall of vs, & dwell vpõ earth. But I haue herd the ſwyftnes of the iudge, which is to come: therfore heare my voyce, and vnderſtand my wordes, and I ſhall ſpeake before the.

This is the begynnynge of the wordes of Eſdras, before he was receyued: O Lorde, thou that dwelleſt in euerlaſtynges, whoſe eyes are lyft vp in the ayre, whoſe ſtole is exceedynge hye, whoſe glorye and maieſty maye not be comprehended, before whome the hoſtes of heauen ſtand with trembelyng, whoſe keepyng is turned in wynde and fyre, whoſe worde is true, whoſe talkig is ſtedfaſt, whoſe commaundemente is ſtronge, whoſe ordynaunce is fearfull, whoſe loke dryeth vp the depthes, whoſe wrath maketh the mountaynes to melt awaye, and whole truth beareth wytnes: O heare the prayer of thy ſeruaunt, and marke with thyne eares the petycyon of thy creature.

For whyle I lyue, I wyll ſpeake, and ſo longe as I haue vnderſtandynge, I wyll anſwere. O loke not vpon the ſynnes of thy people, whiche ſerue in the truthe. haue no reſpecte vnto the wicked ſtudyes of the heithen, but to the deſyre of thoſe that kepe thy teſtimonies with ſorowes. Thynk not vpon thoſe that haue walked faynedly before the, but vpon them, which wyll haue knowne thy feare.

Let it not be thy wyll to deſtroy the whi che haue had beaſtly maners, but to loke vpõ them that haue clearly taught thy lawe. Take thou no indignacion at them, which are worſe then beaſtes: but loue them, that alway put their truſte in thy ryghtouſnelle and glorye: for we and oure fathers haue all the ſame ſyckneſs and diſeaſe but becauſe of oure ſynnes thou ſhalte be called mercyfull.

For if thou haſt mercy vpon vs, thou ſhalte be called mercyfull, where as we haue no workes of righteouſnes: for the righteous which haue layde vp many good workes to gither, ſhal out of their owne reſtreine reward. For what is man, that thou ſhuldeſt take diſpleaſure at him? Or what is the corruptyble mortal generacion, that thou ſhuldeſt be ſo rough towarde him?

For of a truth there is no man amõges the that be borne, but he hath dealte wyckedly: and amonges the faythful there is none, whi che hath not done amiſſe. For I this O Lorde thy ryghtouſnelle and thy goodnes ſhall be prayſed and declared, yf thou be mercyfull vnto them, whiche are not ryche in good workes.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Some thinges haſt thou ſpoken a right, and accordinge vnto thy worde it ſhall be. For I wyll not vterly condẽne the workes of the, which haue ſinned before death, before the iudgment, before deſtruction, but I wyll reioyce ouer the worke & thought of the ryghtous. I wyl remẽbre alſo the pylgremage the holy makynge and the rewarde. Lyke as I haue ſpoken nowe ſo ſhall it come to paſſe. For as the huſbande man ſoweth moche ſede vpon the grounde, and planteth manye trees, and yet alwaye the thynge that is ſowne or plãted is not al kept fare, neither doth it al take rote: Euen ſo is it of them that are ſowne in the worlde, they ſhall not all be preſerued.

I anſwered then and ſayd: If I haue found grace, then let me ſpeake. Lyke as the huſbande mans ſede periſheth, if it receyue not rayne in due ſeaſon, or if there come to moch rayne vpon it: Euen ſo periſheth man alſo, whi che is created with thy handes, and is like vnto thine owne Image & ſo thy ſelf, for whoſe ſake thou haſt made all thinges, and lykened him vnto the huſbande mans ſede. Be not wrath at vs, O Lorde, but ſpare thy people, and haue mercye vpon thyne owne inheritaunce: for be mercyfull vnto thy creature.

Then anſwered he me and ſayde: Thinges preſent are for the preſents thynges to come for ſuch as be to come. For thou wanteſt yet moche, ſeinge thou mayſte loue my creature about me: I haue oft tymes drawne nygh vnto the, but neuer to the vnrighteous. In this alſo thou art marueylous before the hyghest in that thou haſt humbled thy ſelfe as it becommeth the, and haſt not regarded thine owne ſelfe, that thou art had in ſuch honour amonges the ryghteous. Therfore ſhal great wretchednes and myſchefe come vpon them, that in the latter tyme ſhall dwell in the worlde, for they haue walked in great pryde.

But vnderſtande thou for thy ſelfe, & ſeke out glory for ſuch as be like the: for vnto you is paradyſe opened, the tre of lyfe is plãted, the tyme to come is prepared, plenteouſnes made redye & cyte is buylded for you, and a reſt is prepared, yea perfecte goodnes and wyſdome. The rote of euell is marked from you, the weaknes and moth is dyd from you, and into hell flyeth corruption in forgetfulnes. Sorowes are vanyſhed awaye, and in the ende is ſhewed the treaſure of immortalyte. And therfore aſke thou no more queſtions, concernyng the multitude of them that periſh. For they haue taken lyberte, deſpiſed the hyghest, thought ſcorne of his lawe, and forſaken his wayes.

Moreouer, they haue troden downe the ryghteous, and ſayd in their herte, that there is no God, yea and that wyckedly, for they dye. For lyke as the thynge that I haue ſpoken of, is made redy for you: Euen ſo is thirſt and payne prepared for them. For it was not his wyll that man ſhoulde come to nought: but they whiche be created, haue defyled the name of him that made them, & are vnthãkfull vnto him, which prepared lyfe for them. And therfore is my iudgement now at hand. Theſe thynges haue I not ſhewed vnto all men, but vnto fewe: namely vnto the, and ſuche as be lyke the.

Then anſwered I and ſayde: Beholde O Lorde, now haſt thou ſhewed me the multitude of the tokens, whiche thou wylt begyn to do at the laſt: but at what tyme and whã then haſt not ſhewed me.

Esdras hath dyuyons ſhewed vnto hym.

CAPI. IX.

HE anſwered me then and ſayde: Meaſure thou the tyme dyligently in thy ſelf when thou ſeeſt that one part of the tokens come to paſſe, whiche I haue tolde the before: ſo ſhalte thou vnderſtande, that it is the very ſame tyme where in the hyghest wyll begynne to viſet the worlde, which he made.

And when there ſhall be ſene earthquake and dyuyon of the people in the worlde, then ſhalt thou well vnderſtande, that the moſt hyeſt ſpake of thoſe thinges, from the dayes that were before the, euen from ỹ beginning.

For lyke as all that is made in the worlde, hath a begynnyng and ende, and the ende is manyfeſt: Euẽ ſo the tymes alſo of ỹ hyghest haue playne begynnynges in wondres and tokens, and the ende in worckynge and in tokens. And euery one that ſhall be ſaued, and ſhall be able to eſcape by his workes and by faythe, wherin ye haue beleued, ſhall be preſerued from the ſayde perels, and ſhall ſe my ſauyour in my lande and within my borders, for I haue halowed me from the world. Then ſhall they be in carefulneſſe, whiche haue had diſpyte vnto my wayes: and they that haue caſt them out deſpytefully, ſhall dwell in paynes.

For ſuche as in their lyfe haue receyued benefytes, and haue not knowne me, and they that haue abhorred my lawe, whyle they had yet fredome, and when they had yet open tyme of amendement and conuerſyon, and vnderſtode not: but deſpyſed it: the ſame muſt know it after death in payne. And therfore be thou nomore curyous: howe the vngodly ſhall be punyſhed, & how the ryghtous ſhall be ſaued, and whoſe the worlde is, & for whõ the worlde, and when it is. Then anſwered I and ſayde: I haue talked before, and nowe I ſpeake, and wyll ſpeake alſo hereafter, that there be many mo of them whiche periſhe, then ſhall be ſaued, lyke as the flood is greater then the droppes.

And he anſwered me, ſayinge: lyke as the erthe is alſo the ſede: as the flowres be ſuch the colours alſo: ſuch as the workman, ſuch is alſo the worcke: and as the huſbandman is him ſelfe, ſo is his huſbandrye alſo, for it was the tyme of the worlde. And when I prepared for them that are now, or euer the worlde was made, wherin they ſhould dwel, then was there no man that withſtode me. Now when euery one was, and the maker alſo in the worlde whiche is now prepared, & the money that ceaſeth not, and the lawe which is vnſearcheable, theyr maners were corrupte. So I conſidred the worlde, and beholde, there was peryl, becauſe of the thoughtes that were come in to it. And I ſaw, and ſpared them greatlye, and haue kepte me a wynebery of the grapes, and a plant from among many generacyons. Let the multitude periſh then, whiche are growen vp in vayne, and let my grape and wynebery be kept: cum my plant: for with great labour haue I made it vp.

Neuerth eleſſe yf thou wylt take vpon the yet ſeuen dayes mo (but thou ſhalte not faſt in them) go thy waye then in to the felde of flowres, where no houſe is buylded, and eate only of the flowres of the felde, taſt not fleſh, drynke no wyne, but eate flowres only. Pray vnto the hyeſt contynually, ſo wyll I come, and talke with the.

So I went my waye, and came in to the felde which is called Ardath (lyke as he commaunded me) and there I ſate among ỹ flowres: and ate of the herbes of the felde, and the meate of the ſame ſatisfyed me. After ſeuen dayes, I ſate vpon the graſſe, & my herte was vexed within me lyke as afore, and I opened my mouth, and began to talke before the hyeſt, and ſayed: O Lorde, thou that ſhewedſt thy ſelf vnto vs, thou haſt declared and opened thy ſelf vnto our fathers in ỹ wyldernelle, in a place where no man dwelleth, in a baren place, when they came out of Egypt, and thou ſpakeſt, ſayinge: Heare me O Iſrael, and mark my wordes thou ſede of Iacob. Beholde, I ſawe my lawe in you, and it ſhal bryng frute in you, and ye ſhall be honoured in it for euer. For our fathers which receyued the lawe, kepte not, and obſerued not thy ordinaunces and ſtatutes, and the frute of thy lawe was not declared: for it myght not, for why? it was thyne. For they that receyued it periſhed, becauſe they kepte not the thynge that was ſowen in them.

It is a cuſtome when the ground receyueth ſeed, or the ſee a ſhyp, or a veſſell meate and drynke, that when it periſheth or is broken, wherin a thyng is ſowen, or wherin any thing is put: the thynges alſo periſhe & are broke, which are ſowen or put therin. But vnto vs it hath not happened ſo: for we that haue receyued the lawe, periſh in ſynne, and our hert which alſo receyued the law: not withſtandynge the lawe periſheth not, but remaineth in his laboure.

And when I conſydered theſe thynges in my herte after this maner, I loked about me with myne eyes, and vpon the ryght ſyde, I ſawe a woman, whiche mourned ſore, made great lamentacion, and wepte with loude voyce: her clothes were rent in peces, & ſhe had had asshes vpon her heade.

Then let I my thoughtes go, ꝑ I was in, and turned me vnto her, & sayde: wherfore wepest ꝯ why art thou so sory and discomforted? And she said vnto me: Syr, let me bewayle my selfe and take yet more sorow: for I am sore vexed in my mynde, and broughte very lowe. And I sayde vnto her: what ayleth the? Or who hath done any thing to ꝯ tell me. She sayde: I haue bene vnfrutfull and baren, and haue had an husbande thyrty yeres. And these thirty yeres I do nothig els daye & nighe and al houres, but make my prayer to the highest, After thyrtye yeares God herde me thy handmayden, loked vpon my mysery, consydred my trouble, and gaue me a sonne, and I was glad of him, so was my husbande also, and all my neighbours and we gaue greate honoure vnto the mighty. And I norysshed him w great trauayle. So when he grew vp, and came to the tyme that he shulde haue a wyfe, I made a feaste.

¶ Esdras and the woman that appeareth vnto him common togither.

CAPI. X.

AND it happened that when my sonne went in to his chambre, he fell downe and dyed, then ouerthrew we all the lyghtes, and all my neyghbours rose vp to comforte me. Then toke I my rest vnto the second day at night: & whe they had al rested that they myghte comforte me, I rested also, and rose vp by nyght, and fled, and am come hither in to this felde, as thou seist: and am purposed not to come in the cyrye, but to remayne here, and neither to eate ne drinke but continually to mourne and to fast, vntyll I dye.

Then let I my meditacions and thoughtes fal, that I was in, and spake to her in displeasure: Thou folysshe woman, seist thou not oure heuynesse and mournynge, & what happeneth vnto vs? how Sion oure mother is al wofull and sorye, and how she is cleane brought downe and in mysery? seynge we be all nowe in heuynes, and make oure mone (for we be all sorowfull) As for the heuynes that thou takest, it is but for one sonne. Demaunde the earth, and she shall tell the ꝯ it is she which ought (by reaso) to mourne for the fall of so many that growe vpon her.

For from the begynnyng al men are borne of her, and other shall come: and beholde, they walke almoste all in to destructiō, and many of them shall be rooted out

Who shulde then (by reason) make more mournyge, then she, that hath lost so greate a multytude? and not thou, whiche art sory but for one. But yf thou wouldest saye vnto me: Thy mournynge is not lyke the mournyng of the earth, for I haue lost the frute of my body, whiche I bere with heuines: but the earth is accordynge to the maner of the earthe, & the presente multytude goeth agayne into her, as it is come to passe: Then saye I vnto the: lyke as thou hast borne with trauayle and sorowe, euen so the earth also fro the begynnynge gyueth her frute vnto man, for him ꝯ made her. And therfore withholde thy sorow and heuynes by thy selfe, and take what happeneth vnto the, beare it stoutlye. For yf thou murgest the worcke and ordre of God to be rygh̄teous and good, and receyuest his counsell in tyme, thou shalte be commended therin. Go thy way then into the cyty to thy husbande.

And he sayd vnto me: that wyl not do, I wyl not go into the cyty, but dwell here wyl I dye. So I cōmoned more with her, and sayd: Do not so, but be counselled, and folowe me: for how many falles hath Sion? Be of good cō forte because of the sorow of Jerusalem. For thou seist that our Sanctuary is layed waste our aulter broken, our temple destroyed, our playnge of instrumentes and syngynge layde downe, the chaunche of crouynge put to silence, oure myrthe is vanyshed away: the light of oure candelstycke is quenched, & ark of the couenaunte is taken from vs, all our holy thynges are defyled, and the name that is called vpon oure vs, is dishonored: our children are put to shame our prestes are brente, oure Leuites are caryed awaye in to captyuyte, oure virgins are defyled, and our wyues rauished, our righteous men spoyled, and our children destroied, our yong me are brought in bondage, and our stronge worthyes are become weake: and Sion (whiche shal is the greatest of all) is loosed vp from her worshyp for she is deliuered into the handes of them that hate vs.

And therfore shake of thy greate heuynes, & and put awaye the multytude of sorowes: that the myghtye maye be mercyfull vnto ꝯ, and that the lyghte maye gyue the rest from thy labours and trauayle. And it happened, that when I was talkyng with her, her face dyd lyghte and glyster, so that I was afrayde of her, and mused what it might be. And immediatly she caste oute a greate voyce, breye fearfull, so that the earth shoke at the voyce of the woman: and I loked, and beheld, the womā appeared vnto me no more: but there was a cyte builded, and a place was shewed from the ground and foundacion.

Then was I afrayd, and cryed with lowde voyce, and sayde where is Uryel the aungel, which came to me at the fyrste? For he hathe caused me to come in many considerations of hygh thoughtes, and myne ende is turned to corruption, and my prayer to reproche. And as I was spekynge these wordes, he came vnto me, and loked vpon me, and I laye as one that had bene dead, and myne vnderstanding was auoyded, and he toke me by the ryghte hand & comforted me, & set me by vpon my fete, and sayde vnto me: what ayleth the? and why is thyne vnderstanding troubled? & why is thyne vnderstanding & herte & thy vnderstādyng of thy herte, and wherfore art thou sorye? And I sayde: Because thou hast forsaken forsake me, and I haue done accordyng vnto thy wordes, I went in to the feld, & there haue I seen thynges, that I am not able to expresse. He said vnto me: Stand vp, and be manly, & I shall gyue the exhortacion.

Then sayd I: Speke on to me my Lorde, forsake me not, lest I die in vayn: for I haue sene that I knew not, and herd that I do not know. Or shal my vnderstanding be deceyued, and my mynde? But now I beseche the, that ꝯ wilt shew thy seruaūt of this wondre. He answered me then & said: heare me and I shal enorme the, and tell the wherfore ꝯ art afrayde; for the hiest hath opened many secret thynges vnto the.

He hath seene that thy way is righte, & that thou takest sorow cōtinually for thy people and makest great lamentacion for Sio, and therfore vnderstande the vision which thou sawest a litle whyle agoo after this maner: Thou sawest a woman mourning, and thou hast comforted her. Neuertheles now seist ꝯ the fassiones of the woman no more, but thou thoughtest there was a city buylded: & lyke as he tolde the of the fall of her sonne, so is this the answer: the woman whom ꝯ sawest is Sion, and where as she tolde the that she hath ben. xxx. yeres vnfrutful & baren, those are the. xxx. yeres, wherin there was no offering made in her.

But after thirty yeres Salomon buylded her, and offered, and then bare the barayn a sonne. And where as she told the that she norysshed him with labour, that was the dwellynge of Jerusalem, but where as the sonne dyed in her chambre, that is the fal of Jerusalem. And thou sawest her lyknesse how she mourned for her sonne: and what els happened vnto her, I haue shewed the. And nowe God seeth that thou art sory in thy mynde, & suffrest from thy hert for her, and so hath he shewed the her clerenesse, and the fayrenesse of her beauty.

And therfore I badde the remayne in the feld, where no house is buylded. For I knew that the hyghest wolde shewe this vnto the, therfore I commaunded the to goo in to the felde, where no foundacyon no; buyldynge is. for in the place where the hyest wil shewe his cityе, there shall be no mans buyldynge. And therfore feare not, and let not thy herte be afrayde, but goo thy waye in, and se the glorious and fayre buyldynge, and howe greate it is, and howe greate thou thynkest it after the measure of thyne eyes, and then shalt thou heare as moche as thyne eares maye comprehende. For thou arte blessed aboue many other, and art called w the hyest, as the fewe. But to morowe at nyghte thou shalt remayne here, and so shal the hiest shewe the visions of hye thynges, which he wyl do vnto them that dwell vpon earthe in the last dayes, so I slepte the same nyghte lyke as he commaunded me.

¶ In this chaptre and in the two next ensuing, he maketh mencyon of certayne visions, and of the interpretacyon therof.

CAPI. XI.

THen saw I a dreme: and beholde, there came vp from the see an Egle, whiche had twelue wynges and thre heedes. And I sawe and beholde, he spred his wynges ouer all the earth, and all the wyndes of the ayre blewe in them, and so they were put togyther agayne. And I beheld, and oute of his fethers there grewe other lytle contrary fethers: the heedes rested, the heed in ꝯ middest was greater then the other, yet rested it with the residue.

Moreouer I saw, that the Egle flew w his wynges, and raigned vpon erth, and ouer all them that dwel vpon the erth: and I sawe ꝯ all thynges vnder heuen were subiecte vnto him, and no mā spake against him no not one creature vpon erth. I saw also that the Egle stode vp vpon his clawes, and gaue a sound with his fethers, & a voyce, sayinge after this maner: watche not all togyther, slepe euery mā in his own place, and watche for a time, but let the heedes be preserued at the last. Nenertheles I sawe that ꝯ voyce went not out of his heedes, but from the myddest of his body. And I nombred his contrary fethers, and beholde there were eyght of them. And I loked, and beholde vpon the right syde there arose one fether, and raigned ouer al the erth. And it happened ꝯ when it raigned, the ende of it came, and the place therof appeared no more. So ꝯ next folowing stode and raigned and had a great time: and it happened, that when it raygned, the ende of it came also, lyke as the fyrste, so that it appeared no more.

Then came there a voyce vnto it, and said: Heare thou that hast kepte in the earthe so longe, this I saye vnto the before thou begynnest to appere no more. There shal none after the, attayne vnto thy time. Then arose the thyrde, and raygned as the other afore, and appered no more also. So went it with all the residue one after an other, so that euery one raygned, & then appeared no more. Then I loked, & beholde, in processe of tyme the fethers that folowed, were set vp vpon the ryght syde, that they myghte rule also: & some of them ruled, but within a whyle they appered no more: for some of them were set vp, but ruled not.

After this I loked, and beholde the twelue fethers appered no more, and ꝯ two wynges: and there was no more vpon the Egles body, but two heedes that rested, & sire fethers. Then sawe I also that the sire fethers were parted in two, and remayned vnder the heed that was vpon the right side, for the four cōtinued in their place. So I loked, & beholde, they that were vnder the wynges thought to set vp them selues, and to haue the rule. The was there one set vp, but shortly it appered no more, and the seconde was sooner awaye then the fyrst. And I beheld, and lo, the two thought also by the selues to raigne: & whe they so thoughte: beholde, there waked one of ꝯ heedes that were at rest, namely, it that was in the middest, for that was the greater of the two heedes. And then I sawe that the two heedes were killed with him, and þ heed was tourned with them that were by hym, & ate vp the two vnder wynges þ wolde haue raigned.

But this heed put the hole erth in feare, & bare rule in it, ouer all those that dwelt vpõ erth with moch labour, and he had the gouernaunce of the world, ouer all the foules that haue ben. After this I loked, and behold, the heed þ was in the middest, soderenly appered no more, lyke as the wynges: then came the two heedes, which ruled vpon earth, & ouer those dwelt therin. And I beheld, and lo, the heed vpon the right syde, deuoured it þ was vpon the left syde. And I herd a voyce, whiche sayd vnto me: loke before the, and consyder the thing that thou seist. Then I sawe, & beholde, as it were a lyon that roreth, renuynge hastely oute of the wodde, and he sent out a mannes voyce vnto the Egle, and said: heare thou, I will talke with the, and the hyest shal say vnto the: Is it not thou þ hast the victorye of the foure beastes, whome I I made to raigne vpon erth, & in my worlde, and that the ende of their tymes might come therow them?

And the fourth came, and ouerwan al the beestes that were paste, and had power ouer the worlde with great fearfulnesse, and ouer the hole compasse of the erth & the most wicked labour, and so long tyme dwelt he vpon the erth with discrete, and the erth hast thou iudged not with truth. For thou hast troubled the meke & thou hast hurt the peaceable & quyet, thou hast loued lyers, and destroyed the dwellynges of them that brought forthe fruite, and hast cast down the walles of such as did the no harme. Therfore is thy wrongous dealyng and blasphemye come vp vnto the hyest, and thy pryde vnto þ myghty. The hyest also hath loked vpon the proud tymes, and beholde, they are ended, and theyr abhominacions are fulfilled. And therfore appere no more thou Egle, and thy horrible winges and thy wycked fethers, and thy vngracyous heades, and thy synfull clawes, and all thy vayne body: that the earthe maye be refreshed, and come agayne to her selfe, when she is deliuered from thy violence, and þ she maye hope for the iudgement and mercye of hym that made her.

CAPI. XII.

AND it happened when the Lyon spake these wordes vnto the Egle, I sawe, & beheld, the heed that afore had the vpper hande appered no more: neyther dyd the four winges appere any more, that came to hym, & were set vp to raigne, and their kingdom was smal and ful of vprore. And I sawe and beholde, they appered no more, & the hole body of the Egle was brent, and the erth was in great feare. Then awaked I oute of the traunce of my mynde, and from great feare, and sayd vnto my spirite: lo, this hast thou thou sawest reserued vp out of the wod, and roryngе and speakynge vnto the Egle, and rebukynge hym for his vnryghtoulnesse, in the wynde, whiche the hyest hathe kepte for them & for their wyckednesse vnto the ende: he shall reproue them, and rente them asunder before them. For he shall sette them lyuynge before the iudgement, and shal rebuke them: for the reliydue of my people shall be deliuer with trouble, those that be preserued vnto myne endes: and he shall make the ioyful, vntyl the commyng of the day of iudgement, wherof I haue spoken vnto the from the beginning. This is the dreame that thou sawest, and this is the interpretacion. Thou only hast bene mete to knowe the secrete of the hyest.

Therfore wryte all these thynges that thou hast sene in a boke, and hyde them, and teache them the wyse in þ people, whose herte thou knowest, maye comprehende & kepe these secretes. But wayte thou here thy selfe yet seuen dayes moo, that it maye be shewed the, what so euer it pleaseth the hyghest to declare vnto the, and with that he wente his waye.

And when al the people perceyued, that þ seuē dayes were past, and I not come agayn into the city, they gathered them al togither from the leest vnto the most, and came vnto me, & sayd: what haue we offended the? and what euyll haue we done agaynst the, that þ forsakest vs, and sittest here I this place? For of all people thou only art left vs as a grape of the vine, and as a candle in a darke place, and as an haue and shyp preserued from the tempest. Haue we not els aduersitie ynough, but thou muste forsake vs? Were it not better for vs, that we had ben brent with Sion. For we are no better then they þ dyed there: and they wepte with loud voyce. Then answered I them and sayde: Be of good comforte, O Israell, and be not heuy thou house of Jacob, for the hyest hathe you in remembraunce, and the myghty hath not forgotten you in temptacion. As for me, I haue not forsaken you, neyther am I departed from you: but am come in to this place to pray, bicause of the myserye of Israell, that I myghte seke mercy for the lowe estate of your Sanctuarye. And nowe goo youre waye home euerye man, and after these dayes wyll I come vnto you. So the people went their waye in to the cityе, lyke as I commaunded them: but I remayned styl in the feldes seuen dayes, as the aungell badde me: and I ate onely of the flowres of the felde, and had my meat of the herbes in those dayes.

CAPI. XIII.

AND it happened after the seuen dayes, that I dremed a dreme by nyghte. And beholde, there arose a wynde from the see, that it moued all the flowdes therof. And I loked, and beholde, the man was stronge, & mounted with the cloudes of heuen, & when he turned his countenaunce to consyder, all the thinges trembled þ were sene vnder him: and when the voyce went out of his mouthe, all they brent that herd him, lyke as the erth when it feleth the fyre.

After these I sawe, and beholde, there was gathered togither a multitude of men out of nombre from the foure wyndes of the heuen, to fight against the man that came out from the see. And I loked, and beholde, he graued him selfe a greate mountayne, and flewe vp vpon it. But I wolde haue sene the border or place, whereout the hyll was graue, and I couldе not.

I sawe after these, that all they whiche came to fyghte agaynst hym, were sore afrayde, and yet durst they fyght. Neuertheless, when he sawe the fearcenesse and violence of the people, he neyther lyfte vp his hande, ne helde swerde nor any weapen: but onely (as I sawe) he sent oute of his mouthe as it had ben a blast of fyre, & out of his lyppes the wynde of the flambe: and out of his tonge he caste oute sparkes and stormes, and they were all myxte togythes the blaste of fyre, the winde of the flambes, and the greate storme, and fell with a rushe vpon the people whiche was prepared to fight, and brent them vp euerychone: so that of the innumerable multitude there was nothyng sene, but onely duste and smoke. When I sawe this, I was afrayde.

Afterwarde sawe I the same man come downe from the mountayne, and callynge vnto hym an other peaceable people: and there came moche people vnto hym: some were gladde some were sore, some of them were bounde, so that they were caryed and brought forth.

Then was I fyche thorowe greate feare, and I awaked, and sayd: thou hast shewed thy seruaunt al thy wonders from the beginnynge, and hast counted me worthye, that þ myghtest receyue my prayer: shewe me nowe yet the interpretacyon of this dreame. For thus I consyder in my vnderstandyng: Wo vnto them that shall be lefte in those dayes: and moche more woo vnto them that are not lefte behynde: for they that were not lefte, were in heuynesse.

Nowe vnderstande I the thynges that are layde vp in the latter dayes, which shal happen vnto them, and to those that are not lefte behynde. Therfore are they come in to greate perylles, and many necessities, lyke as these dreames declare. Yet is it easyer, that he whiche sustereth hurte, come in these, then to passe awaye as a cloude oute of the worlde, and now to se the thynges that shall happen in the last.

Then answered he me, and sayd: The interpretacion of the fyghte shall I shewe the, and I wil open vnto the, the thing that thou hast required. For thou hast spoken of them that are lefte behynde, and this is the interpretacion. He that taketh awaye the perill in that tyme hath kepte hym selfe. They that be fallen in to harme, are suche as haue wor-

kes and layth vnto the moſt mighty. Knowe this therfore, that they which be left behind are moze bleſſed then they that be deed. This is the meanynge of ꝑ viſyon. Where as thou ſaweſt a man commyng vp from the depe of the ſee, the ſame is he which God the hyghеſt hath kept a great ſeaſon, whom by his owne ſelfe ſhal deliuer his creature, & he ſhal ozdre them that be left behynd. And where as thou ſaweſt, that oute of his mouthe there came a blaſt of wynde, fyre, and ſtozme, & how that he lyfte vp neyther ſwerde noz weapon, but that the ruſhyng in of hym deſtroyed ꝑ hole multitude that came to fyght agaynſte hym: it ſignifieth, that the dayes come, when God wyll delyuer them that are vpon earthe, and in a traunce of mynde ſhal he come vpon thē that dwell in the earth. And one ſhall vndertake to fyght agaynſte an other, one citye agaynſt an other, one place agaynſt an other, one people agaynſt an other, and one realme againſt an other. When this cōmeth to paſſe then ſhall the tokens come that I ſhewed the before, and then ſhall my ſonne be declared, whome thou ſaweſt clyme vp as a man. And when all the people heare his voyce, euery man ſhall in theyr owne lande leaue the batayle that they haue one agaynſte an other, & an innumerable multitude ſhall be gathered togyther, as they ꝑ be willynge to come & to ouercom hym by fyghtyng. But he ſhal ſtād vpon the top of the mount Syon. Neuertheleſſe Sion ſhall come, and ſhal be ſhewed, beinge prepared and buylded for all men, lyke as thou ſaweſt the hyl grauen forth without any handes. But my ſonne ſhal rebuke ꝑ people that are come for theyr wickednes, with the tempeſt, and for their euyll ymagynacyons: and theyr paynes wherwith they ſhall be punyſhed, are lykened vnto ꝑ flambe, and without any labour ſhall be deſtroye them, euen by the lawe, whiche is compared vnto the fyre.

Wath.xiiii.a

And where as thou ſaweſt, that he gathered an other peaceable people vnto hym: thoſe are the ten tribes which are caryed away priſoners out of their own land, in the tyme of Oſeas the kyng, whom Salmanaſar the kyng of Aſſiria toke priſoner and caried them ouer the water, and ſo came they in to an other lande.

But they gaue them this counſel, that they ſhold leaue the multitude of the heathē, and to go forth in to a farther cōtrey, where neuer mankynde dwelt: that they myght there kepe theyr ſtatutes, which they neuer kept in theyr owne land, and ſo they entred in at the narow paſſages of the water of Euphrates, and God ſhewed tokens for them, and held ſtill the flood till they were paſſed ouer: for thoꝛow that cōtrey there was a great way namely of a yere and a halfe iourney, for the ſame region is called Aſareth.

D Exod.xiiii.e Ioſue.iii.d

Then dwelt they there vnto ꝑ latter time: and when they come forth agayne, the hyeſt ſhall holde ſtyll the ſprynges of the ſtreame agayne, that they maye go thoꝛowe, therfore ſaweſt thou the multitude with praye. And they that be lefte behynde of thy people, are thoſe that be found with in my boyder. Now when he deſtroyeth the multitude that is gathered togyther, he ſhall defende his people & remayne, and then ſhall he ſhewe them great wonders.

Then ſayd I: O Lorde Lorde, ſhewe me this, wherfore haue I ſene the man comming vp from the depe of the ſee? And he ſayd vnto me: like as thou canſt neither ſeke out noz know theſe thinges that are in the depe of ꝑ ſee, euen ſo mayſt thou not ſe my ſon, noz thoſe that be with him, but in the tyme of the day. This is the interpretacion of the dreme whi che thou ſaweſt, therfore thou only art herlightened: for thou haſt forſake thyne owne lawe, and applyed thy diligence vnto mine, and ſought it. Thy lyfe haſte thou ordred in wyſdom, and haſt called vnderſtandyng thy mother, and therfore haue I ſhewed the, the treaſure of the hyeſt. After thre dayes I wyl ſhewe the moze, and talke with the at moze large, yea heuy and wonderous thynges wil I declare vnto the.

Then wente I forthe in to the felde, gyuyng prayſe and thankes greatly vnto God bycauſe of his wonders whiche he dyd in tyme, and bycauſe he gouerneth the ſame, and ſuche as is in tyme, and there I ſat thre dayes.

¶ God appeareth vnto Eſdras in the buſſhe, and ſhewеth hym what he ſhall do.

CAPI. XIIII.

VPon the thyrd daye I ſat vnder an oke 1 tree, then came there a voyce vnto me out of the buſh, and ſaid: Eſdras, Eſdras? And I ſaid: here am I Lord, and ſtode vp vpon my fete. Then ſpake he vnto me: In the buſſhe dyd I appere vnto Moſes, and talked wᵗ him, when my people ſerued in Egypt Exod.iii and I ſent him, and led my people out of Egypt, and brought him vpon the mount Syō where I helde hym by me a longe ſeaſon, and tolde hym my wonderous wozkes, & ſhewed him the ſecretes of the tymes and the ende, & commaūded him, ſaying: theſe wozdes ſhalt thou declare, and not hyde them.

And nowe I ſaye vnto the, that thou laye vp in thyne herte, the dremes that thou haſt ſene, and the interpretacions whiche I haue ſhewed the: for thou ſhalt be receyued of al, thou ſhalt be tourned, and remayne with my counſell, and with ſuche as be lyke the, vntil the tymes be ended. For the worlde hath loſt his youth, and the tymes begyn to wexe old. For the tyme is denyded in to twelue partes, and ten partes of it are gone alredye, and halfe of the tenthe parte: yet remayneth there that, which is after the half of the tenth parte.

Therfore prepare and ordre thy houſe, & 2
reſourme thy people: comfoꝛte ſuche of them as be in trouble, and tell now of the deſtruction, let go from the moꝛtal thoughtes, caſt awaye

awaye the burthens of mā, put of the weyke nature: laye vp in ſome places the thoughtes that are moſt heuy vnto the, and haſte ꝑ to flyt from theſe tymes: for ſuche cuyl and wyckednelle as thou haſt nowe ſene happen, ſhall they doo yet moche woꝛſe. For the weaker that the worlde and the tyme is, ꝑ moze ſhall cunne and wyckednelle increaſe, in them that dwell vpon earthe. For the truthe is fled farre awaye, and leyenge is harde at hande. For now hafteth the viſion to come, ꝑ thou haſt ſene.

Then anſwered I and ſayde: Beholde Lorde, I wyll go as thou haſt commaunded me, and reſourme the people which are preſent. But they that ſhal be borne afterwarde who wyll exhoꝛte oꝛ rebuke theym? Thus the worlde is ſet in darkenelle, and they that dwell therin are without light: for thy law is kyndled, bycauſe no man knoweth ꝑ thinges that are done in the, oꝛ that ſhal be done. If I haue founde grace before the, ſende the holy ghoſt in to me, and I ſhal wꝛyte al that hathe bene doone in the worlde ſence the begynnynge, whiche was wꝛytten in thy law, that men maye fynde the pathe-, and that they whiche wyll lyue in the latter dayes, maye lyue.

And he anſwered me, ſayinge: Goo thy waye, gather thy people togyther, and ſaye vnto the that they leke the not foꝛ. xl. dayes, but loke thou gather the manye boꝛe trees, and take with the Sarea, Dabria, Selemia, Echanus, and Aſiall: theſe fyue whiche are redy to wꝛyte ſwyftly, and come hyther, and I ſhall lyght a candle of vnderſtandynge in thyne herte, whiche ſhall not be put out, tyll the thynges be perfoꝛmed, whiche thou ſhalte begyn to wꝛyte. And then ſhalt thou declare ſome thynges openly vnto the perfecte, and ſome thynges ſhalte thou ſhewe ſecretly vnto the wyſe. To moꝛow this hour ſhalt thou begyn to wꝛyte.

Then wente I forthe (as he commaunded me) and gathered al the people togither, and ſayd: Heare theſe wozdes, O Iſraell: Oure fathers from the begynnynge were ſtraungers in Egypte, from whence they were deliuered, and receyued, the lawe of lyfe, whiche they kepte not, whiche ye alſo haue tranſgreſſed after them. Then was this land and the lande of Syon parted among you by lot to poſſeſſe. But youre fathers and ye youre ſelues alſo haue doone vnryghtouſnelle, and haue not kepte the wayes whiche the higheſt commaunded you. And for ſo moch as he is a rightous iudge, he toke from you in time the thynge that he had gyuen you. And nowe are ye here, & your bꝛethren amonges you. Therfore yf ſo be that ye wyll ſubdue youre owne vnderſtandynge, and reſourme youre herte, ye ſhall be kepte alyue, & after deathe ſhall ye obteyne mercye. For after deathe ſhall the iudgemente come, when we ſhall lyue agayne: and then ſhal the names of the rightuus be manyfeſt, and the workes of the vngodlye wicked, theyr wozkes, ſhall be declared. Let no man therfore come nowe vnto me, ne aſke anye queſtyon of me theſe foꝛty dayes.

So I toke the fyue men (as he commaunded me) and we wente in to the felde, and remayned there, the nexte daye a voyce called me, ſayinge: Eſdras, open thy mouthe, and drynke that I gyue the. Then opened I my Exod.xvi.c Deut.viii.c
mouth, and beholde he reached me a full cup whiche was full of water, but the colour of it was lyke fyre. And I toke it and dranke. And when I had dronken it, my hert hadde vnderſtandynge, and wyſdome grewe in my breſte: for my ſpirite was kepte in remembraūce, and my mouth was opened, and ſhut no moze. The hyeſt gaue vnderſtandinge vnto the fyue men, that they wꝛote the hye thinges of the nyght, which they vnderſtode not. But in the nyght they ate dꝛed: as for me, I ſpake in the day, and held my tong by night. In foꝛty dayes they wꝛote two hundred and four bokes.

And it happened when the foꝛtye dayes were fulfylled, that the hyeſt ſpake, ſayinge: The fyrſte that thou haſt wꝛitten, ſpeake openly, that the worthye and vnworthy may rede it. But the thre ſcoꝛe and ten laſte, that thou mayſt ſhewe it onely to ſuche as be wiſe amonges thy people. For in theym is the ſpꝛynge of vnderſtandynge, the fountayne of wyſdome, and the ſtreme of knowlege. And I dyd ſo.

¶ The punyſchement tha temyll people ſhall haue, whiche God commaundeth Eſdras to ſhewe vnto them.

CAPI. XV.

BEholde, ſpeake thou in the eares of my 1
people the wozdes of the prophecy, whiche I will put in thy mouthe, ſayeth the Lorde, & cauſe them to be wꝛitten in a letter, for it is the truth, Feare not the imaginacions againſt the, let not the vnfaithfulneſſe of the trouble the, that ſpeke againſt the. For al the vnfayethful ſhal dye in theyr vnfayethfulnes. Beholde, ſayth the Lorde, I will bꝛynge plages vpon ꝑ worlde, the ſwerde, honger, deth and deſtruction, for wickednes hath the vpper hand in all the erth, and theyr ſhameful wozkes are fulfylled.

Therfore ſayethe the Lorde: I wyll holde my tonge no moze vnto theyr wyckednelle, whiche they doo ſo vngodlye: neyther wyll I ſuffre theym in the thynges that they deale withall ſo wyckedly.

Beholde, the innocent blonde of the trou- Apoca.vi.b and.xi.a bled creyeth vnto me, and the ſoules of ꝑ righteous complayne contynually: and therfore (ſayethe the Lorde) I wyll ſurely auenge, and receyue vnto me all the innocent blonde from amonges them.

Behold, my people is led as a flok of ſheepe 2 to be ſlayne, I wyll not ſuffre them nowe to Iſaim.lvii.c Hiere.xxxi.c Ezech.xxxiiii.c Zoph.iii.b
dwell in Egypte, but wyll bꝛynge them out with a mighty hand, & a ſtretched out arme, and ſmyte it with plages as afoꝛe, and wyll destroy all the land of it. Egipt shal mourne and the foundacions of it shall be smitten with the plage and punyshment þ God shal bring vpon it.

B They that tyll the ground shall mourne: for their sides shall be destroyed thorow the blastynge and hayle, and an horryble sterre. Wo worth the worlde, and them that dwell therin, for the swerde and their destruction draweth nye, and one people shall stande vp to fyghte agaynste an other, and swerdes in their handes. For men shall be vnstedfast, & some shall do violence vnto other: they shal not regarde their kyng & pryuces: the wayes of their doynges and handelynges in their power. A man shall desyre to go in to the cytye, & shall not be hable. For bicause of their pryde, the cityes shal be brought in feare, the houses shall shake, and men shal be afrayde. A man shall haue no pitye vpon his neyghboure, but one shall prouoke an other vnto battayle to spoyle their goodes, bycause of of the honger of breed, & bicause of the great trouble.

D Beholde, I gather and cal together al the kynges of the earth, which are from the byrsynge, from the South, from the East and Libanus, to turne vnto them, and restore the thinges that they haue geuen them, lyke as they do yet this daye vnto my chosen, so wil I do also, and recompence them in their bosome. Thus sayth the Lorde God: my right hand shal not spare the synners, & my swerd shall not ceale ouer them that shede þ innocent bloud vpon earth. The fyre is gone out from his wrath, and hath consumed the foũdacions of the earthe, and the synners lyke the straw that is kyndled. Wo worth them that synne, and kepe not my commaundementes, sayth the Lorde. I will not spare them. Goo your waye you chyldren of violence, defyle not my Sanctuarye, for the Lorde knoweth all them that synne agaynste hym, and therfore delyuereth he them vnto deathe and destruction. For now are the plages come vpõ the worlde, and ye shal remayne in them, for God shall not delyuer you, bycause ye haue synned against him.

E Beholde, an horrible vision commeth from the East, where generacions of Dragons shall come out, and the people of the Arabes, with many charettes, and the multitude of them shall be as the wynde vpon earthe, that all they which heare them ragynge in their wrathe, maye feare and be afrayde: and as the wylde beastes oute of the wodde, so shall they goo oute, and with greate power shall they come, and stande fyghtynge with them, and shall waste the possession of the lande of the Assirians.

And then shall the Dragons haue the vpper hande, not remembrynge their byrthe, and shall tourne about swearynge togither in greate power, to persecute them. But these shall be afrayde, and kepe sylence at their power, and shall flee: and one oute of the lande of the Assirians shall besiege them, and consume one of them, and in their hoste shall be feare and dreade, and stryfe amonges their kynges.

Beholde cloudes from the East and from F the North vnto the Southe, and they are verye horrible to loke vpon, full of wrathe and storme. They shall smyte one vpon an other, and they shal smyte al the great sterre vpon earthe and their sterre, and the bloude shall be from the swerde vnto the belye, and the smoke of man vnto the camelles hyther. And there shall be greate fearefulnesse and tremblynge vpon earthe, and they that se the wrath shall be afrayde, and a trembling shal come vpon them.

And then shall there come greate rayns from the Southe, and from the Northe, and parte from the weste, and from the horrye wynde frome the Easte, and shall shut them vp agayne, and the cloude whiche be rayed vp in wrath, and the sterre to cause feare towarde the East and west wynde, shal be destroyed: and the great cloudes shall be lyfte vp, and the myghty cloudes full of wrath, & the sterre, that they may make all the erth afrayde, and them that dwell therin, and that they maye poure out ouer all places an horrible sterre, fyre and hayle, and flieng swerdes, and many waters: that all feldes maye be full, and all ryuers, and they that breake downe the cityes and walles, mountaynes and hylles, all trees, wod, and the grasse of the medowes, & all their frute. And they shal goo stedfaste vnto Babylon, and make her afrayde, they shall come to her & besiege her, the sterre and all wrath shall they poure out vpon her.

Then shall the dust and smoke goo vp vn G to the heauen, and all they that be aboute her, shall bewayle her: and they that remayne vnder her, shall do seruyce vnto them that haue put her in feare. And thou Asia that comfortest thy selfe also vpon the hope of Babylon, and arte a worthy of her person. Woo be vnto the thou wretche, bycause thou haste made thy selfe lyke vnto her, and hast decked thy doughters in hoordome, that they myghte triumphe and please thy louers which haue alway desyred to commyt hoore dome with the: thou hast folowed the abhomynable cityе, in all her workes and inuencions.

Therfore sayth God: I wyll send plages vpon the, widowhod, powertie, honger, warres, and pestylence, to waste thy houses with destruction and deth, and the glory of thy power shall be dryed vp as a floure, when the heat ariseth that is sent ouer the. Thou shalt be sycke as a poore wyfe that is plaged and beaten of women: so that the myghty and lo uer shall not be hable to receyue the. Wold I so hate thy sayth the Lord. If thou haddest not alwaye slayne my chosen, cralynge the stroke of thy hãdes, and laid ouer their deth, when thou wast dronken: set forth the beautie of thy countenance.

The reward of thy hoordome shal be recompensed in thy bosom, therfore shalt thou be reacquited.

Lyke

Lyke as thou haste done vnto my chosen (sayth the Lorde) euen so shall God do vnto the, and shall delyuer the into the plage. Thy chyldren shall dye of honger, and thou shalt fall thorow the swerde. Thy cities shal be broken downe: and al thyne shall peryshe with the swerde in the felde. They that be in the mountaynes shall dye of honger, and eat their own flesh, and drynke their owne bloud for very honger of bred and thyrste of water. Thou vnhappye shalte come thorow the see and receyue plages agayne.

In the passage they shall caste downe the fayre cytye, and shall rote out one parte of thy land, and consume the portion of thy glory. They shal treade the downe lyke stubble, and they shall be thy fyre and shall consume the: thy cytyes and thy lande, thy wod and thy fruitfull trees shal they burne vp with þ fyre. Thy chyldren shall they cary awaye captyue, & loke what thou hast, they shal spoyle it, and marre the beawtye of thy face.

¶ The heithen shall be punished.

CAPI. XVI.

Woo be vnto the Babylon and Asia, woo be vnto the Egypte and Syria: gyrde your selues with clothes of sacke and heer, and mourne for your chyldren, be sory for your destruccion is at hande. A swerde is sent vpon you, and who wyl turne it backe? A fyre is kyndled amonge you, and who wil quench it? Plages are sent vnto you, & what is he that wil dryue them awaye? May any man dryue away an hongry lion in the wod? Or may any man quenche the fyre in the stubble, when it hath begonne to burne? Maye any turne agaynste the arowe, that is shot of a stronge archer: The mighte Lorde sendeth the plages, and what is he that will dryue them awaye? The fyre is kyndled and gone forth in his wrathe, and what is he that wil quench it? He shall cast lyghtenynges, and who shall not feare? He shall thundre, and who shall not be afrayde? The Lorde shall threaten, and who shall not tremble be beaten to pouder at his presence?

The earth quaketh, and the foundacions therof: the see reyseth vp with waues from the depe, and the flouders of it are vnquyete and the fyshes therof also before the Lorde, and before the glory of his power. For strõg is his righte hande that holdeth the bowe his arowes that be shuteth are sharpe, and shall not mysse, when they begin to be shot into the endes of the worlde.

B Beholde, the plages are sent, and shall not turne agayne, for they come vpon earth. The fyre is kyndled, and shal not be put out tyll it consume the foundacions of the earth. Like as an arowe which is shot of a myghty archer, returneth not backwarde: euen so þ plages that shall be sent vpon earthe, shall not turne agayne. Woo is me, woo is me, who wyll delyuer me in these dayes? The begin-nynge of sorowes and great mournynge: the begynnynge of derth and great death: the begynnynge of warres, and the powers shall stande in feare of the begynnynge of cuyls, & they shall tremble euery one. What shall I do in these thynges, when the plages come? Beholde, hongre, and plage, trouble and anguysh are sent, as scourges for amendement. But for all these thynges they shal not turne from their wickednesse, ne be alway myndfull of the scourges.

Beholde, bytayles shall be so good cheape C vpon the erth, that they shall thynke them selues to be in good case: and euen then shall mischefe grow vpon earth, warres, derth and great vnquyetnesse. For many of them that dwell vpon earth shall perysh of hungre, and the other that escape the hungre, shal þ swerd destroye: & the bred shall be cast out as dong, and there shal be no mã to comfort them. For the earth shall be wasted, and the cyties shall be caste downe: there shall be no man lefte to tyll the earthe and to sowe it. The trees shall gyue fruite, and who so shal pluck them of & gather them? The grapes shall be rype, and who shall tred them? For all places shal be desolate of men, so that one man shal desyre to se an other, or to heare his voyce. For of one hole cytie there shal not be.x. lefte, and two in the felde, whiche shal hyde them selues in the thyck bushes, & in the clyffes of stones: lyke as when there remayne thre or four olyues vpon the olyue tree, or as when a vyneyarde is gathered: there are lefte some grapes, of them that dyligently sought thorowe the vyneyarde.

Euen so in those dayes there shall be thre D or four lefte, for them that search their houses with the swerde. And the earthe shall be lefte wast and the feldes therof shall wax olde: & her wayes and all her pathes shal grow full of thornes, bicause no man shall trauayle there thorow. The doughters shall mourne, hauyng no bydegromes: þ wome shall make lamentation, hauynge no husbandes, their doughters shall mourne, hauynge no helpe of their bydegrome. In the waters shal they be destroyed, and their husbandes shall perysh of hungre. O ye seruauntes of the Lord, here these thynges, and marke them. Behold the worde of the Lorde, O receyue it: behold, the plages draw nyghand are not slacke in ca eyinge, lyke as a trauelynge woman, whiche after the. ix. moneth bryngeth forth a sonne, when the houre of þ byrth is come, an houre two or three afore: that the paynes came vpon her body, and when þ chylde commeth to the byrth, they tary not the twynklyng of an eye: Euen so shall not the plages be slacke to come vpon the earth, and the world shall mourne, and sorowes shall come vpon it on euery syde.

O my people, heare my worde, make you E redy to the battel: and in all tuell be euen as pylgrymes vpon erth. He that selleth let him be as he that fleeth his ware: and he þ byeth, as one that wyll lese. Who so occupyeth marchandyse, as he that wynneth not.

and he that buyldeth, as he that shall not dwell therin: he that soweth, as one that shall not reape: he that trymmeth the vine-yarde, as he that shal not gather the grapes:
they that marry, as they that shal get no chil dren: they that mary not, as the widowes:
and therefore they that laboure, laboure in vayne. For straungers shall reape their fru-tes, and spoile their goodes, ouerthrow their houses, and take their children captyue, for in captyuytie and honger shall they get chil dren. And they ꝑ occupy their marchaundyse with robbery, howe longe decke they their cyties, their houses, their possessions, and per sonnes? the more wyll I punysshe them For their synnes sayth the Lorde. Lyke as an hore enuyeth an honest woman, so shall vyght soules hate iniquitie, whe she decketh her selfe and shall accuse her to her face, whe
he cōmeth that defendeth, which shal make inquision for all synne vpon earth. And ther fore be not ye lyke therunto, ne to the wor-kes therof: for or euer it be lōg, iniquitie shal be taken away out of the earth, and rygh-teousnesse shall raygne amonges you.

Let not the synner saye, that he hath not synned: for coles of fyre shall burne vpō his heade, which sayth before the Lorde God ꝑ his glory: I haue not synned. Beholde, the Lord knoweth all the workes of men, their ymaginations, their thoughtes & their bre-stes. For he spake but the worde: let the earth be made, and it was made, let the heuen be made and it was made. In this worde were the starres made, and he knoweth the nombre of them. He searcheth the grounde of the deepe, and the treasures therof: he hath measured the see, & what it conteyneth. He hath shut the see in the myddest of the waters, & with his worde hath he hanged the erth vpō
the waters. He spreadeth out the heauen lyke a bawke, vpon the waters hath he founded
it. In the desrete and dry wyldernes hathe
he made sprynges of water, and poles vpon
the toppe of the mountaynes, that the floudes myght poure downe from the stony roc-kes to water the earth. He made man, & put his herte in the myddest of the body, & gaue hym breath, lyfe and vnderstandynge, yea &
the spirite of the almyghtye God, whiche
made al thinges, and hath serched the grou-
des of all the secretes of the earth.

He knoweth your ymaginacyons and inuentions, and what ye thynke when ye syn, and wold hyde your synnes. Therfore hath ꝑ Lorde searched and sought out all your wykes, and he shall dewaye you all. And when your synnes are broughte forthe, ye shal be ashamed before men, and your owne synnes shall be youre accusers in that daye. What wyll ye do? Or how wyll ye hyde your sy-nnes before God and his Aungels? Beholde, God him selfe is the iudge, feare him, leaue
of from your synnes, and forget your vnryg
teousnesses, and medle no more with them:
so shal God leade you forth, and deliuer you from all trouble. For beholde, the heate of a great multitude is kyndled ouer you, & they shall take awaye certayne of you, and fede
the ydle with Idols: and they that cōsent vn to them, shall be had in derision, laughed to scorne, and troden vnder fote.

For vnto the places there shall be a place,
and in the nexte cyties a greate insurrection vpon those that feare the Lord. They that be lyke mad men, they shall spare no man: they shall spoyle & waste such as feare the Lorde:
they goodes shall they take from them, and shut them out of theyr houses. Then shall it be knowen who are my chosen, & they shal be tryed as the gold in the fyre. Heare O ye my beloued, sayth the Lorde: beholde, the dayes of trouble are at hande, but I wyll deliuer
you from the same. Be not ye afrayed: dyspayre not, for God is youre captayne.

Who so keepeth my cōmaundementes and preceptes (sayeth the Lord God) let not your synnes weye you downe, and let not your vnryghteousnesses be lyfte vp. Wo be vnto them that are subdued vnto theyr synnes,
and tangled in theyr wyckednesses, lyke as a felde is hedged in with bushes, and the pathe therof
couered with thornes,
that no man maye
trauayle tho-
rowe:
and so is he taken, and cast in the fyre, and brēt.

THE BOOKE OF TOBIAS.

¶ Tobias beynge taken prysoner, forsaketh not the lawe of truth. The mercy and charytye of To bias, and the maners of him in his youth. He taketh Hannah to wyfe, by whome he hath a sonne named Tobias. He succoureth Gabell for money. He and his are sayne to flye, but after the death of Sennacherib they retourne agayne.

CAPI. I.

TObias beynge of the tryde and cittie of Nephtali, whiche lyeth in the high countreyes of Ga lile aboue Naason the waye eawarde the west hauyng the cytye of Nepher vpō the left syde.

Though he was tā
kē prysoner in ꝑ dayes of Salmanasar king of the Assirians, neuertheles beinge in cap-tyuitie, he forsoke not the waye of treuth: In so moche that whatsoeuer he myght get, he parted it dayly with his felow pryseners & brethē, that were of his kynred. And though he were yonger thē al in the tryde of Neph-tali, yet dyd not he behaue him selfe chil dyshly in his workes. And when al the other went to the golden calues, which Ieroboam the kynge of Israel had made, he him selfe alone fled all their companyes, and gat hym to Jerusalem vnto the temple of the Lorde and there worshypped the Lorde God of Is rael, faythfully offeryng of all his fryttes frū tes and tythes, so that in the thyrde yere he numbred all the tythes vnto the straungers and conuertes. These and such lyke thynges vsed he accordynge to the lawe of God, whē he was yet but yonge.

But when he was a man, he toke vnto his a wyne tryde a wyfe called Anna, and of her he begat a sonne whome he called after his owne name, and taught him frome his youth vp, to feare God, and to refraine from all synne.

Howe when he with his wyfe, his sonne and with all his kynred was come in capty-uitie vnto Nimue, what time as they al ate of the meates of the heithen, he kepte his soule, and was neuer defiled in their meates. And for so moche as he was myndfull of the Lorde in all his hert, God gaue him fauoure with the presence of Salmanasar the king whi che gaue him power to go where he wolde, and so dyd he lybertye to dos what pleased him.

So went Tobias vnto al them that were in pryson, and comforted them, and gaue them hollsome exhortacions. And when he came to Rages a cytye of the Medes, hauynge ten talentes of syluer (of the thynges wherwith the kynge had honoured him) & sawe amōge a greate companye of people of his kynred, one Gabelus (which was of his own tribe)
beynge in necessitie, he gaue him the sayde
weyght of syluer vnder an hand writynge.

After a longe season when Salmanasar the kynge was deed, and Sennacherib his sonne ragned in his steade, whiche hated the children of Israel. Tobias went dayly thor-owe out all his kynred, and comforted them, and gaue of his goodes to euery one of them as moch as he myght: he fed the hungrye, clo-thed the naked, and buryed ꝑ deed and slayn. iiii. Reg. xix. g and that diligently.

And when Sennacherib the kynge came agayne and fled out of Iewry (what tyme as God punysshed him for his blasphemy) and in his wrath, slewe many of the children of Israel. Tobias buryed their bodyes. But iiii. Esd. xiv when it was tolde the kyng, he cōmaunded to slaye him, and toke awaye all his goodes. Neuertheles Tobias with his sonne & with his wyfe, fled his waye, and was hyd naked, for there were many that loued hym. But af-ter .xlv. dayes, the kynge was slayne of his owne sonnes. Then came Tobias agayne to his house, and all his goodes restored vnto hym.

¶ Tobias hydeth suche of his frendes as feare God, to a banket of feast. He is reproued of his frendes. He feareth God more then the kynge. He recommeth hymde, by the permyssyon and sufferaunce of God. His kynsfolkes mocke hym.

CAPI. II.

AFter these thynges vpon a solemne A daye of the Lorde, Tobias made a good feast in his house, and sayd vnto his sonne: Go thy waye and brynge hyther some of our tribe, suche as feare God, that they maye make merye with vs. And when he was gone, he came agayne, and tolde his fa-ther, that one of the children of Israel laye slayne vpon the strete. And immediatly he lepte from his table, lefte the feast, came ha-stynge to the deed coorse, toke hym and bare hym pryuelye in to his house, that when the Sunne was downe, he myghte safely burye hym. And when he had hydde the coorse, he ate his meate with mournynge and feare, re-membryng the wordes that the Lorde sayth by the prophete Amos: your dye festes shall Amos. viii. b be turned to sorowe and heuynesse. a.i. Mach. d

But when the sonne was downe, he went B his way and buryed him. Then al his neygh-boures reproued hym, saying: It is not longe, Tobi. d sence it was cōmaunded to slaye the because of this matter, and hast scarce escaped the daungre of death, and buryest thou the deed agayne? Neuertheles Tobias fearyng God more then the kynge, toke the bodyes of the slayne, hyd them in his house, and buryed the at mydnyght.

It happened vpon a daye, that he had bu- C
ryed the deade, and was wery, came home, and layed him downe by the wall and slept.

And

Deuter.xiii.a and.xiii.a Iohn.xv.a and.xvi.a

And whyle he was a slepe, there fell downe vpon his eyes warme donge out of the swalowes nest, so that he was blynd. This temptacion dyd God suffre to happen vnto hym, that they which came after, myght haue an example of his patience, lyke as of holy Job. For in so moche as he euer feared God from his youth vp, and kepte his commaundements, he was not wroth against God, that ꝑ plage of blyndnes chaunsed vnto hym but remayned stedfast in ꝑ feare of God, and thanked God all the dayes of his lyfe.

Job.xiii.a

For like as blessed Job was had in derisiō of kynges, euen so was he laughed to scorne of his elders and kynsfolkes, which sayde vn to him: where is thy hope, for the which thou hast done almes and buryed the deade? But Tobias rebuked them, and spake: Say not so, for we are the chyldren of holy men, and loke for the lyfe, which God shal gyue vnto them that neuer turn their beleue from him.

Tobi.viii.a

Anna his wyfe went dayly to the wreuyng worke, and take what lyuyng she coulde get with the labour of her handes, she brought it. And it happened that she toke a kyd and brought it home.

Ephesi.viii.a

And when her husband herd it crye, he sayd loke that it be not stolen, restore it agayne to the owners: for it is not lawfull for vs to eat or to touche any thynge of theft. The was his wyfe angery, and sayd: Now is thy hope become vayne openlye, and thy almes deedes are manyfest. With these and such like wordes dyd she call hym in the teeth.

Deute.xxii.a

Job.ii.b

¶ The prayer of Tobias. Sara the doughter of Raguel, is slaundred of her fathers seruaunt. The prayer and fastinge of Sara: And also the innocency and chastitie of her. The prayers of Tobias & of Sara are herde.

CAPI. III.

Then Tobias toke it heuelye, and with teares began to make his prayer saynge: O Lorde thou arte ryghteous, & all thy iudgementes are true, yea al thy wayes are mercy, faythfulnes and iudgemēt. And now, O Lorde, be myndfull of me, and take no vengeaunce of my synnes, neither remembre my mysdedes, neither the mysdedes of my elders. For we haue not bene obedyent vnto thy commaundmentes, therfore are we spoyled brought in to captyuytie, into death, in to derision and shame vnto all nations, amonges whom thou hast scattered vs. And nowe O Lord thy iudgementes are great, for we haue not done accordynge to thy comaundementes neither haue we walked innocently before the. And nowe O Lorde, deale with me accordynge to thy wyll, and commaunde my spirite to be receyued in peace, for more expedyente were it for me to dye, then to lyue.

Psal.cxliiii.b

At the same tyme it happened, that Sara the doughter of Raguel at Rages a cytye of the Medes was slaundred of one of her fathers handmaydes, that she houlde haue had seuen husbandes, whiche as soone as they were gone in vnto her, were slayne of the deuyl called Almodeus. Therfore when she reproued the mayden for her faute, she answered her, sayinge: God let vs neuer se son nor doughter of the more vpon earth, then kyller of thy husbandes. Wylt thou slaye me also, as thou hast slayne seuen men? At this worde wente, Sara in to an vpyght chambre of her house, and thre dayes and thre nyghtes she neyther ate ne dranke, but continued in prayer, and besoughte God with teares, that he wolde delyuer her from this rebuke.

Upon the thyrde daye it chaunced, that when she had made an ende of her prayer, she praysed the Lorde sayinge: Blessed be thy name O God of our fathers, whiche when thou art wroth, shewest mercy, and in ꝑ tyme of trouble thou forgyuest the synnes of the, that call vpon the. Vnto the O Lorde turne I my face, vnto the lyfte I vp myne eyes. I beseche the O Lorde, loose me out of the bondes of this rebuke, or els take me vtterly away from of the earth. Thou knowest Lord, that I neuer had desyre vnto man, and that I haue kepte my soule cleane from all vnclenly lust. I haue not kepte company with those that passe theyr tyme in sporte, neyther haue I made my self partaker with the ꝑ walke in lyght behauour. Neuertheles, an husband haue I cōsented to take, not for my pleasure, but in thy feare.

Now peraduenture eyther I haue bene vnworthy of them, or els were they vnmete for me, for thou happly hast kepte me to an other husbande. For why? thy counsell is not in power of man. But who so euer loueth thy, and serueth the a ryghte, is sure, that yf his lyfe be tempted and proued, it standeth in the ryenge: and yf he endure in patience, he shall haue a rewarde and be hylye crowned, and yf he be in trouble, that God (no doubte) shall delyuer him: and yf his lyfe be in chastning, that he shall haue leaue to come vnto thy mercy.

Eccle.xxxiii.a and.xxxiiii.a

For thou hast no pleasure in our damnacyon: and whyl after a stormy thou makest ꝑ weather fayre and styll: after weepynge and heynesse, thou geuest great ioye. Thy name O God of Israell, be praysed for euer. At the same tyme were both theyr prayers heard in the syght of the magesty of the hyghest God. And Raphael the holy Aungell of the Lorde was sent to helpe them bothe, whose prayers came togyther before God.

CAPI. IIII.

So when Tobias thought his prayer to be herde, that he myght dye, he called vnto him his sonne Tobias: and sayd vnto hym: My sonne, heare the wordes of my mouthe, and laye them in thyne herte as a foundacyon. When God taketh awaye my soule, soule burye thou my body, and holde thy mother in honoure all the dayes of her lyfe. For thou oughtest to remembre, what and howe greate perils she suffred for the in her wōbe. And when she also hath fulfylled the tyme of her lyfe, bury her beside me. Haue God in thy thought all the dayes of thy lyfe, and beware, lest at any tyme thou consent vnto sin, or lest thou let slyp the commaundementes of the Lorde our God.

Exod.xxi.b

Gyue almes of thy goodes, and turne neuer thy face from the poore: and so shall it come to passe, that the face of the Lorde shal not be turned awaye from the. Be mercyfull after thy power. If thou hast moch, gyue plentously: yf thou hast lytle, do thy dylygence, gladlye to gyue of that lytle. For so gatherest thou thy selfe a good rewarde in the day of necessitye. For almes delyuereth fro death, suffreth not the soule to come in darkenes. A greate comforte is almes vnto hym that hyghe God, vnto all them that do it.

Beware, sonne, kepe thy self from all horedome, and (besyde thy wyfe) let that no fautie be knowen of the. Let neuer pryde haue rule in thy mynde nor in thy worde, for in pryde began all destruction.

Whatsoeuer worketh anye thynge for the, immediatlye gyue hym his hyre, & loke that thy hyred seruaunte wages remayne not by the ouer nyght. Loke that thou neuer do vnto another man, the thynge that thou wolest not an other mā would do vnto the. Gyue thy bred with thy hungry and poore, and couer the naked with thy clothes. Set thy bred and wyne vpon the burial of the righteous, and doo not thou eate and drynke therof with the synners. Alwe euer counsayle at ꝑ wyse.

Be alwaye thankfull vnto God, and beseche him, that he wyll ordre thy wayes, and that whatsoeuer thou deuisest or takest i hād it may remayne in vnn. I certyfy the also my sonne, that (when thou wast yet but a babe) I delyuered ten talentes of syluer vnto Gabelus, at Rages a cytye of the Medes, and his handwrytynge haue I by me. And therfore seke some meanes, how thou maist come by hym, and receyue of him the sayd weyght of syluer, and gyue him his handwrytynge agayne.

By sonne, be not afrayde: truth it is, we leade here a poure lyfe: but greate good shal we haue, yf we feare God, and departe from all synne and do well.

¶ The obedience of ponge Tobias to his father, whan he is sent in to Rages. An angell accompanyeth with him in his iourney.

CAPI. V.

Then answered Tobias his father, and sayde: father all that thou hast commaunded me, wyll I do, & that dylygently. But how I shal requyre this money I can not tell. Neither doth he know me, ne I him. What token shall I gyue him? And as for ꝑ wayes thyther, I neuer knew it. Then his father answered him, and sayd: I haue his hād wrytynge by me, whiche when thou hast writ him, immediatlye he shall paye the. But go thy waye nowe, and get the some faythfull man to go with the for an hyre, that thou mayste receyue the money, whyle I am yet lyuynge.

Then went Tobias out, and vpon the strete, he found a tayre young man standyng, gyrded vp, and as it were one readye to take his iourney. And he knewe not that it was an Aungell of God, but saluted hym, and sayd: From whence art thou, thou good yong man? He answered: Of the chyldren of Israel.

And Tobias sayd vnto hym: knowest thou the waye that leadeth vnto the countreye of the Medes? He answered: I know it well, and all those stretes haue I gone oft tymes, and haue lodged with one brother Gabelus that dwelleth in Rages, a cytie of the Medes, whiche lyeth vpon the mounte Egbathanis. Tobias sayd vnto hym: I praye the tary for me, tyll I haue tolde my father these thynges. Then went Tobias in, and tolde his father all. At the whyche his father marueled, and prayed that he wolde come in vnto hym.

Now when the Aungell came in, he saluted hym and sayd: Ioye be with the for euermore. And olde Tobias sayd: what ioye can I haue that lye here in darcknes, and se not the lyght of heauen? The younge man sayde vnto hym: Be of good cheare, God shal helpe the shortly. And Tobias sayd vnto him: Canst thou bringe my sonne to Gabelus, vnto the cytye of Rages in Medea? And when thou comest agayne, I shall paye the thy hyre. And the Aungel sayd vnto hym: I shal leade thy sonne, and bringe hym to the agayne. Then Tobias answered hym: tell me I praye ꝑ, of what house, or of what tribe art thou? The Aungell Raphael sayd vnto hym: Askest thou after the kynred of an hyrelyng, or seketh thou a gyde for thy sonne to go with hym? But that I make the not carefull, I am Azaries the sonne of greate Ananias. And Tobias answered: thou arte come of a greate kynred: but I praye the be not displeased that I desyred to know thy kynred. The Aungel sayd vnto hym: thy sonne shal I lede forthe safelye, and bringe hym hole to the agayne.

Then answered Tobias, and sayd: well goo on youre waye, and God be in youre iourney, and his Aungell beare you cōpanye. So when they had prepared all thynges, ꝑ they wolde take with them in theyr iourney: Tobias bad his father and his mother fare well, and they went on theyr waye bothe togyther. Now when they were gone, his mother began to wepe, and sayd: The staffe of our age hast thou taken awaye, and sent him from vs.

Wolde God that money had neuer bene, for the

for the whyche thou hall sent hym awaye. If we had bene contente with our powertye, this had bene great ryches vnto vs, that we sawe our sonne here. Then sayd Tobias vnto her: wepe not, our sonne shall come to vs agayne safe and sounde, and thyne eyes shall se him. For I trust, that the good Aungell of God shall beare hym company, and order well all the thynges that he doeth: so that he shall come to vs agayne with ioye. At these wordes his mother lefte of from weppynge, and helde her tongue.

¶ Younge Tobias is delyuered from the fysshe, by the Angell. The Aungell exhorteth Tobias to take Sara to his wyfe.

CAPI. VI.

¶ SO Tobias went on his waye, and a dog folowed hym, and the fyrst nyght they abode by the water of Tygris. Then wet he out to washe his fete, and beholde, there came forth an horrible fysh to deuoure him. Of whom Tobias was afrayed, and cryed with a loude voyce, sayinge: Lorde, he commeth vpon me. And the Aungell sayde vnto hym: Take him by the cheke blade, and drawe hym to the. And he dyd so, and drewe hym vpon the lande. And the fysh began to leape at his fete.

Then sayd the Aungell vnto hym: Take out the bowels of this fysshe, and ke for the herte, the gal, and the lyuer, kepe them by the. For these thynges are necessary and good for medicyne. Tobias dyd so, and rosted the fish, & they toke hym with them in their iourney, the reste they salted, as moche as was sufficyent for them, tyll they came to Rages. Then Tobias asked the Aungell, & sayde vnto hym: I pray the brother Azarias, tell me wherto are these thynges good of the fysshe, that thou hast bydden me kepe?

The angell answered hym and sayde: If thou layest a pece of the herte vpon the coles the smoke therof dryueth awaye all maner of euyll spirites, whether it be from man or from woman, so that fro thence forth that same shal come no more vnto them. The gal is good to aneynt or to stricke the eyes withal, where as there is any blemysh in them, so shal they be hole.

And Tobias sayde vnto him: where wylt thou that we remayne? The angel answered and sayde here is a nygh kynsman of thyne, one Raguel by name, which hath a doughter called Sara, & hath neither sonne ne doughter but her. All his good belongeth vnto the, and thou must mary his doughter: and therfore desyre her of her father, and he shall gyue her the to wyfe. Then answered Tobias & sayd: As I vnderstand, she hath bene maryed vnto seuē husbandes, and they al are dead: and I haue herde saye, that the deuyll slewe them. I am afrayde therfore, lest such thynges happē vnto me also: which if it came to passe (sayinge I am the onely sonne of my father & my mother) I shoulde dyuynge them in their age, with sorow to their graues.

Then sayd the Aungell Raphael vnto him: Heare me, and I wyll tell the what they be, of whom the deuyll hathe power. Namelye, they that receyue maryage of such a kadyen, that they shut God out from them and from their hert, & gyue them selues to their owne lust, euen as it were an horse and mule, which haue no vnderstandyng, vpon suche hath the deuyll power. But when thou takest her, and art come in to the chambre, withholde thy self from her thre dayes, and gyue thy aduyse vnto nothynge but vnto prayer with her.

And in the fyrst nyght, cast the lyuer of the fysshe, and the deuyll shall be dryuen awaye. The seconde nyght, shalte thou be receyued in to the companye of the holye patriarches. The thyrde nyght, shalte thou obtayne the blessynge of God, so that hole chyldren shal be borne of you. After the thyrde nyght take the mayden in the feare of God, and more for the desyre of chyldren, then for any fleshly lust, that in the sede of Abraham thou mayest obtayne the blessynge in chyldren.

¶ Younge Tobias and the Aungell come to the house of Raguel. He requyreth Raguels doughter to wyfe, and obtayneth her.

CAPI. VII.

THen wente they in to Raguell, whiche receyued them ioyfully. And when Raguel loked vpon Tobias, he sayde vnto Anna his wyfe: how lyke is this yonge man vnto my systers sonne. And when he had spoken this, he sayd: whence be ye good brethren? They sayd: Of the trybe of Nephthaly out the captyuytye of Niniue. Then sayde Raguel vnto them: know ye my brother Tobias? They sayd: yea, we know hym well. And when he had spoken much good of him, the Aungell sayde vnto Raguel: Tobias of whom thou askest, is this yong mans father. Then Raguell bowed him selfe downe, and wepte, toke him about the necke and kyssed hym, and sayd: Gods blessyng haue thou my sonne, for thou arte the sonne of a good vertuous man. And Anna his wyfe and Sara his doughter wepte also.

Now when they had talked together, Raguel had kyll a wether, and to make a feast. And when he prayed them to sytte downe to dynner, Tobias sayd: I wyll neither eate ne drynke here this daye, except thou fyrste graunte me my peticion, and promyse me to gyue me thy doughter Sara. When Raguel hearde this, he was abashed, for he knewe what had happened vnto the other seuē men that went in vnto her: and he began to feare that it should chaunce vnto him also in lyke maner.

And whyle he stode so in doubte, and gaue the young man no answere, the Aungel sayd vnto him: Feare not to gyue him thy doughter, for vnto this man that feareth God, belongeth thy doughter to wyfe, therfore might none other haue her.

Then sayd Raguel: I doubt not, but God hathe accepted my prayers and teares in his syght: and I trust he caused you to come vnto me for the same intent, that this doughter of myne myght be maryed in her owne kynred, according to the lawe of Moses. And nowe doubte thou not, but I wyll gyue her vnto the: So he toke the ryght hande of his doughter, and gaue her in to the ryght hande of Tobias, and sayd: The God of Abraha, the God of Isaac, and the God of Jacob, be with you: ioyne you together, and fulfyll his blessynge in you. And they toke a letter and made a wrytynge of the maryage. And then made they merry, and praysed God. And Raguel called Anna his wyfe vnto hym, and bad her prepare an other chambre, and thyther he broughte Sara his doughter, and she wepte. Then sayde he vnto her: Be of good chere my doughter, the Lorde of heuen gyue the ioye, for the heynesse that thou hast suffred.

¶ The Aungell byndeth the deuyl. Tobias exhorteth his wyfe to prayer, and they praye thre dayes before they lye together.

CAPI. VIII.

NOw after that they hadde supped, they brought the yong man in to her. Then thoughte Tobias vpon the wordes of the aungell, and toke out of his bagge a pece of the lyuer of the fysh, and layd it vpon the hote coles. So the the aungell Raphael toke holde of the deuyl, and sent him awaye, and bownd him in the wildernes of hyer Egypt. Then spake Tobias vnto the virgin, & said: My Sara, let vs make our prayer vnto God to day, to morow, and ouermorow: for these thre nyghtes will we reconcile our selues vnto God: and when the thyrd holy night is past we shall ioyne togyther in the duty of maryage. For we are the children of holy men, and we may not come togyther as the heathen that know not God.

Then rose they vp both togyther, and besought God ernestly that he wolde preserue them. And Tobias sayde: O Lorde God of our fathers, prayse be thou of heauen and erth, of the see, welles, and flouds, and of all the creatures that be therin. Thou madest Adam of the mould of the erth, and gaue him Eua for an helper. And now Lorde thou knowest well, that it is not becaule of voluptuousnes that I take this syster of myne to wyfe, but onely for the loue of chyldren, in whome thy name be blessed for euer. And Sara said: haue mercy vpon vs, o Lorde, haue mercy vpon vs and let vs both come hole and sounde to a good age.

And about the cocke crowe, it happened that Raguel called his seruantes, and they wente with him to make a graue. For he sayd: it is chaunced vnto him peraduenture, as it did vnto the other seuen men, that went in vnto her. Now whē they had made the graue, Raguel came agayne to his wyfe, and sayd vnto her: send one of thy maydes to loke yf he be dead, that I may bury hym afore it be lyght daye. So she sent a mayden to se, whiche when she came in to the chambre, she founde eyem bothe and sound slepyng togyther. And so she came agayne, and broughte good tydynges. Then Raguel and Anna his wife, prayed the Lorde and sayd: Prayse be thou, o Lorde God of Israel, for it is not happened vnto vs as we thought. For thou hast dealt mercifully with vs, and put awaye from vs the ennemy that persecuted vs, and hast shewed mercye vnto vs two beloued. O Lorde cause them to magnify the more perfectly, and to offre the the sacrifice of thy praise and of their helthe: that al people may know, that thou only art God in all the earth.

And immediatly Raguel commaunded his seruauntes to fill the graue that they had made with erth afore it was lyght: and bade his wyfe prepare a feast, & to make redy al thynges that were necessary for meat, to suche as wēt by the waye. He caused two fat kyne also, and foure wethers to be slayne, & meates to be prepared for all his neyghbours & frendes, and Raguel charged Tobias to remayn with him two wekes. As for all the good that he had, he gaue Tobias the one halfe of it, & made this writing, that the halfe which remayned, shoulde fall vnto Tobias after their death.

¶ The Aungell goeth to Gabelus, at the desyre of Tobias, which deliuereth the lettre, and receyueth the money.

CAPI. IX.

THen Tobias called vnto him the aungell, whome he thought to haue bene a man, and sayd vnto hym. Brother Azarias, I pray the harken vnto my wordes: For I holde gyue my selfe to be thy seruaunte, I shall not deserue thy prouidence. Neuertheles I beseche the, that thou wylte take the beastes and the seruauntes, and go vnto Gabelus in Rages the citye of Medes, and deliuer hym his hande wrytynge, and receyue the money of hym, and praye hym to come to my maryage. For thou knowest thy selfe, that my father telleth the dayes: and yf I tary one day to longe, he will be sorye in his myndē. Nowe seest thou how earnestly Raguel hath required me, so that I can not say hym naye.

Then toke Raphael four of Raguels seruauntes & two camels, & went vnto Rages the citye of the Medes: and when he had founde Gabelus, he gaue him his hand wrytyng and receyued all the money. He told hym also of Tobias the son of Tobi, how all thynges had happened, and caused hym to come with him to the mariage. Now whē he came in to the house of Raguel, he fond Tobias sitting at the table: and he lepte vp, and they kyssed one an other, and Gabelus wepte, and prayse God and said: the blessing of the God of Israel haue thou, for thou art the sonne of a right vertuous and iust man, and of one that feareth God, and gyueth greate almes. And blessyng thine thy wife, and your elders that ye maye se your children and your children's children, vnto the thyrde and fourthe generacion, and that your sede maye be blessed of the God of Israell, whiche reygneth worlde without ende. And when they had sayde: Amen, they wente to the feaste, but with the feare of the Lorde, helde they the feast of the mariage.

¶ Tobias and his wyfe are sad for the tarryance of theyr sonne. Raguel sendeth agayne Tobias with his wyfe.

CAPI. X.

NOwe whyle yonge Tobias made long tarryinge by reason of the marryage his father was full of care and heuynesse, and thought what shoulde be the cause, that my sonne taryeth so longe? Or why shoulde he be kepte so long there? Peraduenture Gabelus is dede, and no man wyll gyue hym the money. Thus began he to be very sorowfull he Anna his wyfe with him, & began to wepe bothe togyther, bicause their sonne was not come agayne vnto them at the daye appoynted. As for his mother, she wept with discomfortable teares, and said: Wo is me, my sonne Oh what ayled vs to sende the awaye in to a straunge countrey, thou lyght of our eyes, & staffe of our age, & comfort of our lyfe, thou hope of our generacion? Seing all the thinges that we haue are onely of the, we sholde not haue sent the away from vs.

Tobi. v. d

Then Tobias comforted her, & said: hold thy tonge, and be not discomforted, our son is hole and sound: the man that we sent him withall is faythfull ynoughe. Neuertheles she might in no wyse be comforted: but dayly went out, loked about, and went about all the streetes, wherby she thought he sholde com agayne, that (if it were possible) she myght se him commyng a farre of.

But Raguel sayd vnto his son in law: O tary here, & I shall send a messenger vnto thy father Tobias, to tel hym that thou art in good helth. Tobias said vnto him: I am sure that my father and my mother count euery daye, and that theyr hertes are sory.

So when Raguel prayed Tobias with many wordes, and wolde in no wyse beare hym, he delyuered Sara vnto hym, and the halfe parte of all his good: in seruauntes, & handmaydens, in shepe in camels, & in kyne, and moche money, and so sente hym awaye from him with pear and ioye, and sayd: the holye aungell of the Lorde be with you in youre iourney, and bryng you forth safe and founde, that ye maye fynde all thynges in good case with youre elders, and that myne eyes maye se youre children afore I dye. So the elders embraced theyr doughter, kyssed her, and let her go, exhortyng her to honour her father & mother in lawe, to loue her husband, to rule well her housholde, to kepe her house in good order, and to shewe her selfe faithfull.

¶ Younge Tobias leuyng his wyfe and houshold in the myd waye, commeth before with the Aungel. The dreame of his mother, lokyng after her sonne. He is ioyfully receyued of his father and mother. Sara commeth seuen dayes after.

CAPI. XI.

AS they nowe were goynge homeward agayne, vpon the .xi. daye they came to Charra, whiche lyeth in the halfe waye towarde Ninive. And the aungel said: Brother Tobias thou knowest howe thou hast left thy father: therfore yf it please the we two wyll go before, and let the houshold with thy wyfe and the catell come softe and fayrly after vs. And when Tobias was content that they shold go before, Raphael sayd vnto hym: Take of the gall of the fish with the, for it shal be necessary. So Tobias took of the gall, and they wente theyr waye. But Anna the mother of Tobias sat dayly by the waye syde vpon the top of an hylle, frome whence she myght se farre about her. And whyle she was wayteynge there for his commyng, she loked afarre of, and anone she perceyued her sonne comming, and ran and told her husband, saying: Beholde, thy son commeth. And Raphael sayde vnto Tobias: As soone as thou commest in to the house, immediatly worshyp the Lord thy God, and gyue thankes vnto hym: then goo to thy father & kysse hym, and stryke his eyes ouer with the gal of the fysh, that thou hast brought with the. For be sure that his eyes shal strayt way be opened, and thy father shall se the lyght of heuen, and shal reioyce at the syght of the. Then the dogge that had bene with them in theyr iourneye, ranne before, and came as a messenger, and wagged with his tayle for gladnesse.

So the blynd father arose, & began to renne and bombled with his fete, & gaue a seruaunt his hande, ran to mete his son, receyued hym and kyssed hym and his wyfe, and began to wepe for ioye.

Now when they had worshiped & thanked God, they sat downe. Then tooke Tobias of the fishes gall, & anoynted his fathers eyes: and taryed half an houre, and then began the blemysh to go out of his eyes, like as it had ben the whyte skyn of an egge, which Tobias toke and drew frome his eyes, and immediatly he receyued his syght.

Then they praysed god, he and his wife, & al they that knew him. And Tobias said: O Lorde God of Israel, I gyue the prayse and thankes, for thou hast chastened me, & made me hole. And lo, nowe do I se my son Tobias. After seuen dayes came Sara his sonnes wyfe also hole and sound, with all her household and catell, with camels & moche money of his wynes, and with the money that he had receyued of Gabelus: and he told his father and mother al the benefytes, which God had doone for him, by the man that ledde hym. Achior also and Nabath Tobias fyllers cosins came, and were glad, and reioyced with hym, by reason of al the good, that God had shewed vnto hym. And so for the space of seuen dayes they made merye, and were syghe ioyfull euery chone.

¶ Younge Tobias reckeneth vp vnto his father the pleasures that the Aungell dyd vnto hym. He offreth vnto the Aungell halfe the goodes that he brought with hym.

CAPI. XII.

THen Tobias called his son vnto him, & sayd: what may we gyue this holy man that wil with the? Tobias answered his father, and sayd: Father what rewarde shal we gyue him? or what thyng can deserue his benefytes? He hath bene my guyde, and brought me safe agayne: he receyued the money fro Gabel, he caused me to get my wife he droue the euil spirit from her, he hath ben mocasyon of gladnesse to her father & mother, he delyuered me, that I was not deuoured of the fysh, he hath made the to se the lyght of heuē, yea we all haue receyued great good of hym. How shold we worthily deserue these thinges vnto him? But I praye the my father that thou wylt desyre him, yf happely he wil vouchsafe to take with hym the halfe of all the we haue brought.

So the father and the sonne called hym, toke him aside, and began to pray him, that he wolde be content to take in good worthe the halfe parte of all that he hadde brought. Then sayd he secretely vnto them: Prayse the God of heuen, and gyue thankes vnto hym, before al men lyuyng, for he hath shewed his mercy vnto vs. It is good for vs to hyde the kynges secrete, but to shew and to prayse the workes of God, it is an honourable thynge. Prayer is good with fastynge, and to gyue almes, is better then to hoorde vp treasures of golde, for almes delyuereth from deathe, clenseth synne, and causeth to fynde euerlastyng lyfe. But they that do synne & vnrighteousnesse, are the enemyes of theyr owne soules.

Wherfore I tell you the truth, & wyl hyde nothing from you. Whē thou prayedst with teares, and buryedst the dede, and leftest thy dyner, and hyddest the dede in thy house vpō the daye tyme, that thou myghtest bury them in the nyght, I offred thy prayer before the Lorde. And bycause thou wast accepted and beloued of God, it was necessary that tēptacion shulde trye the. And now hath the Lord sent me to heale the, & to deliuer Sara thy sōnes wyfe from the euyl spirite. For I am Raphael an aungel, one of the seuen that stand before God.

Whē they herd this, they were sore afraid and trembled, and fel downe vpon theyr faces vnto the ground. Then sayd the aungel: Feare be with you, feare not. Whe as I haue ben with you, it is the wyl of God, giue prayse and thankes vnto him.

You thought that I did eate and dryncke with you, but I vse meat that is inuisible, & drynke that can not be sene of men. Genesis xviii & xix. Iudith. xiii.

Now therfore is the tyme that I muste turne agayne vnto him that sent me: but be ye thankfull vnto God, and tel out all his wōderous workes.

And when he hadde spoken these wordes, he was taken awaye out of theyr syghte, so that they sawe him no more. Then fell they downe flatte vpon theyr faces by the space of thre houres, and praysed God: and when they rose vp, they tolde all his wonderous workes.

CAPI. XIII.

THen olde Tobias opened his mouthe & praysed the Lorde, and said: great art thou, o Lorde, for euermore, and thy kyngdome, worlde without ende: for thou scourgest and healest, thou leadest vnto hell, and bryngest out agayne, and there is none that may escape thyne handes. O gyue thankes vnto the Lorde, ye children of Israell, & prayse him in the syght of the Heathen. For among the Heathen whiche knowe him not hath he scatred you, to thintent that ye sholde shewe forth his maruelous workes: and cause the for to knowe, that there is none other God almyghtye but he. He hathe chastened vs for oure mysdedes, and for his owne mercy sake shall he saue vs. Deuter. xxviii. & 1. Reg. ii. b Sapie. xvi. b

Consider then how he hath delt with you, and praise him with feare and drede, and magnifye the euerlastynge kynge in your workes. I wyl praye him, euen in the land of my captiuitie, for he hath shewed his maiesty vnto a synfull people. Turne you therfore, O ye sinners, and do righteousnesse before God, and be ye sure that he wyll shewe his mercye vpon you. As for me and my soule, we wyll reioyce in God. O prayse the Lorde all ye his chosen, holde the dayes of gladnesse, and be thankfull vnto hym. O Jerusalem thou city of God, the Lorde hath punished the for the workes of thyne owne handes. O prayse the Lord in thy good thinges, and gyue thankes to the euerlastynge God, that he may builde vs his tabernacle agayne in the, that he may call agayne vnto the, all suche as be in captiuitie, and that thou mayste haue ioye for euermore. With a fayre light shalt thou shine and all the endes of the worlde shall honoure the. The people shall come vnto the fro far, they shall bryng gyftes, & worshyp the Lord in the, and thy land that they haue for a sanctuary, for she shall call vpon the great name in the. 2. Paralip. vi. Luke. ii. Esay. lx. Psalm. lxxi. Dan. ii. a

Cursed shall they be that despyse the, and all that blaspheme the, shall be condemned:

but blessed shal they be that buyld the vp. As for the, thou shalte reioyce in thy chyldren, for they all shall be blessed and gathered together vnto the Lord. Blessed are they all ꝑ lone the, ꝛ be glad of thy pear. Prayse thou the Lord, o my soule, for the Lorde our God hath delyuered his city Jerusalem frome all her troubles. I wyll counte my selfe happye yf my sede remayne to se the clerenesse of Jerusalem.

Tpota.xl.c The gates of Jerusalem shall be buylded with Saphyre, ꝛ Smaragde, and al the compasse of her walles with precious stones. All her stretes shal be paued with whyte marble stone, and in all her stretes shall Alleluya be song. Prayse be the Lord, which hath exalted her, that his kyngdome may be vpon her for euermore. Amen. And so Tobias made an ende of his talkynge.

¶ Tobias prophecyeth the destruction of Niniue. His sonne returneth to Raguel, after the decesse of his father and mother.

CAPI. XIIII.

Job.xlii.c Plal.cxxbii.a A Nd after that Tobias had gotten his syght agayne, he lyued. xlii. yeres, and sawe his nephewes chyldren. Nowe when he was an hundred and two yere olde, he dyed: and was buryed honourably in Niniue. For when he was sixe and fyftye yeres of age, he lost his syght of his eyes, and when he was thre score yere olde, he gat his syght agayne. The residue of his life led he in ioy, and increased well in the feare of God, and departed in pear.

B But in the houre of his death he called vnto hym his sonne Tobias, and seuen younge syrygoldes his sonnes chyldren, and sayde vnto them: The destruction of Niniue is at Nahū.iii.d. Sophon.ii.c hand, for ꝯ worde of the Lord can not fayle, and our brethren that are scatred oute of the lande of Israell, shall come thyther agayne. And the hole lande of it that hath ben waste, shal be filled, and the house of God that was brent in it, shal be buylded agayne, ꝛ al suche as feare God, shal returne thither: the heathen also shall forsake their ydols, ꝛ come to Jerusalem, ꝛ dwell there, and all the kinges of the erth shall be glad of her, and worshyp the Lorde God of Israel. Ecclus.xlix.d

And therfore my chyldren, hearr your father: Serue the Lorde in faythfulnesse, seke after his will, and do the thing that pleaseth hym. Commaund your children that they do right, gyue almes, be myndfull of God, and euer to be thankfull vnto hym in truthe and with all their power. Hearr me therfore my chyldren, ꝛ abyde not here: but in what day so euer ye haue buryed youre mother beside me, gette you frome hence. For I se, that the wickednesse of it shal bring it to destruction and ende. C Deutro.vi. Regum.ii. Josue.xxiii

After the deth of his mother, Tobias departed awaye from Niniue, with his wyfe ꝛ chyldren, and with his chylders chyldren, and came agayn to his father and mother in law and found them hole and in a good age, and toke the care of the. And he closed their eyes and was heyre vnto all Raguels goodes, ꝛ sawe the fyfth generacion and chylders chyldren. And when he was. xcix. yere of age, he dyed in the feare of the Lorde, and his kynsfolkes buryed hym: And all his posteritie continued in a good life, and holy conuersacion: so that they were loued and accepted bothe of God and men, and of al the people of the lande. (?) D

¶ The ende of the boke of Tobias.

THE BOKE OF IVDITH.

¶ The buyldynge of Egbathanis. The victory of Nabuchodonozor agaynst Arpharat. The messengers of Nabuchodonozor are dispysed.

CAPI. I.

ARpharat the kinge of ꝯ Medes, submoued many people vnto hys dominion, and builded a noble stronge citye, which he called Egbathanis. The walles of it made he of kre stone, four squared, seuentye cubytes hye, ꝛ thirty cubites brode. He made towres therupon of an hundred cubites hye. But vpō the. iiii. corners, euery syde was. xx. fote brode. He made the portes in the heygthe like as the towres. This kinge trusted in his mighty host, and in his glorious charettes. 1

So in the twelfth yere of his raygne, it happened that Nabuchodonozor the kynge of the Assyrians (which raygned in the great citye of Niniue) fought agaynste Arpharat, and ouercame him in the greate felde called Ragau beside Euphrates and Tigris, and Jadason, in the felde of Erioth the kynge of the Elimes. 2

Then was the kyngdome of Nabuchodonozor exalted, and his herte was lyfte vp: and he sent vnto all them that dwelte in Cilicia, in Damascus, in Libanus, and vnto the heathen that dwelte in Carmel, and Cedar, and to suche as dwelte in Galile in the greate felde of Esdrelon, to all theym that were in Samaria, and beyonde the water of Jordane vnto Jerusalem, and the hole lande of Jesse, vnto the mountaynes of Ethiopia. 3

Vnto all these dyd Nabuchodonozor the kynge of the Assyrians sende messengers. But they all with one consente wolde not agree vnto hym, and sente the messengers agayne emptye, and put them awaye without honoure. Then Nabuchodonozor the kynge toke indignacyon at all those landes, and sware by his trone, and by his kyngdome, that he wolde be auenged of all those countreyes. 4 ¶ Holofernes is sent of Nabuchodonozor, to subdue all the worlde. The preparation and pursute of Holofernes.

CAPI. II.

IN the thyrteneth yere of kynge Nabuchodonozor, vpon the. xxij. days of the fyrste moneth, it was deuised in the court of Nabuchodonozor the kyng of the Assyrians, that he wolde defend him selfe. So he called vnto hym all the elders, all his capitaynes, ꝛ men of warre, and shewed them his secrete counsell, and tolde them that his purpose was to bynge the hole earthe vnder his dominion. Nowe when they were all content with his saying: Nabuchodonozor the kynge called Holofernes the chyef capitayne of his warres, and sayd vnto him: goo forth warre forth agaynst all the kyngdomes of the worlde, and specially agaynste those that haue despysed my commaundement. Thou shalte spare no realme, all stronge cities shalte thou bring in subiection vnto me. Ezechiel.xxix

Then Holofernes called together all the capitaynes and rulers of all the power in Assyria, and mustred the souldyers vnto the hoste (lyke as the kynge commaunded hym) namely an hundred and twentye thousande fyghtynge men vpon fote, and twelue thousande archers vpon horsebacke, all his ordinaunce forte before with an innumerable multitude of camelles, so that the hoste was wel prouyded for with oxen and fatte catel, and that without nombre. He caused corn to be prepared oute of all Cilicia for his hoste. Moche golde and syluer also toke he oute of the kynges house. So he toke his iourney, he and al his host, with charettes, horsemē, and archers: of whom there were so many, that they couered the ground of the land, lyke the grashoppers. C

And when he was gone past the borders of the Assyryans, he came towarde the greate mountaynes of Luge, whiche lye vpon the left syde of Cilicia: and so he went vp into all theyr castels, and wanne euerye stronge hold. As for the welthy city of Melothus, he brake it downe, and spoyled all the children of Tharsis and the Ismaelites, whiche laye towarde the wyldernesse, and vpon the south side of the land of Chelon. He went ouer Euphrates also, and came in to Mesopotamia, and brake downe al the hye citeys that were there, from the brooke of Mambre, til a man come to the see: ꝛ he toke the borders in frō Cilicia, vnto the coostes of Japhet towarde the southe. He carryed awaye all the Madianites, and spoyled all theyr goodes: ꝛ who so euer withstode him, he slew them with the swerde. After this he wente downe in to the felde of Damascus in the tyme of haruestе and brente vp all the corne and all the trees, and caused the vynes to be cut downe. And the feare of hym fel vpon al them that dwelt in the earth. D ¶ Kynges become wyllyngly subiect to Holofernes. The tyrannye and cruelte of hym.

CAPI. III.

SO the kynges and prynces of all cityes, ꝛ landes sent their embassadours, namely they of Syria and Mesopotamia, Syria Sobal, and Lybia, and Cilicia, whiche came to Holofernes, and sayde: Lette thy wrathe ceasse toward vs: It is better for vs to serue the greate kynge Nabuchodonozor with oure lyues, and to be subiecte vnto the,

then that we sholde dye, and be slayne, & receyue greater hurte. All our cityes and possessyons, all mountaynes and hylles, all feldes great, and smal catel, shepe, gotes, hozses and camels, all our goodes and houssholdes, be in thy power, vnder thy subiectiō be it all togyther. We oure selues also and our childzen wyll be thyne owne, come vnto vs a peaceable Lozde, and vse our seruyce at thy pleasure.

Then came Holofernes downe frome the mountaynes with hozsemen and greate power, and conquered all stronge fenced cytyes, and all that dwelt in the land. And out of all cytyes he toke stronge men, and suche as were mete for the warre, to helpe hym.

Judith.v.a There came such a feare also vpon those coūtreys, that the indwellers of all the cytyes, the Pzynces and rulers, and the people togyther wente forthe to mete hym as he came, and receyued him honourably with garlandes and tozches, with daunces, tabzettes, & pypes.

Neuertheleſſe thoughe they dyd this, yet might they not swage his rigozous stomack but he destroyed their cityes, & hewed down their woddes. For Nabuchodonosoz y kinge had commaunded hym, that he shoulde roote oute all the goddes of the lande: to the intent that he onely might be called and taken for God of the nacions, whiche Holofernes with his power brought vnder him. So wet he thozowe Syria Sabal, and thozowe all Appamia, and all Mesopotamia, came to the Idumeans, in the lande of Gabas, and Scytopoly, and toke theyr cytyes, & remayned there thyrtye dayes, wherin he caused al the hole multytude of his hoste to be gathered togyther.

¶ Israel requyreth helpe of God, agaynste Holofernes. They fast and praye.

CAPI. IIII.

When the childzen of Israel that dwelt in Iurye herde this, they were sooze afrayd of him. There came suche tremblynge also and feare vpon them, that they sozowed he sholde do vnto the citye of Ierusalem and the temple of the Lozde, as he had done to other cityes and their temples. So they sent in to all Samaria round about vnto Jericho, toke in and occupied all the toppes of the mountaynes, made fast y townes with walles, and prepared cozne for them a gaynst the battayle.

Eliachim also the Pzeest wrote vnto all them that dwelte towarde Esdzelon (whiche lyeth ouer agaynst the great felde by Dothaim) and vnto all those by whome men myght haue passage vnto theym, that they should take in the wayes of the mountaynes wherby there myght be any waye and passage to Ierusalem, and that they sholde kepe diligent watche where any strayte way was betwyxte the mountaynes. And the childzen of Israel dyd, as Eliachim the Pzeest of the Lozde had commaunded theym. And all the people cried ernestly, and humbled their soules with fastynges and pzayers, they & theyr wyues. The Pzeestes put on heerye clothes, and layde the younge babes before the temple of the Lozde, and couered the aulter of y Lozde with an heerye clothe. And with one accozde they cryed vnto the Lozd God of Israel, that their childzen sholde not be gyuen in to a pzay, & their wiues in to a spoyle, that theyr cityes shoulde not be layde waste, and that their Sanctuary sholde not be vnhalowed, and so they to be a shame and rebuke vnto the heathen.

Then Eliachim the hye pzeest of y Lozde wente roūde abonte all Israell, and spake vnto them, sayinge: Be ye sure, y the Lozde wyll heare youre petycyons, yf ye contynue stedfast in fastinges and pzayers in y syghte of the Lozde. Remembze Moses the seruāt of the Lozde, whiche ouerthzew the Amalechites (that trusted in theyr myghte and power, in theyr hoste, in theyr shyldes, in theyr charettes and hozsemen) not with weapons, but with holy pzayers. Euen so shall all the enemyes of Israel be, yf ye contynue in this wozke that ye haue begon. So vpon this exhoztacyon, they continued in pzayer before the Lozde. In so moche that they whiche offered bzente sacrifyces vnto the Lozde, offered the offerynges vnto the Lozde, beinge arayed in heery clothes, and had asshes vpon theyr heades. And they all besought God from theyr hole herte, that he wolde vysyte his people of Israel.

¶ Holofernes is discontent with the Jewes. Achiozsheweth vnto Holofernes the maruels of God, done vnto the Jewes, for whiche thynge, the rulers vnder Holofernes were very angry with him.

CAPI. V.

And wozd came to Holofernes y prince of the warres of the Assyrians, that the childzen of Israell pzepared themselues to make resystaunce, and howe they had stopped the wayes betwyxte the mountaynes. Then was he exceedyng wrothe, and called all the princes of Moab, and the capitaynes of Ammon, and said vnto them: tell me, what people is this y kepeth in the mountaynes? oz whee maner of cityes are they? what is theyr power? oz what maner of hoste haue they, who is their capitayne? And why do they defyye vs (more then all those that dwell in the Easte) and come not forthe to mete vs, that they myght receyue vs w peace? Then Achiozthe capitayne of al the Ammonites, answered and sayde: Syr, yf it please the to heare me, I wyll tell the truthe before the concernyng this people that dwel in the mountaynes, and there shall no lye goo oute of my mouth.

This people is of the generacion of the Caldees, they dwelte fyrst in Mesopotamia, for they wold not folow the goddes of their fathers that were in the lande of the Chaldees, & so forsoke they the customes of theyr fore fathers (whiche had many goddes) and worshypped one God, that made heauen and earth: which also commaunded them y they should go from thence, and dwell at Haran. Now when there came a derth in to the hole lande, they went downe to Egypt, and there they dwelt foure hundzeth yeres, in the whiche they multiplyed so greatlye, that theyr host might not be nombzed. And when y king of Egypt oppzessed them, and subdued them in buylopng of his cytyes, with makynge of clayt and dzycke, they cryed vnto God theyr Lozde, which punyshed the hole lande of Egypt, with dyuers plages.

Now when the kynge of Egypt let them go theyr way, and the plage ceassed, and they folowed after them, to take them, & to bzyng theym agayne in to his seruyce, whyle they were flenge awaye, the God of heauen opened the see, so that the water stode fast, vpon bothe the sydes as a wall, and they wente thozow the bottom of the see: dyre shod. In the which place, when an innumerable people of y Egyptians folowed vpon them, they were so ouerwhelmed with the waters, that there remayned not one, to tell them that came after, how it happened. So when this people was passed thozowe the red see, they came vnto the wyldernes of the mount Syna, wher neuer man myght dwell afore, and where the sonne of man had neuer rested.

There were the bytter waters made swete for them, that they myght dzynke, and forty yeres had they meate from heauen. Where so euer they went (without dowe and grow, without bukler oz swerde) their God fought for them, and caused them to haue the victory. Yea no man was able to hurte this people, except it were so, that they departed vnfaythfullye frome the worshypppynge of the Lozde theyr God. But as oft as they worshypped any other beside theyr God, he gaue them ouer to be spoyled, to be slayne, and to be put to confusyon. Neuertheleſſe as oft as they were sorye for departyng from the worshypp of theyr God, the same God of heauen gaue them power and strength to withstand theyr enemyes.

Moreouer they slewe the kyng of the Canaanites, Iebusites, Pherezites, Hethites, Emites, and Amozites, and all the myghtye in Hesebon, and toke theyr landes and cytyes in possessyon: and so long as they synned not in the syght of theyr God, it wente well with them, for theyr God hateth vnrighteousnesse. For in the tymes past when they wente out of y waye, which God had gyuen them, that they shoulde walke in it, they were destroyed in dyuerse battayles of manye nacyons: and many of them were caryed awaye prysoners vnto a straūge countrey. But now lately they haue turned them selues agayne vnto the Lozde theyr God, and are come togyther agayne out of the countreys where they were scatred abzode: and thus haue they conquered these mountaynes, and dwell ther in: and as for Jerusalem where their Sanctuary is, they haue it agayn in possession.

And therfoze my Lozd, make bylygent inquysyon, yf this people haue done wyckednesse in the sight of theyr God, then let vs go vp agaynste them, for doubtlesse theyr God shall delyuer them into thy handes, and subdue them vnto thy power. But yf this people haue not displeased theyr God, we shall not be able to withstande them, for their God shall defend them, and so shall we be a shame to all the wozlde.

Judith.v.b Now when Achioz had spoken out these wozdes, all the pzynces of Holofernes were wzoth and thoughte to slay him, and sayde one to an other: what is he this, which dare say that the childzen of Israel are able to withstande Nabuchodonosoz the kynge and his host? where as they are an vnweaponed people, without strength oz vnderstandynge of the feates of warre? That Achioz therfoze may knowe that he hath dysceyued vs, we wyll go vp in to the mountaynes: and whe the myghtye men of them are taken, he also shall be stycke with the swerde, that all people may know, that Nabuchodonosoz is the God of the earth, and that there is none other without him.

¶ Achioz is committed into the handes of the Jewes by Holofernes. He is tied to a tree, but is loosed of the Jewes. The pzayer of the people. Achioz is comforted of the Jewes.

CAPI. VI.

So when they had lefte of speakyng, Holofernes toke sore indignacion, and sayd vnto Achioz. For so moch as thou haste prophecyed vnto vs, sayinge: that the people of Israell shall be defended of theyr God, I wyll shewe the, that there is no God but Judith.b.c Nabuchodonosoz. Yea when we slee them al as one man, thou also shalte perysh with the thozow the swerde of the Assyryans, and all Israel shall be destroyed with the, and then shalt thou fele, that Nabuchodonosoz is the Lozd of the hole earth. Then shal the swerd of my knyghthod go thozow thy sydes, and thou shalte fall downe stycke amonge the wounded of Israel, and shalte not come to thy selfe agayne, but be vtterly destroyed vnto them.

But yf thou thynckest thy prophecy to be true, why dost thou then chaūge thy colour? why art thou afrayed? Thynkest thou that my wordes are not able to be performed? But that thou mayst know, that thou shalte fele these thynges with them, beholde, from this houer forthe wyll I sende the vnto yonder people, that when the punishment of my swerde (whiche they haue worthelye deserued) falleth vpon them, thou mayste be punished with them.

So Holofernes cōmaunded his seruauntes to take Achioz, and to cary hym vnto Bethulia, thulia, and to delyuer hym into the handes of the chyldren of Israel. Then Holofernes seruauntes toke him, and wente thoroweout the playne tribe. But when they drewe nye unto the mountaynes, the fynge casters came out agaynst them. Neuertheleſſe they gat them away by the ſyde of the mountayne, & beſide Achior hande and fott to a tree, and ſo leſte hym bound with withyes, and turned agayn vnto theyr Lorde.

Notwithſtandynge the chyldren of Israel went downe from Bethulia, came vnto him, looſed hym, broughte hym in to Bethulia, ſet hym in the myddeſt of the people, & aſked hym what the matter was, that the Aſſyrians had left hym bounde.

Oſias the ſonne of Micha, of the tribe of Symeon, and Chatmin (which is alſo called Gothoniel) were the principall rulers at the ſame tyme. Nowe when Achior ſtode in the myddeſt of the Senatours, and before them al he tolde them, what anſwere he gaue Holofernes, & the thyng that he aſked hym, and how Holofernes people wolde haue ſlayne hym for ſo ſaying: and how Holofernes hym ſelfe was wrath, and commaunded hym for the ſame cauſe to be delyuered vnto the Iſraelites: that when he ouercame the chyldren of Israel, he myght commaunde Achior alſo to be put to death with dyuers tormentes, becauſe he ſayd: the God of heauen is theyr defender. And when Achior had playnly tolde out al theſe thynges, al the people fel downe vpon theyr faces, praiſyng the Lorde, and powred out theyr prayers togyther vnto ℣ Lord, with a generall complaynt and weppyng, and ſayde: O Lorde of heauen and of earthe, beholde theyr pryde, and loke vpon our lowlyneſſe, and conſyder how it ſtandeth with thy ſaynctes, and make it to be knowen that thou forſakeſt not thoſe, which holde them ſtyll by the, and how that thou bryngeſt them lowe, that preſume of them ſelues, and make theyr boaſt in theyr owne ſtrength.

So when the weppynge and prayer of the people (whiche they had made the hole daye longe) was ended, they comforted Achior, ſayinge: The God of our fathers, whoſe power and ſtrength thou haſt prayſed, ſhall ſo rewarde the, that thou ſhalte rather ſe theyr deſtruction. When the Lorde our God then ſhall grue his ſeruauntes this ſyberte, God be alſo with the amonges vs: ſo that yf it pleaſe the, thou with thyne mayeſt dwell with vs.

Now when Oſias had ended the counſell, he toke him into his houſe, and made a great ſupper, called the elders to it, and ſo they refreſhed them ſelues after the faſtynge. And afterwarde was all the people called togyther, which made theyr prayers all the nyght longe in the congregacyon, and beſought ℣ God of Israel for helpe.

¶ Bethulias is beſieged of Holofernes. The people requyreth helpe at God. They of Bethulia wolde grue ouer the cytye for want of water. The prayer of the people with teares and lamentation.

CAPI. VII.

THe nexte day, Holofernes commaundeth his hoſte, to go vp agaynſt Bethulia. There were an. C. and .xx. thouſande fyghtynge men on fote, and two and twentye thouſande horſmen, beſyde the preparing of them that were wonne: and came to the on euery ſide out of the countreyes and cyties whiche he had taken. All theſe prepared them ſelues vnto the battayle agaynſt the Iſraelytes, and came on by the hyll ſyde, vnto the coppe that loketh ouer agaynſt Dothaim, from the place whiche is called Belma, vnto Chelmon that lyeth towarde Eſdrelon.

Now when the chyldren of Israel ſawe ſo great a multytude of the Aſſyrians, they fel downe flat vpon the ground, ſtrawed aſhes vpon theyr heades, and prayed with one accorde, that the God of Israel wolde ſheme his mercy vpon his people. And ſo they toke theyr weapons, and ſat betwyxte the mountaynes in the narowe place, & kept the ware daye and nyght.

But whyle Holofernes was goynge aboute, he founde the water ſpynge, whiche from the South ſyde was conueyed into ℣ cytye by a condyte: this commaunded he to be directe an other way, and to cut theyr condyte in ſundre. There were welles alſo not farre from the walles, whiche they vſed ſecretlye, more for pleaſure then for neceſſytye.

Then went the Ammonites and ℣ Moabytes vnto Holofernes, and ſayde: The chyldren of Israell truſte neyther in ſpeare nor arowe, but haue taken in, and kepe the mountaynes and hylles. That thou mayſte ouercome them, therefore without the ſtrikyng of any battayle, ſet mē to kepe the welles, that they drawe no water out of them: ſo ſhalte thou deſtroy them without ſwerde, or at the leaſte they ſhall be ſo feble, that they muſte be fayne to grue ouer the cytye, whiche they thynke not able to be wonne, for ſo moche as it ſtyeth in the mountaynes.

Theſe wordes pleaſed Holofernes wel, & all his men of warre, and he let and .C. men at euery well rounde about. And when this watch had endured twentye dayes, the Ceſternes and all that had water, fayled them that dwelte in the cytye of Bethulia, ſo that in the hole cyty they had not dronke ynough for one daye, for the people had water grue them dayly in a meaſure.

Then came the men and women, younge perſounes and chyldren all vnto Oſias, and ſayde all with one voyce: God be iudge betwyxte vs and the, for thou haſte dealt cruyl with vs: thou wolde not ſpeake peaceably with the kyng of the Aſſirians, therfore hath God ſolde vs in theyr handes, and there is no man to help vs, where as we are broughte downe before theyr eyes in thyrſt & greate deſtruction.

Therefore gather now togyther al the people that be in the cytye, that we may al yelde ours

ours ſelues wyllyngly vnto the people of Holofernes: for better it is that we be captiue and prayſe the Lorde with oure lyues, then to be ſlayne and peryſhe, and to be laughed to ſcorne and ſhamed of euery man, when we & oure wyues and chyldren dye before oure eyes. We take heauen and earth this daye to recorde, and the God of our fathers (whiche punyſheth vs accordynge to the deſeruynge of oure ſynnes) and grue you warnynge, that ye gyue vp the cytye nowe in to the power of Holofernes hoſte, that oure ende maye be ſhorte with the ſwerde, whiche ells ſhall endure longe, for wante of water and for thyrſte.

When they had ſpoken out theſe wordes, there was a great weppynge and howlyng in the hole congregacyon, and that of euerye man, and they cryed all with one voyce, ſaying: we haue ſynned with oure fathers, we haue done amyſſe, we haue dealte wyckedly. Thou that art gracyous, haue mercy vpon vs, punyſhe oure vnryghtouſneſſe with thyne owne ſcourge, and grue not thoſe other that knowledge the, vnto a people which knowe not the, leſt they ſaye amonges the Heythen: where is theyr God.

And when they were ſo werye with thys wepynge and weppynge, that they had the theyr tongs: Oſyas ſtode vp with watrye eyes, and ſayde: O take good hertes vnto you, (deare brethren) and be of good cheare, and let vs waite yet theſe fyue dayes for mercy of the Lorde: peraduenture he ſhall cut awaye his indignacyon, and grue glorye vnto his name. But yf he helpe vs not when theſe fyue dayes are paſte, we ſhall do as ye haue ſayde.

¶ Of the vertuous woman Judith, which reproueth ℣ auncyentes becauſe they tempted the Lorde. She alſo moueth them to entreatye and herten the people, and ſheweth her counſell agaynſt the enemyes of the Iewes.

CAPI. VIII.

AND it happened when theſe wordes came to the eares of Judith, a wyddowe, whiche was the doughter of Merary, the ſonne of Idox, the ſonne of Joſeph, the ſonne of Oſiah, the ſonne of Elai, the ſonne of Jammor, the ſonne of Jedeon, the ſonne of Raphoim, the ſonne of Achitob, the ſon of Melchia, ℣ ſonne Suam, the ſon of Nathania, the ſonne of Salachiel, the ſon of Symeon, the ſonne of Ruben. And her huſbande was called Manaſſes, whiche dyed in the dayes of the barly hervell.

For whyle he was byndynge the ſheues togyther in the felde, the heate came vpō his hed, and he dyed at Bethulia his cyty, and there was he buried beſyde his fathers. Now was Judith his deſolate widdow. iii. yeres and ſyx monethes. And in the hyer partes of her houſe, ſhe made her ſelfe a pauy chambre, where ſhe dwelte, beynge cloſed in with her maydens. She ware a ſmock of heer, and faſted al the dayes of her lyfe, except the Sabbathes, and newe moones and the ſolemne dayes that the people of Israell kepte. She was a beery fayre and deuoutfull perſon. Her huſbande alſo had left her great ryches, & plenteous houſholde, greate vnmouable poſſeſſions and many catell. This Judith was a woman of a verye good reporte with euery one, for ſhe feared the Lorde greatlye, and there was no body that ſpake an euyl worde of her.

When this Judith herde, how Oſias had promyſed the people, that after the fyfth daye he wolde grue vp the cytye vnto the Aſſirians ſhe ſet for the elders Chabri and Charmin and when they came to her ſhe ſayde: what thynge is this, wherin Oſias hath conſented that yt God helpe not within fyue dayes, he wyll grue ouer the cytye to the Aſſirians? What are ye, that ye tempt the Lorde? This deuice optayneth no mercy of God, but prouoketh him vnto wrath & diſpleaſure. Wyll ye ſet the mercye of the Lorde a tyme and appoynte him a daye after youre wyll?

Neuertheleſſe for ſo moch as the Lorde is patyent, let vs rather amende oure faultes, pourynge oute teares, and beſechyng hym of grace. For God threatneth not as a mā, neither wyll he be prouoked vnto wrath as the chyldren of men. And therefore let vs hertely fal downe before him, and ſerue him with a meke ſpyryte, and with weppynge eyes ſaye vnto the Lorde, that he deale with vs accordynge to his owne wyl and mercye: that like as our hertes is now bered, and brought low thorow the pryde of them, it may ſo be confirmed thorow his graceiu ſo moch as we ſo low not the ſynnes of oure fathers, whiche forſoke their God, and worſhypped other goddes: for the which ſynne they peryſhed with the ſwerde: were ſpoyled and broughte to ſhame of all theyr ennemyes. As for vs, we knowe none other God but onelye hym, for whoſe comforte let vs tarye with meknes. He ſhall requyre and make inquyſycion for oure bloude, from the vexations of our ennemyes: he ſhall bynge downe all the Heythē that ryſe vp agaynſt vs, and put them to dyſhonour, euen the Lorde our God.

Therfore deare brethren, ſeynge ye are ℣ honourable and elders in the people of God, vnto whom all the people haue reſpect, and vpon whome the life of the people ſtandeth, lyfte vp them hertes with oure exhortacion that they may cal to remēbraūce, how our fathers alſo in tymes paſt were temted, that they myght be proued, yf they worſhypped their God a right. They ought to remēbre, howe our father Abraham beynge temted, and tryed thorowe many tribulations, was founde a louer and frende of God. So was Iſaac, ſo was Jacob, ſo was Moſes, and all they that pleaſed God beynge tryed thorow many troubles, were found ſtedfaſt in faith. Agayne they that receyued not their temptacions with the feare of God, but put them ſelues forth with impacience & murmuringe agaynſt against God, perysshed of the destroyer, and were slayne of serpentes. And therfore shuld not we undertake to be auenged, for ¶ thyng that is done vnto vs: but to consydre, that al their punyshmentes are farre lesse then oure synnes and mysdedes. Wherupon also that this correction commeth vnto vs (as to the seruauntes of God) for amendment, & not for our destruction.

L Then sayd Ozias and the elders vnto Judyth: All that thou speakest, is true, and no man can reprehende thy wordes. Praye thou for vs now therfore vnto God, for thou art an holy woman, and feareth God. And Judyth sayd vnto them: Seinge ye knowe, that my wordes are of God, then proue my counsell and deuice, yf it be of God: and beseche God, that he wyll brynge my counsell to good ende.

Thus haue I deuysed: Ye shall stande this nyght before the porte, and I wyll go forthe with Abra my mayden: Pray ye therfore vnto God, that he wyll graciously remembre his people of Israel, within fyue dayes, as ye haue sayde. As for the thynge that I go in hande withall, aske ye no questyons of it, tyl I open it vnto you my self: do ye nothyng els but praye vnto the Lorde your God for me. Then Ozias the prynce of the people of Juda sayde vnto her: Go thy waye in peax, the Lorde be with the, that we maye be auenged of our enemyes. And so they wente from her agayne.

¶ The prayer of Judith for the victory.

CAPI. IX.

A NOw when they were gone their waye, Judith went in to her oratory, put on hearye smocke, strowed ashes vpon her herd, fell downe before the Lorde, and cryed vnto him, sayng: O Lorde God of my father Symeon, whiche gauest him a swerde for a defence agaynst that enemyes, that vsed violence and wylfulnesse, and that rauyshed the virgyn, and put her to dishonestye. Thou that gauest their wyues in to a praye, and their doughters in to captyuitye, & all their pray for a spoyle vnto thy seruauntes, which bare a zeale vnto the, helpe me wyddowe, O Lorde my God, I beseche the. For thou hast done all thynges from the begynnynge, and and loke what thou hast taken in hand & deuysed, it came euer to passe. For al thy wayes are prepared, and thy iudgementes are done in thy euerlastynge foreknowledge. O loke now vpon the armyes of the Assyrians, lyke as it was thy pleasure somtyme to loke vpō the hoaste of the Egyptians, when they bepynge wrapened, persecuted thy seruauntes, and put their trust in their charrettes horsemen, and in the multitude of their men of warre. But thou lokedst vpon their hoaste rallynge a thycke darknes before them: and when they came in to the depe, the waters

Euen so Lorde let it go with thyse, that trust in ¶ power and multitude of their men of warre, in their charrettes, arowes and speres, and knowe not, that thou onely art our God, whiche destroyest warres from the beginnynge, and that thou arte the Lorde. O lyfte vp thyne arme now lyke as euer from the beginning, and in thy power bryng their power to nought, cause they myght to fall in thy wrath.

¶ Judith decketh her self to go to Holofernes. The blessynge that the Elders gaue Judith. Holofernes is in loue with Judith.

CAPI. X.

ANd when she had left of cryinge vnto the Lorde, she rose vp from the place, where she had lyen flat before ¶ Lord and called her mayde, went downe in to her house, layde the heery cloth from her, put al Judyth the garmentes of her widdowhode, washed her body, anointed her self w precious thiges of swete sauour, bryded & platted her heer, set an hoode vpon her heade, and put on such apparel as belongeth vnto gladnes, slippers vpon her fete, armelettes, spanges, earynges fynger rynges, and decked her self with al her best atyre.

The Lorde gaue her also a specyall beautye and fayrenesse (for all this deckynge of her selfe was not done for any voluptuousnesse, and pleasure of the flesh, but of a right discreacion & vertue, therfore dyd the Lorde increase her beauty) so that she was exceding amiable and wel fauoured in al mens eyes.

She gaue her mayde also a bottel of wine

a pot

apot with oyle, potage, cake bred and chese, and went her waye.

Nowe when she came to the porte of the cyte, she founde Ozias and the elders of the cytie wayting there. Which when they sawe her, they were astonyed, and meruyled greatly at her dewty, neuertheles they asked no questyon at her, but let her go, sayenge: The God of oure fathers gyue the his grace, and with his power performe all the deuyce of thy herte: that Jerusalem maye reioce ouer the, and that thy name maye be in the nombre of the holye and ryghteous. And all they that were there, sayd with one voyce: so be it, so be it. Judith made her prayer vnto the Lorde, and went out at the porte, she and her mayde.

And as she was goinge downe the mountayne, it happened that about the synge of the daye, the spyes of the Assirians met with her, and toke her, sayenge: whence commest thou? Or whither goest thou? She answered: I am a doughter of the Hebrues, and am fled from them, for I knowe, that they shall be geuen vnto you to be spoyled: bycause they thought scorne to yelde vp selues vnto you, that they myght fynde mercy in youre syght. Therfore haue I deuysed by my selfe after this maner: I wyll go before the prynce Holofernes, and tell hym all their secretes, and wyll shew him, how he maye come by them, and wynne them, so that not one man of his holl shall perysh.

And when these men had herde her wordes, and considred her fayre face, they were astonyed (for they wondred at her excellent bewtye) and sayd vnto her: Thou hast saued thy lyfe by fyndynge oute this deuyce, that thou woldest come downe to our Lorde: and be thou sure, that when thou commest vnto hym, he shall intreate the well, & thou shalte please him at the hert. So they brought her vnto Holofernes pauylion, and colde hym of her. Now when she came in before hym, immediatlye he was ouercome and taken with her bewtye. Then sayd his seruauntes: who wolde despyse the people of the Jewes, that haue so fayre women? Shoold we not by reason fyght agaynst them for their? So when Judith saw Holofernes syttyng in a canapy, that was wrought of purple, sylke, gold, smaragde and precyous stones, she loked fast vpō hym, and fell downe vpon the earthe. And Holofernes seruauntes toke her vp agayne, at their Lordes commaundement.

¶ Holofernes requyreth of Judith the cause of her commynge, whiche gyueth hym a lubryl answere.

CAPI. XI.

THen sayd Holofernes vnto her: Be of good chere, and feare not in thyne hert, for I neuer hurte man, that wold serue Nabuchodonozor the kynge. As for thy people, yf they had not despyted me, I shulde not haue lyft vp a spere agaynst them. But tell me now what is the cause that thou art departed frome them, and wherfore arte thou come vnto vs.

And Judith sayde vnto hym: Hyr, vnderstande the wordes of thy handmayden: for yf thou wylt do after the wordes of thy hād mayden, the Lorde shall brynge thy matter to a prosperous effecte. As truely as Nabuchodonozor a Lorde of the land lyueth, & as truly as his power lyueth, whiche is in the to the punyshment of all men that go wrōg all men shal not onely be subdued vnto him thorow the, but al the beestes also of ¶ feld. For all people speake of thy prudente actyuitie, and it hath euer bene reported, howe thou onely art good and mygtye in all his kyngdome, and thy discrecion is commended in all landes.

The thynge is manyfest also, that Achior spake, and it is wel knowen what thou commaūdedst to do vnto him. for this is playne and of a suertye, that oure God is so wroth with vs (by the reason of oure synnes) that he hathe shewed by his prophetes vnto the people, how that for their synnes he wyl deliuer them ouer vnto the ennemye. And for so moch as the children of Israel know that they haue so displeased their God, they are sore afrayde of the.

Judyth.v.d

They suffre greate honger also, and for want of water, they are dedd nowe in a maner. Wherfore they are appoynted to slaye all their catell, that they maye drynche the bloude of them: and are purposed to spende al the holy ornamentes of their God (which he hath forbydden them to touch) for corne, wyne and oyle. Seynge nowe that they do these thynges, it is a playne tale, that they must nedes be destroyed. Which when I thy handmayden perceyued, I fled frome them, and the Lord hath sēt me vnto the, to shewe the these thynges. For I thy handmayden worshyp God, euen here nowe beside the, and thy handmayden shall go forthe, and I wyll make my prayer vnto God, and he shall tell me, when he wyll reuenge their synne: then shall I come and shewe the and brynge the thorowe the myddest of Jerusalē so that thou shalt haue al ¶ people of Israel as the shepe without a shepeherde, there shal not so moch as one dog barcke agaynst the. for these thynges are shewed me by thy prouydence of God: and for so moche as God is displeased with them, he hath sente me to tell the the same.

These wordes pleased Holofernes and al his seruauntes, which marueyled at the wisdome of her, and sayd one to an other: there is not suche a woman vpon earthe, in beauty and discrecion of wordes. And Holofernes sayde vnto her: God hath done well, that he hath sēt the hither before thy people, that thou mayste gyue them into our handes.

And for so moche as thy promyse is good, yf thy God performe it, vnto me, he shalbe my God also, and thou shalte be excellente and greate in the courte of Nabuchodonosor, & thy name shall be spoken of in all the lande.

¶ Holofernes

¶ Holofernes commaundeth that Judith be well intreated. She desyreth leuenge to go out in the nyght season to praye, and obtayneth it. Vagao is sent vnto her, to moue her to come to Holofernes to a banket, and she commeth. Holofernes is dronken.

CAPI. XII.

Then cõmaunded he her to go in, where his treasure laye, and charged that she shoulde haue her dwellynge there, and appoynted what shoulde be geuen her from his table. Judith answered hym, and sayde: As for the meate that thou hast commaũded to geue me, I maye not eat of it as now (lest I displease my God) but will eate of suche as I haue brought with me. Then sayd Holofernes vnto her: If these thynges ꝑ thou hast brought with the fayle, what wil we do vnto the? And Judith sayd: As truly as thou lyuest my Lorde, thy handemayde shall not spende all this, tyll God hathe wrought to passe in my yande, the thynges that I haue deuysed.

B So his seruauntes brought her in to the tent, where as he had appoynted. And as she was goynge in, she desyred that she myghte haue leaue to go forthe by nyght and before daye, to her prayer and to make intercession vnto the Lorde. Then commaũded Holofernes his chamberlaynes, that she shoulde go out and in at her pleasure to praye vnto God chose thre dayes.

And so in the night season she went forth in to the valley of Bethulia, and washed her selfe in the well water. Then went she vp, & besought the Lorde God of Israel, that he wolde prospere her waye, for ꝑ deliuerance of his people. And so she went in, and remained clene in her tent, tyll she toke her meate in the euenynge.

C Upon the fourth daye it happened, that Holofernes made a coūpe supper vnto his seruauntes, and sayd vnto Vagao his chamberlayne: Go thy waye, and entyse this Hebruelle, that she maye be wyllynge to consent to kepe cõpany with me. For it were a shame vnto all the Assyrians, that a woman shoulde so laugh a man to scorne, that she were come from him vntayne with.

Then went Vagao vnto Judith, and sayd Let not ꝑ good bought be afrayed, to come into my Lorde, that she maye be honoured before hym, that she maye eate and dyncke wyne, and be merye with him. Vnto whom Judith answered: Who am I, that I shuld saye my lorde naye? what so euer is good before his eyes, I shall do it: and loke what is his pleasure, that shall I thyncke well done, as longe as I lyue.

D So she rose vp, and decked her selfe with her apparell, and went in, and stode before hym. And Holofernes herte was thorowlye stycken, so ꝑ he burnt in desyre towarde her. And Holofernes sayde to her: dryncke nowe and syt downe, and be merye, for thou haste founde fauoure before me. Then sayde Judith: Syr, I wyll dyncke, for my wyndes is meryer to daye, then euer it was in all my lyfe. And she toke and ate and dranke before him the thynges that her maydẽ had prepared for her. And Holofernes was merye in her, and dranck more wyne, then euer he dyd afore in his lyfe.

¶ Holofernes slepeth for very dronckennes, and Judith cutteth of his heed, & goeth therwith to her owne people: of whom she is receiued with reyse. They geue thankes vnto God, for their deliuerance. Judith speaketh vnto Achior, whichemar uayleth at her feate done to Holofernes.

CAPI. XIII.

Nowe when it was late in the nyghte his seruauntes made haste vnto their lodgynge. And Vagao shut the chãbre dores, and went his waye, for they were all ouerladen with wyne. So was Judith alone in the chambre. As for Holofernes he lay vpon the bed all dronckẽ, & of very dronkennes fell a slepe.

Then commaũded Judith her mayde, to stand with without before the doze and to wayt. And Judith stode before the bed, makyng her prayer with teares, and moued her lyppes secretlye, and sayde: Strengthen me O Lorde God of Israel, and haue respect vnto the worckes of my handes in this houre, that thou mayste set vp thy cytye of Jerusalẽ lyke as thou hast promysed: O graunt that by the I may performe the thynge, whiche I haue deuised thorow ꝑ beleue that I haue in the.

And when she had spoken this, she went to the bedsteade, and loosed the swerde that hanged vpon it, and drewe it out. Then toke she holde of the heery lockes of his heade, & sayde: Strengthen me O Lord God in this houre: & with that, she gaue hym two strokes vpon the necke, and smote of his heade. Then take she the canapy awaye, and rolled the deade bodye aside. Immedyatly she gat her forth, and deliuered the heade of Holofernes vnto her mayden, and bad her put it in her wallet.

And so these two went forth togyther after theyr custome, as thoughe they wolde praye, and so passed by the hoost, and came thorowe the valley vnto the porte of the cyty. And Judith cryed a farre of vnto ꝑ watchmen vpon the walles: Open the gates (sayd she) for God is with vs, which hath shewed his power in Israel. And when they hearde her voyce, they called the elders of the cytye togyther. And they came al to mette her litle and greate, yonge and olde, for they thought not that she shulde haue come so soone. So they lyghted candels, and gathered about her euerychone: but she went vp into an hye place and caused sylence to be proclaymed.

When euery man nowe helde his tonge, Judith sayde: O prayse the Lord our God, for he hath not despysed, nor forsaken them, that put their trust in hym, & in me his handmaiden he hath performed his mercy, which he promised vnto the house of Israel: yea in my hande this same night hathe he slayne the enemy of his people.

And with that she toke forthe the heed of Holofernes out of the wallet, and shewed it them, saying: Beholde the heed of Holofernes the capiteyn of the Assirians, and this is the canapy wherin he lay in his dronkennes: where the Lord our God hath slayne him by the hand of a woman.

But as truly as the Lord liueth his aungel hath kept me, going thyther, remainig there, and comming hither agayn from thẽce. And the Lord hath not suffred me his handmaide to be defiled, but without any filthynesse of syn hath he brought me agayn vnto you, and that with gret victory, so that I am escaped and ye deliuered. O geue thankes vnto hym euerychone, for he is gracious, and his mercy endureth for euer.

So they prayed the Lorde all togyther, & gaue thankes vnto him. And to her they said: The Lord hath blessed the in his power, for thorow the he hath brought oure enemyes to nought. And Ozias the chiefe ruler of ꝑ people of Israel, sayd vnto her: Blessed art ꝑ of the Lorde the hyghe God, aboue all women vpon earth.

Blessed be the Lorde, the maker of heuen & erth, which hath guyded the aright, to wound and to smyte of the heed of the capitayne of our enemyes. For this day he hath made thy name so honourable, that thy prayse shal neuer come out of the mouth of me, which shal alway remembre the power of the Lord, seing thou hast not spared thine owne selfe, but put the in ieopardy, considringe the anguysh and trouble of thy people, and so hast holpen their fal before God our Lorde. And all the people said: Amen, Amen.

E Achior also was called, and he came. The sayd Judith vnto him: The God of Israell vnto whom thou gauest witnesse, ꝑ he wolde be auenged of his enemyes, euen he hath this night thorow my hand smitten of the heed of all thy vnfaythfull. And that ꝑ mayst se that it is so, behold this is the heed of Holofernes which in his presumptuous pryde, despised ꝑ God of the people of Israel, & threatned the with deathe destruction, saying: whẽ the people of Israel is take, I shal cause ꝑ also to be stricke with the swerd. When Achior saw Holofernes heed he fell downe vpon his face to the ground for very anguish and feare, so that he swouned withall. But after ꝑ he was come agayn to him selfe, he fel downe before her, & prayed her saying: Blessed art thou of thy God in all the tabernacles of Jacob, for all the people that hear of thy name, shal prayse thy God of Israel because of the.

¶ The counsell of Judith. Achior beyng an heathen man, turneth to God. The Assyrians are afrayed of the Jewes.

CAPI. XIIII.

Judith sayd vnto al the people: Brethren hear me. Stick vp this heed vpon our walles, and when the sunne ariseth, take euery man his weapon, and fal out violently: not as though ye wold go before them, but to renne vpon them with violence. When the spies in the tentes se this, they shall of necessitie be cõpelled to flie backward, and to raise vp their capiteyn to the batayle. So when their capitaynes come in to Holofernes pauylion, and fynde the deed bodye wrapped in the bloude, fearfulnes shal fall vpon them, and when ye perceyue that they flie, folowe them without all care, for God shal deliuer them vnto you to be destroyed.

Then Achior seinge the power of God, whiche he had shewed vnto the people of Israel, fell of from his heathenish byleue, and put his trust in God, and let him selfe be circumcised: and so was he nombred among ꝑ people of Israel, he and all his posteritie vnto this daye.

Now as soone as it was daye, they stickte vp Holofernes heed vpon the walles, and euery man toke his weapon, and so they went oute with an horrible crye. When the spyes sawe that, they ranne vnto Holofernes tent. And they that were within the tente, came before his chambre, and made a greate rusching to wake him vp, bicause they thoughte with the noyse to haue rayled hym. For there durst not one of the Assirians knocke, go in, or open.

But when the Capytaynes and Prynces and all the chyefe in the kynge of the Assyrians hoste came togyther, they sayde vnto the chamberlaynes: Goo your waye in, and wake hym vp, for the myce are crepte out of theyr holes, and dare prouoke vs vnto batayle. Ecclesiasti. 46

Then wente Vagao in to his chamber, stode before the bedde, and clapped with his handes, for he thought he had ben slepyng w Judith.

But when he had hardened perfectly with his eares and could per ceyue no stering, he went nere to the bed, and lyft it vp, and then sawe he the deed bodye of Holofernes lyeng there without a heed, welteryd in his bloude, vpon the earthe. Then cryed he with loude voyce, and with weppynge rente his clothes, and went in to Judiths tent, and founde her not: And so he lepte out vnto the people and sayd one woman of the Jewes hath brought all Nabuchodonosors people to shame. For lo, Holofernes lieth vpon the ground, & hath no heed.

When the chiefe of the Assirians hoste herd that, they rente their clothes, and there fel an intollerable feare and tremblyng vpon the, so that theyr myndes were sore afrayd. And there was an exceding great crye in the hole hoste.

¶ The flyght of the Assyrians. The pursute of Israel after them. Israel recommeth eyche, by the spories of the Assyrians. Judith is prayed of Joacim and of the people.

CAPI. XV.

NOw when all the hoste herde that Holofernes was heded, they? mynde and counsell fell from theym: and suche a feare came vpon them, that they vndertoke to defende them selues by fleing away: one spake not to an other, but hāged downe their heades, left all behinde them, and made haste to escape frome the Hebrues: for they herde that they were hastynge to come after with they? weapōs, and so they fled by the ways of the feldes, and thorow all the fotpathes of the dales.

And when the childzen of Israel sawe that they fled, they folowed vpon them, and wēt downe with trompettes, blowyng and makyng a great crye after them: As for the Assirians they had no ordre, and kept not them selues together, but fled their waye. Neuertheleste the childzen of Israel fell vpon them with one company and ordre, and discomfeted as many as they myghte get. And Ozias sent wellengers vnto all the cityes and countreys of Israel.

B So all the regions and euery city sent out their best men after them in harnelle, & smote them with the swerd, tyl they came to the vttermost part of their borders. And ? other ? were in Bethulia came in to the tentes of the Assirians, and toke all that they which were fled had left behynd them, and so they found great good. And they that came agayn to Bethulia from the battayle, toke with thē such thinges as had ben theirs: there was no nōbre of the catell, and of all costlye iewels, so that from the lowest to the hyest, they were all made ryche of the spoyles of them. And Joachim the hye preest at Jerusalem came to Bethulia with al the elders, that they might se Judith.

Nowe when the came out vnto them, they began all to prayse her with one voyce, sayinge: thou worshyp of the city of Jerusalem thou ioye of Israel, thou honour of our people, thou hast doone manly, and thy herte is comforted, bycause thou hast loued clenlynesse and chastitie, and hast knowen no man but thyne owne husband: therfore hath the hand of the Lorde comforted the, and blessed shalt thou be for euer. And al people sayd: so be it, so be it.

In thyrtye dayes coulde the people of Israel scarce gather vp the spoyles of the Assirians. But all that belonged vnto Holofernes, and had ben his specyally (whether it were of gold, of syluer, of precious stones clothyng and all ornamētes) they gaue it vnto Judith. And all the people reioysed, bothe women, maydens, and yong people, with pipes and harpes.

¶ The songe of Judith for the victory. After the victorye obtayned, the people commeth to Jerusalem, to worshyp and prayse God.

CAPI. XVI.

THen songe Judith this songe vnto the Lorde: Begin vnto the Lorde vpon ? tabzettes, lyng vnto the Lorde vpō the cymbales. O sing vnto him a newe songe of thankesgyuing, be ioyfull and call vpon his name. It is the Lorde ? destroyeth warres, cuen the Lorde is his name. Which hath pitched his tentes in the middest of his people, ? he myght deliuer vs from the hand of al our ennemyes. Assur came out of the mountayns in the multitude of his strengthe. His people stopped the water brookes, and their horses couered ? valeys. He purposed to haue brent vp my lande, and to slee my yonge men with the swerde. Psalm. cxlvi.

The wolde haue caryed awaye my childzen B and virgyns in to captyuitie, but the almyghty Lorde hurt hym, and delyuered him in to the hādes of a woman, whiche brought hym to confusyon. For they? myghtye was not destroyed of the yonge men. It was not the sonnes of Titan that slewe him, neyther haue the greate gyaunts set them selues agaynst hym: but Judith the doughter of Merari with her fayre beauty haue discomfited hym, and brought hym to noughte. For the layd awaye her wydowes garment, and put on the apparell of gladnesse in the reioysing of the childzen of Israell. She annoynted her face, and bounde vp her heere in an houre, to begyle hi. Her slyppers rauished his eyes, her beautye captyuated his mynde, with the swerde smote the of his necke. The Persiās were astonyed at her stedfastnesse, & the Medes at her boldnesse. Then howled ? armies of the Assirians, when my lymple appeared, dyre of thurst. Judith. Judith.

The sonnes of the doughters haue persed C them thorowe, and slayne them as fugityue childzen: they perysched in the battayle, for the very feare of the Lorde my God. Let vs synge a songe of thankesgyuynge vnto the Lorde, a newe songe of prayse wyll we syng vnto our God. Lord Lord, thou art a great God, myghty in power, whom no man maye ouercome. All thy creatures shoulde serue the: for thou spakest but the worde, and they were made, thou sentest thy spirite, and they were created, and no man can withstand thy voyce. The mountaynes shal mour from the foundacyons with the waters, the stony rockes shal melt before the like ware. But they that feare the, shall be greate with the in all thynges. Woo vnto the people that ryse vp agaynste my generacion, for the almyghtye Lorde wyll auenge hym selfe of them, and in the daye of iudgement wyl he visyt them. For he shal gyue fyre and wormes in to their flesshe, that they may burne and fele it for euermore. Genesis Psal. cxlvi. Psalm. cxlvi.

After this it happened that after the victo D rye, all the people came to Jerusalem to giue prayse & thankes vnto the Lorde. And when they were purified, they offred al their brent sacrifices, and their promysed offrings. And Judith offred all Holofernes weapons, and all the iewels that the people had gyuen her, and the canapye that she tooke frome his bed, and and hanged them vp vnto the Lorde. The people was ioyful as the vse is: and this ioy by reason of the victorye with Judith, endured thre monethes.

So after these dayes, euery man wente home agayne, and Judith was in great reputacion at Bethulia, and ryght honourablye taken in al the land of Israel. Unto her vertue also was chastitie ioyned, so that after her husbande Manasses died, she neuer knew man all the dayes of her lyfe. Upon the hye solemne dayes she went out with great worshyp. She dwelte in her husbandes house an hundred and fyue yere, and lefte her handmayden free and dyed, and was buryed beside her husbande in Bethulia. And all the people mourned for her seuen dayes. So longe as she lyued, there was none that troubled Israell, and manye yeres also after her deathe.

The daye wherin this victorye was gotten, was solemnely holden and reckened of the Iewes, in the nombre of the holye dayes, and it is yet greatly holden of the iewes euer sence, vnto this daye.

¶ The dreame of Mardocheus.

CAPI. XI.

MArdocheus the son of Jair, the sonne of Semei, the sonne of Cisei of the tryde of Benjamin, a Jewe, whiche hadde his dwellynge in Sulis, a man of greate reputacion, and excellent amonge all them that were in the kynges courte. (Neuertheleste, he was one of the pryseners whō Nabuchodonosor the kyng of Babylon had caryed awaye from Jerusalem vnto Babylon with Jechonias ? kyng of Juda.) In the seconde yere of the raygne of greate Artarexes, in the fyrst daye of the moneth Nisan, hadde this Mardocheus suche a dreame: he thoughte he herde a greate tempest, horrible thonderclappes, erthquakes, and greate vproze in the land: and that he sawe two great dragons redy to fyght one against an other. Theyr crye was greate: At the whiche roryng and crye, all heathen were redy to fight agaynste the ryghteous people. And the same daye was full of darckenesse, and derye vncleare, ful of trouble and anguyth, yea a great fearefulnesse was there in all the land. The ryghtous were amased, for they feared the plage and euyll that was deuysed ouer them and were at a poynte with thē selues to dye. So they cryed vnto God, & whyle they were cryeng, the lytle wel grewe in to a great ryuer, and in to many waters, and with that it was daye, and the sunne rose vp agayne. And the lowly were exalted, and deuoured ? glorious and proude. After the last syne, 1. Esdr. iii. A

Now whē Mardoches had sene this dreme he awoke, and mused stedfastly in his herte, what God wold do: & so he desired to know all the matter, and his mynde was therupon vntyll the nyght.

¶ Mardocheus witreth the treasō deuysed against the kynge, and is therfore rewarded of him.

CAPI. XII.

AT the same tyme dwelt Mardocheus with Bagatha and Tares the kynges chamberlayns and porters of the palace. But when he herde their deuyce, and had diligently conlydred theyr ymaginacyons, he perceyued that they wente about to laye theyr cruel handes vpon the kynge Artaxerxes, and so he certified the king therof. Then caused the kynge to examyn the two Esth. ii. and. vi. B

geldeb with tozmentes. And when they had graunted it, they were put to deth.

¶ This the kyng caused to be put in the Cronicles for an euerlastynge remembraunce, & Mardocheus wrote vp the same matter. So the kyng commaunded þ Mardocheus shold do scruyce in þ court, & for this faythfulnes of his, he gaue him a reward. But Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Agagite, which was holde in great honour & reputacion in þ kinges court vndertoke to hurt Mardocheus & his people, bycause of þ two chamberlaynes that were put to deth.

CAPI. XIII.

Hest.i.a
a.Hest.viii.a

THe great kyng Artarerres which rayneth from India vnto Ethiopia, ouer an hundred and .xxtij. landes, sendeth his frendly salutacion vnto all the princes and deputyes of the countreys, which be subiect vnto his dominiõ. Whẽ I was made lorde ouer many people, and had subdued the hole erth vnto my domnion, my mynde was not with cruelnye and wronge to exalte my selfe by the reason of my power: but purposed with equitie alwaye and gentlenesse, to gouerne those that be vnder my iurisdiction and holly to set them in a peaceable life, and therby to bringe my kyngdome vnto tranquillitie, that men myght safely go thorowe on euery syde, and to renue peax agayne, whiche all men desyre.

B Now when I asked my counsellers howe these thynges myghte be brought to a good ende, there was one by vs excellent in wysdome, whose good will, truthe, and faythfulnesse hathe ofte bene shewed and proued, (whiche was also the principall and next vnto the kynge) Aman by name: whiche certyfyed vs, howe that in all landes there was crepte in a rebellyous folke that make statutes and lawes against al other people, and haue alwayes despysed the, proclaymed commaundementes of kynges, and how that for this cause it were not to be suffred that such rule shoulde contynue by you, and not to be put downe.

C Seynge now we perceyue the same, þ this people alone are contrarye vnto euery man, vsyng straunge and other maner of lawes, & withstand our statutes and doynges, and go about to stablish shrewde matters, that our kyngdome shold neuer come to good estate and stedfastnesse: Therfore haue we commaunded, that al they that are appoynted in writing, & shewed vnto you by Aman (which is ordeyned and set ouer all oure busynesse, and the moost principall next vnto the king, and in maner as a father) shall with their wyues and children be destroyed and roted out with the swerde of their ennemyes and aduersaryes: and that there shal be no mercy shewed, and no man spared. And this shal be done in þ fourteth day of the moneth called Adar, of this yere that they which of old (and nowe also) haue euer bene rebellyous, maye in one daye with violence, be thrust downe in to the hell, to the intent that after this maner our empyre maye haue peax and tranquillitie.

D But Mardocheus thoughte vpon all the woorkes and noble actes of the Lord, & made his prayer vnto hym, saying: O Lord Lord thou valyaunt and almyghty kynge, for all thynges are in thy power, and yf thou wylte helpe and delyuer Israel, there is no mã that can withstãde ne let the: for thou hast made heuen and erth, and what wonderous thyng so euer is vnder the heuen: thou arte Lorde of all thynges, and there is no man that can resyst the, o Lorde. Thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest Lorde, that it was nyther of malice, ne presumpcion, nor for any desire of glorye, that I wolde not bowe downe my selfe, nor worshyp yonder proude presumptuous Aman (for I wolde haue bene contente, and that with good wyll, yf it myghte haue done Israel any good, to haue kyst euen his fotesteppes) but þ I dyd it bycause I wolde not set the honoure of a man in the stede of the glorye of God, and bycause I wolde worshyp none but onely the my Lorde. And this haue I done in no pride ne presumption.

E And therfore, O Lorde, thou God and kynge, haue mercy vpon thy people, for they ymagin how they may bringe vs to nought, yea, they: mynde and desyre is to destroye, and to ouerthrowe the people that hathe euer ben thyne inheritaũce of olde. O despyse not thy portion whiche thou hast deliuered and brought out of Egypte for thyne owne selfe. Heare my prayer, and be mercyful vnto thy people, whom thou hast chose for an heritage vnto thy selfe. Turne our complaynt and sorowe in to ioye, that we maye lyue, O Lorde, and prayse thy name. O Lord, suffre not the mouthes of them that prayse the, to be destroyed.

All the people of Israel in like maner cryed as ernestly as they could vnto the Lorde, for their death and destruction stode before their eyes.

¶ The prayer of Esther, for the delyuerance of her and her people.

CAPI. XIIII.

QVene Esther also being in [illegible] of death, resorted vnto the Lord, and [illegible] her gorgyous apparell, [illegible] on the grounde [illegible] for lyghtyng and mourning. [illegible] ointment, she scatred [illegible] vpon her heed: and as for her [illegible] she was wont to [illegible] she with the teares [illegible] vnto [illegible] her woordes.

O my Lorde, thou only art our kyng, helpe me desolate woman, whiche haue no helper but the, for my mysery & destruction is hard at my hãd. Fro my youth vp I haue herd out of the kynred of my father, that thou tokest Israel from amonges al people, and to haue our fathers of their forе elders, þ they shold be thy perpetuall inheritaunce, & loke what thou byddest promyse them, thou hast made it good vnto them.

F Nowe, well Lorde, we haue synned before the, therfore hast thou gyuen vs in to the handes of oure ennemyes, bycause we worshypped their goddes. Lorde thou art ryghtous. Neuertheles it satisfyeth them not, that we are in bytter and heuye captiuitie, and oppressed amonges theym, but thou hast layde their handes vpon the handes of their goddes: so that they begyn to take awaye the thynge that thou with thy mouth hast ordeyned and appoynted: to destroye thyne enheritaunce, to shut and to stop the mouthes of them that prayse the, to quenche the glorye & worshyp of thy house and thyne aulter, and to open the mouthes of the heathẽ, that they maye prayse the power and vertue of þ goddes, and to magnifye the fleshely kynge for euer.

G O Lord, gyue not thy scepter vnto them þ be nothynge, leest they laugh vs to scorne in our mysery and fall: but turne their deuice vpon them selues, and punysh hym that hath begon the same ouer vs, and set hym to an example. Thynke vpon vs, o Lorde, and shew thy selfe in the tyme of oure distresse, and of oure trouble. Strengthe me, o thou kynge of goddes, thou Lorde of al power, gyue me an eloquent and pleasaunt speche in my mouthe before the lyon. Tourne his herte in to the hate of our ennemye, to destroye hym, and al suche as consent vnto hym. But delyuer vs with thy hand, and helpe me desolate womã whiche haue no defence nor helper but onely the. Lorde thou knowest all thynges, thou wotest that I loue not the glory and worshyp of the vnrighteous, and that I hate & abhorre the bedde of the vncircumcysed, and of all heathen.

H Thou knowest and wotest my necessitie, that I hate the token of my preemynence, and worshyp, whiche I beare vpon my heed, what tyme as I muste shewe my selfe and be seue, and that I abhorre it as an vncleane clothe, and that I weare it not when I am quyet and alone by my selfe. Thou knowest also that I thy handemayden haue not eaten at Amans table, and that I haue had no pleasure nor delyte in the kynges feaste, that I haue not dronke the drynkofferynges, and that I thy handemayden haue hadde no ioye tyll the daye that I was brought hyther, vnto this daye, but onely in the o Lorde. O thou God of Abraham, O thou myghtye God aboue al: heare the voyce of them that haue none other hope, and delyuer vs oute of the hande of the wycked, and deliuer me out of my feare.

¶ Mardocheus moueth Hester to go in to the kynge, and make intercessyon for her people, and she performeth his request.

CAPI. XV.

i.Esd.ii.b.d

AND vpon the thyrde daye it happened that Hester layd awaye the mourning garmentes, and put on her gloryous apparell, and decked her selfe goodly (after that she had called vpon God, whiche is the beholder and sauyoure of all thynges) toke two maydes with her: vpon the one she leaned her selfe, as one that was tender: the other folowed her, and bare the trayne of her vesture. The shyne of her beautye made her face rose coloured. The symilitude of her face was cherefull and amiable, but her herte was sorowfull for greate feare. She wente in thorowe all the doores, and stode before the kynge. The kynge sate vpon the trone of his kingdome, & was clothed in his goodly araye all of golde, and set with precyous stones, and he was very terrible. He lyfte vp his face that shone in the clerenesse, and loked grymly vpon her. Then fell the quene downe, was pale and faynt, leaned her selfe vpon the heed of the mayde that went with her.

Proue.xxii.a

Neuertheless God tourned the kynges mynde, that he was gentle, that he lepte out of his seat for feare, and gat her in his armes and helde her vp, tyll she came to her selfe agayne. He haue her louyng woordes also, and sayd vnto her: Hester, what is the mater? I am thy brother, be of good chere, thou shalte not dye: for our commaundement toucheth the commons, not the. Come nye. And with þ he held vp his golden wand, and layd it vpõ her neche, and embraced her frendly, & sayd: talke with me. Then sayd she: I sawe the, o Lorde, as an aungell of God, & my hert was troubled for feare of thy maiesty and clerenesse. For excellent and wonderful art thou, o Lord, and thy face is ful of amitie. But as she was thus speakynge vnto hym, she fell downe agayne for faintnes: for the whiche cause the kynge was afrayde, and all his seruauntes comforted her.

¶ The copye of the letters of Artarerres, whereby he reuoketh those which he sente out forth.

CAPI. XVI.

THe great king Artarerres, which rayneth from India vnto Ethiopia ouer an hundred and .xxvij. landes sendeth vnto the princes & rulers of the same landes suche as loue hym, his frendly salutacyon. There be many þ for the sondry frendshyppes and benefytes, whiche are dyuerslye done vnto theym for their worshyp, be euer the more proude and hye minded, and vndertake not onely to hurte oure subiectes, for plenteous benefytes maye they not suffre, and begyn to ymagyn some thynge agaynste those that do them good, and take not only all vnthankfulnes away from men, but in pryde & presumpcion (as they that be vnmindful and vnthankful for ꝑ good dedes) they go about to escape the iudgement of God that seith al thinges, which (iudgement) hateth and punisheth all wickednesse. It happeneth oft also, that they whiche be set in office by ꝑ hyer power, and vnto whom the busines and causes of the subiectes are committed to be handled ware proude, & defile them selues with shedding of innocent bloude, which bringeth the to intollerable hurte. Which also with false and disceptfull wordes, and with lynge tales, discrepue and betraye the innocent goodnesse of princes.

B Now is it profitable & good, that we take hede, make serch therafter, and consider not onely what hathe happened vnto vs of olde, but the shameful, vnhoneft, & noysom thinges that the deputies haue now taken in hand be fore our eyes, and therby to beware in tyme to come, ꝑ we may make the kyngdom quyet and peaceable for al men, and that we might somtyme draw it to a chaūge: and as for the thing that now is present before our eyes, to withstande it, and to put it downe, after the most frendly maner.

Hester.iii.a What tyme nowe as Aman the sonne of Amadathu the Macedonian (a straunger verily of the Perlians bloude and farre from ourre goodnesse) was come in amonge vs as an aly aunte, and hadde obteyned the frendshyp that we beare towarde all people, so that he was called our father, and hadde in hye honoure of everye man, as the nexte and principall vnto the kyng, he coulde not forbeare him selfe from his pryde, hath vndertaken not onely to rob vs of the kyngdome, but of our lyfe.

With manyfolde discevte also hath he desyred to destroy Mardochey our helper and preserver, whiche hathe done vs good in all thynges: and innocent Hester the lyke partaker of our kyngdome with all our people. For his mynde was (when ꝑ had take them out of the way, & robbed vs of them) by this meanes to trauslate the kyngdom of the Persians vnto the of Macedonia. But we fynde that the Jewes (whiche were accused of the wicked, ꝑ they might be destroied) are no evil doers, but vse reasonable and right lawes, & that they be the children of ꝑ most hye living God, by whom the kyngdome of vs, and our progenitours hath ben wel ordred hytherto. Wherfore as for the letters and commaundementes that were put forth by Aman ꝑ son of Amadathu, ye shal do wel yt ye hold them of none effect: for he ꝑ set them vp and invented them, hangeth at Sulis before the porte, with all his kynred, and God (which hath al thinges in his power) hath rewarded him after his deseruyng.

And vpon this ye shal publish and set vp ꝑ copy of this letter in all places, ꝑ the Jewes D maye frely and withoute hinderaunce holde them selues after theyr owne statutes, & that they maye be helped, and that vpon the .xiii. day of the .xii. moneth Adar, they may be aueged of them, which in ꝑ time of their anguish and trouble, wolde haue oppressed them. For the God that gouerneth all thinges hath turned to ioye the day wherin the cholen people shold haue perished.

Moreouer among the hye solemne dayes ꝑ ye haue, ye shall hold this daye also with all gladnesse: that now, and in time to com this day may be a remembraunce to good, for all suche as loue the prosperitie of the Persians: but a remembraunce of destruction to those ꝑ be seditious vnto vs.

All cities and landes that do not this, shal horribly perysshe and be destroyed with the swerde and fyre, and shall not onely be no more inhabyted of men, but be abhorred also of the wylde beastes and foules.

¶ The ende of the rest of the boke of Esther.

THE BOOKE OF VVYSDOME.

¶ How we oughte to searche and enquyre after God, and who be those that fynde him. Of the holy ghost. We ought to flye from backbiting and murmuryng. &c.

CAPI. I.

I Set youre affection vpon wysdome, ye that be iudges of the erth. Haue a good opynyon of the Lord and seke him in the singlenesse of herte. For he wyll be found of them that tempt him not, and appereth vnto such as put their trust in him. But the frowarde thoughtes they seperate from God, and vertue (if it be alowed) refourmeth the vnwyse. And why? wysdome shall not entre in to a frowarde soule, ne dwell in the body that is subued vnto synne. For the holye ghost abhorreth fayned nurtoure, and withdraweth hym self from the thoughtes that are wit hout vnder standynge: and where wickednesse hath the vpperhande, he fleeth from thence. For the spirite of wysdom is louyng, gentle and gracious, and wyll haue no pleasure in him that speaketh euyll with his lyppes. For God is a wytnesse of his reynes, a true sercher oute of his herte, and an hearer of his tonge. For the spirite of the Lorde fylleth the rounde compasse of the worlde, and the same that vpholdeth al thinges, hath knowledge also of the voyce.

B Therfore he that speaketh vnrighteous thynges, can not be hyd, neyther maye he escape the iudgement of reproofe. And why? inquysition shall be made for the thoughtes of the vngodly, and the reporte of his wordes shall come vnto God, so that his wickednes shalbe punyshed. For the care of gelousy beareth all thynges, and the noyse of the grudginges, shall not be hyd. Therfore beware of murmuryng, whiche is nothynge worth and refrayne youre tonge frome slaundre. For here is no worde so darcke and secrete, that it shal go for nought: & the mouth that speaketh lyes, slayeth the soule.

C Seke not your owne death in the erroure of your lyfe, destroye not your selues throwe the workes of your owne handes. For God hath not made death, neither hath he pleasure in the destruction of the lyuynge. For he created all thinges, that they myght haue their beynge: yea all the people of the earth hath he made that they should haue health, that there should be no destruction in them, and ꝑ the kyngdome of hell shoulde not be vpon earth (for righteousnesse is euerlastynge and immortall, but vnrighteousnesse bryngeth death.) Neuertheles, the vngodly call her vnto them, bothe with wordes and workes, and whyle they thynche to haue a frende of her, they come to nought: for ꝑ vngodly that are confederate with her and take her parte: are worthy of death.

¶ The ymaginacyons and desyres of the wycked, and theyr counsell agaynst the faythfull.

CAPI. II.

FOr the vngodly talke and ymagin, thus among them selues (but not ryght) The tyme of our life is but shorte and tedyous, and when a man is onse gone, he hath no more lope ne pleasure, neither know we any man that turneth agayne frome death for we are borne of nought and we shall be hereafter as though we had neuer bene. For our breth is a smoke in our nostrels, and the wordes as a sparcke to moue oure herte. As for oure body, it shall be very ashes that are quenched, and oure soule shall vanysh as the soft ayre. Oure lyfe shall passe awaye as the trace of a cloude, and come to nought as the mysse that is dryuen awaye with the beames of the sunne, and put downe with the heate therof. Our name also shall be forgotten by lytle & lytle and no man shal haue oure workes in rem embrance. A Job.viii.a Psalm.xxxix.b & Lxxvii.g

B For oure tyme is a very shadow that passeth awaye, and after our ende, there is no returnynge, for it is fast sealed, so that no man commeth agayne. Come on therfore, let vs enioye the pleasures that be presente, and let vs soone vse ꝑ creature lyke as in youth. We wyll fyll oure selues with good wyne and oyntment, there shall no floure of the tyme go by vs. We wyll crowne oure selues with rose buds afore they be wythered. There shall be no fayre medow, but our lust shal go thorowe it. Let euery one of you be partaker of oure voluptousnesse. Let vs leaue some token of oure pleasure in euery place, for that is oure porcyon, els get we nothyng. Let vs oppresse the poore righteous, let vs not spare the wyddow ne old man, let vs not regarde ꝑ heeres that are gray for age. ii.Para.xxx.c Esay.xxii.b Sapie.v.b

Let the lawe of vnrighteousnesse be oure auctorytye, for the thynge that is feble is nothynge worth. Therfore let vs defraude the ryghteous, and why? he is not for our profyte, yea he is cleane contrary to oure doynges. He C cheketh vs for offendynge agaynste the law, and slaundreth vs as transgressours of all nurture. He maketh his boaste to haue the knowledge of God, yea he calleth hym selfe Gods sonne. He is ꝑ beholder of our thoughtes: It greeueth vs also to loke vpon him, for his lyfe is not lyke other mens, his wayes are of an other fashyon. He counteth vs but vayne persons, he withdraweth him selfe from oure wayes as from filthynesse: he commendeth greatly the latter ende of the iust, and maketh his boaste that God is his father. Let vs se then yf his wordes be treme, let vs proue what shall come vpon him: so shall we knowe what ende he shall haue. Jeh.viii.a Esay.lvii.a

For yf he be the true sonne of God, he D wyll

wyll receyue hym and delyuer hym from the handes of his enemyes. Let vs crauen hym with despytefull rebuke and tormentynge, ℔ we may know his dignite, and proue his patience. Let vs condemne hym with the moste shamefull deathe: for lyke as he hath spoken, so shall he be rewarded.

Psalm.xxi.a Mat.xxvii.c Jeremy.xi.b

Such thynges do the vngodly ymagyn, and go astraye, for theyr owne wyckednesse hath blynded them. As for the mysteryes of God, they vnderstand them not: they neither hope for the rewarde of ryghtousnesse, ne regarde the worshyp that holy soules shal haue. For God created man to be vndestroyed, yea after the ymage of his owne lykenesse made he hym. Neuertheles, thorow enuye of the deuyll, came deathe vnto ℔ worlde, and they that holde of his syde, do as he doth.

The waye of the ryghtous is iudged to be vtter destruction, but they are in rest. And thoughe they suffer payne before men, yet is theyr hope full of immortalytye. They are punyshed but in fewe thynges, neuertheles, in many thynges shall they be well rewarded. For God proueth them, and fyndeth them mete for hym selfe: yea as the golde in the fornace doeth he tepe them, and receyueth them as a brente offrynge, and when the tyme commeth: they shall be lokyd vpon.

Blessed is rather the baren and vndefyled, whiche hathe not knowen the synfull bedde: she shall haue frute in the rewarde of the holy soules. And blessed is the gelded, whiche with his handes hath wrought no vnryghtousnesse, ne ymagined wycked thynges agaynst God. For vnto hym shall be gyuen the specyall gyfte of fayth, and the most acceptable porcyon in ℔ temple of God. And thoughe they lyue longe, yet shall they be nothynge regarded and theyr last age shall be without honoure. Yf they dye hastely, they haue no hope, nyther shal they be spoke to in the day of knowledge. For horrible is the death and ende of the vnryghtous.

¶ Of the shalle generacion of the faythfull, and of their felycyte. Of the death of the ryghtous and of the condempnacion of the vnfaythfull.

CAPI. IIII.

O howe fayre is a shalle generacyon in vertue? The memorye all therof is immortall, for it is knowen with good men. When it is present, men take example therat: and yf it go away, yet they desyre it. It is alway crowned and holden in honour and wynneth the rewarde of the vndefyled battayle. But ℔ multytude of vngodly chyldren is vnprofytable, and the thynges that are plāted with horedome, shal take no depe rote, ne haue any fast foundacion. Thoughe they be grene in the braūches for a tyme, yet shal they be shaken with the wynde for they stand not fast, and thorow the vehemence of the wynde they shall be roted out. For the vnperfect braunches shall be broken, their frute shal be vnprofytable and sowre to eat, yea mete for nothynge. And why? all the chyldren that are borne of the wicked, muste beare recorde of the wyckednesse agaynst theyr fathers and mothers, whē they be asked. But though the ryghtous be ouertaken in death yet shall he be in rest.

Jeremy.xlii Wyndom Matthei

Age is an honourable thynge. Neuertheles it standeth not only in the length of time ne the multytude of yeares: but a mans wisdome is the grayhere, and an vndefyled life is the olde age. He pleased God, and was beloued of him: so that where as he lyued amonges synners, he translated him. Yea sodenly was he taken away, to the intent that wickednesse shulde not alter his vnderstandynge, and that ypocrisye shulde not begyle his soule. For the craftye bewytchyng of lyes make good thinges darcke, the vnstedfastnesse also and wickednesse of voluptuous desyre turne aboute the vnderstandynge of the symple. Though he was soone dead, yet fulfylled he moch tyme. For his soule pleased God therfore hasted he to take hym awaye frō amonges the wycked. This the people se and vnderstande it not: they lay not vp such thinges in theyr hertes, how that the louing fauoure and mercye of God is vpon his saūctes, and that he hath respecte vnto his chosen.

Sap.

Thus the ryghteous that is dead, condemneth the vngodly whiche are lyuynge: and the youth that is soone brought to an ende, the longe lyfe of the vnryghteous. For they se the ende of the wyse, but they vnderstand not what God hath deuised for him, & wherefore fore the Lorde hath taken hym awaye. And why? they se hym and despyse hym, therfore shall God also laugh them to scorne: So ℔ they them selues shall dye hereafter (but without honoure) yea in shame amonge the dead for euermore. For without any voyce, shall he dasht those that be put vp, & remoue them from the foundacyons, so that thy shal be layed waste vnto the dyell. They shall mourne, and theyr memorye all shall perysshe. He they beyng afrayed shall remembre theyr synnes, and theyr owne wyckednesse shall bewraye them.

Psal.

¶ The constauntnesse of the ryghtous before their persecuters. The hope of the vnfaythfull is vndurable and vayne. The blessednesse and fortunatenesse of the sayntes and godly.

CAPI. V.

Then shall ℔ ryghtous stande in greate stedfastnesse, agaynst suche as haue dealt extremely with them, and taken awaye theyr labaures. When they se it, they shall be vexed with horrible feare, and shall wonder at the haltynesse of the sodayn helth: gronyng for very destresse of mynde, and shal saye within them selues, bauynge inwarde sorow, and mournyng for very angwysshe of mynde.

Psalm.

These are they, whom we sometyme had in derision, & iested vpon. We fooles thought they lyfe very madnesse, and their ende to be without honoure. But lo, how they are coūted among ℔ chyldren of God, and their porcyon is amonge the sayntes. Therfore we haue erred from the way of truth, the lyghte of ryghtousnesse hathe not shyned vnto vs, and the sunne of vnderstandyng, rose not vp vpon vs. We haue wearyed our selues in the waye of wyckednesse and destruction. Tedious wayes haue we gone: but the way of the Lorde we haue not knowen.

Wyndom. Matthei

What good hath our pryde done vnto vs? Or what profyte hath the pompe of ryches brought vs? All those thynges are passed awaye lyke a shadow, and as a messenger rennynge before: as a shyp that passeth ouer the waues of water, whiche when it is gone by, the trace therof can not be founde, neither the path of it in the floudes. Or as a byrde that flyeth thorow the ayre, and no man can se eny token where she is flowen, but only heareth the noyce of her wynges, beatynge the lyght wynde, partynge the ayre thorowe the vehemence of her flyghte, and flyeth on shakynge her wynges, where as afterwarde no token of her waye can be founde. Or lyke as when an arrowe is shot at a marche, it parteth the ayre, whiche immediatly commeth together agayne, so that a man can not knowe where it went thorow. Euen so we in lyke maner as soone as we were borne, began immediatlye to drawe to our ende, and haue shewed no token of vertue, but are consumed in our owne wyckednesse.

Such wordes shall they that haue synned speake in the hell: for the hope of the vngodly is lyke a dyse thistell flowre (or dust) ℔ is blowen awaye with the wynde: lyke as thyn from that is scattered abrode with the storme, lyke as the smoke whiche is dispersed here and there with the wynde, & as the remembraunce of a straunger that tarryeth for a daye, & then departeth. But the ryghtous shall lyue for euermore: their reward also is with the Lorde: and their remembraunce in the vpshell. Therfore shal they receyue a glorious kyngdome and a beautyfull crowne of the Lordes hande: for with his right hād shall he couer the, and with his owne arme shall he defende them. His gelousy also shall take harnesse, and shall arme the creature to be auenged of the enemyes. He shall put an ryghtousnesse for a brest plate, and take sure iudgement in stede of an helmet. The inuincible shylde of equitie shall he take, his cruelly wrath shall he sharpen for a speare, and the hole compasse of the world shall fyght with hym agaynst the vnwyse.

Job.viii.a Psalm.i.b Prouer.x.b and.xi.a Jacob.i.b

Psal.xxxix.a

Ephe.vi.b

Then shall the thonder bolles go oute of the ryghtenynges, and come out of the sauyowre of the cloudes to the place appoynted out of the harde stony indignation there shal fall thycke haples, and the water of the see shal be wroth agaynst them, and the floudes shall renne roughly together. Yea a myghtye wynde shall stande vp agaynst them, and a storme shall scatre them abrode. Thus the vnryghteous dealynge of them shall bryngе all the lande to a wyldernes, and and wyckednesse shall ouerthrow the dwellynges of the myghtye.

¶ The callinge of kynges, Princes, and Iudges: whiche are also exhorted to learne wysdome.

CAPI. VI.

Wysdome is better then strength, and a man of vnderstandynge is more worth then one that is stronge. Heare therfore (O ye kynges) and vnderstand: O lerne ye that be iudges of the endes of the earthe. Gyue eare ye that rule the multytudes, and delyte in moche people. For the power is gyuen you of the Lord, & the strength from the hyghest: whiche shall trye youre workes & serche out youre ymaginacions. How that ye beynge officers of his kyngdom, haue not executed true iudgement, haue not kepte the lawe of ryghtousnes, nor walked after his wyll. Horribly and that ryght soone shal he appeare vnto you: for an harde iudgemente shall they haue that beare rule. Mercye is graunted vnto the symple, but they that be in auctorite shal be sore punyshed. For God whiche is Lorde ouer all, shall excepte no mans person, neither shal he stande in awe of any mans greatnesse: for he hathe made the small and greate, and careth for all alike. But the myghtye shal haue the sorer punishment.

Wysdome. Eccle.xi.d Psalm.xlix.b Kynges. Roma.xiii.a

Unto you therfore (O ye kynges) do I speake

speake, that we may lerne wysdome and not go amysse: for they that kepe ryghteousnesse, shall be ryghteously iudged: and they that are lerned in ryghteous thynges, shall fynde to make answere. Wherfore set youre lust vpon my wordes, and loue them, so shall ye come by nourture. Wysdome is a noble thyng, and neuer fadeth awaye: yea she is easely sene of them that loue her, and found of such as seke her.

She preuenteth them that desyre her, that she may fyrst shew her selfe vnto them. Who so awaketh vnto her betymes, shall haue no great trauayle, for he shall fynde her syttyng vnder his dores. To thynke vpon her, is parfect vnderstandyng, and who so watcheth for her, shall be safe, and that soone. For she goeth aboute, seekynge suche as are mete for her, sheweth her selfe cheerefully vnto them in theyr goynges, and meeteth them with all diligence. For the vnfayned desyre of nourture is her begynnynge: to care for nourture is loue, and loue is the keepynge of her lawes. How the kepyng of lawes is perfection and an vncorrupte lyfe, and an vncorrupt lyfe maketh a man familyer with God. And so the desyre of wysdome leadeth to the kyngdome euerlastynge.

If youre delyte be then in royall seates and septers (O ye kynges of the people) lerne youre lust vpo wysdome, that ye may raygne for euermore. O loue the lyght of wysdom, all ye that be rulers of the people. As for wysdome what she is, and howe she came vp, I wyll tell you, and wyll not hyde the mysteryes of God from you: but wyll seke her out from the begynnynge of the natyuyte, and bryng the knowledge of her into lyght, and wyll not kepe backe the truthe: Neither wyl I haue to do with consumyng enuye, for such a man shall not be partaker of wysdome. But the multitude of the wyse, is the welfare of the worlde, and a wyse kynge is the vpholdyng of the people. O receyue nurture the rather now my wordes, & it shal do you good.

¶ wysdome ought to be preferred before all thynges

CAPI. VII.

MY selfe also am a mortall man, lyke as all other, and am come of the earthy generacyon of hym that was fyrst made, and in my mothers wombe was I fashioned to be fleshe: In the tyme of ten monethes, was I brought together in blood, thorow the sede of man, and the commodious appetite of slepe. When I was borne, I receyued lyke ayre as other men, and fell vpon the earth (whiche is my nature) cryinge and weppynge at the fyrst, as all other do. I was wrapped in swadlyng clothes, and broughte vp with great cares. For there is no kyng that hath had any other begynnyng of byrth. All men then haue one entreaunce vnto lyfe, and one goynge out in lyke maner.

Wherfore I desyred, and vnderstandynge was gyuen me: I called, & the spirite of wysdome came into me. I set more by her then by kyngdomes and royall seates, and counted ryches nothynge in comparyson of her. As for precyous stone I compared it not vnto her: for all golde is grauell vnto her, and syluer shall be counted but claye before her syght. I loued her aboue welfare and beauty and purposed to take her for my lyghte, for her shyne can not be quenched. All good thynges came to me with her, and innumerable ryches thorowe her handes. I was glad in them all, for this wysdome went before me, and I knewe not that she is my mother of all good thynges. Nowe as I my selfe learned vnfaynedly, so do I make other men partakers of her, and hyde her ryches from no man: for she is an vnsynyte treasure vnto men, whiche who so vse, become partakers of the loue and frendshyp of God, and are exercysed vnto hym for the gyftes of wysdome.

God hath graunted me to talke wysely, & conuenyently to handle the thynges that be hath graciously lent me. For it is he which vnto wysdome, and teacheth to vse wysdom a ryght. In his hande are we and oure wordes, yea all oure wysdome, oure vnderstandynge and knowledge of al oure workes. For he hath gyuen me the true science of these thynges: so that I knowe how the worlde was made, and the powers of the elementes the begynnynge, endyng and myddest of the tymes: howe the tymes alter, how one goeth after an other, and how they are fulfilled the course of the yeare: the ordynaunces of the starres: the natures and kyndrede of beastes: the furyousnes of beastes: the power of the wyndes by the imaginacyons of men: the dyuersityes of yonge plantes, the vertues of rotes, and all such thynges as are secret and not loked for, haue I learned. For the workmaster of all thynges hath taught me wysdome.

In her is the spirite of vnderstadyng, which is holy, manyfolde, one onely, subtyll entendeous, discrete, quyck, vndefyled, plaine, swete, louynge, the thynge that is good, sharpe, which letteth not to doo well, gentle, kynde, stedfast, sure, free, hauyng al vertues, circumspecte in all thynges, receyuynge all spirites of vnderstandynge beynge cleane & sharpe. For wysdom is nymbler then al nimble thynges: she goeth thorowe and attayneth to all thynges, because of her cleanes. For she is the breth of the power of God, & a pure cleane ensyngyng of the clearenesse of almyghty God. Therfore can no vndefyled thynge come vnto her: for she is the brightenesse of the euerlastynge lyght, the vndefyled myrroure of the maiesty of God, and the ymage of his goodnesse.

And for so much as she is one, she may do al thynges: and beynge stedfast her selfe she renueth all, and amonge the people conuerteth she her selfe in to the holy soules. She maketh Gods frendes and prophetes: for God loue th no man, but hym in whome wysdom dwelleth. For she is more beautyfull then the Sunne, and ouerth more lyght then the sterres, and the daye is not to be compared vnto her: for vpon the daye commeth nyght. But wickednesse can not ouercome wysdome, and vnrighteousnesse maye not be with her.

¶ The effectes of wysdome.

CAPI VIII.

WYsdome reacheth from one ende to an other mightyly, and louyngly doth she order all thynges. I haue loued her and laboured for her euen fro my youth vp: I dis my diligence to mary my selfe with her, suche loue had I vnto her beautie. Who so hath the company of God, commendeth her nobilite, yea the Lorde of all thynges him selfe, loueth her. For she is the scholemaistresse of the nurture of God, and the chefer out of his workes. If a man wold desyre ryches in this life: what is rycher then wysdome, that worketh all thynges? Thou wylt saye: vnderstandyng worketh. What is it among all thynges, that worketh more then wysdome? If a man loue iustice and ryghteousnesse, let hym labour for wysdome, for she hathe greate vertues. And why? she teacheth sobrenesse and prudence, ryghteousnesse and stregth, whiche are suche thinges as men can haue nothynge more profitable in theyr lyfe.

If a man desyre moche knowledge, she can tell the thynges that are past, and discerne thynges for to come: she knoweth the subtelyties of wordes, and can expounde darke sentences. She can tell of tokens & wonderous thynges, or euer they come to passe, and the endes of al tymes & ages. So I purposed after this maner: I wyll take her vnto my company, and cõmen louingly with her: no doubt, she shall geue me good counsell, and speake comfortably vnto me in my carefulnesse and grefe. For her sake shall I be wel and honestly taken, amonge the cõmens and lordes of the counsell. Though I be young, yet shall I haue sharpe vnderstandynge, so that I shall be meruelous in the syght of greate men, and the facis of Princes shall wonder at me. When I holde my tonge, they shall byde my leasure: when I speake, they shall loke vpon me: and yf I talke moch, they shal laye theyr handes vpon theyr mouth.

Moreouer by the meanes of her, I shall obtayne immortalytye, and leaue behynde me an euerlastyng memoryall, amonge them that come after me. I shall set the people in ordre, and the nacyons shall be subdued vnto me. Horrible tyraunces shal be afrayed, whe they do but heare of me: amonge the multitude I shall be counted good, and myghtye in battayl. When I come home, I shal finde rest with her: for her companye hath no bytternes, & her felowshyp hath no tedyousnesse, but mirth and ioye.

Now when I considered these thynges by my selfe, and pondered them in my herte, how that to be ioyned vnto wysdome is immortalytye, & great pleasure to haue her frendshyp: how that in the workes of her handes are infynyte ryches: how that, whoso kepeth cõpany with her shall be wyse: and that he whiche talketh with her, shall come to honoure: I went about seekynge, to get her vnto me. For I was a chylde of a ryght wit, and had a good vnderstandynge.

But when I grewe to more vnderstanding I came to an vndefyled body. Neuertheles when I perceyued that I could not kepe my selfe chaste, except God gaue it me (and that was a poynt of wisdom also to know whose gyfte it was) I slepte vnto the Lorde, and besought hym, and with my hole herte I said after this maner.

¶ prayer of Salomon to obteyne wysdome.

CAPI. IX.

O God of my fathers, and Lorde of mercyes (thou that hast made all thinges with thy worde, and ordeyned mã through thy wysdome, that he shulde haue dominion ouer the creature whiche thou hast made: that he shulde order the worlde according to equite and ryghteousnes, and execute iudgement with a true herte) gyue me wysdome whiche is euer about thy seat: and put me not out from amonges thy chyldren: for I thy seruaunt and son of thy handmayden am a feble personne of a short tyme, and to yonge to the vnderstandynge of iudgement, and the lawes. And though a man be neuer so perfecte amonge the children of men, yet yf thy wysdome be not with hym, he shal be nothyng regarded. But thou hast chosen me to be a kyng vnto thy people, & the iudge of thy sonnes and doughters.

Thou hast commaunded me to buylde a temple vpon thy holy mount, and an auter in the cyte wherin thou dwellest: a lykenes of thy holy tabernacle which thou hast prepared from the begynnynge, and thy wisdome with the whiche knoweth thy workes which also was with the, when thou madest the worlde, and knew what was acceptable in thy syght, and right in thy commaundementes. O sende her out of thy holy heauens and from the trone of thy maiesty e, that she maye be with me, and labour with me: that I may knowe, what is acceptable in thy syghte. For she knoweth and vnderstandeth al thynges: and she shall leade me sobrely in my workes, and preserue me in her power. So shal my workes be acceptable, and then shal I gouerne thy people rightfully, & be worthy to sytte in my fathers seate. For what man is he, that may knowe the counsayle of God? Or who can thynke what the will of God is? For the thoughtes of mortal men are mysserable, & oure forecastes are but vncertayne. And why? a mortall and corruptyble body e, is heuy vnto the soule and the earthy mansion kepeth downe the vnderstandynge that museth vpon many thynges. Very hardely can we discerne the thynges that are vpon earthe, and greate labeure haue we of we can fynde the thynges which are before oure eyes: Who wyll take awaye the ground of thynges that are done in heauen? Oh Lorde, who can haue knowledge of thy vnderstan-dynge and meanynge, except thou geue wysdome and sende thy holye ghost from aboue?

that the wayes of them which are vpō earth,
maye be reformed: that men maye lerne the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto the, and be preserued thorow wysdome.

¶ The deliueraunce of the ryghtous, commeth thorow wysdome.

CAPL. X.

A Wysdome preserued the fyrst man, whom Fene.i.d and.n.d. God made a father of the worlde, whe
he was created alone, brought him out of his offence, take hym out of the mouthe of the earth, & gaue hym power to rule all thin-Gene.iiii.d ges. When the vnryghtous went awaye in his wrath from this wysdome, the brotherhed perysshed thorow the wrath of murther.
Agayne, when the water destroyed the hole
Ge.vi.viii.d.ix.d world, wysdome preserued the ryghtous throwowe a poore tree, wherof she was gouerner her selfe. Moreouer when wyckednesse had gotten the vpper hande, so that the nacyons were puft vp with pryde, she knewe the ryght-ous, preserued him faultelesse vnto God, and layed vp sure mercy for his children. She pre-Ex.xii.d serued the ryghtous, when he fled fraome the B vngodly that perysshed, what tyme as fyre fell downe vpon the fyue cyties: Lyke as yet
this daye ye vnfrutefull, waste, and smokyng land gyueth testimony of theyr wyckednesse:
yea the vnrype and vnfrymely frutes that grow
vpon the trees.

And for a token of a remembraunce of the vnfaythfull soule, there standeth a pyller of salt. For all suche as regarded not wysdom gat not only this hurte, that they knew not the thynges whiche were good, but also lefte behynde them vnto men, a memoryall of their foolyshnesse: so that in the thynges wherin they synned, they coulde not be hyd. But as C for suche as take hede vnto wysdome, the shal
Ecc.xxiiii.d deliuer them from sorowe.

When the ryghtous fled because of his brothers wrath, wysdome led him the ryght
waye, shewed hym the kyngdome of God, gaue him knowledge of holy thynges, made hym ryche in his labōures, and brought to passe the thynges that he wente aboute. In the disceytfulnesse of such as defrauded hym, she stode by hym and made hym ryche. She saued hym from the enemyes, and defended him frō the disceyuers. She made him strong in battayll, and gaue hym the victorye, that Gene.xxxvii.d he myght know, how that wysdome is stron-Jer.xxiii.d ger che al thynges. When the ryghtous was solde, she forsoke hym not, but delyuered him from synners. She went downe with him in to ỹ dongeon, and layed hym not in the han-des: vntil she had brought him the sceptre of ỹ Ecce.xlix realme, and power agaynst those that oppressed hym. And those that had accused hym, she declared them to be lyers, and brought hym
to perpetuall worship.

She deliuered the ryghtous people and faultles seede, frome the nacion that oppressed them. She entred into the soule of the ser-Exod.i.ii. uaunt of God, and stode by him in wonders and tokens agaynste the horrible kynge.
She gaue the rightous the rewarde of their labounes, and led the forthe a meruelous
waye: on the daye tyme she was a shadowe
vnto them, & a syght of starres in the nyght Exod.xiii.d season. She brought them thorow the rede see and caried them thorow the great water.
She drowned their ennemyes in the se, and brought them out of the depe. So the ryght-ous toke the spoyles of the vngodly, & praysed thy holy name, O Lorde, and magnyfied Exodus Psalmus Cxiij. thy victorious hande with one accorde. For wysdom openeth the mouth of the dom, and maketh the tonges of babes to speake.

¶ The myracles done for Israel. The vengeance of synners. The great power and mercy of God.

CAPL. XI.

She ordred their workes in the handes,
E Exod.xiii.d of the holy prophete: so that they went thorowe the wyldernesse that was not inhabyted, & pitched their tētes in the waste deserte. They stode agaynste their ennemyes and were auēged of their aduersaryes. Whe Exod.xvii.d they were thirstye, they called vpon the, and water was gyuen them out of the rock, and their thyrst slaken out of the harde stone.
For by the thynges, where thorowe their e-nemyes were punyshed, were they helped in their nede. For vnto the ennemyes thou gauest mans blonde in stede of lyuynge water.
And where as they had scarcenes in ỹ trouble
when the chyldren were slayne, thou gauest
vnto thyne owne a plenteous water vnlooked for: declarynge by the thyrste that was in ỹ tyme, how thou wouldest punyshe thyne owne
vnto honoure, and slaye their aduersaryes.

For when they were tryed and nouertured
F with fatherly mercy, they knowledged how the vngodly were iudged, and punished the e'n ỹ wrath of God. Thou hast ỹ exprobred as a father, & proued them: but vnto the other thou hast bene a boysterous kynge, layd
harde to their charge, and condemnest them.
Whether they were absent or present, they punyshment was alyke. For their greife was double: namely, mournynge, and the remem braunce of thynges past. But when they per ceyued that their punyshmentes dyd them good, they thought vpon the Lorde, & wondered at the ende. For at the last they beheld moch of hym, of whome in the oute castyng
they thoughte scorne, as of an abiecte.

Neuertheles the ryghtous dyd not so wyl
they were thrusty: but euē like as the enemyes of the foolish were, so was also their pro-uidence. Where as certayne men nowe (tho-rowe errour) dyd worshyp dom serpentes & vayne beastes, thou sendest a multytude of domme beastes vpon them for a vengeaunce that they myght know that wherwith a man synneth

synneth, by ỹ same also shall he be punished.
For vnto the almyghty hand, that made the worlde of nought, it was not vnpossible to send among them an heape of berres, or wod
lyons, or cruell beestes of a straunge kynde, suche as are vnknowen, or spout fyre, or cast
out a smokyng breth, or shott horrible sparkes out of their eyes, which myght not only destroy them with hurtyng, but also kyll the with their horrible syght. Yea without these beastes myght they haue ben slayne with one wynde, beyng persecuted of their owne wor-kes, and scatred abrode thorow the breth of thy power.

Neuertheles thou hast ordred al thinges in D measure nombre and weight: for ỹ hast euer had great strēgth and might, and who may wstande ỹ power of thine arme? And why? like as the smal thing that the balaūce weyeth, so is the worlde before the: yea as a drop of the morning dewe, that falleth downe vpon the erth. Thou hast mercy vpon al, for thou hast power of al thinges, & makest the, as though thou sawest not the synnes of men, because they holde amende. For thou louest al ỹ thin ges that are, and hatest none of them whome thou hast made: neither diddest thou ordeyn or make any thyng of cupl wyll.

How might any thinges endure, yf it were not thy wyll? Or how coulde any thynge be preserued, except it were called of the? But thou sparest al, for al are thine, o Lorde, thou louer of soules

¶ The mercye of God towarde synners, the worm of God are vnreprouable. God gyueth leysure vnto vs,

CAPL. XII.

I O Lorde, how gracious and swete is thy spirite in all thynges? Therfore cha-stenest thou them measurably that go wrong, & warnest them concerning the thin-ges wherin they offende: thou speakest vnto them, o Lorde, ỹ exhortest them to leaue their wickednes, and put their trust in the. As for thole old inhabiters of thy holy land, ỹ migh test not away with them, for they cōmytted abhominable workes agaynst the: as witch craft, sorcery and ydolatry: they slew their own children wout mercy, they ate vp mens bowels, and deuoured the bloud: yea bicause of such abhominacions, misbileues & offringes, thou slewest the fathers of ỹ desolat sou les by the hādes of our fore fathers, that the land which thou louest aboue al other might be a dwelling for the children of God.

Neuertheles thou sparedst them also, as men, & sendest the forerunners of thine host euen hornettes to destroye them out by lytle and lytle. Not that thou wast vnable to sub due the vngodly vnto the righteous in batell,
or with cruell beastes, or with one roughe worde to destroye them together: But thy mynd was to deyne them out by lytle & lytle, geuing them time and place to amend, knowing wel that it was an vnrighteous naciō,
and wycked of nature, & that their thought myght neuer be altered: for it was a curssed sede from the begynnyng, and feared no mā:
yet hast thou pardoned their sines. For who wil saye vnto the: why hast thou done that?
Or who wil stande agaynst thy iudgement?
Or who wil come before thy face, an auēger of vnrighteous men? Or who wil blame ỹ, ỹ
the people perysshe whome thou hast made?
For there is none other God but thou, that carest for all thinges: that ỹ mayst declare how ỹ thy iudgement is not vnryghte: there dare neither kyng ne tyraunt in thy syght re quyre accomptes of them whom thou hast de stroyed.

For so moch then as thou art righteous thy selfe, thou ordrest all thynges ryghteously, ỹ punyshest euen hym that haue not deserued to be punished, and takest hym for a straunger and an alyaūt in the land of thy power.
For thy power is the begynnyng of righteou
nesse: and bicause thou art Lorde of al thin ges, therfore art ỹ gracious vnto all. When men thynke the not to be of a full strengthe, thou declarest thy power, and boldly delive rest thou them ouer that knowe the not. But thou Lord of power iudgest quyetly, and ordrest vs with great worshyp, for thou maist
do as thou wylt.

By such workes now hast thou taught thy D people, that a man also sholde be iust and louynge, and hast made thy children to be of a good hope: for euen when thou iudgest, thou gyuest rowme to amend from synnes. For in so moche as thou hast punished, and w such diligence deliuered ỹ enemies of thy seruaun tes which were worthy to dye (wherthorow thou gauest them tyme and place of amendment, that they might turne frō their wicked nesse) with how great diligence then punyshest thou thyne owne children vnto whose fathers thou hast swore and made couenaū tes of good promyses? so where as thou doest but chasten vs, thou punishest our enne-myes dyuers wayes, to the intent ỹ when we punish, we shold remembre thy goodnesse: & when we our selues are punished, to put our trust in thy mercy.

Wherfore where as men haue lyued igno- E raūtly and vnrightoully thou hast punished them sore, euē thorow the same thynges that Sapien.xi.d
they worshipped: for they went astray very Romans.i.
long in the way of errour, and held the beastes (which euen their ennemies despised) for goddes, lyuyng as children of no vnderstādyng. Therfore hast thou sent a scornful pu nishment among them, as among the childre of ignorance. As for suche as wolde not be reformed by those scornes & rebukes, they felt the worthy punishment of God. For the thinges that they suffred, they bare them vn-patiently, being not content in them, but vn willyng. And whē they perished by the same thinges that they toke for goddes, they know
leged then that there was but one true God, whome afore they wolde not knowe: therefore came the ende of their damnacion vpon
them.

¶ All thynges be vayne, except the knowledge of God. Idolaters and Idols are mocked.

CAPL. XIII.

A VAyne are all men, whiche haue not the knowlege of God: as were they that out of the good thinges, which are sene knewe not hym, that of hym selfe is euerlastynge. Neyther toke they so moche regarde of the woꝛkes þ are made, as to knowe who was the craftesman of them: but some toke the fire, some the wind oꝛ ayꝛe, some þ courle of the sterres, some the watter, some toke sun and moone, oꝛ the lyghtes of heauen, whiche rule the earth foꝛ goddes. But thoughe they had suche pleasure in their beauty, that they thought them to haue ben goddes, yet sholde they haue knowen howe moche moꝛe fayꝛer he is that made them: foꝛ the maker of beauty hath oꝛdeyned al these thinges. Oꝛ if they marueled, at the power and woꝛkes of them they shoulde haue perceyued therbye that he whiche made these thinges is myghtyer then they.

Romaie. Wayne philosophers.

B Foꝛ by the greatnes and beauty of the creature, þ maker therof may plainly be knowē. Notwithstanding they are the lesse to be blamed that sought God, and wold haue found him, and yet missed, and whyle foꝛ in as moche as they went about in his woꝛkes, & sought after them, it is a token that they regarded & held moche of his woꝛkes that are sene, how be it, they are not holly to be excused. Foꝛ yf their vnderstandinge and knowlege was so great, that they coulde discerne the woꝛld & the creatures, whyy dyd they not rather fynd out the Loꝛde therof.

Romaie

But vnhappy are they, and among þ deed is their hope that call them goddes, whiche are but the woꝛkes of mens handes: golde, syluer, and the thing that is found out by cūning, the similitude of beestes, oꝛ any vayne stone that hath ben made by hand of old. Oꝛ as when a carpenter cutteth downe a tre out of the wod, and pareth of the barke of it cunnyngly, and so with the one parte maketh a vessel to be vsed, and dꝛesseth meate with the residue. As foꝛ þ other part that is left, whiche is profitable foꝛ nothing (foꝛ it is a crooked pece of wod and full of knobbes) he caruеth it diligently thoꝛow his vanitie, and acoꝛding to the knowlege of his cunninge, he giueth it some pꝛopoꝛcion, facioneth it after þ similitude of a man, oꝛ maketh it like some beest, stracteth it ouer with red, and paynteth it, and loke what foule spot is in it, he calleth some colour vpon it.

He mocketh the ydolaters.

C Then maketh he a conuenient tabernacle foꝛ it, setteth it in the wal, and maketh it fast with pꝛon, pꝛouiding so foꝛ it, lest it happen to fall, foꝛ it is well knowen that it can not helpe it selfe. And whyy it is but an ymage, & must of necessitie be helped.

ymages.

D Then goeth he and offreth of his goodes vnto it, foꝛ his children, and foꝛ his wife, he seeketh helpeth at it, he asketh counsel at it, he is not ashamed to speke vnto it that hath no soule, foꝛ helth: he maketh his petition vnto him that is syk, foꝛ life: he pꝛayeth vnto him that is deed: he calleth vpon him foꝛ helpe, that is not hable to helpe hym selfe, & to find hym a good iourney, he pꝛayeth hym þ maye not go. And in all the thynges that he taketh in hande (whether it be to obteyn any thyng oꝛ to woꝛk) he pꝛayeth vnto him that can do no maner of good.

¶ The detestation and abhomination of ymages. A curse of them and of him that maketh them. The cupis that come of Idolatrye.

CAPL. XIIII.

A Gayne, an other man purposynge to sayle, and begynnyng to take his iourney thoꝛow the ragyng see, calleth foꝛ helpe vnto a stocke that is farre weyker the the tree that beareth him. Foꝛ as foꝛ it couetousnesse of money hath founde it oute, & the craftesman made it with his connynge. But thy pꝛouydence, o father, gouerneth all thinges from the begynning: foꝛ thou hast made a waye in the see, and a sure pathe in the mids dest of the waues: declarynge therby, that thou hast power to helpe in all thynges, yea thoughe a man went to the see without thyy. Neuertheles that the woꝛkes of thy wysdome shoulde not be vayne, thou hast caused an arke to be made, and therfoꝛe do men commyt theyr lyues to a small pece of wod, passynge ouer the see in a shyppe, and are saued.

Genesis

Foꝛ in the olde tyme also when the pꝛoude gyaūtes perished, he (in whom the hope was left to encrease the woꝛld) went in to þ shyp which was gouerned thoꝛow thy hand, and so lefte sede behynd him vnto the woꝛld. Foꝛ happy is the tre wherr thoꝛow ryghtousnes commeth: but cursed is the ymage of wod, þ is made with handes, yea both it and he that made it. He byeause he made it: and it, byeause it was called God. Wherr as it is but a frayle thynge. Foꝛ the vngodly and his vngodlynesse are both like abominable vnto God. Euen so the woꝛke and he that made it also shall be punyshed togyther. Therfoꝛe shall there a plage come vpon the ymages of the heathen, foꝛ oute of the creature of God they are become an abhominacion, a temptacion vnto the soules of men, and a snare foꝛ the fete of the vnwyse. And whyy the seruyng out of ymages is the begynnyng of hoꝛdom and the bꝛyngynge vp of them is the destruction of lyfe. Foꝛ they were not from the begynning, neither shal they continue foꝛ euer. The welthy pdemesse of men hath found the out vpon erth, therfoꝛe shall they come shoꝛtly to an ende.

Exodi

When a father mourned foꝛ his son þ was taken away frō hym, he made him an ymage (in al the hast) of his deed son, and to begyn to woꝛshyp him as a God, whiche was but a deed man, & oꝛdeyned his seruauntes to offre vnto hym. Thus by pꝛocesse of tyme, the yuse vse longe custome, this errour was kept as a lawe, and tyrauntes compelled men by violence to honour ymages. As foꝛ those þ were so farre of, that men myght not woꝛship the presently, their pycture was bꝛought frome farre (lyke the ymage of a kynge whom they wolde honour) to the intent that with great diligence they myghte woꝛshyp him, whiche was farre of, as thoughe he had ben present. Agayn, the synguler cunnyng of þ craftesmā gaue the ignoꝛaunt also a greate occasion to woꝛshyp ymages. Foꝛ the woꝛkemā wylling to dos him a pleasure that set hym a woꝛke, laboured with all his cunnynge to make the ymage of the best facion. And so, thoꝛow the beauty of the woꝛk, the common people was disceyued, in so moche þ they toke him nowe foꝛ a God, whiche a lytle afoꝛe was but honoured as a man. And this was the erroure of mans lyfe, when men (eyther foꝛ to serue theyr owne affection oꝛ to do some pleasure vnto kynges) ascribed vnto stones and stockes the name of God, which ought to be gyuen vnto no man.

Sapien.

Moꝛeouer this was not ynough foꝛ them that they erred in the knowlege of God: but where as they lyued in the greate warres of ignoꝛaunce, those manye and greate plages called they peax. Foꝛ eyther they slewe their owne childꝛen, and offred them and did sacrifyce in the nyghe season, oꝛ els helde vnreasonable watches: so that they kepte neyther lyfe ne maryage clene: but eyther one slewe an other to death maliciously, oꝛ els greued his neyghbour w aduoutrye. And thus were all thynges myxte togyther: blonde, manslaughter, theefte, dissimulacion, coꝛrupcion, vnfaythfulnesse, sedicion, periurye, disquietynge of good men, vnthankfulnes, defilyng of soules, chaungyng of byꝛth, vnstedfastnes of mariage, misoꝛdre, of aduoutry and vnclenesse. And whyy the honouryng of abhominable ymages is the cause, the begynnynge and end of all euil. Foꝛ they that woꝛship ydols, either they are mad when they are merye, oꝛ prophecy lyes, oꝛ liue vngodly, oꝛ els lightly foꝛswere thē selues: foꝛ in so moche as their trust is in the ydols, which haue neither soule ne vnderstanding, though they swere falsly, yet they thinke it shall not hurte them.

Therfoꝛe cōmeth a great plage vpon thē, and that woꝛthely: foꝛ they haue an euil opinion of God, giuing hede vnto ydols, swerynge vniustly to disceyue, and despisyng righteousnesse: foꝛ they, swerynge is no vertue, but a plage of them that synne, & goeth euer with the offence of the vngodly.

¶ The power of the faythfull prayeng the mercye of God, foꝛ whose graces sake they serue not Idols.

CAPL. XV.

BVt thou, o our God, art swete, long sufferyng and true, and in mercye oꝛdrest thou all thynges. Though we synne, yet are we thyne, foꝛ we know thy strengthe. Yf we synne not, then are we sure that thou regardest vs. Foꝛ to know the, is perfect ryghtousnesse: Yea to knowe thy ryghtousnesse and power, is the roote of immoꝛtalitie. As foꝛ the thynge that men haue founde out thoꝛowe theyr cuyll seyence, it hathe not disceyued vs: as the paynetynge of the pycture (an vnpꝛofytable labour) and carued ymage with dyuers colours, whose syght enticeth the ignoꝛaunte: so that he honoureth and loueth the pycture of a deed ymage that hath no soule.

Neuertheles they that loue such euil thinges are woꝛthy of deth: they þ trust in them they that make them, they that loue them, & they that honour them. The potter also taketh and tempereth softe earthe, laboureth it, and gyueth it the facion of a vessell, what so euer serueth foꝛ our vse, and so of one pece of claye he maketh some clene vessell foꝛ seruyce, and some cōtrary. But where to euery vessell serueth, that knoweth the potter hym selfe. So with his vayne labour he maketh a God of the same clay: this doth euen he who che a lytle afoꝛe was made of erth hym selfe and within a lytle whyle after (when he dyeth) turneth to the erth agayne.

Notwithstandynge he careth not the moꝛe bycause he shall labour, ne bycause his life is shoꝛt but stryueth to excell goldsmythes, the syluersmythes & coppersmythes, and taketh it foꝛ an honour to make vayne thynges. Foꝛ his hert is asshes, his hope is but vayne erth, and his lyfe is moꝛe vyle then claye: foꝛ so moche as he knoweth not his owne maker, & gaue hym his soule to woꝛke, and bꝛethed in hym the bꝛethe of lyfe. They count our lyfe but a pastyme, and ourr conuersacion to be but a market, and that men shoulde euer be geetynge, and that by cuyll meanes. Nowe oꝛ that of earth maketh frayle vessels and ymages, and knoweth hym selfe to offende aboue all other.

Genesis Ymages.

All the enuemyes of thy people and that holde them in subiection, are vnwyse, vnhappye, and exceedynge pꝛoude vnto theyr owne soules: foꝛ they iudge all the ydols of þ yea then to be goddes, which neyther haue lyght to se, noꝛ noses to smell, ne eares to heare, noꝛ fyngers of handes foꝛ to grope: and as foꝛ theyr fete, they are to slowe to goo: foꝛ man made them, & he þ hath but a boꝛowed spirite facioned them. But no man can make a God like vnto him: foꝛ seing he is but moꝛtal him selfe, it is but moꝛtall that he maketh with vnryghteous handes. He him selfe is better then they whom he woꝛshippeth, foꝛ he lyued though he was moꝛtal, but so did neuer they. Yea, they woꝛshyp beastes also, whiche are moost miserable: foꝛ compare thynges that can not fele vnto them, an they are woꝛse the those. Yet is there not one of these beastes þ with his sight can beholde any good thyng, neyther haue they gyuen pꝛayse ne thankes vnto God.

Psal. cxiii.

¶ The punyshment of Idolaters, and the benefytes done vnto ye faythfull.

CAPL. XVI.

A FOr these and suche other thynges haue they suffred worthy punyshment, & thorow the multitude of beestes are they roted oute. In stede of the whiche punyshmentes, thou haste graciously ordred thyne owne people, & gyuen them their delyre þ they longed for: a newe and straunge taste, prepa-
Nume.xi.a rynge them quayles to be their meate, to the intent that by the thynges whiche were shewed and sente vnto them, they that were so gredye, might be withdrawen euen from the desire that was necessarye. But these within short tyme were brought vnto pouertie, and tasted a new meat. For it was requisyte that (without anye excuse) destruction shoulde come vpon those whiche vsed tyrannye, and to shewe onely vnto the other, how their enemyes were destroyed. For when the cupill wodnelle of the beestes came vpō them, they perysshed thorowe the stynges of cruell serpentes.

B Notwithstandynge thy wrath endured not perpetually, but they were put in feare for a lytle season, that they might be reformed, hauing a token of saluacion, to remēbre the cōmaundement of thy lawe. For he that cōuerted, was not healed by the thing that he saw but by the, o sauyoure of all. So in this thou shewedst thyne enemys, that it is thou whiche delyuerest frome all cupill. As for them
Exod.xii.d when they were bytten with grashoppers & flyes, they dyed, for they were worthy to perysshe by such: But neyther the tethe of dragons ne of venimous wormes ouercame thy children, for thy mercye was euer by them and helped them. Therfore were they punysshed to remēbre thy wordes, but hastely were they healed agayne: lest they shold fall in to so depe forgetfulnelle, that they myghte not vse thy helpe.

C Neyther was it herbe ne playster that restored them to helth, but thy worde, o Lord, Deut.xxxii.c & Wisd.xvi.b which healeth al thinges. It is thou, o Lord, that hast the power of lyfe and deth: thou leddest vnto dethes dore, & bringest vp agayne. But man thorow wickednelle sleeth his own soule, & whē his spirit goeth forth, it turneth not agayne, neither maye he call agayne the soule that is taken away: It is not possyble
Wisd.xi.c to escape thy hand. For the vngodly þ wold not know the, were punished by the strēgth of thyne arme: with straūge waters, hayles and raynes were they persecuted, & thorowe fyre were they consumed. For it was a wonderous thyng that fyre myghte do more then water, which quencheth all thinges, but the world is the auenger of the righteous. Sometyme was the fyre so tame, that the beastes which were sent to punysh the vngodly, brēt not: and that bicause they sholde se & knowe that they were persecuted with the punyshment of God. And sometyme burent the fire in the water on euery side, that it might destroy the vnrighteous nation of the earth. Agayne
D Exod.xvi.a thou hast fed thyne own people with aūgels fode, and sent them breed rebye from heuen, without theyr labour, being very pleasaunt and well gusted. And to shew thy riches and swetenelle vnto thy children, thou gauest euery one their delyre, so that euery mā might take what lyked him best. But the snow and yse abode the violēce of the fyre, and melted not: that they might know that the fyre burning in the hayle and rayn, destroyed þ fruite of þ enemies, the fire also forgat his strēgth agayn, that the righteous might be norisshed. For the creature that serueth the (which arte the maker) is fearce in punishing the vnrighteous, but is easy and gentle to do good, vnto suche as put their trust in the. Therfore dyd
E all thinges alter at the same time, & were all obedient vnto thy grace, whiche is the norte of all thinges, according to the delyre of the Domine, Omnia that had nede therof, þ thy children, o Lord, whom thou louest, might know that it is not nature and þ growing of frutes that feedeth men, but that it is thy worde whiche preserueth thē þ put their trust I the: for loke what might not be destroyed with the fire, as sone as it was warmed with a lytle sunne beame, it melted: that all myght knowe that thankes oughte to be gyuen vnto the before the sunne ryse, and that thou oughtest to be worshypped before the day sprynge: for the hope of the vnthankfull shall melte awaye as the wynter yse, and perysh as water that is not necessarye.

¶ The iudgementes of God vpon the Egyptians.

CAPL XVII.

GReat are thy iudgmētes, o Lorde, and Rom.xi.d thy counsels can not be expressed, therfore men do erre, that wil not be reformed with thy wisdom. For when the vnrighteous thought to haue thy holy people in subiection, they were bound with the bandes of Exod.x darknelle and longe nyghte, shut vnder the rofe, thinking to escape the euerlastyng wisdom. And whyle they thought to be hyd in þ darknelle of their synnes, they were scatred abrode in the very myddest of the darke couerynge of forgetfulnes, put to horrible fear and wonderously vexed for the couert wher they myghte not kepe them from feare: bycause the sound came down & vexed thē: yea
Exod.xiii.d manye terryble and straunge visions made them afryde.

B No power of þ eye myght gyue the light, neither myght the clere flambes of þ starres lyghten that horrible night: for there appered vnto them a sodeyn fire very dredful. At Exod.xiii.d the which (whē they saw nothing) they were so afraid, that they thought the thing which they saw to be the more fearfull. As for þ forcery and enchauntment þ they vsed, it came to derisiō, & the proud wysdom was brought to shame: for they that promised to dryue away the fearfulnes and drede from þ weyke soules, were sycke for feare them selues, and that with scorne. And thoughe none of the wonders feared them, yet were they afrayde at the

at the beestes which came vpon them, and at the hyssyng of the serpentes. In so moch that with tremblynge they swowned, and sayde they sawe not the ayre, whiche no man yet may escape.

C For it is an heuy thyng, whē a mans owne conscience bereth recorde of his vnkyndnelle & condēneth him. And why? a vexed & wounded conscience, taketh euer cruel thynges in hand. Fearfulnes is nothing els, but a declaring that a man seeketh helpe and defence, to answere for him selfe. And lothe how moche lelle the hope is within, the more is the vnderstandyng of the mater for the which he is punished. But they that came in the mighty night
Exod.xii.c kept the slepe that fell vpon them frō vnder and from aboue: somtyme were they afraid thorow the feare of the wonders, & somtime they were so weyke þ they swowned withal: for an hasty & sodeyn fearefulnes came vpon them. Afterwarde, yf any of them had fallen he was kept & shut in prysō, but wout cheynes. But if any dwelt in a village, yf it had ben an herd or husbandman he suffred intolerable necessitie: for they were al bound wt one cheyne of darknelle.

D Whether it were a blasynge wynde, or a swete song of the byrdes amonge the thycke braūches of the trees, or the vehemence of hasty running water, or great noyse of the falyng downe of stones, or the playing and rūnyng of beestes whom they sawe not, or the mighty noyse of roryng beestes, or the sound that answereth agayn in the hye mountaynes, it made them swowne for very feare. For al the erth shyned with clere lyght, and no man was hyndered in his laboure. Onely vpon them there fell an heuye nyghte, an ymage of darknelle that was to come vpon them. Yea they were vnto thē selues the most heuy and horrible darknelle.

¶ The fyre lyght that the Israelites had in Egypt. The persecution of the Egyptians. The Lorde smote all the fyrste borne of Egypt. The tyne of the people in the wylde ernelle. Aaron rode by wyrte the lyne and the deed, with his censoure.

CAPL. XVIII.

NEuertheleſſe thy holy had a very great lyght (& the ennemyes herd their voyce but they sawe not the figure of them.) And bicause they suffred not þ same thinges, they magnified the, and they that were vexed afore (bycause they were not hurte nowe) thanked the, and besoughte the, o God, that there might be a differēce. Therfore hadde they a burning pyller of fyre to lede them in the vnknowen waye, and thou gauest them þ sunne for a free gyft, without any hurt. Reason it was that they sholde want lyght, and be put in the prysō of darknelle, which kept thy children in captyuite, by whom the vncorrupt lyght of the lawe of the world was for to be gyuen.

When they thought to slee the babes of the rychtous (one being layd out, and preserued to be leader vnto the other) thou broughtest Exod.xii.
oute the hole multitude of the chyldren, and destroyedst these in the mighty water. Of þ night were our fathers certifyed afore, that they knowyng vnto what othes they had gyuen credence, might be of good chere. Thus thy people receiued the helth of the righteous but the vngodly were destroyed. For like as thou hast hurt our enemies, so hast thou promoted vs whom thou calledst afore. For the righteous children of the good men offred secretly, and ordred the lawe of rightousnelle vnto vnite, that the iust shold receiue good and euil in lyke maner, synging prayses vnto the father of all men. Agayne, there was herd a disacordyng voyce of the enemies, and a pitcous cry for chyldren that were bewayled. The master and the seruant were punysshed in lyke maner. For they al togyther, had innumerable necessitie: for they were al bound wt one cheyne of darknelle.

Neyther were the liuing sufficient to bury Exod.xii.a
the deed, for in the twinckling of an eye, the noblest nacio of them was destroyed. As oft as God helped them afore, yet wolde it not make them byleue, but in the destruction of þ fyrst borne, they knowleged that it was the people of God. For whyle all thynges were styll, and when the night was in the middest of her course, thy almighty worde, o Lorde, lept down from heue out of thy royal trone as a rought man of warre, in the myddest of the land that was destroyed: and the sharpe sword performed their strayte commaundemēt, standing and filling al thinges wt deth: yea it stode vpon the erth, and reached vnto the heuen. Then the sight of the euil dremes vexed them sodeynly, and fearfulnelle came vpon them vnawares.

D Then laye there one here, an other there, halfe deed, halfe quycke, and shewed the cause of his deth. For the visions that vexed them, shewed them these thynges afore: so that they were not ignorant wherfore they perysshed.

The temptacion of deth touched the righteous also, and amonges the multitude in the wyldernelle there was insurrection, but thy wrathe endured not longe. For this faultelesse man wente in all the haste, and toke the battayle vpon him, broughte forth the weapon of his ministracyon: euen prayer, and the censours of reconcelynge: set hym selfe agaynste the wrath, and so broughte the myserye to an ende: declarynge therby, that he was thy seruaunte. For he ouercame not the multitude with bodyly power, ne with weapons of myght: but with the worde he subdued him that vexed hym, puttyng the in remembraunce of the othe and couenaūt made vnto the fathers. For when the deed were Exod.xxxii.c fallen downe by heapes one vpon an other, he stode in the myddest, pacifyed the wrathe, and parted the waye vnto the lyuynge. And why? in his longe garment was all the beautie, and in the foure rowes of the stones, was the glory of the fathers graues, and thy maiestie was written in the crowne of his heed.

vnto these the destroyer gaue place, & was afrayde of them: for it was onely a temptacion worthy of deth.

CAPI. XIX.

A Sh for the vngodly, ꝑ wrath came vpō thē without mercy vnto the ende. For he knew what shold happen vnto thē, how that (when they had consented to let thē go, & had sent them oute with great diligēce) they wold repent and folow vpon them. For when they were yet mourning and making lamentacion by the graues of the deed, they deuysed an other folyshnelle, so that they persecuted them in their fleing, whom they had cast out afore with prayer. Worthy necessitie also brought them vnto this end, for they had clene forgotten the thinges that happened vnto thē afore. But the thinge that was wantyng of their punishment, was requisite so to be fulfylled vpon them with tormētes: that thy people might haue a maruelous passage thorowe, and that these myghte fynde a straunge death. Exodi. xiiii. a

B Then was euery creature facioned again of new, according to the wil of their maker, obeying thy commaundemētes that thy children myght be kepte without hurte. For the cloude ouershadowed their tentes, & the drye erth appered, where afore was water: so ꝑ in the red see, there was a waye without impediment, and the great depe became a grene felde, where thorow al the people went that were defended with thy hand, seing thy wonderous and marueylous workes. For as the horses, so were they fed, and lepte lyke lambes prayseng the, o Lord, which hadst deliuered them. And whyle they were yet myndfull of the thinges ꝑ happened whyle they dwelt in the land: how the ground brought forthe flyes in stede of catell, & how the riuer scrauled with the multitude of frogges in stede of fyshes.

But at the last they saw a new creacion of byrdes, what tyme as they were desyred with lust, and desyred delycate meates. For when they were speakyng of their appetyte, the quayles came vp to them frome the see, and punishmentes came vpō the sinners, not without the tokens which came to passe afore by the vehemence of the stremes: for they suffred worthely accordig to their wickednelles, they delt so abhominably & churlishlye with straungers. Some receyued no vnknowen gestes, some brought the straungers in to bodage that did thē good. Beside all these thinges there were some, ꝑ not only receyued no straungers with their wylles, but persecuted those also, and did thē moche euil, ꝑ receyued them gladly. Therfore were they punished with blyndnelle, lyke as they that were couered with sodeyn darknelle at the dores of the ryghtous, so that euerye one sought the entraunce of his dore. Eccli. xliii. Sapien. xviii. Exodi. xiiii. b

C Thus the elementes turned in to them selues, like as when one time is chaunged vpon an instrument of muslike, and yet all the resy due kepe their melody, whiche may easely be perceyued by the syghte of the thynges ꝑ are come to passe. The drye land was turned in to a watery, and ꝑ thynges that afore swam in the water, went now vpon the dry grounde. The fyre hath power in the water (contrary to his own vertue) and the water forgat his owne kynd, to quenche. Agayne, the flambes of the moysome beestes hurte not the flesh of them that wente with them, neyther melted they the yse, whiche els melteth lyghtly. D

In all thynges hast thou promoted thy people (o Lord) and brought them to honoure: thou hast not despysed thē, but alwaye and in al places hast thou stand by them.

¶ The ende of the boke of wysdome.

THE BOKE OF IESVS THE SONNE OF SYRACH, VVHICHE IS CALLED IN LATYNE ECCLESIASTICVS.

¶ The prologe of Jesus the sonne of Sirach, vnto his boke.

¶ Wysdome procedeth and commeth of God. ꝑ practyse of the feare of God. Knyghtoulnelle is a degree to come by wysdome.

CAPI. I.

MAny and greate men haue declared wysdome vnto vs, oute of the lawe, out of the Prophetes, and oute of other that folowed them. In the which thynges Israel ought to be commended, by the reason of doctryne, & wysdom: Therfore they that haue it, and rede it, shulde not onely them selues be wyse there thorow, but serue other also with teachynge and wrytynge.

Afore that my graundfather Jesus had gyuen diligent laboure to rede the lawe, the Prophetes, & other bokes that were left vs of oure fathers, and had well exercysed hym selfe therin: he purposed also, to wryte some thyng of wysdome, and good maners, so the intēt that they which were wyllyng to lerne and to be wyse myght haue the more vnderstādyng, and be the more apt to leade a good conuersacyon.

Wherfore I exhort you to receyue it louingly, to rede it with dylygence, and to take it in good worth, though oure wordes be not so eloquent as the famos Oratours. For the thynge that is wrytten in the Hebrue tonge, soundeth not so well, when it is translated into an other speache. Not onely this boke of myne, but also the lawe, the Prophetes, & other bokes, sound farre other wyse, whē they be, when they are spoken in their owne language.

Nowe in the .xxxbiij. yere when I came in to Egypt, in the tyme of Ptolomy Euerges, and contynued there all my lyfe, I gat liberte to rede and wryte many good thinges. Wherfore I thought it good and necessary, to bestowe my diligence and trauayle to interprete this boke. And consyderynge that I had tyme, I laboured and dyd my best to performe this boke, & to bringe it vnto lyght: that the straungers also whiche are disposed to lerne, myght applye theym selues vnto good maners, and lyue accordynge to the lawe of the Lorde.

All wysdome commeth of God the Lord, and hathe bene euer in hym, and is before all tyme. Who hath nombred the sand of the see, the droppes of the rayne & the dayes of the time? Who hath measured ꝑ heyghte of heauen, the breth of the earth, & the depenelle of the see? Who hath sought out the grounde of Gods wysdome, whiche hath bene before all thynges? Wysdom hath bene before all thynges, and the vnderstandyng of prudence from euerlastynge. (Gods worde in the heyght, is the well of wysdom, and the euerlastynge commaundementes are the entraunce of her.) Vnto whom hath the rote of wysdom bene declared? Or who hath knowen her wyt? Vnto whom hath the doctryne of wysdom bene discouered & shewed? and who hathe vnderstande the manyfolde entraunce of her? Ecclesi. xliii. Regu. viii. and. viii. c Job. xxviii. & Jacob. i. a

There is one euen the dyghest, the maker of all thynges, the almyghtye, the kynge of power (of whom men ought to stande greatly in awe) which syteth vpō his trone, being a God of dominiō: He hath created her thorowe the holye ghost: he hath sene her, nombred her, and measured her: He hath poured her owte vpon all his workes, and vpon all flesshe, accordynge to his gyft: he gyueth her excedyngly vnto them that loue hym. The feare of the Lorde is worship and triumphe, gladnelle and a ioyfull crowne. The feare of the Lorde maketh a merry herte, gyueth gladnes, ioye and longe lyfe. Who so feareth the Lorde, it shall go well with hym at the last, and in the daye of his death he shall be blessed. D

The loue of God is honorable wysdome: loke vnto whom it appeareth, they loue it, for they se what wonderous thinges it doth. The feare of the Lorde is the begynnyng of wysdome, and was made with the faythfull in the mothers wombe: it shall go with the chosen women, and shall be knowen of the ryghtous and faythfull. The feare of ꝑ Lord is the ryghte Gods seruyce, that preserueth and iustifyeth the herte, and gyueth myrth & gladnelle. Who so feareth the Lorde, shal be happye: and when he haue nede of comfort, he shal be blessed. To feare God is the wysdome that maketh ryche, and bryngeth all good with her. She fylleth the hole house with her gyftes: and ꝑ garners with her treasure. The feare of the Lorde, is the crowne of wysdome, E Psal. cxi. b Prouer. xv. d Feare of the Lorde.

wysdome, and gyueth plenteous peace and healthy. He sache sene her and nourished her knowledge and vnderstandyng of wysdome hath he poured out as rayne: and them that holde her fast, hath he brought vnto honour.

P The feare of the Lorde is the rote of wysdome, and her braunches are longe lyue. In the treasures of wysdome, is vnderstandynge and deuotion of knowledge, but wysdome is abhorred of synners. The feare of the Lorde dryueth out synne, for he that is without feare, can not be made ryghteous, and his wyl full boldnesse is his owne destruction. A pa-cyent man wyll suffre vnto the tyme, and the shall he haue the rewarde of ioye. A good vnderstanding wyl hyde his wordes for a tyme, and many mens lyppes shall speake of his
wysdome.

In the treasures of wysdome is the decla-racyon of doctryne, but the synner abhorreth the worshyp of God. My sonne, yf thou de-syre wysdom, kepe the commaundement, and God shall gyue her vnto the: for the feare of the Lorde is wysdome and nurture, he hath pleasure in fayth and louyng meknesse, and he shal fil the treasures therof. Be not obstinate and vnfayethfull to the feare of the Lorde, & come not vnto hym with a double herte. Be not an ypocryte in the syght of men, and take good hede what thou speakest. Watche well these thynges, lest thou happen to fall, and bryngе thy soule to dishonour, and so God discouer thy secretes, and cast the downe in the myddest of the congregacyon: because thou wouldest not receyue the feare of God,
and because thy herte is full of fayned nesse
and disceyte.

The exhorteth the seruauntes of God to ryghtous-nesse, loue, vnderstandyng, and patience, and exhorteth hym that feareth God, to helpe, to hope, and to loue: because God neuer confoundeth nor forsaketh them that trust in hym. A curse vpon the vnsayth, feareles, and impacient of herte.

My sonne, yf thou wylte come into the seruyce of God, stand fast in ryghteous-nesse and feare, and arme thy soule to temptacion: settle thyne herte, and be pacyēt:
bowe downe thyne eare, receyue the wordes

God, ioyne thy selfe vnto hym and suffre, þ thy lyfe maye encreace at the last. Whatso-

Lorde put your trust in hym, and mercy shal come vnto you for pleasure: O ye that feare
the Lorde set your loue vpon hym, and your hertes shall be lyghtened.

B Ecclesiastici. Ecclesiastes

Consydre the olde generacions of men (O ye children) and marke them well: was there euer any one confounded, that put his trust in the Lorde? Who euer cōtinued in his feare and was forsaken? Or whome dyd he euer despyse, that called faythfully vpon hym?
For God is gracious and mercyfull, he for-geueth synnes in the time of trouble, and is a defender for all them that seke him in the truth. Wo be vnto him þ hath a wauering wycked lyppes and euyll occupied handes, &
to the synner þ goeth two maner of wayes.
Wo be vnto them that are loose of herte,
which put not their trust in God, & therfore shall they not be defended of hym. Wo be vn to them that haue lost patience, forsaken the ryghte wayes, and are turned back, in to fro warde wayes. What wyll they do, whē the Lorde shall begyn to vyset them?

C Iohn.xiiii.

They that feare the Lorde, wyl not mys-
trust his word: and they that loue hym, wil kepe his commaundement. They that feare the Lord will seke out the thynges that are pleasaunt vnto hym: and they that loue him shall fulfyll his lawe. They that feare the Lorde wyl prepare their hertes, and humble their soules in his sight. They that feare the Lorde kepe his commaundementes, and wil
be pacyent tyll they se hym selfe, sayinge:
better it is for vs to fall into the handes of the Lorde, then in to the handes of men: for his mercye is as greate as hym selfe.

Ecclesiastici. Mercy.

To our father and mother ought we to gyue double honoure. Of the blessynge and curse of the father and mother. No man ought ouer curiously to searche out the secretes of God.

CAPI. III.

The children of wysdome are a congregacyon of the ryghtous, and their maner is obedyence and loue. Heare me your father (O my deare children) and do therafter, that ye maye be safe. For the Lord will haue the father honoured of the children, and loke what a mother commaundeth her children to do, he wil haue it kept. Who so honoureth his father, shall haue ioye of his owne children: and who he maketh his prayer he shall be herde. He that honoureth his father, shall haue a longe lyfe: and he that is obedient for the Lordes sake, dis
mother shal haue ioy of him.

He that feareth the Lorde, honoureth his father and mother, and doth them seruyce, as it were vnto the Lord hym selfe. Honour thy father in deed, in worde, and in all pacyence, that thou mayste haue his blessynge:
for the blessynge of the father buyldeth vp houses of the children, but the mothers curse roteth

roteth owte the foundacyons. Reioyce not when thy father is reproued, for it is no honour vnto the, but a shame. For the worshyp of a mans father, is his owne worshyp, and where the father is without honour, it is the dishonesty of the sonne. My sonne, make much of thy father in his age, and greue him not as longe as he liueth. And yf his vnderstandyng fayle, haue pacyence with him, and despyse him not in thy strength. For the good dede that thou shewest vnto thy father, shal not be forgotten: and when thou thy selfe wa-xest, it shall be rewarded the (and for thy mathers offence, thou shalt not be recompensed with good, yea it shall be founded for the in ryghteousnesse) and in the day of trouble thou shalte be remembred: thy synnes also shall melt away, lyke as the yse in the fayre warm weder.

c He that forsaketh his father, shall come to shame: and he that defyeth his mother, is cursed of God. My sonne, preserue thy workes with louing meknesse, so shalt thou be loued aboue other men. The greater thou art, the more humble thy self (in all thinges)
and thou shalt fynde fauoure in the syght of God. For great power belongeth only vnto
God, and he is honoured of the lowly.

Seke not out the thynges that are aboue thy capacyte, and searche not the grounde of suche thynges as are to myghtye for the: but loke what God hath cōmaunded the, thynk vpon that alway, and be not curyous in many of his workes. For it is nedefull for the to se with thyne eyes, the thynges that are secrete. Make not thou to moche searche in superfluous thinges, and be not curyous in many of his workes: for many thynges are sh-wed vnto the alredy, which be aboue the capacitye of men. The medlyng with such hath begyled many a man, and tagled their wittes in vanytye. Now he that loueth perill, shall perysshe therin.

An harde herte shall fare euyll at the last,
d (an herte that goeth two wayes, shal not prosper: and he that is frowarde of herte, wyl euer be the worse and worse.) A wycked herte shall be laden with sorowes, and the vngodly synner wyll heape one syn vpon an other. The counsell of the proude hath no healthy, for the plant of syn shall be rooted out in them. The herte of him that hath vnderstandynge shall perceyue wysdo thynges, and a good eare wyll gladly herken vnto wysdome. An herte that is wyse and hath vnderstandynge, wyll abstayne from synnes, and increase in the wor-kes of ryghteousnesse. Water quencheth burnyng fyre, and mercy reconcyleth synnes. God hath respecte vnto him that is thankfull: he thynketh vpon hym agaynst þ tyme to come:
so that when he falleth, he shal fynde a stōg

Be not caryed about to euery wynde, and go not in to euery waye: for so doth the synner that hath a double tonge. Stande fast in the waye of the Lorde, be stedfast in thy vnderstandyng, abyde by the worde, and folowe the worde of peace & ryghtousnesse. Be gentle to heare the worde of God, that thou mayest vnderstand it, and make a true answere with wysdome. Be swyft to heare, but slow and patient in gyuynge answere. If thou hast vnderstandynge, shape thy neyghboure an answere: If no, laye thyne hande vpon thy mouth: lest thou be trapped in an vndiscrete worde, and so confounded. Honour and worshyp is in a mans wyse talkyng, but the tong of the vndiscrete, is his owne destruction. Be not a pryuye accuser as longe as thou lyuest, and bee no slaunder with thy tong. For shame and sorow goeth ouer the theefe, and an euyll name ouer hym that is double tonged: but he that is a pryuy accuser of other men, shal be hated enuyed and confounded. Ecclesi.xxii.b

Holde frendshyppe with many, neuertheles haue but one counseler of a thousande.

If thou getteest a frende, proue him fyrste, and be not gastly to gyue him credence. For some man is a frende, but for a tyme, & wyll not abyde in the daye of trouble. And there is some frende that turneth to enmyte, and taketh part agaynst the: and if the knowe eny hurt by the, he telleth it out. Againe, some frende is but a companyon at the table, and in the daye of neede he contynueth not. But a sure frende wyll be vnto the euen as thyne owne selfe, and deale faythfullye with thy housholde folke. If thou suffre trouble and aduersetye, he is with the, and byeth not hym selfe frome the. Departe frome thyne enemyes, yea and beware of thy frindes.

Ecclesi.xxii.b

A faythfull frynd is a strong defence: who so fyndeth such one, findeth a noble treasure. A faythfull frende hath no peare, the weyght of gold and syluer is not to be compared to ꝑ goodnesse of his fayth. A faythfull frend is a medicyne of lyfe, & they that feare the Lord shall fynde hym. Who so feareth the Lorde, shall prospere with frendes: and as he is him selfe so shall his frende be also. My sonne receyue doctryne from thy youth vp, so shalte thou finde wysdom tyll thou be elde. Go to her as one that ploweth, & soweth, & wayte paciently for her good frutes. For thou shalt haue but lytle labour in her worke, but thou shalt eate of her frutes right soone. O howe exceedynge sharpe is wisdom to vnlerned mē! an vnstedfast body wyll not remaine in her. Vnto suche she is as it were a touchstone, & he casteth her frome him in all the haste. Of one sparke is made a greate fyre, and an vngodly mā laieth wayt for bloud. Beware of the disceytfull, for he ymagyneth wicked
thynges to bryng the in to a ppetual shame.
If thou takest an alcaunt vnto the, he shall destroy the in vnquietnelle, & dryue the from thyne owne wayes.

¶ Vnto whom we oughte to do good. Enemyes ought to be eschewed.

CAPI. XII.

A When thou wylt do good, know to whō thou doest it, & so shalt thou be greatly thanked for thy benefytes. Doo good Ecclath.vi.b Timoth.v.a vnto the righteous, and thou shalt fynd great rewarde: though not of hym, yet (no doubt) the Lorde hym selfe shall rewarde the. He standeth not in a good case that is alway oc cupyed in euyll, & gyueth no almes: for the hyest hateth & synners, and hath mercy vpon
them that shewe the workes of repentaunce.
Gyue thou vnto suche as feare God, and receyue not a synner. As for the vngodlye and synners, he shall recompence vengeaunce vn
to them, and kepe them to the day of wrath.
Gyue thou vnto the good, and receyue not the synner: do wel vnto hym, that is lowly, but gyue not vnto the vngodlye. Let not the breed be gyuen hym, that he be not myghtyer
then thy selfe therin. For so shalt thou receiue twyse as moche euyll, in all the good & thou doest vnto hym: And why? the hyest hateth synners, and shall rewarde vengeaunce to the vngodly.

In prosperitie a frende shall not be kno- B
wen, and in aduersitie an enemy shall not be
hyd. For when a man is in welth, it greueth his ennemyes: but in heynelle and trouble
a man shall knowe his frende. Truste neuer thyne ennemye, for lyke as an yron rusteth, so doth his wyckednes. And though he make moche crouchyng and kneelyng, yet kepe wel thy mynde, and beware of hym. Set him not by the, neither let him syt at thy right hand, leest he tourne hym, get in to thy place, take thy rowme and seke thy seate, and so thou at the last remembre my wordes, & be prycked
at my sayinges.

Bynde not two sinnes togither, for there Ecclus shal not be one vnpunished. Who wyl haue pity of the charmer that is stinged of the ser pent, or of all suche as come nye the beestes? Euen so is it with him that kepeth company with a wycked man, and lappeth hym self in his synnes. For a season wyll he byde with the, but yf thou stomble, he taryeth not. If a enemy is swete i his lyppes, he can make ma- C ny wordes, and speke many good thynges: Iames.iii.a Yea he can wepe w his eyes, but in his herte he ymagineth how to throw the in to the pit, and yf he may fynde opportunitie, he will not be satisfied with bloude. If aduersitie come vpon the, thou shalt fynde hym there fyrst, & though he pretende to do the help, yet shal he vndermyne the. He shal shake his heed & clap his handes ouer the for very gladnelle, and whyle he maketh many wordes, he shall dis- guyse his countenaunce.

¶ The companyes of the proude and of the ryche are to be eschewed. The loue of God. Lyke doo company with their lyke.

CAPI. XIII.

Who so toucheth pytche, shall be fyled A Ecclus.xii.a withall: and he that is familier with the proude, shall clothe hym selfe with pryde. He taketh a burthen vpon hym, that accompanyeth a more honourable man then hym selfe. Therfore kepe no familiaritie w one & is rycher then thy selfe. How agree the kettle and the pot togither? For yf the one be smitten agaynst the other, it shall be broken. The ryche deleth vnryghtously, and threte- neth withall: but the poore being oppressed and wrongously delt withal, suffreth feare nelle, and gyueth fayre wordes. yf thou be for his profyte, he vseth the: but yf thou haue nothyng, he shal forsake the. As long as thou hast any thynge of thyne owne, he shall be a good felowe with the: yea he shall make the a bare man, & not be sorye for the. If he have nede of the, he shall defraude the: and with a pryuy mocke) shall he put & in an hope, and gyue the all good wordes, and saye: what wantest thou? Thus shall he shame the in his meate, vntyll he have supte the clene ty twyse or thryse, and at the last shal he laugh the to scorne. Afterwarde when he seith that thou thou hast nothynge, he shall forsake the, and take his heed at the.

B Beware thou be not disceyued & brought downe in thy symplenelle. Be not to humble in thy wyldome, lest when thou art brought low, thou be disceyued thorow foolishnelle.
If thou be called a mightye man, absent thy selfe, so shall he cal the to hym the more oft.
Prease not vnto hym, that thou be not shot out: and go not farre of, leest he forget the.
Withdrawe not thy selfe from his speache, but beleue not his manye wordes. For with moche communication shall he tempte the, & (with a pryuye mocke) shall he questyon the of thy secretes. The vnmercyfull mynde of his that marke thy wordes, he shal not spare to doo the hurte, and to put the in pryson.
Beware, and take good hede to thy selfe,
for thou walkest in peryll of thy ouerthrowynge.

C How whē thou hearest his wordes, make as though thou werest in a dreme, and wake
by. Loue God all thy lyfe long, & call vpon him in thy nede. Euery beest loueth his like, euen so let euery man loue his neyghbour. Al fleth wil resorte to their lyke. And euery mā will kepe companye with suche as he is him selfe. But as the wolfe agreeth w the lambe, so doth the vngodly with & rightous. What felowshyp sholde an holye man haue with a dog? How can the ryche and the poore agre togyther? The wyld asse is the lyons praye in the wyldernelle, euen so are poore men the meat of the ryche. Like as & proude may not away with lowlynelle, euen so doth the rych abhorre the poore. Yf a ryche man fall, his frendes set hym vp agayn, but when & poore falleth, his frendes forsake hym. If a ryche man fall in to an errour, he hathe many helpers, he speketh proude wordes, and yet men iustifye hym.

D But yf a poore man go wrong, he is punis shed: yea though he speke wysely, yet can it haue no place. When the ryche man speketh euery body holdeth his tong, and loke what he layth, they praise it vnto the cloudes. But yf the poore man speake, they saye: What felowe is this? And yf he doo amysse, they shal destroy him. Ryches are good vnto him that hath no synne in his conscience, and pouertie is a wycked thynge in the mouthe of the vngodly. The hert of mā chaungeth his countenaunce, whether it be in good or euyl.
A cheerefull countenaūce is a token of a good herte, for els it is an harde thynge to knowe
the thoughte.

¶ The offence of the tonge. Man is but a vayne thynge. Happy is he that continueth in wysdome.

CAPI. XIIII.

Blessed is the man, that hathe not fallen with the worde of his mouth, and is not prycked with the conscience of synne.
Happye is he that hathe no heynelle in his mynde, and is not fallen from his hope. It becommeth not a couetous man & a nygarde to be ryche; and what sholde a nygarde doo with golde? He that with all his carefulnes heapeth together vnryghtously gathereth for other folkes, and an other mā shall make good chere with his goodes. He & is wycked vnto hym selfe, howe sholde he be good vnto other men? How can such one haue any plea sure of his goodes? There is nothyng worse then when one disfauoureth hym selfe, and this is a reward of his wickednelle. If he do any good, he doth it not knowynge therof, & agaynst his wyl, and at the last he declareth his vngraciousnes. A nigard hath a wycked eye, he turneth away his face, and despyseth his owne soule. A couetous mans eye hath ne Prou.xxviii.c

vntyll he wyther awaye, and haue lost his

A wicked eye spareth breed, & ther is scarce B nelle vpon his table. My son, do good to thy selfe of that thou hast, and gyue the Lorde his due offrynges. Remembre that deth taryeth not, and that the couenaunt of the graue is shewed vnto the: for the couenaunte of this Eccl.xli.a worlde shal dye the deth. Do good vnto thy Tobias.b
frend before thou dye, and according to thy Luke.xvi.b
habilitie, reche out thy hande and gyue vnto
the poore. Be not disponyted of & good day, and let not the portion of the good day ouer passe the. Shalt thou not leaue thy trauayles and labours vnto other mē? In the deuiding of the heritage gyue and take, and sanctifye thy soule. Worke thou ryghtousnelle before thy deth, for in & hel there is no meat to find. Esay.xl.a All fleth shal fade away lyke grasse, and lyke i. Peter.i.b

some are cast downe: eue so is the generacio
of fleth and bloud, one commeth to an ende,
an other is borne.

All transitorye thynges shall fayle at the C
last, and the worker therof shall go withall.
Euerye chosen worke shall be iustified, and he that medleth withall, shall haue honoure therin. Blessed is the mā that kepeth hym in wysdome, and exercyseth hym selfe in vnder standyng, and with discretion shal he thinke vpon the foreknowlege of God. Which con sidereth the wayes of wysdome in his herte,

ter her (as one that seketh her out) and conti nueth in her wayes. He loketh in at her windowes, and harkeneth at her doores: he taketh his rest beside her house, and fastneth his stake in her walles: he shall pytche his tent nye vnto her hand, and in his tent shall good thinges rest for euermore: he shall set his chyldren vnder her couerynge, and shall dwel vnder her braunches. Vnder her cou-ring shal he be defended frō the heate, and in her glory shal he rest.

¶ The goodnesse which foloweth him that feareth God. God reiecteth and casteth of the sinner. God is not the author of euyll.

CAPI. XV.

a HE that feareth God, wyl do good: and who so kepeth the lawe, shall obtayne wysdome. As an honourable mother shal she mete him, and as a virgyn shal she receyue hym. With the breed of life and vnderstanding shal she fede hym, and gyue him the water of holsome wysdom to drynke. Yf he be constant in her, he shal not be moued: and if he holde him fast by her, he shall not come to confusion. She shal bryng him to honour among his neyghbours, and i the myddest of the congregacion shall she open his mouthe. With the spirite of wysdom and vnderstandyng shal she fyl him, and clothe hym with ꝑ garmẽt of glorye. She shal heape the treasure of myrth and ioy vpon him, and gyue him an euerlastyng name to heritage. Folish mẽ wil not take hold vpon her, but suche as haue vnderstandyng, will mete her, for she is far frõ pryde and disceyte. Men that go about with lyes, wyl not remembre her: but mẽ of truth shal be found in her: euẽ vnto the beholding of God. Prayse is not semely in the mouthe of the vngodly, for he is not sent of ꝑ Lorde. For of God commeth wisdom, and ꝑ prayse shal stand by the wisdom of God, and shalbe plenteous in a faythful mouth, and the Lorde shal gyue her vnto him.

Iohn.viii.b

b SAy not thou: Je is the Lordes fault that I am gone by, for thou shalt not do the thing that God hateth. Say not thou: he hath cau sed me to goo wronge, for he hath no nede of the vngodly. God hateth al abhominacio of errour, & they that feare God wil loue none suche. God made man at the beginnyng, and left hym in the hand of his counsell. He gaue him his commaundementes and preceptes, if thou wylte obserue the commaundementes, and kepe acceptable faythfulnesse for euer, they shal preserue the. He hath set water and fyre before the, reache out thyne hande vnto which thou wylt. Before man is lyfe & deth, good and euyll: loke what him lyketh, shall be giuen him: for ꝑ wisdom of God is great and mighty in power, and beholdeth al men continually. The eyes of the Lord are vpon them that feare hym, and he knoweth all the workes of man. He hath commaunded no mã to do vngodly, neither hath he gyuẽ any man leue to synne.

¶ Of vnhappy and wycked children. No man can hyde hym selfe from God. An exhortacion to the receyuyng of instruction.

CAPI. XVI.

a DEsyre not thou in the multitude of vngodly children, and haue no pleasure in them, yf they feare not God. Trust not thou to their lyfe, and regarde not their labours: for one sonne that feareth God, is better then a thousande vngodly. And better it is better for a man to dye wout children, then to leaue behynde hym vnrighteous children as are vngodly. For by one that hath vnderstãding, may a hole city be vpholdẽ, but though the vngodly be manye, yet shall it be wasted thorow them. Many such thinges hath myne eye seene, and greater thinges then these haue I herde with myne eares. In the congregacion of the vngodlye shall a fyre burne, and amonges vnfaythfull people shal the wrath be kyndled. Ecclꝰ.xxi

b The olde gyauntes obteyned no grace for their synnes which were destroyed, trusting to their owne strengthe. Neyther spared he them amonges whom Loth was straunger, but smote them and abhorred them by cause of the pryde of their wordes. He had no pity vpon them, but destroyed all the people that were so stoute in synne. And for to mothe as he ouerlawe not the fyre hundred thousande that gathered them selues togither in ꝑ hardnesse of their hert, it were marueil yf one being hardnecked should be fre. For mercy and wrath is with him: he is both mighty to forgyue, and to poure out displeasure. Lyke as his mercy is great, euen so is his punishmẽt also, he iudgeth a mã according to his workes. Genes.xiii.b Ecclꝰ.xxi

The vngodly shall not escape in his spoyle, and the long pacience of him ꝑ sheweth mercy, shal not byde behynd. Al mercy shal make place vnto euery mã according to the desernyng of his workes, and after the vnderstandyng of his pylgrymage.

c Saye not thou: I wyl hyde my selfe from God, for who wyl thynke vpon me from aboue? I shall not be knowen in so greate a heape of people, for what is my soule among so many creatures? Beholde, the heuen, yea the heuen of heuens, the depe, the earth, and all ꝑ therin is shall be moued at his presence: the mountaynes, the hylles, and the foundacions of the earth shal shake for feare, when God visiteth them.

These thynges dothe no hert vnderstand, but he vnderstandeth euerye herte, and who vnderstandeth his wayes? No man seith his storme, and the most part of his workes are secrete. Who wyl declare the workes of his ryghtousnesse? Or who shall be able to abyde them? For the couenaunt is farre from some, and the tryinge oute of men is in the fulfyllyng. He that is humble of hert, thynketh vpon suche thinges: but an vnwise and erroneous man calleth his mynde vnto foolysh thinges.

d My sonne harken thou vnto me, and learne vnderstandyng, and marke my wordes with thyne hert: I wyll gyue the a sure doctryne, and playnly shall I instruct the. God hathe set his workes in good order frome the begynnynge, and parte of them hathe he sundered frome the other. He hathe garnysshed his workes from euerlastyng, and their begynnynges, according to their generacyons. None of them hyndered an other, neyther was anye of them disobedient vnto his worde. After this, God loked vpon the erth, and fylled it with his goodes. Withal meuer of lyuing beastes hath he couered the grounde, and they all shall be tourned vnto erth agayne.

¶ The creation of man, and the goodnesse that God hathe doone vnto him. Of almes and repentaunce.

CAPI. XVII.

1 GOd shope man of the earth, and tourned hym vnto earthe agayne. He gaue hym the nombre of dayes and certayn tyme, yea and gaue hym power of the thynges that are vpon earthe. He clothed hym with strength, and made hym after his owne lyke nesse. he made all flesche to stande in awe of hym, so that he had the dominion of all beastes and foules. He made out of hym an helper lyke vnto hym selfe, and gaue them discrecion and tonge, eyes and eares, and a hert to vnderstande, & fylled them with instruccion and vnderstandyng. He created for them also the knowlege of the spirite, fylled their hertes with vnderstandyng, and shewed the good and euyl, he set his eye vpon their hertes, declaring vnto them his great and noble workes, that they shold praise his holy name togyther, reioyse of his wonders, and declaring of his noble actes. Beside this he gaue them instruction and the lawe of lyfe for an heritage.

Genes.i.a

b He made him an euerlastyng couenaunt with them, and shewed them his rightousnesse and iudgemẽtes. They saw his glory with their eyes, and their eares herde the maiesty of his voyce. And he sayd vnto them: beware of al vnrighteous thynges. He gaue euery man also commaundement concerning his neighboure.

c Their wayes are euer before hym, and are not hydde frome his eyes. He hathe set a ruler vpon euerye people, but Israell is the Lordes portion. Al their workes are as the sunne in the syghte of God, and his eyes are alwaye lokynge vpon their wayes. Al their vnrighteousnesses are manyfest vnto hym, and all their wyckednesses are open in his syghte. The mercye that a man sheweth, is as it were a purse with hym, and a mannes good dede preserueth hym as the apple of an eye. At the laste shall he awake, and rewarde euerye man vpon his heed as he hathe deserued, and shal tourne them togyther in to the vtthermoost partes of the earthe. But vnto them that wyll repent, he hathe gyuen the way of ryghtousnes. Es for such as be weike & comforteth them, suffereth them, and sendeth them the portyon of the veritie.

d Tourne thou vnto the Lorde, forsake thy synnes, make thy prayer before the Lorde, doo the lesse offence, tourne agayne vnto the Lord, forsake thyne vnrighteousnes, be an vtter enemy to abhomination, lerne to know the ryghteousnesse and iudgementes of God, stand in the portion that is set forth for the, and in the prayer of the moost hyghe God. Goo in to the portion of the holye worlde, with suche as be synnye, and gyue thankes vnto God.

Who wyll prayse the Lorde in the helle? Abyde not you in the errours of the vngode lye, but gyue hym thankes before death. As for the dead, thankefulnesse perysheth frome hym as nothynge. Gyue thou thankes in thy lyfe, yea whyle thou arte lyuynge and hole, shalt thou giue thankes, and prayse God, and reioyse in his mercye. O howe great is the louynge kyndnesse of the Lorde and his mercyfull goodnesse vnto suche as tourne vnto hym? For all thynges may not be in man: And why? the sonne of man is not immortall, and he hathe pleasure in the vanitie of wyckednesse. What is more clere then the sunne? yet shall it fayle. Or what is more wycked then the thynge that flesche and bloude hathe ymagyned? and that same shall be reproued. The Lord seith the power of the hye heuen, and all are but earthe and asshes. Ecclꝰ.xviii.a Esay.xxxviii.b

¶ The meruelous workes of God, the mystery and wretchednesse of man. Agaynst God ought we not to complayne. Prayer must we continually.

CAPI. XVIII.

1 HE that lyueth for euermore, made all thynges togyther. God onely is ryghteous, & remayneth a victorious kyng for euer. Who shall be able to expresse the workes of hym? Who hath sought oute the grounde of his noble actes? Who shall declare the power of his greatnesse? Or who wyl take vpon hym to tell out his mercy? As for the wonderous workes of ꝑ Lorde, there maye nothyng be taken from them, nothyng maye be put vnto them, neyther maye the grounde of them be founde out. But when a man hath doone his beste, he muste begyn agayne: and when he thynketh to be come to an ende, he muste goo agayne to his labour. What is man? Wherto is he worthe? What good or euyll can he do? Yf the nombre of a mans dayes be almoste an hundreth yeres, if is moche. Genes.i.a Psal.xxxix.c

b Like as the droppes of rayne are vnto the see, and as a graueil stone is in comparyson of the sande: so are these fewe yeres to the dayes euerlastynge. Therfore is the Lorde pacient with them, and powreth out his mercye vpon theym. He sawe and perceyued the thoughtes and ymaginacions of their hert, that they were euyll: therfore heaped he vp his mercy, all goodnesse vpon them, and shewed them the waye of ryghteousnesse. The mercy that a man hath, reacheth to his neighbour, but the mercy of God is vpon al flesh. He chasteneth, he teacheth and nourtoureth: yea euen as a shepherde tourneth agayne his flocke, so dothe he all them that receyue chastenynge, nourtoure and doctryne. Merciefull is he vnto them that stand in awe of his iudgementes. II.Petri.iii.b Esay.xxvi.a c My son, when thou doest good, make no grudging at it: and what so euer thou giuest speake no discomfortable wordes. Shal not the dewe coole the heat? Euen so is a worde better then a gyfte. Is not a frendly worde a good honest gyfte? but a gracyous man gyueth them bothe. A foole shall cast a man in the teeth, and that roughly, and a gyft of the nygarde putteth out the eyes. Get the righteousnesse before þ come to iudgement: lerne before thou speake, and goo to physycke or euer thou be sycke: examyn and iudge thy selfe before the iudgement come, and so shalt thou fynde grace in the syght of God. Humble thy self before thou be sycke, and in tyme of thy disease shewe thy conuersacion. Lette not to praye alwaye, and stande not in feare to be reformed vnto death, for the rewarde of God endurreth for euer. Before thou prayest prepare thy soule, and be not as one that tempteth God. Thynke vpon the wrathfull indignacion that shall be at the ende, and the houre of vengeaunce, when he shall turne awaye his face. When thou hast ynoughe, remembre the tyme of honger, and when thou arte ryche, thynke vpon the time of pouertie and scarcenesse.

A Labourynge man that is gyuen vnto dronkennesse, shall not be ryche: and he that maketh not moch of smal thinges, shal fall by lytle and lytle. Wyne & women, make wyse men rennagates, & put men of vnderstanding to reproue, and he that accompanieth aduoutrers, shal become a wicked mā. Mothes and wormes shal haue hym to heritage, yea he shal be set vp to a greater example, and his soule shall be rooted out of the nombre. He that is hasty to giue credence is lyght mynded, and doth against him selfe. Who so reioyseth in wickednesse shal be punished: he þ hateth to be reformed, his lyfe shal be shortned: and he that abhorreth babiyng of wordes, quenscheth wyckednes. B twise. Ecclus.viii.a and.xxii.a Iacobus

Tell thy neyghbour his fault, for ofte tymes an offence is made, and gyue not credece to euery word. A man falleth somtyme with his tonge, but not with his wyll. For what is he that hathe not offended in his tonge? Gyue thy neyghboure warnyng before thou threaten hym, and gyue place vnto the lawe of the Lorde. The feare of God is all wysdome, and he that is a ryghtous man kepeth the lawe. As for the doctryne of wickednesse it is no wysdome, and the prudence of synners is no good vnderstandynge: it is but wyckednesse and abhomination, and a blasphemyng of wysdom. A symple man of smal vnderstandynge that feareth God, is better then one that hath moch wysdom, and trasgresseth the lawe of the hyest. A craftye subtyll man can be wyse, but he is vnryghtous, and with gyftes he wresteth the open & manifest lawe. A wycked man can behaue hym selfe humblye, and can bowe with his hed, and yet is he but a disceyuer within. G Ecclesiast.

euen so is it with him that vseth vyolēce, and wrongfully in the lawe: O how good a thynge is it, a man that is reproued, to shewe openly his repentaunce, for so shalte thou eschape wykful syn.

Some man kepeth silence, and is founde wyse: but he that is not ashamed what he sayethe: is hatefull. Some man holdeth his tonge, because he hath not the vnderstandyng of the language: and some man kepeth sylence, wayetynge a conuenient tyme. A wyse man wyll holde his tonge tyll he se opportunitye, but a wanton and vndiscrete body shal regarde no tyme. He that vseth manye wordes, shall hurte his owne soule: and he that taketh auctorite vpō hym vnryghtoully shal be hated. Some man hath oft tymes prosperitie in wycked thynges: Agayne, some man getteth moche, and hathe harme and losse. There is some gyfte that is nothyng worth: Agayne, there is some gyfte, whose rewarde is double. Some man getteth a fall, for pryde to proude, and some commeth to worshyp from the lowe estate. Some man byeth moch for alyttle pryce, and must paye for it sextuplyke.

A wyse man with his wordes maketh him selfe to be loued, but the fauoures of fooles shall be poured out. The gyfte of the vnwyse shall do the no good, for his eyes are seuenfolde: he shall gyue lyttle, and saye he gaue moch: he openeth his mouth and crieth out, as it were one that cryeth out wyne. To daye he lendeth, to morowe he asketh it agayne, and suche a man is to be hated. The foole sayeth: I haue no frende, I haue no thanke for all my good dedes: yea euen they that eate my breed, speake no good of me. O how oft, and of how many shall he be laughed to scorne? he taketh a more perilous fal by such wordes, then yf he fell vpon the grounde: euen so shall the falles of wycked men come sodenlye. In the mouth of him þ is vntaught, are many vnconuenient and vnmete wordes. A wyse sentence shall not be alowed, at the mouth of the foole, for he speaketh it not in due season.

H

Some man synneth not, because he hath not wherwithall, and in his rest he shall be vnryed. Some man there is that destroyeth his owne soule with shame, and for an vnwyse bodyes sake, destroyeth he it, and with accepting of persons, shall he vndo him self. Some man promiseth his frende a gyfte for deepe shame, and getteth an enemye of hym for nought. Lye is a wycked shame in a mā, yet shall it be cure in the mouth of þ vnwyse. A theefe is better then a man that is accustomed to lye, but they bothe shall haue destruction to herytage. The condicyons of lyers are vnhoncst, and their shame is cure with them.

I

A wyse man shall bringe him selfe to honour with his wordes, and he that hath vnderstandynge shall be lyke amonge greate men. He that tylleth his land, shall encrease his heape of corne: he that worketh ryghtoulnelle, shall be exalted, and he that pleaseth greate mē, shal eschape much euyll. Rewardes and gyftes blynde the eyes of the wyse, and make him dom, that he can not tell mans their faultes. Wysdome that is hyd, and treasure þ is hoorded vp, what profyte is in the both? Better is he that kepeth his ignorāunce secrete, then a man that hydeth his wysdome.

Ecclesiast.xx.a Deute.xvi.b Ecclus.xiii.a

¶ Of the repentaunce of synne we may not heape synne vpon synne. The boldnesse of an heretyke. The ende of tyrānes. Of the foole and of the wyse man. Of him that eueleth the deuyll.

CAPI. XXI.

MY sonne yf thou hast synned, do it no more: but praye for thy forelynnes, that they maye be forgyuen the. Flee frome synne, euen as frome a serpent: for yf thou commest to nyghe her, she wil byte the. The teeth therof are as the teeth of a lyon, to slee the soules of men. The wyckednes of man is as a sharpe two eoged swerde, which maketh suche woundes that they can not be healed.

A Synne. Ecc.b.a.vii.a xii.c

Stryfe and wrongous dealyng shal waste awaye a mans goodes: and thorowe pryde a ryche house shall be brought to nought: so the eyches of the proude shall be rooted oute. The prayer of the poore goeth oute of the mouth, and commeth vnto the eares, and his vengeaunce (or defence) shall come, and that hastelye. Who so hateth to be reformed is a token of an vngodly person: but he that feareth God, wyll remembre hym selfe. A mightye man is knowne a far of by his tong but he that hath vnderstandynge perceyueth that he shall haue a fall.

Who so buyldeth his house with other mens coll, is lyke one that gathereth stones in winter. The congregacion of the vngodly is lyke stubble gathered together, their ende is a flame of fyre. The waye of the vngodly is set with stones, but in their ende is hell, darckenes & paynes. He that kepeth the lawe wyll holde faste the vnderstandynge, therof and the ende of the feare of God is wisdom. He that is not wyse, wyll not be taughte in good: but the vnwyse mā abounded in wickednesse: and where bitternes is there is no vnderstandynge. The knowledge of the wise shall flowe lyke water that runneth ouer, and his counsell is lyke a fountayne of lyfe.

C

The hert of a foole is lyke a broken vessel, he can kepe no wysdome. When a man of vnderstandyng heareth a wyse worde, he shal commende it, and make moche of it. But yf a voluptuous man heare it, he shall haue no pleasure therin, but cast it behynde his backe. The talkinge of a foole is lyke an heuy burthen by the waye: but to heare a wyse man speake it is a pleasure. Where a double is in the congregacyon, it is asked at the mouthe of the wyse, and they shall ponder his wordes in their hertes. Like as a house that is destroyed, euen so is wisdome vnto a foole: So for the knowledge of the vnwyse, it is but darcke wordes. Doctryne is vnto him that hath

hathe no vnderstandynge, euen as he letters a-bounte his fete, and lyke mannacles vpon his ryght hande. A foole lyfteth vp his voyce in laughter, but a wyse man shall scarse laughe secretely.

Lernynge is vnto a wyse man a iewell of golde, and lyke an armlet vpon his ryghte arme. A foolysshe mans fote is soone in his neyghbours house, but one that hath experience, shall be ashamed at the persone of the myghtye. A foole wyll pepe in at the wyndowe in to the house, but he that is wel nurtured, wyll stande without. A foolysshe man standeth herkening at the doze, but he that is wyse, wyll be ashamed.

The lyppes of the vnwyse wyll be tellyng foolysh thynges, but the wordes of suche as haue vnderstandynge, shall be weyed in the balaūce. The hert of fooles is in theyr mouth, but the mouth of the wyse is in theyr hert. When the vngodly curseth the blasphemer, he curseth his owne soule. A pryuye accuser of other men shal defyle his owne soule, and be hated of euery man: (but he that kepeth his tonge and is discrete, shall come to honour.)

¶ The purgation of the slouthfull. Of the foolysh sonne and doughter, we must haue discretion, how and to whom we ought to preache, of sorowynge vpon the deed. A foole is not to be mocke talked withall. Iniuryes and wronges do breake frendeshyp and amytye.

CAPL. XXII.

A Slouthfull body is moulded of a stone or claye: he that toucheth him, must wash his handes agayn. A misnurtured sonne is the dishonour of the father. A foolysh doughter shall be lytell regarded. A wyse doughter is an heretage vnto her husbande: but she that commeth to dishonesty, bringeth her father in to vnpacience. A doughter that is past shame, dishonoureth both her father and her husbande: the one shall despyse her, the playnge of mayster is not mete where heupnes is, euen so is the correction & doctryne of wisdome euer vnpleasaunt vnto fooles.

Who so teacheth a foole, is euen as one that glueth a pot sherde together: as one that telleth a tale to hym that heareth hym not, and as one that rayseth a man out of an deupe slepe. Who so telleth a foole of wysdome, is euen as a man, whiche speaketh to one that is a slepe. When he hathe told his tale, he sayth: what is the matter? When one dyeth, lamentacion is made for hym, because the ygght fayleth him: euen so let men mourne ouer a foole: for he wanteth vnderstandynge. Make but lytle weppynge because of the deed: for he is come to rest, but the life of the foole is worse then the death. Seuen dayes do men mourne for hym that is deed, but ꝑ lamētacyō ouer the vnwyse and vngodlye shulde endure all the dayes of their lyfe.

Talke not moch with a foole, and go not with hym that hath no vnderstandynge. Beware of him, lest it turne the to trauayle, and thou shalt not be defyled with his synne. Departe from hym, and thou shalte fynde rest, & shalt not be wrothe back into his folishnes. What is heuyer then leade? And what shulde a foole be called els but leade? Sande, salt, and a lump of yron is easyer to beare, then an vnwyse, foolysh, and vngodly man. Lyke as the bande of wod bounde togyther in the foundacion of the house can not be loosed, euen so is it with the hert that is stablysshed in the thought of counsell. The thought of the wyse, shall neither feare ne be offended at any tyme.

Lyke as a fayre playstered wall in a wynter house, and an vyghe buyldynge, may not abyde the wynde and storme: euen so is a foles herte afrayde in his ymagynacion: he fereth at euery thynge, and can not endure. He that vpbraydeth a mans eye, bringeth forth teares: and he that pyercheth the herte, bringeth forth the meanynge and thought. Who so casteth a stone at the byrdes, frayth them awaye: and he that blaspemeth his frende breaketh the frendshyp: though thou drewest a swerde at thy frende, yet dispayre not, for thou mayste come agayne to thy frende. If he speake (sweetely, feare not, for ye maye be agreed togyther agayne: except it be that thou blaspheme hym, vpbraydynge him apen dis secretes & wound him treyterously for all suche thynges, shall departe awaye a frende.

Be faythfull vnto thy neyghbour in his powertye, that thou mayste reioyce with hym also in his prosperity. Abide stedfast vnto him in the tyme of his trouble, that thou mayste be heyre with hym in heritage. Lyke as the vapour and smoke goeth out at the ouen before the fyre, euen so euell wordes, rebukes and threatenynges go before bloudshedyng. Be not ashamed to defende thy frende: as for me, I wyll not hyde my face from hym, though he shulde do me harme. Whosoeuer heareth it shall beware of him. Who shal set a watch before my mouth, & a sure seale vpō my lyppes, that I fall not with them, and that my tonge destroye me not?

¶ The prayer agaynste pryde, lechery, and glotonye. Of othes, blasphemy, and of wyfe communicacion. Of the thre kyndes of synnes. Many synnes procede of aduoutrye. Of the feare of God.

CAPL. XXIII.

O Lorde, father and gouernour of my lyfe, leaue me not in their ymagynacyon and counsell. Oh let me not fal into such reprefe. Who wil kepe my thought with the scourge, and the doctryne of wysdome in myne herte? that he spare not mine ignorauce, that I fall not with them, lest myne offenses be many in nombre, and that my synnes be not many in nombre, and that my fo-nes stande not: lest I fal before myne enemyes, and so my aduersarye reioyce. O Lorde myne father and God of my lyfe, leue me not in their ymagynacyon. O let me not haue a proude loke, but turne away all voluptuousnesse fro me. Take fro me the lustes of the belye, let not the desyres of vnclennesse take hold vpon me, and gyue me not ouer in to an vnshamefast and obstynate mynde.

Heare me (O ye chyldren) I wyll gyue you a doctryne, how ye shall kepe youre mouth: who so kepeth it, shall not perysh therow his lyppes, ne be hurte therow wycked workes. As for the synner, he shall be taken in his owne banyshe: he that is proude and cursed, shall fall therin. Let not thy mouth be accustomed with swearyng, for in it there are many falles. Let not the naming of God be continually in thy mouth: for lyke as a seruaunt whiche is ofte punyshed, can not be without some sore, euen so what so euer he be that sweareth and nameth God, shal not be clene pourged from synne. A man that vseth much swearynge, shall be fylled with wyckednesse, and the plage shall neuer go from his house. If he begyle his brother, his faute shall be vpon hym: yf he knowledge not his synne, he maketh a double offence, and yf he sweare in vayne, he shall not be founde ryghtous, for his house shall be full of plages.

¶ The wordes of ꝑ swearer bryngeth death, (God graunte that it be not founde in the house of Jacob.) But they that feare God, schune all such, and lye not wilefynge in synne not thy mouth to vnbeneft and fylthye talkig, for in it is the worde of syn. Remembre thy father and thy mother, when thou sittest amonge greate men: lest God forget the in theyr syghte, and lest thou botynge in thy custome, suffre rebuke, and wysshe not to haue bene vnborne, and so curse the daye of thy natyuytie. The man that is accustomed with the wordes of blasphemye, wyll neuer be reformed al the dayes of his lyfe. To syn wyfle is to moche, but the thyrde bryngeth wyath and destruction. An hote stomacke can not be quenched (euen lyke a burnynge fyre) tyll he haue swalowed vp somthyng: euen so an vnnourtred man hath no rest in his flesshe: tyll he haue kyndled a fyre.

All bread is swete to an horemonger, he wyll not leaue of, tyll he haue his purpose. A man that breaketh wedlock, an regardeth not his soule, but sayethe: Tuch, who seith me? I am compassed about with darknesse, the walles couer me, no body seith me: whom nede I to feare? The myghest wyl not remembre my synnes (he vnderstandeth not that his eyes se all thynges, for all suche feare of men hyndreth awaye the feare of God from hym, for he feareth only the eyes of men, and considereth not that the eyes of the Lorde are clearer then the Sunne, beholdynge all the wayes of men, and the grounde of the depe, and lokynge euen to mens hertes in secrete places. The Lorde God knewe all thynges or euer they were made, and after they be brought to passe also, he loketh vpō them al. The same man shall be openlye punyshed in the stretes of the cytye, and shall be chased as a bryde lyke a ponge horse fole: and when he thinketh leest vpon it, he shalbe taken. Thus shal he be put to shame of euery man, because he wolde not vnderstande the feare of the Lorde. And thus shall it goo also with euery wyfe that leaueth her husbande, and getteth inheritaunce by a straunge marryage. Fyrste she hath bene vnfaythfull vnto the lawe of the myghest: Secondly, she hath forsaken her owne husband: Thyrdly she hath played the hoore in aduoutrye, and gotten her chyldren by an other man. She shall be brought out of the congregacyon, and her chyldren shalbe loked vpon. Her chyldren shal not take rote, and as for frute, her braunches shall bryngе forth none. A shameful report shall she leaue behynde her, and her dyshonour shall not be put out. And they that remayne, shall knowe that there is nothynge better then, the feare of God: and that there is nothynge sweter then to take hede vnto the cōmaundemētes of the Lorde. A greate worshyp is it to folowe the Lord, for lōg life shalbe rekened of him.

¶ A prayse of wysdome proceedinge forthe of the mouth of God. Of her workes and place where she resteth.

CAPL. XXIIII.

A Wysdome shall prayse her selfe, and be honoured in God, and reioyse in the myddest of his people: In the congregacyons of the myghest shall she open her mouth, and triumphe in the beholdynge of his power: In the myddest of her people shall she be exalted, & wondered at in the holy fulnes: In the multytude of the chosen she shall be commended, and among such as be blessed she shall be prayse, and shall saye: I am come out of the mouth of the myghest, firstborne before all creatures. I caused the ygght that fayleth not, to aryse in the heauen, & couered all the earth as a cloude. My dwellynge is aboue in the heith, and my seate is in the pyller of the cloude. I my selfe alone haue gone rounde aboute the compasse of heauen, and perced the grounde of the depe: I haue walked in the floudes of the see, and haue stande in all landes: my domynyon is in euery people and in euery nacyon, and with my power haue I troden downe the hertes of all, both myghe and lowe.

In all these thynges also I sought rest, and a dwellynge in some inheritaunce. So the creatoure of all thynges gaue me a commaundement: and he that made me, appoynted me a tabernacle, and sayde vnto me: Let thy dwellynge be in Jacob, and thyne inheritaunce in Israell, and rote thy selfe amonges my chosen. I was created frome the begynnynge and before the worlde, and shall not leaue the worlde to come. In the holy habytacyon haue I serued before hym, & so was I stablysshed in Sion.

In the holye cytye rested I in lyke maner: and in Jerusalē was my power, I toke rote in Psal.xcij.b in an honorable people, euen in the porcyon of the Lord and in his heritage, and kepte me in the fulnesse of the Sayntes. I am set vp on hye lyke a Cedre vpon Libanus, and as a Cypres tre vpon the mount Hermon: I am exalted lyke a palme tree in Cades, and as a rose plante in Jericho: As a fayre olyue tre in the felde, and am exalted lyke a planteyn tre by the waters syde. I haue gyuen a smell in the stretes, as the Cynamom and Balme, that bathe so good a sauoure: yea a swete odoure haue I gyuen, as it were Myrre of the best.

C I haue made my dwellynges to smell as it were of rosyn, Galbanum, Onowes, and Incense, and as Libanus when it is not hewen downe, and myne odour is as the pure Balme. As the Terebint haue I stretched out my braunches, and my braunches are ✠ braunches of honour and louynge sauoure. As the vine, haue I brought forthe frute of a swete sauoure, and my flowres are the frute of honour and richesse. I am the mother of fayre, of loue, of feare, of knowledge and of holy hope. In me is all grace of lyfe & truth: In me is all hope of lyfe and vertue. O come vnto me, all ye that be desyrous of me, and fyll your selues with my frutes: for my spyrite is sweeter then honye, and so is myne inheritaunce more then the hony combe: the remembraunce of me endureth for euermore. They that eate me, shall haue the more hungre: & they that drynke me, shall thirste the more. Who so herkeneth vnto me, shall not come to confusion: and they that worke in me, shal not offend. They that make me to be knowe, shall haue euerlastynge lyfe.

All these thynges are the boke of lyfe, the couenaunt of the hyest, and the knowledge of the truthe. Moses commaunded the law in the preceptes of rygh tousnesse, for an heritage vnto the house of Jacob, and commytted the ordynaunces vnto Israel. Out of Dauid his seruaunt, he ordeyned to rayse vp a moost myghty kyng, sytting in the seate of honour for euermore. This fylleth with wysdome, lyke as the floude of Physon, and as the floude of Tigris, when the newe frutes are a geowynge.

Deut.xxxiij.a. and.xxx.b

This bringeth a plenteous vnderstanding like Euphrates: and fylleth it vp as Jordane in the tyme of harueste. This maketh nurtoure to breake forthe as the lyght, and as the water Gihon in the vintage. The fyrst hath not knowen her perfectnesse, nomore shall the last sese out the grounde of her. For her thought is fuller then the see, and her counsell is profounder then the great depe.

I wysdome haue cast out floudes. I am as a greate waterbicke out of the ryuer. I am as the ryuer Dour, and as a watte conopte am I come oute of the garden of pleasure. I sayd: I wyll water the garden of my younge plantis, and fyll the frute of my byrth. So my watre broke became ryuerynge greate, and my ryuer approched vnto the see. For I make doctrine to be vnto all men, as light as the fayre morynge, and I shall make it to be cute the clearer. I wyll pearse thorow all the lower partes of the earthe, I wyll loke vpon all suche as slepe, and lyghten all them that put their truste in the Lorde. I shall yet poure out doctryne, lyke as prophesy, and leaue it vnto suche as seke after wysdome, and their generacions shall I neuer fayle, vnto the holy euerlastynge worlde. Beholde howe that I haue not labourd for my selfe onely, but for all them that seke after the truth.

Ecclesi.xxiiij.a and.xxxix

Psal.cxxxij.b Jacob.d

Deut.xxxiij.a. and.xx.b

Josue.iij.a

D

C Of thre thynges which please God, and of thre which he hateth. Of nyne thinges ✠ he wot wbe in feare, and of the tenth: expressly of the malyce of a woman.

CAPI. XXV.

THre thynges there are, that my spirite is fauoured, which be also alowed before God and men: The vnyte of the chyrch, the loue of neighbours, and man and wyfe that agre well to gyther.

Ecclesi. xxv. Exemplu

Thre thynges there be which my soule hateth and I vtterly abhorre the lyfe of them. A poore man that is proude. A rich man that is a lyer, and an olde dadye that doteth, and is vnchaste.

Ecclesi.x.d

If thou hall gathered nothynge in thy youth, what wylte thou fynde them in thyne age? O how pleasaunt a thynge is it when grey headed men are discrete, and when the elders can gyue good counsel? O howe comly a thyng is wysdom vnto aged men? yea & vnderstanding and counsel is a glorious thing. The crowne of olde men is to haue much experience, and the feare of God is their worshipp.

B There be nyne thinges, which I haue iudged in my herte to be happye and the tenth wyll I tell forth vnto men with my tonge. A man that wyfe be lusty, hath wyse of his children, and seeth the fall of his enemyes. Well is hym that dwelleth with an vnderwyfe of vnderstandinge, and that hath not falle with his tonge, and that hath not done sayne to serue such as are vnmete for hym. Well is hym, that fyndeth a faythful frende, and well is hym, whiche talketh of wysdom to an eare that heareth hym.

O how greate is he that fyndeth wysdome and knowledge? Yet is he not aboue hym, that feareth the Lorde. The feare of God hath set it selfe aboue all thynges. Blessed is the man, vnto whom it is graunted to haue the feare of God. Vnto whome shall he be lykened, that kepeth it fast? The feare of God is the begynnynge of his loue, and the beginnyng of fayth is to cleaue fast vnto it. The heupnes of the herte is all punishment, and the wyckednes of a woman goeth aboue all. All punyshment and plage is nothynge in comparyson of the plage of the herte. euen so all wyckednes is nothynge to the wickednes of a woman.

C What so euer happeneth vnto a man, is nothynge in comparyson of it, ſyat his cupil wyllers wyllers do vnto hym: and all vengeaunce is nothynge to the vengeaunce of the enemye.

There is not a more wycked heed then the heed of the serpent, and there is no wrath aboue the wrath of a woman. I wyll rather dwell with a lyon and dragon, then to kepe house with a wycked wyfe. The wyckednesse of a woman chaungeth her face, she shal mosk fell her countenaunce as it were a Beer, and as a sack shall she hewe it among the neyghbours. Her husbande is brought to shame amonges his neyghbours, and when he heareth it, it maketh hym to syghe. All wyckednesse is but lytle to the wyckednesse of a woman, the porcyon of the vngodlye shall fall vpon hre.

D Lyke as to clyme vp a sandye waye is to the fete of the aged, euen so is a wyfe full of wordes to a styll quyete man. Loke not to narowly vpon the bewtye of a woman, lest thou be prouoked in desyre toward her. The wrath of a woman is dishonoure and greate confusyon. If a woman get the maistrie, then is she contrarye to her husbande. A wycked wyfe maketh a sorye herte, an heupe countenaunce, and a deed wounde. Of the woman came the begynnynge of synne, and thorowe her we all are deed. Gyue thy water no passage, no not a lytle, neyther grue a wycked woman her wyll. If she walke not after thy hande, she shall confounde the in the syghte of thy enemyes. Cut her of then frome thy flesshe, that she do not alwaye abuse the.

C The prayse of a good woman. Of the feare of thre thynges, and of the fourth. Of the Jelousy and broken woman. Of two thynges that cause sorowe, and of the thyrde whiche moueth wrath. It is harde to finde a marchaunt without disceyte, or a tauerner without synne in his tonge.

CAPI. XXVI.

HAppy is the man that hath a vertuous wyfe, for the nombre of his yeres shall be double. An honest woman maketh her husbande a ioyfull man, and she shal fyll the yeres of his lyfe in peace. A vertuous woman is a noble gyfte, whiche shall be gyuen in a good porcyon, vnto such as feare God. Whether a man be ryche or poore, he maye haue euer a merry herte, and a cheresull countenaunce, there be thre thynges that my herte feareth, and my face is afraied of the fourth. Treason in a cyte, a seditycous people, and wycked tonges, all these are heuyer the death. But wyth one is gelous ouer his wyfe, it dimmyth payne and sorowe vnto the herte: and a woman that telleth oute all thynges, is a scourge of the tonge. When one hath an euyl wyfe, it is euen as when an vnlyke pare of oxen must drawe togyther, be that geteth her, getteth a scorpion. A dronken woman is a greate plage, for she can not couer her owne shame.

B The bordome of a woman maye be knowen in the pryde of her eyes, and eyebrodes. If thy doughter be not shamefast, holde her straytlye, lest she abuse her selfe

thorow ouermuch lyberte. Beware of all the dishonestye of her eyes, and marueyle not yf she do agaynste the. Lyke one that goeth by the waye and is thirstye, so shall she open her mouth, and drynke of euery nexte water that she maye get. By euery hedge shall she syt her downe, and open her quiuer to euery arowe. A louynge wyfe reioyseth her husbande and fedeth his bones with her wysdome. A woman of fewe wordes, is a gyfte of God, and to a well nurtoured mynde maye nothynge be compared.

An honest and manerly woman is a gyfte C aboue other gyftes, and there is no weyghte to be compared, vnto a mynde that can rule it selfe. Lyke as the sunne when it ariseth, is an ornament in the hygh heuē of the Lorde so is a vertuous wyfe the beautye of all her house. Lyke as the cleare lyght is vpon the holy candelstycke, so is the beauty of the face vpon an honest body. Lyke as the golden pyllers are vpon the sockettes of syluer, so are the fayre legges vpon a woman that hath a constant mynde. Perpetuall are the foundacions that be layed vpon a hole stony rocke, so are the comaundemēts of God vpon an holy woman.

There be two thynges that greue my herte and in the thyrde is displeasure come vpon me. When an experte man of warre suffereth scarcenes and powerty. When men of vnderstandynge and wysdome are not set by: And when one departeth frome rightousnes vnto synne. Who so doth such, the Lorde hath prepared hym vnto the swerde. There be two maner of thynges, whiche me thynke to be harde and perylous. A marchaunte can not lyghtly kepe hym frome wronge, neither a tauerner hym selfe frome synne.

D Marchaūtes.

C Of the poore that wolde be ryche. The probacion of the mā that feareth God. The vnconstantnes of a foole. The secretes of a frende are not to be vttered. The wycked ymaginyth euel, whiche returneth vpon hym selfe.

CAPI. XXVII.

BEcause of pouertye haue many one offended: and he that seketh to be ryche, turneth aspde. Lyke as a nayle in the wall stycketh fast betwyxte two stones, euen so doth synne sticke betwyxt the byer and seller. If he holde hym not dylygently in the feare of the Lorde, his house shall soone be ouerthrowen. Lyke as when one syfteth, the chyffynes remayneth in the syue: So remayneth there some vncleane thynge in the thoughte of mā. The ouen proueth the potters vessell so doth temptacyon of trouble trye rygh tous men. The tree of the felde is knowen by his frute, so is the thought of mans herte knowē by his wordes.

Sap.en.iij.a i Petri iij.b Matth.vij.b

Prayse no man excepte thou haue herde him, for a man is knowen by his wordes. If thou folowe rygh tousnes, thou shalte get her, her, & put her vpon the as a fayre garment. And thou shalt dwell with her, and she shall defende the for euer, and in the day of knowledge thou shalte fynde stedfastnesse. The bydes resorte vnto theyr lyke, so doethe the truthe vnto them that be occupyed withall. The lyon wayteth for the thy pray: so do the synnes lurk vpon the workers of wyckednes. The talkyng of him that feareth God, is no thyng but wysdome: as for a foole, he chaungeth as the Moone. If thou be amonges the vndiscrete, kepe thy worde to a conuenyente tyme, but among suche as be wyse, speake on hardely. The talkynge of fooles is an abhominacion, and theyr spyrite is voluptuousnesse and wilfulnesse. Much swearyng maketh the heer to stand vp, and to stryue with such, stoppeth the eares.

C The stryke of the proude is bloudshedyng, and theyr blasphemynge is heuye to heare. Who so discouereth secretes, loseth his credence, and fyndeth no frende after his wyll. Loue thy frende, and bynde thy selfe in faithfulnesse with him: but yf thou bewrayest his secretes, thou shalt not get him agayne: For lyke as the man is that destroyeth his ennemy, so is he also that leseth falsly the frendship of his neyghbour.

D Lyke as one that letteth a bryde go out of his hande, can not take her agayne: Euen so thou, yf thou gyue ouer thy frende, thou canst not get him agayne: For thou canst not come by him, for he is to farre of. He is vnto the as a roo eskaped out of the snare, for his soule is wounded. As for woundes, they may be bounde vp agayne, and an euyll worde may be reconcyled: but who so bewrayeth secretes of a frend, there is no more hope to be had vnto him.

Prouer.x.b

He that wynketh with the eyes, ymagyneth some euyll, and no man shall take him from it. When thou art present, he shal byte commende and prayse thy wordes, but at the laste, he shall turne his tale, and slaunder thy sayinge. Many thynges haue I hated, but not dyuers so euyll, for the Lorde him self also abhorreth such one.

E Who so casteth a stone on hye, it shall fall vpon his owne heed: and he that smyteth in gyle, woundeth him selfe. Who so dyggeth a pyt, shall fall therin: and he that layeth a snare, shall be taken in it him selfe. Who so pryuyly & wycked nowsome counsell, it shall come vpon hym selfe, and he shall not know from whence. The proud blaspheme and are scornefull, but vengeaunce lurketh for them as a lyon. They that reioyse at the fal of the righteous, shal be taken in the snare, anguysh of herte shall consume them before they dye. Anger and ygnorauntnesse are two abhominable thinges, and the vngodly hath them both vpon hym.

Ecclesiast.xxvii.b

¶ We ought not to desyre vengeaunce, but to forgyue the offence. Of the vyces of the tonge, & of the daungers therof.

CAPL. XXVIII.

HE that seketh vengeaunce, shall fynd vengeaunce of the Lorde, which shall surely kepe hym his synnes. Forgyue thy neyghboure the hurte that he hathe done the, and so shall thy synnes be forgyuen the also, when thou prayest. A man that beareth hatred agaynste an other, howe dare he desyre forgyuenesse of God? he that vseth no mercy to a man which is lyke hym selfe, howe dare he aske forgyuenes of synnes? If he that is but flesshe, beareth hatred and kepeth it, who wyll intreate for his synnes? Remembre the end, and let enmitye passe which seketh death and destruction, and abyde thou in the commaundementes. Remembre the commaundement, so shalt thou not be ygnorous ouer thy neyghboure. Thynke vpon the couenaunt of the hyghest, and forgyue thy neyghbours ignorauntes. Beware of stryfe, and thou shalt make thy synnes fewer. For an angery man kyndleth daryaunte and the vngodly disquyeteth frendes and putteth discorde amonges them that be at peace. The more wod there is, the more vehemente is the fyre: and the myghtyer the man be, the greater is the wrath: & the longer the stryfe endureth the more it burneth.

An hastye bryanynge kyndleth a fyre, and an hasty stryfe sheddeth bloud. If thou blow the sparke: it shall burne: If thou spyt vpō it: it goeth for the, and bothe these go oute of thy mouth. The slaunderer and dubble tonged is cursed, for many one that be frendes setteth he at daryaunce. The thyrde tong hath disquyeted many one, and dryuē them frome one lande to an other. Strange cytyes hath it broken downe, and ouerthrowen the houses of great men. The thyrde tong hath caste out many an honest woman, and robbed them of theie laboures. Who so herkeneth vnto suche, shall neuer fynde rest neuer dwell safely. The stroke of the rodde maketh redders, but the stroke of the tonge smyteth & bones in sunder. There be many that haue perysshed with the sweed, but many more rowe the tonge.

D Well is hym that is kepte frome an euell tonge, and commeth not in the anger therof which drawēth not the yoke of such, and is not bounde in the bandes of it. For the yoke therof is of yron, and the bandes of it of stele. The death, therof is a very euyl death: thei were better for one, then suche a tonge. But the fyre of it maye not oppresse them that feare God, and the flame therof maye not burne them. Such as forsake the Lorde, shal fall therin: and it shall burne them, and no man shall be able to quenche it. It shall fall vpon them as a lyon, and deuoure them as a Leopārde. Thou bedgest thy goodes with thornes: why doest thou not rather make doores and barres for thy mouth? Thou may est thy golde and syluer: why doest thou not way thy wordes also vpō & balaūce? Beware that thou slyde not in thy tōg, & so fal before thyne enemyes, that laye wayte for the

Now we ought to lende oure money, and do almes. Of a faythfull man answeryng for his frende. Of lyberalytie and hospytalytie.

CAPL. XXIX.

WHo so wyll shewe mercy, let hym lende vnto his neyghbour: and he that is able let hym kepe the commaundement. Lende vnto thy neyghboure in tyme of his nede, and paye thou thy neyghboure agayne in due season. Kepe thy worde, & deale faythfully with him, and thou shalte alway fynde the thynge that is necessarye for the. There haue ben many, that when a thynge was lent them, reckened it to be founde, and made the trauayle and laboure that had holped them. While they receyue any thyng, they kysse the handes of suche as gyue them, and for their neyghbours good they humble their voyce. But when they shoulde paye agayne, they kepe it backe, and gyue euyll wordes, & make many excuses by reason of the tyme: and though he be able, yet gyueth he scarce the halfe agayne, and reckeneth the other to be founde. And yf he withholde not his money, yet hath he an ennemye of hym, and that vnderserued.

B He payeth hym with curssyng and rebuke & gyueth hym euyll wordes for his good dede. There be many one whiche are not glad for to lende, not because of euyll, but they feare to lese the thynge that they lende. Yet haue thou pacience with the symple, and wholde not mercye frome hym. Helpe the poore for the commaundementes sake, and let hym not go empty from the by cause of his necessitie. Lese thy money for thy brother and neyghbours sake, and burye it not vnder a stone, where it rusteth and corrupteth. Gather thy treasure after the commaundemente of the hyest, and so shal it brynge the more profyte then golde. Laye vp the almes in the hande of the poore, and it shall kepe the from all euyll. A mans almes is a purse with hym, and shall kepe a mans fauour, as the apple of an eye: and afterwarde shall it aryse, and paye euery man his reward vpon his heed. It shal fyght for the agaynst thyne enemyes, better then the shylde of a gyaunte, or spere of the myghtye.

A good honest man is surety for his neighbour, but a wicked person letteth hym come to shame. Forget not the frendeshyp of thy suretye, for he hathe gyuen his soule for the. The vngodly despiseth the good dede of his suretye, and the vnthankfull and ignorant leueth his surety in daunger. Some man prosperyth for his neighbour: and when he hath lost his honestly, he shall forsake hym. Suretyshyp hath destroyed many a ryche man, and remoued them as the wawes in the see. Mighty people hath it dryuen awaye, and caused them to wandre in straunge countreyes. An vngodly man, transgressynge the commaundement of the Lorde, shall fall in to an euyll suretyshyp: and though he forze hym self to get oute, yet shall he fall in to iudgement.

Helpe thy neyghbour out after thy power, & beware that thou thy selfe fall not in suche det. The chiefe thyng that kepeth in the life, is water and breed, clothyng and lodgynge to couer the shame.

Ecclesiast.xxix.c

Better is it to haue a poore lyuynge in a mans owne house, then delicate fare amonge the straunge. Be it lytle or moche that thou hast, hold the content withal, and thou shalt not be blamed as a vacabounde: for a myserable lyfe is it to goo frome house to house: and where a man is frembde, he dare not open his mouth. Though one be lodged, and haue meate and drynke, yet shall he be taken as vnworthye, and beare many bytter rough wordes, namely thus: Go thy waye thou straūger, and prepare a table for thy selfe, and fede me also of that thou hast. Awaye thou straunger (so that he regardeth his honoure no more) my brother cōmeth in to my house, and so he telleth hym the necessitie of his house: these thynges are heuye to a man that hathe vnderstandynge: namely the forbyddynge of the house, & that the lender casteth hym in the teethe.

¶ Of the correction of chyldren. Of the commodytye of health. Wealth is better then a sorowfull lyfe. Of hyde wysdome. Of the ioye and sorowe of the herte.

CAPL. XXX.

WHo so loueth his chylde, holdeth hym styll vnder correctiō, that he may haue ioye of hym afterward, and & he grope not after his neyghbours dores. He that teacheth his sonne, shall haue ioye in hym, and nede not to be ashamed of hym amonges his acqueyntaunce. Who so enfourmeth and teacheth his sonne, greueth the ennemy: and before his frendes he maye haue ioye of hym. Though the father dye, yet is he as thoughe he were not deed: for he hath left one behynde hym, that is lyke hym. In his lyfe he saw him, and had ioye in hym, and was not sorye in his deathe, neyther was he ashamed before the ennemyes. For he lefte behynde hym an auenger agaynste his ennemyes, and a good deer vnto the frendes. For the lyfe of chyldren he shall bynde the woundes togyther, and his herte is greued at euery crye. An vntamed horse wyl be hard, & a wanton chylde wil be wylfull. Yf thou brynge vp thy sonne delicately: he shall make the afrayde: and yf thou playe with hym, he shall brynge the to heuynesse. Laughe not with hym, lest thou wepe with him also, and lest thy teethe be set on edge at the last.

B Eccle.vii.c

Gyue hym no lybertie in his youthe, and ouerse not his folye. Bow downe his necke whyle he is yonge, bye hym vpon the sydes whyle he is yet but a chylde, lest he ware stubborne, and giue no more force of the, and so shalt thou haue heuinesse of soule. Teache thy chyld, and be diligent therin, lest it be eye thy shame. Better is the poore being hole & strong, then a man to be ryche & not to haue his helthe. Wealthe and welfare is above all golde, and a hole bodye above all treasure. There is no ryches above a sound body, and no ioye above the ioye of the herte. Death is better then a wretched lyfe, or contynuall sycknesse. The good thynges that are put in a close mouth, are like as when meat is layd upon the graue.

What good dothe the offeryng vnto an ydoll? for he can neyther eate, talle, nor smell. Euen so he that is chased of the Lorde, and beareth the rewardes of iniquite. He seeth with his eyes, and groneth lyke a gelded man, that lyeth with a virgyn and syghed. Geue not ouer thy mynd in to heuynesse, and vexe not thy selfe in thyne owne counsel. The ioye and cherefulnesse of the herte, is the lyfe of man, and a mannes gladnesse is the prolongynge of his dayes. Loue thyne owne soule, and comforte thyne herte: as for sorowe and heuynesse, driue it farre from the, for heuynesse hathe slayne many a man, and bringeth no profyte. Zeale and anger shorten the dayes of the life: carefulnesse and sorowe, bringe age before the tyme. Unto a mery herte euery thynge hathe a good taste, that he eateth.

¶ We ought to geue diligent hede to honestye. Of suche that take payne to gather ryches. The prayse of a ryche man without a faute. we ought to feare Goddes kennesse, and to folowe sobrenesse.

CAPI. XXXI.

Watchyng and carefulnesse for rychesse taketh awaye the slepe, and maketh the fleshe to consume. When one lyeth & taketh care, he waketh euer vp, lyke as great sycknes disturbeth the slepe. The ryche hathe greate labour in gatherynge his ryches together, and then with the pleasure of his ryches, he taketh his rest, and is refreshed: but who so laboureth and prospereth not, he is poore: and though he leue of, yet is he a begger. He that loueth ryches, shall not be iustified: and who so followeth corruption, shal haue ynoughe therof. Many one are come in greate myshortune by the reason of golde, and haue founde their destruction before them. It is a tree of fallynge vnto them that offre it vp, and all suche as be foolysshe fall therin.

Blessed is the ryche which is found without blemysh, and hath not gone after golde, ne hoped in money and treasures. Where is there suche one, and we shall commend him, and cal him blessed, for great thynges dothe he amonges his people. Who so is tried, and founde perfect in suche thynges, shall be commended and prayesed. Who myght offende, & hath not offended? who could do euil, & hath not done it? Therfore shal his good be stablished, & the hole congregation shal declare his almesses. If thou syt at a great mans table, open not thy mouthe wyde vpon it, and make not manye wordes. Remember that an euil eye is a shrewe.

What thynge created is worse then a wicked eye? therfore weepeth it before every face: Laye not thyne hande vpon euery thynge that thyne eye seeth, and stryue not with hym in the dysshe. Ponder by thy selfe what thy neyghbour wolde fayne haue, and be discrete in euery poynte. Eate the thyng that is set before the mannerly, as it becommeth a man, and eate not to moche, lest thou be abhorred. Leaue thou of fyrste of all by cause of nourtoure, lest thou be he whom no man maye satisfye, whiche maye tourne to thy decaye. When thou syttest amonges manye men, reache not thyne hande out fyrste of all. O howe well contente is a wyse man with a lytle wyne? so that in slepe thou hast not be sycke therof, nor fele anye payne. A swette holsome slepe shall suche one haue, and fele no inwarde greke. He ryseth vp betymes in the morynge, and is well at ease in hym selfe. But an vnsaciable eater slepeth vnquietly, and hath ache and payne of the body. If thou felest that thou hast eate to moch, aryse go thy way, cast it of thy stomacke, and take thy rest.

My sonne, heare me, and despyse me not: and at the laste thou shalte fynde as I haue tolde the. In all thy workes be diligent and quycke, so shall there no sycknesse happen vnto the. Who so is liberall in dealynge out his meate, manye men shall blesse hym, and prayse him with theyr lyppes: and the same is a sure token of his loue and faythfulnesse. But he that is vnfaythfull in meate, the hole eyere shall complayne of hym: and that in a sure experyence of his infidelitie and wickednesse. Be not thou a wyne bybber, for wyne hath destroyed many a man. The fyre proueth the harde yron, euen so dothe wyne prouе the hertes of the proude whan they be dronken.

Wyne soberly dronken, quyckeneth the lyfe of man. If thou drynkest it measurably thou shalt be temperate. What life is it, that maye contynue without wyne? Wyne was made frome the begynnynge, to make men glad, and not so dronkennesse. Wyne measurably dronken, is a reioysynge of the soule and bodye. But if it be dronken with excesse it maketh bytternesse and sorowe vnto the mynde. Dronkennesse fylleth the mynde of the foolish with shame and ryote, minisheth the strengthe, and maketh wounds. Rebuke not thy neyghbour at the wyne, and despyse hym not in his myrth. Geue hym no despytfull wordes, and prasse not vpon hym with contrary sayinges.

¶ Of the description and prayse of the mynde, and of all, character. Of the feare, fayth, and counsell of God.

CAPI. XXXII.

If thou be made a ruler, extoll not thy selfe therin, but be thou as one of the people. Take diligent care for them, and loke well therto: and when thou hast done all thy dutye, syt the downe, that thou mayste be merye with theym, and receyue a crowne of honour, talke wysely and honestly, for wysdome becommeth the ryght well. Grudge not muche. Speke not where there is no audyence: and poure not forthe wysdome out of tyme, at an importunitie. Lyke as the Carbuncle stone shyneth that is set in golde, so dothe a songe garnysshe the wyne feast: and as the Smaragde that is sette in golde so is the swetnesse of musycke by the wyneth of wyne.

Thou yonge man, speake that becommeth the, and that is profytable, and yet scarce when thou art twyse asked. Comprehende moche with fewe wordes. In manye thynges be as one that is ignorant, gyue eare, & hold thy tong withall. If thou be amonges men of hier auctoritie, desire not to compare thy selfe vnto them: and when an elder speaketh, make not thou many wordes therin. Before the thonder goeth lyghtenynge, and before shamefastnesse goeth loue and fauour. Stand vp betymes, and be not the last, but get the home sone, and there take thy pastyme, and doo what thou wylte: so that thou do no euyl, and defye no man. But for all thynges gyue thankes vnto hym that hath made the, and replenysshed the with his goodes.

Who so feareth the Lorde, wyll receyue his doctryne: and they that get them to him betymes, shall fynde grace. He that seeketh the lawe, shal be fylled therwith: as for hym that is but fayned, he wyll be offended therat. They that feare the Lorde, shall fynde the iudgement, and theyr ryghtousnesse shal be kindled as a lyght. An vngodly man wyll not be reformed, but can helpe hym selfe with the example of other in his purpose. A man of vnderstanding despyseth no good counsel: but a wylde and proude body hath no feare. My sonne, do not thynge without aduysement, so shalt it not repent the after the dede. Go not in the waye where thou mayst fall, ne where thou mayst stomble against the stone. Gyue not thy selfe in to a laborious slypperey way, and beware of thyne owne chyldren. In all thy workes put thy truste in God frome thy pure herte, for that is the kepyng of the commaundmentes. Who so beleeueth Gods worde taketh hede to the commaundementes: and he that putteth his truste in the Lorde, shall want nothynge.

¶ The departynge of him that feareth God. The ende of the wyse. The ydel discretion of a foole. Man is in the hande of God, as the earthen in the hande of the potter. we ought not to dispose oure selues, to become subiect to other.

CAPI. XXXIII.

There shall no euyll happen vnto hym that feareth God, but when he is in temptacion, the Lorde shal deliuer him. A wyse man hateth not the lawe, but an ypocryte is as a shyp in a ragyng water. A man of vnderstandyng geueth credence vnto the lawe of God, and the lawe is faythfull vnto hym.

Be sure of the matter, then talke therof: Be fyrste well instructe, then mayste thou gyue answere. The herte of the foolysshe is lyke a carte whele, and his thoughtes ren about lyke the axel tree. Lyke as a wyld horse that neyeth vnder euery one that sitteth vpon hym, so is it with a scornfull frende. Why doth one daye excell an other, seynge all the dayes of the yere come of the sunne? The wysdom of the Lorde hath so parted the asonder, and so hath he ordeyned the times and solemne festes. Some of them hathe he chosen and halowed before other dayes. And all men are made of the ground, and out of the earth of Adam.

In the multitude of science hath the Lorde sundered them, and made theyr wayes of diuers facyons. Some of them hath he blessed, made moche of them, halowed theym, and clayned them to hym selfe. But some of them hath he cursed, brought them lowe, and put them out of theyr estate. Lyke as the claye is in the potters hande, and all the ordynge therof at his pleasure: so are men also in the hande of him that made them, so that he may gyue them as it lyketh hym best. Against euyll is good, and against deathe is lyfe: so is the vngodly against suche as feare God. Beholde thus all the workes of the hyghest, and there are euer two against two, and one set against an other. I am awaked by last of all, as one that gathereth after in harueste. In the gyftes of God and in his blessynge I am increased, and haue fylled my wyne presse lyke a grape gatherer. Beholde how I haue not labourd onely for my selfe, but for all suche as loue nourtour and wysdome.

Heare me, O ye greate men of the people, and harken with your eares ye rulers of the congregacion. Gyue not thy sonne, and wife, thy brother and frend power ouer the, whyle thou lyuest: and gyue not away thy substaunce, and good to an other, lest it repent the, and thou be fayne to desyre ther for thy selfe. As longe as thou lyuest and hast breth, let no man chaunge the: for better it is thy chyldren to praye the, then that thou shouldest be fayne to loke in theyr handes. In all thy workes be excellent, that thy honoure be neuer stayned. At the tyme when thou shalte ende thy dayes, and fynysshe thy lyfe, distribute thyne enherytaunce. The fodder, the whyp, and the burden belongeth vnto a asse. Meate, correction, and worke vnto the seruaunt.

If thou set thy seruaunte to labour, thou shalt fynde rest. But yf thou let him go ydle, he shal seke lybertie. The yoke and the whip bowe downe the necke, but tame thou thy euyll seruaunt with bondes and correction. Send hym to labour, that he go not ydle: for ydlenesse bryngeth moche euyll. Set hym to worke, for that belongeth vnto hym, and becommeth him well. Yf he be not obedyente, bynde his fete, but do not to moche vnto him in any wyse, and without discrecion do nothyng. Yf thou haue a (faythfull) seruaunt, Ecclesiast. let hym be vnto the as thyne owne soule, for in blood hast thou gotten hym. yf thou haue a seruaunte, holde hym as thy selfe, for thou haste nede of hym as of thy selfe. Yf thou intreatest hym euil, and kepest him hard, and makest hym to be proude, and to ren awaye from the, thou canst not tel what waye thou shalt seke hym.

¶ Of dreames, dyuinacions, and enchauntmentes. we ought to confute vayne hope, and lyinge. The prayse of them that feare God. Of dyuers workes of men. God doth not alowe the workes of an vnfaythfull man.

CAPI. XXXIIII.

Dreames. VNwyse people begile them selues with vayne and disceytfull hope, and foles trust in dremes. Who so regardeth dremes, is lyke hym that wil take holde of a shadowe, and folow after the wynde: Euen so is it with apperinges of dremes. Before the face is the lykenesse of a face. Who can be cleaned of the vncleane? Or what truth can be spoken of a lyar? Nothyngye, witchcraft, sorcerye and dremynge is but vanitie: lyke as when a woman trauayleth with chylde, and hath many fantasyes in her hert. Where as suche visions come not of God, sette not thyne hert vpon them: for dremes haue disceyued many a man, and they failed that put their trust therin.

The lawe shal be fulfylled without lyes, & wysdom is sufficient to a faythful mouth. A wyse man that is well instruct, vnderstandeth moche, and he that hath good experience can talke of wysdom. He that hath no experience knoweth lytle, and he that erreth canseth moche wyckednesse.

When I was yet in errour, I learned moch also: yea I was so lerned, that I could not expresse it all, and came oft in peryll of death the rouer, tyll I was delyuered frome it. Nowe I se that they whiche feare God, haue the ryght spirite: for their hope standeth in hym that can help them. Who so feareth the Lorde, standeth in awe of no man, & is not afrayde, for the Lorde is his hope and comfort.

Blessed is the soule of hym that feareth ℔ Lorde: In whome putteth he his trust? who is his strengthe? For the eyes of the Lorde haue respect vnto them that loue hym. He is their mighty protection and strong ground: A defence for the heate, a refuge for the hote none daye, a succoure for stomblynge, and an helpe for fallyng. He setteth vp the soule, and lyghteneth the eyes: he gyueth healthe, lyfe, and blessyng. He that gyueth an offring of vnryghtous good, his offeryng is refused: and the scornefull dealynges of the vnryghtous please not God. God hath no delyte in the offrynges of the vngodly, neither may synne be reconcyled in the multitude of oblacions. Who so bryngeth an offeryng oute of the goodes of the poore, dothe euen as one that kylleth the sonne before the fathers eyes.

The breed of the nedeful is the lyfe of the poore: he that defraudeth hym therof, is a man of bloode. Who so robbeth his neyghboure of his lyuynge, dothe as greate synne as thoughe he slewe hym to deathe. He that defraudeth the labourer of his hyre, is a bloudshedder. When one buyldeth an other bmeketh downe, what profyte haue they then but laboure? When one prayeth, and another curseth, whose voyce wyll the Lorde heare? He that washeth hym selfe vncaule of a dead bodye, and then toucheth the dead agayne, what dothe his washynge? So is it with a man that fasteth for his synnes, and dothe them agayne: who wyl heare his prayer? Or what dothe his fastynge helpe hym?

¶ It is well done to praye and to do sacrifice. The prayer of the fatherlesse, and of the wyddowe: and of hym that humbleth hym selfe.

CAPI. XXXV.

Who so kepeth the lawe, bringeth offrynges ynough. He that holdeth fast the commaundement, offreth the right helthofferyng. He that is thankful, and recompenseth, offreth fyne floure. Who so is mercyful and gyueth almes, that is the ryght thankoffring. God hath pleasure whē one departeth from synne, and forsake vnryghtousnesse, reconcileth vs with hym.

Thou shalte not appere empty before the Lorde, for all suche is doone vncause of the commaundement. The offryng of the ryghtous maketh the aulter fat, and a swete smel is it before the hyest. The offeryng of the ryghtous is acceptable vnto God, and shall neuer be forgotten. Gyue God his honoure with a cherefull eye, and kepe not backe the fyrstlynges of thy handes. In all thy gyftes shewe a mery countenaunce, and halowe thy tythes vnto God with gladnesse. Gyue vnto God, according as he hath enryched and prospered the, and loke what thyne hande is able, that gyue with a cherefull eye, for ℔ Lord recompenseth, and gyueth the seuen times as moche agayne.

Gyue no vnrighteous giftes, for suche wil he not receyue. Beware of wrongous offrynges, for the Lorde is a ryghtous iudge: and regardeth no mans person. He accepteth not the person of the poore, but he heareth the prayer of the oppressed. He despyseth not the desyre of the fatherlesse, nor the wydow, when she poureth oute her prayer before hym. Doth not God se the teares that renne downe the cheekes of the wydow? Or heareth he not the complaynt ouer such as make her to weepe? Who so serueth God after his pleasure shal be accepted, and his prayer reacheth vnto the cloudes. The prayer of him ℔ humbleth him selfe, goeth thorow the cloudes til he come nye. She wyl not be comforted, ne go her waye, tyll the hyest God haue respect vnto her, gyue true sentence, and performe the iudgement. And the Lorde wyll not be slacke in commyng, ne tary long, tyl he haue smytten in sunder the backes of the vnmercyfull, and auenged him self of the heathen: tyl he haue taken awaye the multitude of the cruell, and broken the septer of the vnryghtous: tyll he gyue euery man after his workes, and rewarde theym as they haue deserued: tyll he haue delyuered his people, mayntayned their cause, and reioyced them in his mercye. O howe kayre a thynge is mercye in the tyme of an angupsshe and trouble? It is lyke a cloude of rayne that commeth in the tyme of a drouthe.

¶ A prayer to God in ℔ person of all faythfull men with the prayse of a good woman.

CAPI. XXXVI.

HAue mercy vpō vs, o Lorde, thou God of all thynges. Haue respect vnto vs, shew vs the lyght of thy mercyes, and send thy feare among the heathen and straūgers, whiche seke not after ℔: that they may knowe how that there is no God but thou, & that they may shew thy wōderous workes.) Lyft vp thyne hande ouer the outlandysshe heathen, that they maye lerne to knowe thy might and power. Like as thou art halowed in vs before them, so bring to passe that thou mayst be magnified also in them before vs: that they may knowe the, lyke as we knowe the. For there is none other God, but onely thou, o Lorde. Renue the tokens, & chaunge the wonderous workes. Shewe thyne hande and thy ryghte arme glorysshe. Rayse vp thy indignacion, and poure out thy wrathe. Take awaye the aduersarye, and smyte the enemye. Make the tyme shorte, remembre thy couenaunt, that thy wonderous workes maye be prayesed. Let the wrathe of the fyre consume them that lyue so carelesse: and let them perysshe, that doo thy people hurte. Smite in sonder the heed of the princes, that be our enemyes, and saye: there is none other but we.

Gather all the trybes of Jacob togyther agayne, that they maye knowe, howe that there is none other God but only thou, that they may shew thy wonderous workes, and be thy people and heritage, lyke as from the begynnynge. O Lorde haue mercy vpon the people that hath thy name, and vpon Israel whome thou hast lykened to a fyrst borne sonne. O be mercyfull vnto Jerusalem the citye of thy Sanctuarye the citye of thy rest. Fyll Syon with thy vnspeakeable vertues, and thy people with thy glory. Gyue witnes vnto thy creature, whome thou madest from the begynnyng, and rayse vp the prophecies that haue ben shewed in thy name. Rewarde them that wayte for the, that thy Prophetes maye be found faythfull. O Lorde heare the prayer of thy seruauntes according to the blessynge of Aaron ouer thy people: that all they whiche dwell vpon the erth may know Num. vi. that ℔ art the Lorde the eternal God, which is from euerlastyng.

The bely deuoureth all meates, yet is one meat better then an other. Lyke as the tonge tasteth venyson, so doth an hert of vnderstandynge marke false wordes. A frowarde herte gyueth heuynes, but a man of experience liseth him vp again. The woman receyueth euery man, yet is one daughter better then an other. A fayre wife reioyseth her husband, & a mā loueth nothyng better. Yf she be louing and vertuous withal, then is not her husbād lyke other men. He that hath gotten a vertuous woman, hath gotte a goodly possession: she is vnto him an helpe and piller wherevpō he resteth. Where no hedge is, there ℔ goodes are spoyled, and where no housewife is, there the frendles mourneth. Lyke as there is no credence gyuen to a robber that goeth from one city to an other: So is not the man bileued, that hath no nest, & must turne in where he may abyde in the night.

¶ How a man should know frendes and counsellers, and searche the company of a holy man.

CAPI. XXXVII.

EVery frende sayth, I wil be frendly vnto hym also. But there is some frende, which is onely a frend in name. Remayneth there not heuinesse vnto deth, when a copanyon and frende, is turned to an enemy? O most wicked presumption: from whence art thou spronge vp, to couer the earth with falsehed and disceyt? There is some companion which in prosperitie reioyseth with his frende: but in the tyme of trouble he taketh parte agaynst him.

There is some companion that mourneth with his frende for the helpe sake: but when trouble cōmeth, he taketh holde of the shylde. Forget not thy frend in thy mynde, & thynke vpon him in thy rychesse. Euery counseller bryngeth for the his counsell: Neuerthelesse there is some ℔ counselleth but for his owne profyte. Beware of the counseller, and be aduised afore whereto thou wylt vse him, for he wyll counsel for hym selfe. Lest he cast the lot vpon the, and saye vnto the: Thy ware and purpose is good, & afterwarde he stande agaynste the, and loke what shall become of the.

Aske no counsell at hym that suspecteth the for an enemy, and hyde thy counsel from suche as hate the. Aske no counsell of a woman, cōcernyng the thynges that she longeth for; nor at a fearfull and coward herted body in matters of warre: or at a marchaunte, how deare he wyl chepe thy wares towarde his: or at a byer, of iustynge: Or at an envyous man, of thankesgyvynge: Or at the pyteyfull, of louyng kyndnesse: Or at the slouthfull, of worckynge: Or at an hyrelyng whiche hath no house, of prouyde or wealth. (An yble body wolde not gladly heare speke of moche labour.) Take no suche folkes to counsell, but be diligent to seke counsel at a vertuous man that feareth God, suche one as thou knowest to be a kepar of thy cõmaũdementes, whiche hath a mynde after thyne owne mynde, and is sorye for the when thou stomblest.

And holde thy counsell fast in thyne hert: for there is no man more faythfull to kepe it then thou thy self. For a mans mynd is somtyme more disposed to tel out, then .vii. watchmen that syt aboue in an hye place lokynge about them. And aboue al this pray the hyest that he wyl lede thy way in faithfulnes and truthe. Before all thy workes aske counsell fyrst, & or euer thou doest any thyng, be well aduised. There be four thinges that declare a chaunged hert, wherout there spryngeth euil and good, deth and lyfe, and a master ful long that dayleth moche. Some man is apte and wel instruct in many thinges, & yet very vnprofytable vnto him self. Some ma there is that can gyue wyse and prudent counsell, and yet is he hated, and contynueth a begger: for that grace is not gyuen him of God to be accepted. An other is robbed of al wisdome, yet is he wyse vnto hym selfe, and the frute of vnderstandynge is faythfull in his mouth.

A wyse man maketh his people wyse, and the frutes of his wildome fayle not. A wyse man shall be plentyously blessed of God, and all they that se hym shall speke good of him. The lyfe of man standeth in the nombre of the dayes, but the dayes of Israell are innumerable. A wyse mã shal obteyn faythfulnes and credence amonge his people, & his name shal be perpetual. My sonne proue thy soule in thy lyfe, & yf thou se any euyll thing, gyue it not vnto her. For all thinges are not profitable for all men, neyther hath euery soule pleasure in euery thing. Be not gredy i euery eating, and be not to hasty vpon all meates. For excesse of meates bringeth sykenesse, and glotony commeth at the last to an vnmeasurable heate: therow glotony haue many one perysshed: but he that dyeteth hym selfe temperatly, prolongeth his lyfe.

¶ Physicyon. In sykenesse ought we to pray, and lyue & Physicyon which healeth by prayer. The bewepyng of the dede. Sadnesse. wyseome. Instructes or craftesmen.

CAPI. XXXVIII.

HOnour the Physicion: honour him because of necessitie. God hath created hi (for of the hyest commeth medicyne) and he shal receyue gyftes of the kyng. The wysdome of the Physicion dryngeth hym to great worshyp, and in the syght of the great men of this worlde, he shall be honourably taken. The Lorde hath created medicyne of the earthe, and he that is wyse wyll not abhorre it.

Was not thy bytter water made swete by a tree, that men myghte lerne to knowe the vertue therof. The Lorde hathe gyuen men wysdome and vnderstanding, that he might be honoured in his wonderous workes. With suche dothe he heale men, and taketh awaye theyr paynes: Of suche dothe the Apotecary make a confection, yet can no man perfourme all his workes. For of the Lorde commeth prosperous wealthe ouer all the earthe.

My sonne, despyse not this in thy sycknesse, but praye vnto the Lorde, and he shall make the hole. Leaue of from synne, and order thy handes aryghte: clense thyne herte frome all wyckednesse, gyue a swete sauoured offeryng, and the fyne flour for a token of a remembraunce: make the offeryng fatte, as one that gyueth the first frutes, and gyue rowme to the Physicion. For the Lorde hathe created hym: let hym not goo frome the, for thou haste nede of hym. The houre maye come, that the sycke maye be helped thorowe theym, when they praye vnto the Lorde, that he maye recouer, and get healthe to lyue longer. He that synneth before his maker, shall fal in to the handes of the Physicion.

My sonne, bryng forthe thy teares ouer the dede, and begyn to mourne as yf he had suffred greate harme thy self: and then couer his bodye after a conuenyente maner, and despyse not his buryall. Enforce thy self to wepe and pronoke thy self to mourne and make lamentacion expediently, and that a daye or two, leest thou be cuyll spoken of: and then comforte thy selfe bycause of the heuynesse. For of heuynesse commeth deathe the heuynesse of the herte breaketh strength. Heuynesse and powertie greeueth the herte in temptacion and offence. Take no heuynesse to herte, dryue it awaye, and remembre the last thinges. Forget it not for there is no turning again. Thou shalt do him no good, but hurt thy self. Remẽbre his iudgement, thyne also shall be lykewyse: vnto me yester daye, vnto the to daye. Let the remembraunce of the dede cease in his rest, and comforte thy selfe agayne ouer hym, seing his spirite is departed from him.

The wysdome of the scrybe is at conuenient tyme of rest: and he that ceaseth from exercyse and labour, shall be wyse. He that holdeth the plough, & hath pleasure in prodding and dryuyng the oxen, and goeth about with such workes, he can speake of nothe. He setteth his herte to make forowes, and is diligent to gyue the kyne fodder. So is euery carpenter also and workmaster that labourith by nyght and daye: he carueth, grauyth and cutteth oute, and his desire is in sundrye

CAPI. XXXIX.

HE that applyeth his mynde to vnderstãd the lawe of God, doth diligently seke out wysdome of them of the olde tyme, and exercyseth hym selfe in the Prophetes. He kepeth the sayinges of famous men, and pondreth to the vnderstandynge of darke sentences of wysdome. He seketh out the mysteryt of secrete sayinges, and exercyseth him selfe therin continually. He doth serue amonge grate men, and appeareth before the prynce. He goeth in to a straunge countrye, and trauayleth thorowe it: loke what good or euyll is amõg men, he proueth it and seketh it out. He purposeth in his hert, to resorte early vnto the Lorde that made him, and to pray before the hyest God.

He openeth his mouth in prayer, and prayeth for his synnes. When the great Lord wyl, he shall be fylled with the spirite of vnderstãdyng, that he maye then poure out wyse sentences, and gyue thankes vnto the Lorde in his prayer. He shall order his counsel, and lede his knowledge aryght, and gyue him vnderstandynge of secrete thynges. He shall shewe forth the science of his learnyng, and reioyce in the couenaunt of the lawe of the Lorde. The hole congregacyon shall commende his wysdome, & it shall neuer be put out. The remembraunce of hym shal neuer be forgotten, and his name shall contynue frome one generacyon to an other. His wysdome shall be spoke of, and the hole congregacion shall openlye declare his prayse. Whyle he lyueth, he hath a greater name then a thousande besyde: and after his death, the same name remayneth vnto hym. yet wyll I speake of mo men of vnderstandynge, for I am ful as the moone.

Herken vnto me (ye holy vertuous chyldren) dryngeth forth frute, as the rose that is planted by the dykes of the felde, and gyue ye a swete smell as Libanus. Flourysh as the rosegarden, synge a songe of prayse. O gyue thãkes vnto God ouer al his workes. Gyue glory and honoure vnto the Lorde, shew his prayse with your lyppes.

Yea euen with the song of your lyppes, with harpes & playeng, and in geuing thankes vnto hym, say after this maner: All the workes of the Lorde are exceadynge good, and all his commaundementes are mete and conuenyent in due season.

A mã nede not to say: what is that? what is that? for at tyme conuenyent they shall all be sought. At his commaundement the water was a wall, & at the worde of his mouth the waters stode vpl. In his commaundemẽt is euery thynge acceptable and reconcyled, & his healthe can not be myndyshed. The workes of all flesh are before hym & there is no thynge hyd from his eyes. He seeth frome euerlastynge to euerlastynge, and there is no thynge to wonderfull or hyghe vnto hym. A man nede not to saye what is this or that? For he hath made al thinges to do good vnto man. His blessynge shall renne ouer as the streame, and moysture the earth lyke a flode of water. Lyke as he maketh the water for drouth, to shall his wrath fall vpon the hethen.

His wayes are playne and right vnto the iust, but the vngodly stomble at theym. For the good are good thinges created from the begynnynge, and euil thynges for the vngodly. All thynges necessarye for the lyfe of man are created from the begynnynge: water fyre synon and salte, mele, wheat, and hony mylke and wyne, oyle and clothynge. All these thinges are created for the best to the faythful: But to the vngodly shall all these thynges be turned to the hurt and harme. There be spirites that are created for vengeaunce and in their exgoyousnes haue they fastened their tormentes. In the tyme of the ende they shal poure out their strength, & pacyfye the wrath of hym that made them. Fyre, hayle, honger, and death: all these thynges are created for vengeaunce.

The teeth of wylde noysome beastes, the scorpyons, serpentes, and the swerde are created also for vengeaunce to the destruction of the vngodly They shal be glad to do his commaundementes: and whẽ nede is, they shall be ready vpon earth: and when their houre is come, they shall not ourepasse the cõmaundement of the Lord.

Therfore haue I taken a good courage vn-

to

sondrye connynge thynges, and his herte ymagineth, howe he maye connynglye call an ymage his diligence also and watchynge perfourmeth the worke. The pyncelmyth in like maner dyeth by his fyrye, and dothe his dyligence to labour the pyon. The vapoure of the fyre brenneth his flesshe, and he mus fyghte with the heate of the fornace. The noyse of the hammer soundeth euer in his eares, and his eyes loke styll vpon the thyng that he maketh. He hath set his mynde there vpon, that he wyll make out his worke, and therfore he watcheth, how he maye set it out, and dryngeth it to an ende.

So doth the potter syt by his worke, he turneth the wheele about with his fete, he is diligent and carefull in all doynges, and his labour and worke is without nombre. He fashioneth the clare with his arme, and with his fete he tempereth it. His hert ymagineth how he maye make it pleasaunt, and his diligence is to clense the ouen. All these hope in theyr handes, and euery one thynketh to be connynge in his worke. Without these maye not the cyties be manteyned, inhabited ne occupyed: yet come they not dyghe in the congregacyon: they vnderstand not the couenaunt of the lawe: they can not declare equite and iudgement: they can not fynde out darke sentences, but therfore them shall the creature of the worlde be manteyned: their prayer concerneth onlye the work and labour of connynge.

¶ Wyse man. The workes of God. Vnto the good, good thynges do proffyt: but vnto the cuyll euyll good thynges are cuyll.

CAPI. XXXIX.
